Mayberry is confident that the clinic's reputation will draw patients, despite resistance from local doctors. Traditionally, only 20% of Mayo's patients are referred to the clinic by their doctors. And already 2,000 people are on a waiting list in Jacksonville for appointments. "We feel we have some advantage because we will be the only one of the national providers that is physician-directed" says Mayberry.

As in the past, other large clinics are following Mayo's lead. The Cleveland Clinic is considering setting up a group practice in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and it may open similar branches abroad to augment its already booming business of treating wealthy foreigners (King Hussein of Jordan is one of its more prominent patients). Ochsner plans to open a satellite in Baton Rouge, La., in July and is eying the market in the Florida panhandle.

ECONOMIC IMPERATIVES

Although other top clinics are too small to make such big moves, they are expanding on a more modest scale—in a range of 10 mi. to 150 mi. Lovelace Medical Center in Albuquerque opened a branch in Gallup, N.M. Park Nicollet Medical Center in Minneapolis, which has 18 branches in the Twin Cities, has affiliated with independent physicians to extent its reach.

Several prestigious clinics banded together two years ago to form the Federation of American Clinics with 14 members, including Dartmouth University's Hitchcock Medical Center and the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, Calif. With combined revenues of more than $3 billion, the federation hopes to reduce members' costs through group buying. But it also plans to start a for-profit venture to help physicians form group practices. And it wants to make deals with health insurers to develop a nationwide network of high-quality clinics that patients can use wherever they travel.

Because new medical insurance programs such as HMOs are locking patients into certain doctors and hospitals, the clinics are worried that they may be left out. So a number of clinics are setting up their own HMOs and insurance schemes to hold on to their local patients. The Cleveland Clinic is trying to interest insurance companies and employers in using a health care plan it developed that relies on area doctors and the clinic's specialists. Last year. Ochsner launched its own HMO to head off a wave of major HMOs invading New Orleans. Some clinics that have experience running HMOs are helping other groups start theirs. Park Nicollet, for one, started a management company last year to operate HMOs for other clinics around the country, including one for the Virginia Mason Clinic in Seattle.

Such moves may well be an economic imperative for the clinics. But the real test will be whether they can expand and maintain their carefully cultivated reputations for excellence. Mayo, of one, has no doubts that it is equal to that task. Says Mayberry: "We don't want to be the biggest of the systems that are going to evolve—we simply want to remain the best." That may be the biggest challenge.●

KOREA'S SEARCH FOR DEMOCRACY

● Mr. HART. Mr. President, over recent months, all Americans watched with admiration as the Filipino people marched peacefully and courageously toward democracy. We all know the risks that accompanied that march and accompany it still. Extreme and often violent forces at both ends of the political spectrum threaten to polarize progress toward consensus and unity. Yet the Filipino people have resisted such forces, and their prudence offers great hope that the Aquino regime will successfully meet the difficult challenges that lie ahead.

Today there is another development in the Pacific Rim that we should monitor with equal hope and concern. I refer to the challenges our friends in Korea face as they struggle for a peaceful transition to democracy.

Recent developments in South Korea indicate the dramatic emotions and tensions at work within their society. There have been an increasing number of antigovernment demonstrations by opponents of the Chun regime. And there has been a concerted effort on the part of Korean opposition leaders to demand a greater role in the country's electoral process.

Turbulence of this kind would be noteworthy in any nation. But in South Korea, these events assume direct importance for our own Nation's security and interests. South Korea is one of our staunchest allies. Her political fate is of central importance to our foreign policy, our military strategy, and America's overall interests in peace and stability throughout the Pacific Rim.

No one in this chamber disputes the fundamental importance of stability in South Korea. We all understand the overwhelming dangers which Koreans face daily in protecting their country from the threat of invasion from the North. We know that internal insurrection in Korea could well encourage Communist forces hostile to Korean and American interests. And we all share an iron resolve to avert such developments.

These external challenges to South Korea do not diminish the importance of the internal challenge that lies ahead for South Korea. To safeguard their own security and stability, the Korean people will require a political environment which is legitimate and fair. History demonstrates that the best guarantor of security—the most enduring environment for stability—is democracy.

America has watched the economic transformation of Korea in the postwar era with pride. The country has truly earned the title of "Asia's Economic Miracle." It is now time for South Korea to develop a political structure in line with its economic modernity—a political structure truly reflective of the international status the country has attained.

Mr. President, the key issue in South Korea today is how to achieve democracy peacefully. The opposition parties in Korea are trying one method: organizing a petition campaign to urge the government to permit direct elections of leaders by Korean citizens. The opposition objects to an electoral system in which voters select an electoral college comprised of candidates whose views are not publicly known and who are not widely perceived to represent the will of the people.

The opposition, therefore, asks for the right to have direct, open elections. Careful to avoid extremism in any form, responsible opposition leaders are asking for no more than the right to be heard—and to have their views judged openly and fairly by their fellow citizens.

I urge all those in the Congress and in our executive branch to pay close attention to the current developments in South Korea. We should help in whatever way we can to encourage the opposition parties to pursue a prudent and peaceful course. and we should also use our influence to encourage President Chun and his ruling party to listen closely to the urging of his people when they ask for a greater voice in the political process. For President Chun to delay the debate over democracy in Korea would be akin to resisting the tides of a mighty and bountiful sea.

Finally, I would urge our own leaders and representatives—especially our Ambassador in South Korea—to take the opportunity to talk directly with opposition leaders. Without prejudging the legitimacy of any group's demands, such a dialog would help inform and guide our understanding of the challenges ahead for South Korea.

Mr. President, I recently had the opportunity to meet with one of Korea's opposition leaders, Mr. Sang Hyun, Kim. The former chief of staff in Mr. Kim Dae Jung's 1972 presidential election campaign, Mr. Kim has been banned from participation in the Korean political process for 15 years. Jailed for over 4 years, Mr. Kim has since lived a life of official political exile. His so-called crimes represent nothing more than his commitment to the nurturing of democracy in Korea, based on the ability of all Koreans to have a voice in the election of their government. Mr. Kim's courage and quiet resolve are an inspiration to all of us who stand for the ideals of liberty, equality and justice—all of us who hope for peaceful progress toward democracy in Mr. Kim's homeland.

I ask that Mr. Kim's remarks before the Harvard University Korea Colloquium in February be included in the RECORD.

The remarks follow:

DEMOCRACY AND THE ROLE OF OPPOSITION PARTIES IN SOUTH KOREA

(By Sang Hyun Kim)

Ladies and Gentlemen, I am deeply honored to be a guest speaker of the prestigious Harvard Korea Colloquium this evening. I would like to thank Professor Vincent Brandt and Mr. Edward Baker for making this possible.

This evening I would like to take this opportunity to share my thoughts with you about the role which we, the opposition political parties, can play in the restoration of democracy in South Korea. Before I get into the main points, I want to share my personal political experiences with you. This is not for the sake of a flattering self-introduction, but for the better understanding of political reality in Korea.

During the thirty years of my political career, I have experienced both joy and sorrow in fighting for democracy in Korea. I can still remember that moment of enthusiasm when I worked as the chief of staff for Kim Dae-Jung's 1971 presidential election campaign. As you might know, we nearly defeated the late President Park. For the most part of my struggle for democracy, however, sorrow and setback prevailed.

Since 1972, I have been a political prisoner. I was put in jail for four years and three months. My fundamental civil right to participate in political life has been banned for the past fifteen years. The only crime I know of is that I worked hard for the restoration of democracy in Korea. During this long internal political exile, I suffered greatly from torture, imprisonment, and personal humiliation. The most painful was the artificial isolation from real politics. But the isolation taught me new lessons. Through this period of personal suffering and anxiety, I learned how to examine and analyze political realities more objectively, without being a prisoner of my emotions.

Following World War II, over a hundred countries in Asia and Africa have gained independence. All of them had common goals: nation-building and the realization of democracy. Very few, however, were successful in achieving these goals. Their endeavors turned out to be the deepening of authoritarianism and national disintegration. Unfortunately Korea was not an exception to this rule. Our lofty ideals ended in a vicious circle of political decay and authoritarian regimes.

Several factors explain the erosion of democracy in Korea. Firstly, the division of the Korean peninsula brought about a negative legacy impeding the development of democracy in Korea. Constant military tension between the North and the South has allowed dictators of both Koreas to create a political mythology of national security. The enactment and sustainment of the Anti-Communist Law, and the National Security Law reflect an aspect of taking advantage of a precarious security situation for the regime's political survival. In fact, under the name of national security, many dissidents were branded and prosecuted as communist sympathizers.

Secondly, the divided Korea inevitably brought about the emergence of the military as the largest and the most powerful institution in Korea. Since Park's military coup d'etat in 1961, its appetite for political power has known no limits. This had resulted in chronic intervention in civil politics. It is this military intervention in politics that has systematically blocked the development of a democratic policy in Korea.

Thirdly, the state-guided capitalism, which emerged out of a subtle alliance between the military, technocrats, and big business, has posed a serious obstacle to the fulfullment of democratic ideals in Korea. It is true that the state-guided capitalism has achieved a remarkable economic growth. But this growth has been at the expense of equal distribution of wealth and income. Wages have been deliberately kept at minimum in order to make Korean exports competitive in the international market. As a result, profits were not distributed fairly to the workers, but were instead shared by the industrial magnates and the military dictatorship in disguise. The unequal distribution of income and wealth, an unavoidable byproduct of export-led economic growth policies under authoritarian regimes, has undermined political and social bases of democracy in Korea. As long as a triple alliance involving the military, technocrats, and big business remains dominant, the future of democracy in Korea is uncertain.

Fourthly, the erosion of democracy in Korea can be attributed in part to the absence or weakening of critical functions of the mass media. Since the early 1970s, the media has been co-opted by, and has succumbed to, government coercion and appeasement. To put it more bluntly, the mass media has become the handmaiden to the dictatorship. There has been absolutely no objectivity and balance in the news media coverage. A recent nation-wide boycott movement of the KBS, a national TV station, illustrates the people's discontent with the unfair and dysfunctional mass-media.

Fifthly, the lack in institutional counterbalance to the enormous power of the central government is in general, yet another major barrier to the development of a democratic Korea and is also, in particular, an impedement to the effective functioning of opposition parties. Decentralization of power through the viable system of local autonomy is a pre-requisite to democracy. But we lack such an institutional mechanism, making the path of democracy all the more difficult.

Finally, the personification of power, a common tendency among the Korean leaders, is another obstacle to democracy. Political leaders in Korea have traditionally identified themselves with the state per se.. This political narcissism has made them treat political opposition as anti-state, if not treason. Especially, "military-turned" politicians have customarily regarded politics as military operations. In this conception of politics, opposition parties are treated as if they were an enemy to be crushed. It is this military mentality which has encouraged and continued the politics of extreme confrontation, eventually undermining potential for democracy.

While these inhospitable conditions have barred the evolution of democracy in Korea, we, the opposition parties, are not without problems. We are also facing several challenges in realizing our solemn duty of democratization.

The first challenge is the ceaseless attempts by the ruling regime to fragment and weaken the opposition bloc. Taking full advantage of any minor factionalism, the ruling regime has effectively penetrated and fragmented the opposition coalition by the politics of co-optation and manipulation. These actions represent the true intention of those in power who do not welcome the institutionalization of political competition.

We also have the problem of political funds. The marriage of convenience (or necessity) between political power and capital has made it very difficult for the opposition to tap the business community for much-needed political funds, if not impossible. Moreover, the ruling regime's political retaliation has prevented a good number of businessmen from contributing funds to the opposition. As a result, the ruling coalition is soaked in abundance, while the opposition suffers from the acute shortage of funds.

Worse is the prevalent factional politics within the opposition bloc which has weakened its structural capability. The oppositional political parties are organized around factional leaders, rather than around the issues and the policies that are dear to the hearts of the Korean people. Consequently, confrontations between and within the opposition parties rarely involve issues; rather, they are more often conflicts over particularistic interests such as localism or personal allegiance to factional leaders.

Perhaps you can now understand why we are divided, why we are in dire need of political funds, why we are unable to recruit capable new blood, and why we are often amiss in our policy recommendations and proposals.

However, despite these structural weaknesses, the opposition parties in Korea have not only intensified their critique of the ruling regime, but have also attempted to consolidate their internal unity. Ironically, this positive movement has been a result of pressure and expectation from the bottom, the people. Nonetheless, recent events indicate a reversal of this trend, in which people's expectations are ignored, and the politics of fragmentation is revived.

It is no wonder, then, that South Korea's opposition parties functioned in the 1970s and the early 1980s as an ornament of the dictatorship. No wonder they were popularly derided as "the day-time opposition that becomes pro-government by night." This hypocritical dualism has given birth to the rise of a coalition of new oppositional forces comprising of students, religious leaders, independent labor, and intellectuals. To be candid and correct, I should note that the democractic movement in the 1970s was led not by the opposition political parties, but by these forces which were not constrained by institutional politics. These new oppositional forces united under the name of "minjung (the people)" were theoretically mature in their struggle for democracy. Being a part of this new movement, I have learned that the true democracy emanates from the people.

The Korean people's passion for democracy was tragically demonstrated by the Kwangju incident in May, 1980. I believe that this tragedy is attributable at least in part to the inability of the politicians to accommodate the intense popular desire for democracy within the political arena.

The Kwangju tragedy was not futile, however. The surprising result of the last year's general election confirmed the living spirit of those who fell on the altar of democracy in Kwangju. Despite having the advantage of utilizing the government machinery and abundant political funds, the ruling Democratic Justice Party won only 35 percent of votes, while the opposition parties accounted for 65 percent. What is interesting to note is the fact that the New Korea Democratic Party, which was born a month before the election, drew the largest support from the people. By any standard, it was a miracle in the history of Korean politics. I am proud that I was one of the key architects behind this miracle. For me, however, it was not a miracle of spontaneity, but rather an outcome of a prudent assessment of political reality and careful campaign planning. I learned another lesson through the election: objective assessment and systematic planning can bring people together and outstrip the ruling regime under any circumstances.

Ladies, and Gentlemen, in view of all this, I have come to the conclusion that the restoration of democracy in Korea requires a new political leadership. This new leadership should possess several unique qualities and capabilities.

I believe, first of all, that new political leadership should be able to balance ideals with reality and to subscribe to the principle of responsible politics. The politics of accountability negates the politics of slogans and extremism. It advocates reasonable criticisms which are followed by alternative ideas and proposals.

Secondly, a new leadership has to create a climate of dialogue and compromise. I understood that democracy, especially liberal democracy, is the process of muddling through, bargaining, logrolling, and accommodation. We cannot reach the final destination of a true democracy without going through this incremental interactive process. Even angelic ideas sometimes require a compromise with evil for their realization. Resorting to dialogue and compromise should not undermine our ultimate goal of democracy, however.

In the opposition circles today, extremism tends to prevail over moderate positions which favor dialogue and compromise. Radicalism may be emotionally soothing, but it cannot advance our society and politics. Some politicians who advocate dialogue are often branded as "sakura" (gray opportunist in Japanese). Such people are willing to compromise everything, including principles. What I am emphasizing here is a flexibility and resilience in methods, but a firm adherence to principles.

Thirdly, we, the opposition parties, must free ourselves from the traditional obsession with status and hierarchy. We should restore a truly democratic climate in inter- and intra-party relations. This is the first step in regaining the people's trust and respect. At the same time, the opposition bloc should come up with a set of viable tactics and strategies to deal with the ruling regime.

When we survey the history of opposition politics, we can note that overthrowing dictatorship is simplistically identified with the restoration of democracy. Those who advocated the violent overthrow of the dictatorial regime by rejecting the possibility of co-existence, however, turned out to have tacitly recognized the legitimacy of the regime. I submit that we have reached the point in history where the democratic movement cannot bear fruit by advocating such violent notions as an overthrow. Violence begets violence. Staging a zero-sum struggle of all or nothing will injure all parties concerned. We have to opt for what is realistically attainable, although it may be second best to what is most ideal.

Fourthly, we have to provide graceful exit for those who are in power. The current leaders in power fear political vendetta in the event of their fall. The present constitution, which stipulates indirect presidential elections, serves as a safeguard for their survival. It is from this background that they are dead set on protecting the existing constitution and ignoring the popular demand for a constitutional amendment for direct presidential elections. The confrontation between the ruling regime and the opposition forces over the issue of constitutional preservation or amendment is posing a serious political dilemma. This dilemma may erupt into violence and bloodshed, and lead to the useless sacrifice of thousands of lives. The only solution to this dilemma is to enable the current leaders to retire honorably. This may entail a campaign to help them restore their human conscience and return to the march of history. In other words, we, the opposition forces, should tame, rather than confront, a wild beast.

Equally important, however, is the restoration of honor and compensation for the victims of the Kwangju incident. We all know that they were not communist rebels. They were simple citizens who were concerned about the future of democracy in Korea. The only crime they committed was their intolerance to the repressive political climate. Along with the graceful exit of those in power, the discussion of the status of the Kwangju victims should be an important agenda of the constitutional amendment

Ladies and Gentlemen, I often hear that, in Korean politics, there are political tacticians but no political strategists. We have to remember that we cannot win every battle before we win the war, and truly, we do not have to. The history of Korean politics teaches us that those who have won political battles tactically were not necessarily ultimate victors. To win a war for democracy, our ultimate goal, we have to carefully weigh the implications of every tactical success and failure for the overall strategy. Tactical gains through extremist rhetoric and sporadic resort to violence often inflict greater cost to our large scale goals.

We have to leave behind the unfortunate past when the regime and the opposition alike did not budge an inch from their respective objectives, only to bring about the worst possible consequences. We have to expand our popular support and use it as a leverage in pursuing dialogue and bargaining with those in power. We have to offer the regime not only a face-saving rationale, but also incentives for them to participate in constitutional politics.

I have a dream: a dream of becoming a bridge which can lead the people to the path to democracy. I dream of becoming a tool which can mend and heal the fractured pain of our society and pave a way for the restoration of democracy in Korea. This restoration is the historical necessity, and it is the only way to ensure the peaceful and prosperous co-existence of all Koreans. To know and to put into acting the historical necessity constitutes the wisdom and the prerequisites of political leaders in Korea.

For the past two and a half decades, debates over the fundamental democratic principles have exhausted all of us. We should graduate from this infantile dispute. It will be shameful to the generations to come if we, both ruling and opposition forces, do not restore democracy now. I again emphasize that democracy is a historical necessity. Time has come. We cannot delay it any longer. We should realize a peaceful transition to democracy by all means. I sincerely hope that all of you here at Harvard University would help us move toward this destination, a peaceful restoration of democracy in Korea.●

PATRIARCH ATHENAGORAS I

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today to acknowledge the 100th anniversary of the birth of the late ecumenical Patriarch Athenagoras I. It has, in fact, been proclaimed Athenagorian year by the current archbishop of the Greek Orthodox Church of North and South America, His Eminence Iakovos. Patriarch Athenagoras I was a remarkable person, whose tenure as archbishop of the Americas spanned the years 1931–1948. He was a visionary leader of the church worldwide after 1949, when he was enthroned as the 262d Patriarch of Constantinople.

During his tenure as archbishop of the Americas, the Greek Orthodox communities in the Western Hemisphere were organized. There are over 500 Greek Orthodox churches in the United States today. During his tenure as patriarch, he met Pope Paul VI on the Mount of Olives and thereby ended 933 years of mutual excommunication between the two churches.

This year, there will be educational, ecumenical, civic, and cultural programs to honor the late patriarch, and I wish all the Greek Orthodox communities much joy in this anniversary year.●

TRIBUTE TO HUW WHELDON

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, Norman Podhoretz has written an ineffably lovely tribute to Huw Wheldon which I know the Senate would wish to share. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The tribute follows:

[From the Washington Post, Mar. 26, 1986]

THE RAGING END OF A "TRULY GODLY LIFE"

(By Norman Podhoretz)

My closest friend in all the world died this month. He died in London, at home, in his own room, surrounded by his wife and children. He died only a little short of the allotted Biblical span of three score and ten. He died full of honors and dearly beloved of many. Nevertheless he did not die peacefully. He died hard.

"Do not go gentle into that good night/ Rage, rage, against the dying of the light," wrote Dylan Thomas in a poem addressed to his father. Like Dylan Thomas, my friend was a Welshman, and that is how he died: not gently but full of rage. I know this not because I saw it with my own eyes, but from a mutual friend of ours who quoted Dylan Thomas' lines in describing for me how the last hours had gone.

By an eerie coincidence, another mutual friend, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, fell back on those very same lines in his remarks at the funeral of Sen. Jacob Javits. In every other respect an altogether different kind of person from Jacob Javits, my friend too had known for many months that he had a terminal illness; and he too responded to the sentence of imminent death with a ferocious determination to live and live and live until the moment he died.

With every passing day he grew weaker and weaker, but day after day he forced himself to do things that no one around him could believe he had the strength to do. He was in unendurable pain, but he would take only enough medication to dull its edge because more than that insulated him from the only life he had left to live.

In deciding to die in this way, my friend never, I think, doubted that he was making the right choice. And yet the last time I saw him, about three months ago, I could see that he was in spiritual torment over his inability to resign himself, to make his peace with death.

That much underrated philospher, George Santayana, once said: "There is no God and Mary is His mother." My friend would never have said flatly, "There is no God,"—he would have thought it brazen and crass—but if he ever had, he would certainly have added, "and the Bible is His word." Raised in a devout Presbyterian family, but finally unable to sustain the literal faith of his fathers, still he never lost his belief in the spiritual truth of Christianity. Specifically, he never lost his belief in the idea that the reason we are here on Earth is to serve God and to praise Him.

Serving God as my friend came to understand it translated into devoting oneself to the service of something greater than self—in his own case it was a great national institution, but almost anything large would do—and praising God translated into praising life.

Although hymns and hosannas were certainly necessary to glorify what deserved to be glorified, one was not mainly supposed to praise life by verbal affirmation. Mainly one praised it through a readiness to enjoy what there was to be enjoyed, to relish what there was to be relished, to savor what there was to be savored, and most especially to accept every invitation to a good laugh that the world had to offer.

All this my friend did, and more. Like Falstaff, he was not only witty in himself, but "the cause that wit was in other men." And even more than wit, he was the cause that laughter was in other men. His own laugh was so loud and boisterous that—I do not exaggerate—it became famous from one end of England to the other. Nor do I exaggerate when I say that his entry into a room invariably made everyone in it smile, in happy anticipation of the laughter he was sure to bring.

That such a man—a man so alive that thinking of him dead seems a contradiction in terms—should rage against death is not surprising. But why should such a man torment himself over dying in a state of rage?

He hinted at the answer in telling me that one day, when his physical pain was at its most unbearable, he turned in a desperate search for help to a cantata about dying by Johann Sebastian Bach, Ich habe genug—"I have had enough." And he asked himself: "If Bach can say it, why can't I?" He meant that if Bach, in his eyes perhaps the greatest of all men, was permitted to yearn for death as an escape from the awful miseries of this life, why should he, an ordinary mortal, be required to go on raging?

But of course he knew why. Bach, who believed in an afterlife, was permitted to serve God and praise Him by welcoming death as a deliverance into the arms of his savior. My friend could only serve God and praise Him by cherishing life on this Earth to the very end and by refusing to curse it.

And so even, or rather especially, in the extremity of his suffering, he did not curse life—neither with the words of his mouth nor, I feel sure, in the meditations of his heart. Least of all did he curse it as so many do nowadays when they declare that life is worth having only when it is good and, worse yet, when they act on that satanic idea.

My friend's name was Huw Wheldon. Though he would have accused me of blasphemy for saying so, he taught everyone who was given the great and blessed gift of knowing him—including, I suspect, people who knew him only from the television screen—how, in what he himself called these spiritually illiterate times, when it is so hard to die with the peaceful resignation of a true believer, it is still possible to live a truly good life.●

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so orderded.

EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, let me very swiftly say I did not get the opportunity previously to extend my appreciation to the majority leader and the minority leader for their work with regard to the Contra proposal and a special thanks and gratitude to Senator LUGAR and Senator PELL, two fine colleagues who did a most remarkable job on a very tough and emotional issue. Senator LUGAR has led us through many of those in these past months. He is a superb chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations.

ORDERS FOR TUESDAY, APRIL 8, 1986

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate convenes on Tuesday, April 8, 1986, the reading of the Journal be dispensed with; that no resolutions come over under the rule; that the call of the calendar be dispensed with; and that, following the recognition of the two leaders under the standing order, there be special orders in favor of Senators PROXMIRE and HAWKINS for not to exceed 5 minutes each; to be followed by a period for the transaction of routine morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 12:30 p.m. with Senators permitted to speak therein for not more than 5 minutes each.

I ask unanimous consent further that the morning hour be deemed to have expired.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO FILE REPORTS

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that during the adjournment of the Senate over until April 8, 1986, the committees be authorized to file reports on Friday, April 4, 1986, between the hours of 10 a.m., and 3 p.m.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—S. 1660

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, after conferring with the Democratic Leader, I ask unanimous consent that at 2 p.m., on Tuesday, April 8, 1986, the Senate turn to Calendar No. 395, S. 1660, to grant a charter to the Confederate Memorial Association, and that no amendments or motions to recommit with instructions be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TIME LIMITATION AGREEMENT—S. 8

Mr. SIMPSON. I ask unanimous consent that following disposition of S. 1660 on Tuesday, April 8, the Senate turn to the consideration of Calendar item No. 587, S. 8, to grant a charter to the Vietnam Veterans of America, and that it be considered under the following time agreement that 10 minutes of debate to be equally divided between the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Judiciary Committee; that no amendments be in order with the exception of the Committee Reported amendments; that no motions to recommit with instructions be in order; and that the agreement be in the usual form.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SIMPSON. I further ask unanimous consent that it may be in order now to order the yeas and nays on passage of S. 8.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote occur on final passage of S. 8 at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 8.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Without objection paragraph 4, rule XII is waived.

THE CALENDAR

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I inquire of the minority leader if he is in a position to pass the following calendar items: Calendar No. 574, S. 2179; Calendar No. 577, S. 1895; Calendar No. 582, S. 1707; Calendar No. 583, S. 1756; Calendar No. 584, S. 1952; Calendar No. 585, S. 2084; and Calendar item No. 586, Senate Joint Resolution 222.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, all the items identified have been cleared on this side of the aisle and we are ready to proceed en bloc or in whatever mode the distinguished Senator wishes.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I appreciate that from the minority leader.

I ask unanimous consent that the calendar items just identified be considered en bloc and passed en bloc and that all committee-reported amendments and preambles be considered and agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REDUCTION IN TERMS OF OFFICE OF MEMBERS OF THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2179) to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to provide for reduction in term of office of members of the Federal Communications Commission, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, with an amendment.

On page 2, strike line 4, through and including line 11, and insert the following:

(1) upon the expiration of the term of office prescribed by law to occur on June 30, 1986, any person appointed as a member of the Federal Communications Commission to fill such office for the term following such date shall be eligible to serve until June 30, 1990, and any person appointed as a member of the Federal Communications Commission to the term of office prescribed by law to expire on June 30, 1987, shall be eligible to serve until June 30, 1989; and

So as to make the bill read:

S. 2179

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) section 4(c) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 154(c)) is amended by striking "seven" and inserting in lieu thereof "five".

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) of this section shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act, except that—

(1) upon the expiration of the term of office prescribed by law to occur on June 30, 1986, any person appointed as a member of the Federal Communications Commission to fill such office for the term following such date shall be eligible to serve until June 30, 1990, and any person appointed as a member of the Federal Communications Commission to the term of office prescribed by law to expire on June 30, 1987, shall be eligible to serve until June 30, 1989; and

(2) notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this section, persons appointed as members of the Federal Communications Commission to terms of office prescribed by law to expire on June 30, 1988, June 30, 1991, and June 30, 1992, shall be eligible to serve until the expiration of the term of office on June 30, 1988, June 30, 1991, and June 30, 1992, whichever is applicable.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, S. 2179 is good legislation that is designed to correct a disturbing situation—the fact that for 2 consecutive years out of every 7, no term of an FCC Commissioner will expire. We find ourselves with this problem because when we reduced the number of FCC Commissioners from seven to five in 1982, we did not also reduce the length of terms from 7 years to 5. Undoubtedly, congressional oversight of the FCC will diminish during these 2-year gaps, as will a President's ability to appoint commissioners during a 4-year term in office.

S. 2179 remedies this problem by shortening the length of terms to 5 years. It also changes the length of two terms—the one beginning in 1986 and the one ending in 1987—to ensure that a term will expire in both 1989 and 1990—years where currently no term is set to expire.

I want to thank Senator GOLDWATER for introducing this important legislation. It is clearly supported by all parties and it received unanimous approval from the Commerce Committee. I urge my colleagues to support it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to further amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 2179), as amended, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay the motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

RELIEF OF MARLBORO COUNTY GENERAL HOSPITAL CHARITY OF BENNETTSVILLE, SC

The bill (S. 1895) for the relief of Marlboro County General Hospital Charity of Bennettsville, SC, was considered.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, today the Senate considers legislation which would provide equitable relief to the Marlboro County General Hospital Charity [MCGHC]. This bill would allow this charitable trust the opportunity to continue providing indigent health care to the citizens of the most economically depressed county in my State. According to recent statistics, Marlboro County has the highest unemployment rate (14.2 percent) and the lowest yearly per capita income ($5,814) of the 46 South Carolina counties.

Prior to its sale, Marlboro General Hospital Inc., a nonprofit corporation, provided health care services to poor citizens of Marlboro County. This hospital was built with funds provided under the Federal Hill-Burton Program. Hospitals which received these funds were required to provide health services to the poor, including those who might not be eligible for Medicaid, or Medicare, or had no private health insurance. This obligation extended for a period of 20 years after the Hill-Burton funds had been received. Marlboro General was sold in 1981 to the Hospital Corporation of America. The sale occurred prior to the 20-year period, since the Hill-Burton funds had been received in 1962 and 1968. This charitable trust was established from the proceeds of the sale.

Under current law, the Department of Health and Human Services [HHS] has a claim to a share of the Hill-Burton funds distributed. However, the claim can be waived if the buyer agrees to establish a trust in twice the amount owed HHS, and to use these funds to provide indigent health care.

Mr. President, Marlboro County General Hospital Charity deserves the relief this bill would provide because it is in total compliance with the basic policy of the Hill-Burton waiver provisions. MCGHC has always provided funds for indigent health care services to deserving Marlboro County citizens. The trustees have always been willing to establish this trust in total compliance with these waiver provisions. However, because they are the sellers and not the purchasers of the hospital, current law prohibits MCGHC from obtaining a waiver. Without the relief this bill provides, MCGHC will be forced to return funds which have been and continue to be used for their originally intended purposes. Such a result would be an example of form prevailing over substance.

This bill mandates that the MCGHC indigent health care trust be established in compliance with current law. It would require MCGHC to enter into an agreement with HHS to ensure that appropriate indigent health care services would continue to be provided. This agreement would also provide penalties for any noncompliance by MCGHC. Relief from all liability is contingent on such compliance.

In this bill, the interests of the Government are adequately served by ensuring that these funds are only used for indigent health care services. The interests of the many area citizens who are poor and/or unemployed are served because they will not be turned away from receiving the health care services provided by this hospital. This legislation equitably addresses these interests. Accordingly, I urge its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 1895) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 1895

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) Marlboro County General Hospital Charity, the successor in interest to Marlboro County General Hospital, Inc., also known as Marlboro County General Hospital, of Bennettsville, South Carolina, shall be relieved of all liability under title VI of the Public Health Service Act resulting from the sale of Marlboro County General Hospital to the Hospital Corporation of America, if such Marlboro County General Hospital Charity complies with the provisions of this Act.

(b) Such Marlboro County General Hospital Charity shall—

(1) establish and maintain an irrevocable trust in the amount described in section 609(d)(A)(i) of the Public Health Service Act;

(2) provide that such trust will only be used to provide health care services to persons who reside in Marlboro County, South Carolina, and who are unable to pay for such services; and

(3) provide such services to such persons during the period beginning 15 days after the date of enactment of this Act and ending on the date described in subsection (d).

(c)(1) If—

(A) the Secretary of Health and Human Services determines that such Marlboro County General Hospital Charity has complied with the provisions of paragraph (1) of subsection (b); and

(B) such Marlboro County General Hospital Charity has entered into an agreement with the Secretary to ensure compliance with paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b), such Marlboro County General Hospital Charity shall be permanently relieved of any liability under title VI of the Public Health Service Act resulting from the sale of Marlboro County General Hospital to the Hospital Corporation of America.

(2) Any agreement entered into under paragraph (1)(B) shall contain appropriate provisions specifying penalties for noncompliance by such Marlboro County General Hospital Charity with the provisions of subsection (b).

(d) The date referred to in subsection (b)(3) is the last day of the most recent 20-year period during which the Marlboro County General Hospital was required, under section 609 of the Public Health Service Act, to remain as a public or other nonprofit hospital.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay the motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

GOLD MEDAL TO PARENTS OF FATHER JERZY POPIELUSZKO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1707) to authorize the President to present a gold medal to the parents of Father Jerzy Popieluszko, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, with an amendment:

On page 2, line 7, strike "$22,000", and insert "$18,000".

So as to make the bill read:

S. 1707

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a)(1) the President is authorized to present, on behalf of the Congress, to the parents of Father Jerzy Popieluszko a gold medal of appropriate design in recognition of the accomplishments of Father Jerzy Popieluszko.

(2) For purposes of the presentation referred to in paragraph (1), the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to cause to be struck a gold medal with suitable emblems, devices, and inscriptions to be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury.

(3) There be authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $18,000 to carry out the provisions of this subsection.

(b)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may cause duplicates in bronze of such medal to be coined and sold under such regulations as he may prescribe, at a price sufficient to cover the cost thereof, including labor, materials, dies, use of machinery, overhead expenses, and the gold medal.

(2) The appropriation used to carry out the provisions of subsection (a) shall be reimbursed out of the proceeds of such sales.

SEC. 2. The medals provided for in this Act are national medals for purposes of section 5111 of title 31, United States Code.

SEC. 3. This Act shall take effect on October 1, 1985.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay the motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

GOLD MEDAL TO SARGENT SHRIVER

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1756) to authorize the President to present to Sargent Shriver, on behalf of the Congress, a specially struck medal which had been reported from the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, with an amendment:

On page 2, line 10, strike "$25,000", and insert "$18,000"

So as to make the bill read:

S. 1756

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a)(1) the President is authorized to present to Sargent Shriver, on behalf of the Congress, a gold medal of appropriate design to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the Peace Corps and to recognize the incomparable contribution of Sargent Shriver as the first Director of the Peace Corps. For such purpose, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to cause to be struck a gold medal with the emblem of the Peace Corps and the likeness of Sargent Shriver as well as the names of all past Directors of the Peace Corps.

(2) There are authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $18,000 to carry out the provisions of paragraph (1).

(b) The Secretary of the Treasury may cause duplicates in bronze of such medal to be coined and sold under such regulations as he may prescribe, at a price sufficient to cover the cost thereof, including labor, materials, dies, use of machinery, overhead expenses, and the gold medal. The appropriation used to carry out the provisions of subsection (a) shall be reimbursed out of the proceeds of such sales.

SEC. 2. The medals provided for in this Act are national medals for purposes of section 5111 of title 31, United States Code.

S. 1756—MEDAL FOR SARGENT SHRIVER

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, it is with great pleasure that I join my distinguished colleague from Illinois [Mr. SIMON] and others in sponsoring S. 1756, a bill which would authorize the President to present to Sargent Shriver, on behalf of the Congress, a medal commemorating the 25th anniversary of the Peace Corps. And it is with equal delight that I stand today to honor Sargent Shriver and his outstanding work as the first Director of the Peace Corps.

Sargent Shriver launched the Peace Corps in 1961 with a small group of trained volunteers who went to developing nations to teach and aid in community and agricultural development. The Peace Corps volunteers of yesterday and today become a part of the community which they serve and, through their service, demonstrate that people can be an important impetus for change. Under his incomparable leadership from 1961 to 1966, the Peace Corps extended its program to 46 countries and its membership to over 12,000. With that foundation of solid leadership, the Peace Corps today has placed volunteers in over 62 host countries.

In the early 1960's, Presidential candidate John F. Kennedy, posed this question: "How many [of you] are willing to spend [two] years in Africa or Latin America or Asia working for freedom?" I was willing. In fact, I served as a member of the Peace Corps in the Dominican Republic from 1966 to 1968.

That experience was undoubtedly a pivotal one in my life. I gave of myself: I taught others some of the skills which most of us take for granted, and I organized people to help themselves. Immediately, I saw the destruction which dysentery could and did cause. The saddening vision of children needlessly ill with diseases which could be easily treated or avoided prompted me to embark on the central project of my stay. Shortly after settling in, I began organizing an effort to build a hospital for expectant mothers. The response was so overwhelming that we were able to build the first maternity hospital in the area in a matter of months. Almost nothing in life has satisfied me more than working on that hospital.

I said just a moment ago that I gave in the Dominican Republic. That is true. But, in giving, I gained tenfold. Among other things, I gained a better understanding of a new people and, in so doing, gained a better insight into myself.

My experience may not have been possible without the energetic and dynamic leadership of Sargent Shriver. As a New York Times article of the time exclaimed: "Shriver * * * has made the Peace Corps the special creature it is."

Sargent Shriver is an idealist. Before and during his directorship, he often talked, both publicly and privately, about the need to see a new vision of America, one not of material power but of idealism and sacrifice. He once said:

> The only genuine elite in this world, or in the next, is the elite of those men and women who have given their lives to justice and to charity.

Under this definition, Sargent Shriver is a member of the elite.

What is more, Sargent Shriver put to action his ideals and his deep personal commitment to social justice and equality. He did not spearhead the Peace Corps from the luxurious comfort of a Washington office. He personally visited and worked in more than 50 countries in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. Indeed, in his first 3 years with the Peace Corps, he once estimated he had been in foreign countries working for the Corps a full one-third of that time. The very success of the Peace Corps is due in large part to his energetic and effervescent commitment to the organization's ideals and reality. As a newspaper of the era noted:

> One begins to understand how [Sargent Shriver] took the infant organization scoffers and dubbed "Kennedy's Kiddy Korps" and built it into the most universally respected of New Frontier innovations.

The Peace Corps' purpose from the beginning has been to promote world peace and friendship and to help promote a better understanding of the American people by the peoples served and of other cultures by the American people. Through his work and directorship at the Peace Corps, Sargent Shriver has engendered an enormous amount of mutual understanding and respect among nations. He is, simply, a man of peace, and it is, therefore, fitting that this Congress pay him tribute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill S. 1756, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

YOUNG ASTRONAUT PROGRAM MEDAL ACT

The bill (S. 1952) to provide for the striking of medals to commemorate the Young Astronaut Program was considered.

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I am delighted that the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs has reported out S. 1952, the Young Astronauts Medal Act. I am particularly pleased to be an honorary co-vice chairman of the Young Astronaut Program with my colleague, Senator GARN, with whom I introduced this legislation.

The Young Astronauts Council has one thing in mind—the education of our young people in math, science, and aerospace studies. These fields are extremely important to our high-tech world of today. I am also pleased to report that Ohio has one of the best statewide programs.

It is important to understand that this legislation is cost-free to the taxpayer. All we are doing is authorizing, in accordance with law, the striking of the medal. Only private funds will be used to produce the medal, and proceeds will go to the Young Astronaut Programs. I am extremely pleased to cosponsor this legislation and I urge support for its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 1952) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 1952

Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SHORT TITLE

SECTION 1. This Act may be cited as the "Young Astronaut Program Medal Act".

MEDALS

SEC. 2. (a) In commemoration of the Young Astronaut Program and its educational objectives, the Secretary of the Treasury shall strike and deliver to the Young Astronaut Council not more than 750,000 medals with suitable emblems, devices, and inscriptions to be determined by the Secretary after consultation with the Council and the Commission of Fine Arts.

(b) The medals, which may be disposed of by the Council at a premium, may be delivered at such times as may be required by the Council in quantities of not less than 2,000, except that no medals shall be struck by the Secretary after December 31, 1987.

COSTS

SEC. 3. (a) The Secretary shall cause such medals to be struck and delivered at not less than the cost of manufacturing such medals (including labor, materials, dies, use of machinery, and overhead expenses) plus a surcharge equal to 10 percent of such cost of manufacturing.

(b) Security satisfactory to the Director of the Mint shall be furnished to indemnify the United States for full payment of such costs.

METAL CONTENT

SEC. 4. The medals authorized to be struck and delivered under this Act shall be struck in gold, silver, and bronze and in such size or sizes as shall be determined by the Secretary in consultation with the Council.

KILLING OF LEON KLINGHOFFER BY INTERNATIONAL TERRORISTS ABOARD THE "ACHILLE LAURO"

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S.J. Res. 222) concerning the cruel and inhuman killing of Leon Klinghoffer by international terrorists aboard the cruise ship Achille Lauro, because he did not submit to the demands of these terrorists, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, with an amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The amendment to the preamble was agreed to.

The preamble, as amended, was agreed to.

The title was amended so as to read:

Joint resolution concerning the cruel and inhuman killing of Leon Klinghoffer and Robert Stethem by international terrorists because they did not submit to the demands of these terrorists.

The joint resolution, as amended, and the preamble, as amended, are as follows:

S. J. RES. 222

Whereas the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro and TWA flight 847 were peaceful journeys in the Eastern Mediterranean;

Whereas the Achille Lauro and TWA flight 847 were seized by terrorists for the purpose of frightening and threatening the passengers, their relatives, and law-abiding citizens everywhere, and for the purpose of drawing attention to the terrorists' goals;

Whereas the terrorists were armed and dangerous and attempted to force the passengers and crew of the Achille Lauro and TWA flight 847 into submission to further their purposes of terror, anarchy, hate, and death;

Whereas the terrorists of the Achille Lauro have been charged under United States law with hostage-taking, piracy, and conspiracy to commit both;

Whereas the United States Department of State has offered rewards for the apprehension of Robert Stethem's murderers;

Whereas Leon Klinghoffer, a sixty-nine-year-old dearly-beloved American who was crippled and confined to a wheelchair, and Robert Stethem, a young Navy diver, did not submit to the demands of the terrorists;

Whereas the terrorists brutally killed Leon Klinghoffer by shooting him several times and throwing his body overboard because he resisted their demands; and

Whereas terrorists brutally beat Robert Stethem to death and left him on the Beirut Airport tarmac: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President is authorized to present, on behalf of the Congress, posthumously to Leon Klinghoffer and to Robert Stethem a Congressional Gold Medal each to show Congress' admiration for the bravery of Leon Klinghoffer, a handicapped senior citizen, and Robert Stethem, a young Navy diver, who, during the kidnappings by terrorists, did not submit to terrorist demands to further the objectives of terrorism, and who gave their lives as a result of this resistance.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Treasury is directed to strike and issue the gold medals authorized by the first section of this joint resolution in accordance with the national medals provisions of section 5111 of title 31, United States Code.

SEC. 3. The President is authorized to present the gold medals authorized by this joint resolution on behalf of the Congress separately, to the daughters of Leon Klinghoffer and the parents of Robert Stethem.

SEC. 4. There are authorized to be appropriated $18,500 to carry out this joint resolution.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

CONSERVATION SERVICE REFORM ACT

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, after conferring with the Democratic leader, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives on S. 410.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, That the bill from the Senate (S. 410) entitled "An Act to repeal the Commercial and Apartment Conservation Service, and for other purposes", do pass with the following amendments:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Conservation Service Reform Act of 1986".

TITLE I—RESIDENTIAL CONSERVATION SERVICE

SEC. 101. RESTATEMENT OF FINDINGS.

Section 102(a) of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 8201(a)) (relating to findings) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

"(1) the United States has survived a period of energy shortage and has made significant progress toward improving energy efficiency in all sectors of the economy;

"(2) effective measures must continue to be taken by the Federal Government and other users and suppliers of energy to control the rate of growth of demand for energy and the efficiency of its use;

"(3) the continuation of this effort will permit the United States to become increasingly independent of the world oil market, less vulnerable to interruption of foreign oil supplies, and more able to provide energy to meet future needs; and

"(4) all sectors of the economy of the United States should continue to reduce significantly the demand for nonrenewable energy resources such as oil and natural gas by implementing and maintaining effective conservation measures for the efficient use of these and other energy sources.".

SEC. 102. CHANGES IN CERTAIN PLAN REQUIREMENTS.

(a) INFORMATION REQUIREMENTS MADE APPLICABLE UNTIL JANUARY 1, 1990.—(1) Section 215(a) and section 217(a)(1) of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C 8216(a) and 42 U.S.C. 8218(a)(1)) (relating to utility programs and home heating supplier programs) are amended by striking out "January 1, 1985" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "January 1, 1990 (but not more often than once during the period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Conservation Service Reform Act of 1986 and ending on January 1, 1990)".

(2)(A) Section 215(d) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8216(d)) is amended by striking out "January 1, 1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "January 1, 1990".

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall apply only with respect to persons who become customers of a utility after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) ELIMINATION OF REQUIREMENTS THAT PUBLIC UTILITIES ARRANGE FOR INSTALLATION OF SUGGESTED MEASURES AND FOR RELATED LOANS; ELIMINATION OF LISTING REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) UTILITY PROGRAMS.—Section 215(b) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8216(b)) (relating to project manager requirements) is amended—

(A) by striking out "Each utility program shall include" through "procedures" and inserting in lieu thereof "Each utility program shall include procedures";

(B) by striking out "to" through "inspect" and inserting in lieu thereof "to inspect"; and

(C) by striking out "inspection;" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof "inspection.".

(2) HOME HEATING SUPPLIER PROGRAMS.—Section 217(a)(2) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8218(a)(2)) (relating to home heating supplier programs) is amended—

(A) by striking out "will—" through "inspect" and inserting in lieu thereof "will inspect"; and

(B) by striking out "installing, suggested measures;" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof "installing, suggested measures.".

(3) STATE PLANS.—Section 213(a) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8214(a)) (relating to general plan requirements) is amended—

(A) by striking out paragraphs (2) and (3); and

(B) by redesignating paragraphs (4) through (9) as paragraphs (2) through (7), respectively.

(c) RULES.—Section 212(b)(2) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8213(b)(2)) (relating to rules of the Secretary) is amended—

(1) by striking out subparagraphs (E) and (F), and

(2) by inserting "and" at the end of subparagraph (C).

(d) DEFINITIONS.—(1) Section 210(9) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8211(9)) (relating to definitions) is amended to read as follows:

"(9) The term 'residential building' means any building used for residential occupancy which is not a new building to which final standards under section 304(a) of the Energy Conservation and Production Act apply and which has a system for heating or cooling, or both.".

(2) Section 212(c)(4) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8213(c)(4)) is amended to read as follows:

"(4) For purposes of this part, the term 'Governor', the term 'State regulatory authority', the term 'State agency' and the term 'agency or instrumentality of a State' mean the Tennessee Valley Authority in the case of the Tennessee Valley Authority or any public utility with respect to which the Tennessee Valley Authority has ratemaking authority.".

(e) EXEMPTION.—Section 215 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8216), as amended by subsection (h)(7) of this section, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) EXEMPTION OF CERTAIN MULTIFAMILY BUILDINGS.—The provisions of this section shall not apply to any building which has five or more dwelling units and which does not contain individual meters for the dwelling units therein.".

(f) EFFECT OF 1986 AMENDMENTS ON APPROVED PLANS FOR PURPOSES OF FEDERAL STANDBY AUTHORITY.—Section 219 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8220) (relating to Federal standby authority) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) PLANS APPROVED BEFORE 1986 AMENDMENTS.—For purposes of this section, any residential energy conservation plan which was approved by the Secretary before the effective date of the Conservation Service Reform Act of 1986 shall be treated as an approved plan which is adequately implemented if such plan is adequately implemented in accordance with the requirements of this Act as amended by the Conservation Service Reform Act of 1986.".

(g) TEMPORARY EXEMPTIONS.—Section 218(a) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8219(a)) (relating to temporary exemptions) is amended by striking out the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Such temporary exemption may be granted or renewed until such date as determined by the Secretary.".

(h) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 210(18) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8211(18)) is amended by striking out "215(b)(1)(A)" and inserting in lieu thereof "215(b)".

(2) Section 212(b)(2)(C) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8213(b)(2)(C)) is amended by striking out "213(a)(4)" and inserting in lieu thereof "213(a)(2)".

(3) Section 213(b)(2)(A) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8214(b)(2)(A)) is amended by striking out "215(b)(1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "215(b)".

(4) Section 214(b) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8215(b)) is amended by striking out "(8)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(6)".

(5) Section 215(a)(3) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8216(a)(3)) is amended by striking out "and the lists referred to in section 213(a) (2) and (3)".

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

(6) Section 215(d) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8216(d)) is amended by striking out ", the offer required under subsection (b)(1)(A)" and all that follows and by inserting in lieu thereof "and the offer required under subsection (b).".

(7) Section 215 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8216) is amended by striking out subsection (f) and by redesignating subsection (g) as subsection (f).

(8) Section 216(c)(1) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8217(c)(1)) is amended by striking out subparagraph (A) and by redesignating subparagraphs (B) and (C) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively.

(9) Section 216(c)(2)(C) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8217(c)(2)(C)) is amended by striking out "on the lists referred to in section 213(a)(2)".

(i) Statutory Construction.—Nothing in the amendments made by subsections (b), (c), (g), and (h) shall prevent implementation of a plan or program pursuant to the National Energy Conservation Policy Act as in effect before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(j) Effective Date.—

(1) In general.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect one hundred and eighty days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) Rules.—The Secretary of Energy shall, within the one hundred and eighty-day period referred to in paragraph (1), amend the rules promulgated under section 212 of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act to carry out the amendments made by this Act.

(3) Special requirement for plans approved before 1986 amendments.—The Secretary of Energy shall, with respect to any residential energy conservation plan approved by the Secretary of Energy before the effective date (as described in paragraph (1)) of the amendments made by this section, require the appropriate official in charge of such plan to notify the Secretary of Energy, within one hundred and twenty days of the date of enactment of this Act, that the amendments made by subsections (a), (d), and (e) of this section shall be implemented for the duration of such plan. The Secretary may not impose any other notice or approval requirement on a Governor or agency or instrumentality of a State with respect to such amendments.

SEC. 103. ALTERNATIVE PLANS FOR RESIDENTIAL BUILDINGS.

(a) In General.—The National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 8201 et seq.) is amended by inserting the following new sections after section 225:

"SEC. 226. ALTERNATIVE STATE PLANS.

"(a) In General.—A Governor of any State, any State regulatory authority, or any agency or instrumentality of a State may elect, to the extent authorized under State law, to formulate and certify an alternative State plan for residential buildings under this section.

"(b) Consequences of Certification.—(1) Beginning with the date on which the certification of a plan is made with respect to a State under subsection (e) and ending with the date on which a plan is no longer in effect under this section with respect to such State—

"(A) subsections (a) through (c)(3) of section 212, sections 213 through 215 and sections 217 and 218 shall not apply with respect to—

"(i) regulated utilities in such State, and

"(ii) nonregulated utilities which are included in the plan;

"(B) section 219 shall apply to utilities described in subparagraph (A) only to the extent provided for in subsection (g); and

"(C) sections 212 through 219 shall apply to nonregulated utilities which are not included in the plan and which have not certified an alternative utility plan under section 227.

"(2) Except as provided in subsection (g), any State for which a plan is certified under subsection (e) shall continue to have such plan in effect until January 1, 1990.

"(c) Formulation of Plan.—In formulating any plan under this section, the entity in charge of formulating such plan shall—

"(1) examine energy conservation and load management programs and perform a cost benefit analysis of program measures to be included in the plan, including an assessment of the life-cycle benefits of energy conservation measures to be included in the plan;

"(2) provide for advance notice to the public of proposed rulemaking for the purpose of formulating such plan;

"(3) publish a proposed rule on the content and implementation of the plan, including goals for energy conservation;

"(4) afford interested persons an opportunity to present oral and written comments on matters relating to such proposed rule; and

"(5) after making the examination and analysis described in paragraph (1) and after taking into consideration comments made by the public, prescribe and make public a final rule setting forth the content and implementation of such plan.

"(d) Content of Plan.—(1) A plan certified pursuant to this section shall—

"(A) be designed to result in annual residential energy conservation savings of 2 percent or more;

"(B) contain the goals established for the plan and an analysis of the data and rationale used by the entity in charge of formulating the plan to determine that the plan is likely to achieve such goals;

"(C) contain adequate procedures to assure that, if a public utility supplies or installs residential energy conservation measures, such actions shall be consistent with section 216 and prices and rates of interest charged shall be fair and reasonable; and

"(D) contain adequate procedures for preventing unfair, deceptive, or anticompetitive acts or practices affecting commerce which relate to the implementation of such plan.

"(2) A plan certified pursuant to this section may—

"(A) be designed to result in the dissemination of general energy conservation suggestions to residential customers of utilities in the State;

"(B) be designed to result in—

"(i) specific energy conservation suggestions to residential customers requesting such suggestions regarding the customer's residential building,

"(ii) energy conservation improvements (which are included in such plan) to the customer's residential building, or

"(iii) load management improvements (which are included in such plan) in the customer's residential building;

"(C) be designed to benefit individuals, including but not limited to individuals with low or moderate incomes;

"(D) be carried out by the State, by utilities within the State, or a combination of both;

"(E) be consistent with the standards referred to in section 212(b)(2)(D);

"(F) contain rules consistent with the requirements of section 215(c);

"(G) contain provisions to assure that any person who alleges any injury resulting from a violation of any plan provision shall be entitled to redress pursuant to State law; and

"(H) contain provisions described in section 213(b)(2)(B).

"(e) Certification.—(1) The entity which elects to certify a plan under this section shall certify, pursuant to a form to be prescribed by the Secretary (except as provided by paragraph (2)), to the Secretary that—

"(A) the plan and the formulation of the plan meet the requirements of subsections (c) and (d)(1);

"(B) the plan is likely to achieve the goals established for the plan if it is adequately implemented; and

"(C) the plan will be adequately implemented.

"(2) If a form is not made available by the Secretary within 90 days after the date of the enactment of this section, the entity in charge of certifying the plan may make such certification on a form prescribed by such entity.

"(3) Any certification under this subsection shall include a detailed explanation of the manner in which the contents of the plan will be implemented.

"(f) Annual Report.—(1) The entity which certifies a plan under subsection (e) shall submit an annual report to the Secretary, within 60 days after the end of the 1-year period to which the report relates, describing the implementation of the plan and the results thereof.

"(2) Such report shall include—

"(A) a statement of the number of residential buildings receiving benefits under the plan,

"(B) an estimate of the actual energy savings resulting from the plan and a description of the sources of such savings,

"(C) a statement of the percentage of individuals with low and moderate incomes who receive benefits under the plan,

"(D) a detailed description of the benefits provided under the plan and of how the plan is implemented, and

"(E) the names of the entities carrying out the plan.

"(g) Administrative and Judicial Enforcement Proceedings.—(1) At any time more than 1 year after an alternative State plan has been certified under subsection (e) with respect to a State, any resident of such State may petition the Secretary of Energy to conduct a public hearing to determine if the alternative State plan has been adequately implemented. A copy of such petition shall be transmitted to the entity in charge of the plan on the same date it is transmitted to the Secretary. The Secretary shall have 90 days after the date on which such petition is received to make a determination on the matter.

"(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3), if the Secretary determines that the alternative State plan has not been adequately implemented, the Secretary shall, within the 90-day period described in paragraph (1), initiate standby authority under section 219 with respect to such State. If the Secretary does not initiate the standby authority within the 90-day period, the resident may bring a de novo action in the appropriate United States district court against the Secretary (with the State having the right to intervene) to require the Secretary to implement standby authority under section 219. If an individual prevails in such an action, the court shall award such individual reasonable fees and expenses of attorneys and costs.

"(3) If a State which had an approved plan in effect under section 212 on the day before the date on which certification was made under this section informs the Secretary in writing, within 30 days after receiving a copy of the petition described in paragraph (1), that it will no longer implement a plan certified under this section and that it will implement the approved plan which was in effect in the State on the day before certification of the alternative plan under this section, then—

"(A) the determinations and actions described in paragraph (2) may not be carried out; and

"(B) sections 212 through 219 shall apply in such State except to the extent an alternative utility plan under section 227 is implemented in such State.

"(h) Coverage.—A plan certified under this section shall not apply to utilities other than utilities covered under section 211(a).

"(i) Inclusion of Nonregulated Utilities.—A nonregulated utility may not be included in a plan under this section unless such inclusion is authorized under State law or the nonregulated utility agrees to such inclusion.

"(j) Incentives.—The entity in charge of a plan under this section, or a State regulatory authority, may, to the extent permitted under State law, provide incentives for utilities to meet the goals contained in the State's alternative plan, including providing such utilities that meet or exceed such goals with a rate of return on expenditures made for the purpose of accomplishing such goals.

"(k) Utilities With Retail Service Territories in More Than 1 State.—For purposes of this section, any utility with a retail service territory in more than one State shall be considered to be a separate utility with respect to each State in which its retail service territory is located.

"(l) Classification as Load Management Improvement or Energy Conservation Improvement.—In the case of a technique or installation which may be classified as either a load management improvement or an energy conservation improvement, the entity in charge of carrying out the plan under this section shall determine whether to treat such technique or installation as a load management improvement, an energy conservation improvement, or both, for purposes of this section.

"(m) Amendment of a Plan.—(1) Except as provided by paragraph (2), a plan certified under this section may be amended by any amendment—

"(A) formulated in a manner consistent with the requirements applicable to the formulation of a plan under subsection (c); and

"(B) certified to the Secretary of Energy in a manner consistent with the requirements applicable to the certification of a plan under subsection (e).

"(2) A plan certified under this section may not be amended—

"(A) during the first year after it is certified; or

"(B) more than once a year thereafter.

"SEC. 227. ALTERNATIVE UTILITY PLANS.

"(a) In General.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2) and after the 6-month period beginning with the date of the enactment of this section, a utility which is in a State in which an alternative State plan is not in effect under section 226 may elect to formulate and certify an alternative utility plan for residential buildings under this section.

"(2) During the 6-month period beginning with the date of the enactment of this section, the Governor, a State regulatory authority, or another agency or instrumentality of the State concerned (whichever is authorized under State law to submit a plan to the Secretary pursuant to section 212(c)(1)(A) of this Act) may, under State law, prohibit utilities in such State from taking any action under this section.

"(b) Consequences of Certification.—(1) Beginning with the date on which the certification of a plan is made with respect to a utility under subsection (e) and ending with the date on which a plan is no longer in effect under this section with respect to such utility—

"(A) subsections (a) through (c)(3) of section 212, sections 213 through 216 and sections 217, 218, and 226 shall not apply with respect to such utility; and

"(B) section 219 shall apply to such utility only to the extent provided for in subsection (g).

"(2) Except as provided in subsection (g), any utility which certifies a plan under subsection (e) shall continue to have such plan in effect until January 1, 1990.

"(c) Formulation of Plan.—In formulating any plan under this section, the utility shall—

"(1) examine energy conservation and load management programs and perform a cost benefit analysis of program measures to be included in the plan, including an assessment of the life-cycle benefits of energy conservation measures to be included in the plan;

"(2) provide for advance notice to the public of such plan;

"(3) publish a description of the proposed content and implementation of the plan, including goals for energy conservation;

"(4) afford interested persons an opportunity to present oral and written comments on matters relating to such proposed plan; and

"(5) after making the examination and analysis described in paragraph (1) and after taking into consideration comments made by the public, prescribe and make public a final plan setting forth the content and implementation of such plan.

"(d) Content of Plan.—(1) A plan certified pursuant to this section shall—

"(A) be designed to result in annual residential energy conservation savings of 2 percent or more;

"(B) contain the goals established for the plan and an analysis of the data and rationale used by the entity in charge of the plan to determine that the plan is likely to achieve such goals;

"(C) contain certification, by the entity authorized under State law to submit a plan to the Secretary pursuant to section 212(c)(1)(A) of this Act, that the plan has adequate procedures to assure that, if a public utility supplies or installs residential energy conservation measures, such actions shall be consistent with section 216 and prices and rates of interest charged shall be fair and reasonable; and

"(D) contain certification, by the entity authorized under State law to submit a plan to the Secretary pursuant to section 212(c)(1)(A) of this Act, that the plan has adequate procedures for preventing unfair, deceptive, or anticompetitive acts or practices affecting commerce which relate to the implementation of such plan.

"(2) A plan certified pursuant to this section may—

"(A) be designed to result in the dissemination of general energy conservation suggestions to residential customers of utilities in the State;

"(B) be designed to result in—

"(i) specific energy conservation suggestions to residential customers requesting such suggestions regarding the customer's residential building,

"(ii) energy conservation improvements (which are included in such plan) to the customer's residential building, or

"(iii) load management improvements (which are included in such plan) in the customer's residential building;

"(C) be designed to benefit individuals, including but not limited to individuals with low or moderate incomes;

"(D) be consistent with the standards referred to in section 212(b)(2)(D);

"(E) contain rules consistent with the requirements of section 215(c); and

"(F) contain provisions described in section 213(b)(2)(B).

"(e) Certification.—(1) A utility which elects to certify a plan under this section shall certify, pursuant to a form to be prescribed by the Secretary (except as provided by paragraph (2)), to the Secretary that—

"(A) the plan and the formulation of the plan meet the requirements of subsections (c) and (d)(1);

"(B) the plan is likely to achieve the goals established for the plan if it is adequately implemented; and

"(C) the plan will be adequately implemented.

"(2) If a form is not made available to a utility by the Secretary within 90 days after the date of the enactment of this section, the utility may make such certification on a form prescribed by such utility.

"(3) Any certification under this subsection shall include a detailed explanation of the manner in which the contents of the plan will be implemented.

"(f) Annual Report.—(1) The utility shall submit an annual report to the Secretary, within 60 days after the end of the 1-year period to which the report relates, describing the implementation of the plan and the results thereof.

"(2) Such report shall include—

"(A) a statement of the number of buildings receiving benefits under the plan,

"(B) an estimate of the energy savings resulting from the plan and a description of the sources of such savings,

"(C) a statement of the percentage of individuals with low and moderate incomes who receive benefits under the plan, and

"(D) a detailed description of the benefits provided under the plan and of how the plan is implemented.

"(g) Administrative and Judicial Enforcement Proceedings.—(1) At any time more than 1 year after an alternative utility plan has been certified under subsection (e) under this section, any residential customer of such utility may petition the Secretary of Energy to conduct a public hearing to determine if the alternative utility plan has been adequately implemented. A copy of such petition shall be transmitted to the utility concerned on the same date it is transmitted to the Secretary. The Secretary shall have 90 days after the date on which such petition is received to make a determination on the matter.

"(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3), if the Secretary determines that the alternative utility plan has not been adequately implemented, the Secretary shall, within the 90-day period described in paragraph (1), initiate standby authority under section 219 with respect to such utility. If the Secretary does not initiate the standby authority within the 90-day period, the resident may bring a de novo action in the appropriate United States district court against the Secretary (with the utility having the right to intervene) to require the Secretary to implement standby authority under section 219. If an individual prevails in such an action, the court shall award such individual reasonable fees and expenses of attorneys and costs.

"(3) If a utility which was carrying out an approved plan under this part in effect on the day before the date on which certification was made under this section informs the Secretary in writing, within 30 days after receiving a copy of the petition described in paragraph (1), that it will no longer implement a plan certified under this section and that it will implement the approved plan which it was carrying out on the day before certification of the alternative plan under this section, then—

"(A) the determinations and actions described in paragraph (2) may not be carried out; and

"(B) sections 212 through 219 shall apply to such utility.

"(4) For purposes of implementing section 219(a)(2) to a regulated utility as a result of this subsection, the term 'each regulated utility in the State' in such section shall be deemed to mean only the utility with respect to which action is taken under this subsection.

"(h) Coverage.—A plan certified under this section shall not apply to utilities other than utilities covered under section 211(a).

"(i) Utilities With Retail Service Territories in More Than 1 State.—For purposes of this section, any utility with a retail service territory in more than one State shall be considered to be a separate utility with respect to each State in which its retail service territory is located.

"(j) Incentives.—A State or a State regulatory authority may, to the extent permitted under State law, provide incentives for a utility to meet the goals contained in its alternative plan, including providing such a utility that meets or exceeds it goals with a rate of return on expenditures made for the purpose of accomplishing such goals.

"(k) Classification as Load Management Improvement or Energy Conservation Improvement.—In the case of a technique or installation which may be classified as either a load management improvement or an energy conservation improvement, the utility shall determine whether to treat such technique or installation as a load management improvement, an energy conservation improvement, or both, for purposes of this section.

"(l) Amendment of a Plan.—(1) Except as provided by paragraph (2), a plan certified under this section may be amended by any amendment—

"(A) formulated in a manner consistent with the requirements applicable to the formulation of a plan under subsection (c); and

"(B) certified to the Secretary of Energy in a manner consistent with the requirements applicable to the certification of a plan under subsection (e).

"(2) A plan certified under this section may not be amended—

"(A) during the first year after it is certified; or

"(B) more than once a year thereafter.".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Section 218(e) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8219(e)) is amended by striking out the period at the end of the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "or a plan in effect under section 226 or section 227 which is applicable to such utility.".

(2) Section 219(a) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8220(a)) is amended by striking out "If" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in sections 226 and 227, if".

(3) Section 219(b) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8220(b)) is amended by striking out "If" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in sections 226 and 227, if".

(c) Clerical Amendment.—The table of contents for such Act is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 225 the following new items:

"Sec. 226. Alternative State plans.
"Sec. 227. Alternative Utility plans.".

SEC. 104. REPORTS AND DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION.

(a) In General.—Section 225 of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 8226) (relating to a Federal Trade Commission study and report submitted before January 1, 1982) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 225. REPORTS AND DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION.

"(a) General Report.—(1) No later than December 31, 1987, and December 31, 1989, the Secretary shall submit a report to the Chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Chairman of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate relating to the operation of this part.

"(2) Each such report shall include—

"(A) a comparison of estimated actual and predicted energy savings resulting from plans under this part,

"(B) identification of the most effective plans (or portions thereof),

"(C) an analysis, based on completed audits and other relevant data, of the energy saving potential of the installation of additional residential conservation measures, and

"(D) an analysis of economic, technical, behavioral, and other factors considered relevant to energy consumption by the Secretary.

Nothing in this paragraph shall require a survey of each residential building in which a residential energy conservation measure has been installed under this part.

"(b) Summary of Alternative Plan Reports.—No later than December 31, 1987, and December 31, 1989, the Secretary shall submit a report to the Chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and the Chairman of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate summarizing the annual reports the Secretary received under section 226(f) and section 227(f).

"(c) Dissemination of Information.—(1)(A) The Secretary shall at least annually, in fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1985, disseminate to the States and public utilities information providing technical assistance and relating to the most cost-effective energy conservation procedures and devices (including residential energy conservation measures) and the most successful plans (or portions thereof) under this part.

"(B) The Secretary shall make the information described in subparagraph (A) available to the public.

"(2) The Secretary shall conduct seminars in various regions of the United States to disseminate information described in paragraph (1).".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of contents of such Act is amended by striking out the item relating to section 225 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 225. Reports and dissemination of information.".

SEC. 105. TERMINATION.

(a) In General.—Part I of title II of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 8201 and following), as amended by section 103, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 228. TERMINATION.

"Effective January 1, 1990, all authority under this part shall terminate, except that—

"(1) the provisions of section 216 shall not terminate and the provisions of sections 215 and 219(d) shall be considered to be in effect to the extent necessary to enforce section 216; and

"(2) such expiration shall not affect any action or proceeding based upon an act committed prior to midnight January 1, 1990, and not finally determined by such date.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of contents of such Act, as amended by section 103(c) of this Act, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 227 the following new item:

"Sec. 228. Termination.".

SEC. 106. SUPPLY AND INSTALLATION BY PUBLIC UTILITIES.

(a) General Exemption.—Section 216(d) of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 8217(d)) (relating to general exemptions from prohibitions on supply and installation) is amended—

(1) by striking out "The" and inserting in lieu thereof:

"(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the";

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), respectively; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) Effective July 1, 1987, subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) shall not apply to the supply or installation of residential energy conservation measures other than measures which the Secretary determines were being installed or supplied by a public utility during the 12-month period ending June 1, 1985.".

(b) Waiver.—Section 216(e) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8217(e)) (relating to the waiver of prohibitions on supply and installation) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" the last time it appears and inserting in lieu thereof a comma; and

(2) by inserting ", and the prevention of unauthorized cross subsidization" before the period at the end thereof.

(c) Prohibition; Enforcement.—(1) Section 216 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8217) (relating to prohibitions on supply and installations) is amended by striking out subsection (g)(2) and subsection (h) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(2) No public utility which has an exemption or waiver under this section may carry out any activity if the Federal Trade Commission, pursuant to subsection (h), or a State regulatory authority, pursuant to State law, has determined that such activity involves—

"(A) charging unfair or unreasonable prices or rates of interest with respect to the supply and installation of residential energy conservation measures;

"(B) engaging in unfair methods of competition or unfair or deceptive acts or practices with respect to such supply and installation; or

"(C) engaging in unauthorized cross subsidization with respect to such supply and installation.

"(h) Enforcement.—(1) For the purpose of determining whether a public utility which has an exemption or waiver under this section is engaging in any activity described in subsection (g)(2), an interested resident of a State may request—

"(A) to the extent authorized under State law, a State regulatory authority; or

"(B) in any case described in paragraph (2), the Federal Trade Commission, to review an activity being carried out by such a public utility in whole or in part in such State.

"(2) The Federal Trade Commission may review an activity of a public utility as a result of a request made under paragraph (1) only if—

"(A) a State regulatory authority has—

"(i) informed the resident making the request that it will not review such activity for the purpose described in paragraph (1); or

"(ii) within the 90-day period beginning on the date on which the request to review such activity was made to the State regulatory authority by the resident, failed to inform the resident that it will review such activity for such purpose; or

"(B) a State regulatory authority has informed the resident that it will review such activity for such purpose but has failed to initiate a proceeding for such purpose during the 6-month period beginning on the date on which the request to review such activity was made to the State regulatory authority by the resident.

"(3) If a request for review is made to the Commission in any case described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (2), the Commission shall review the matters specified in the request to determine whether there is reason to believe that the public utility concerned is carrying out an activity described in subsection (g)(2). If the Commission determines that there is reason to believe that the public utility is carrying out such an activity, the Commission shall issue and serve upon such utility a complaint and a notice of hearing and conduct a proceeding in accordance with section 5(b) of the Federal Trade Commission Act to determine if such an activity is being carried out by the utility.

"(4) If the Commission makes a determination pursuant to a proceeding described in paragraph (3) that a public utility is carrying out an activity described in subsection (g)(2) of this section, the Commission shall, utilizing the authority of the Commission to enforce prohibitions made by section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, take appropriate action to enforce the prohibition in subsection (g)(2) of this section.

"(5) Any violation of a prohibition contained in this section other than a violation of subsection (g)(2) shall be treated, for purposes of section 219(d), as a violation of a plan promulgated under section 219(a).".

(d) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Section 216(c)(2)(A) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8217(c)(2)(A)) (relating to an exemption from the prohibition on supply and installation by a public utility) is amended by inserting the following before the semicolon at the end: "or other activities described in subsection (g)(2)".

(2) Section 216(f) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 8217(f)) (relating to the applicability of section 215) is amended by striking out "(d)(2)", "(d)(1)", and "(d)(3)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(d)(1)(B)", "(d)(1)(A)", and "(d)(1)(C)", respectively.

(3) The heading of subsection (g) of section 216 is amended to read as follows: "Authority to Monitor and Terminate Certain Activities by Utilities.—".

(e) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall become effective one hundred and eighty days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE II—COMMERCIAL BUILDINGS AND MULTIFAMILY DWELLINGS

SEC. 201. REPEAL OF TITLE VII OF THE NATIONAL ENERGY CONSERVATION POLICY ACT.

(a) In General.—Title VII of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 8281 and following) (relating to energy conservation for commercial buildings and multifamily dwellings) is hereby repealed.

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of contents for such Act is amended by striking out the items relating to such title VII.

(c) Authority to Continue Certain State Energy Conservation Plans.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), any State energy conservation plan for commercial buildings and multifamily dwellings approved under section 721 of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act before August 1, 1984, may, with respect to regulated utilities, continue in effect if such plan meets the requirements of section 722 of such Act as in effect on August 1, 1984.

SEC. 202. DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS FOR ENERGY EFFICIENCY IN COMMERCIAL BUILDINGS.

The Secretary of Energy shall, using funds appropriated for energy conservation activities of the Department of Energy, carry out demonstration projects by sharing the cost of the construction and development by nongovernmental entities of facilities which demonstrate innovative technologies for utility applications that increase energy efficiency in commercial buildings.

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act to reform the Residential Conservation Service and to repeal the Commercial and Apartment Conservation Service.".

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House to S. 410 and request a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and that the Chair be authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Chair appointed Mr. McClure, Mr. Hatfield, Mr. Domenici, Mr. Murkowski, Mr. Nickles, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Bumpers, Mr. Ford, and Mr. Metzenbaum conferees on the part of the Senate.

NATIONAL CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION MONTH

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Judiciary Committee be discharged from further consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 294, National Child Abuse Prevention Month, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill will be stated by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (S.J. Res 294) to designate the month of April 1986 as "National Child Abuse Prevention Month".

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

The joint resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S.J. Res. 294

Whereas the incidence and prevalence of child abuse and neglect have reached alarming proportions in the United States;

Whereas an estimated two million children become victims of child abuse in the Nation each year;

Whereas an estimated five thousand of such children die as a result of such abuse each year;

Whereas the Nation faces a continuing need to support innovative programs to prevent child abuse and assist parents and families in which child abuse occurs;

Whereas Congress has expressed a commitment to seek and apply solutions to the problem of child abuse by enacting the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act of 1974;

Whereas many dedicated individuals and private organizations, including Parents Anonymous, the National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse, the American Humane Association, and other members of the National Child Abuse Coalition, are working to counter the ravages of abuse and neglect to help child abusers break a destructive pattern of behavior;

Whereas the average cost for a public welfare agency to serve a family through a child abuse program is twenty times greater than self-help programs administered by private organizations;

Whereas organizations such as Parents Anonymous and other members of the National Child Abuse Coalition are expediting efforts to prevent child abuse in the next generation through special programs for abused children; and

Whereas it is appropriate to focus the attention of the Nation upon the problem of child abuse: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the month of April 1986 is designated as "National Child Abuse Prevention Month" and the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation calling upon all government agencies and the people of the United States to observe such month with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

NATIONAL SCHOOL LIBRARY MONTH

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, after conferring with the Democratic leader, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives on Senate Joint Resolution 52.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, That the resolution from the Senate (S.J. Res. 52) entitled "Joint resolution to designate the month of April 1985 as 'National School Library Month'", do pass with the following amendments:

Amend the title so as to read: "Joint resolution to designate the month of April 1986 as 'National School Library Month'.".

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I inquire of the minority leader if he is in a position to confirm the following nominations on the Executive Calendar: Calendar No. 701, John A. Bohn, Jr.; Calendar No. 722, J. Daniel Mahoney; Calendar No. 723, Barbara K. Hackett; Calendar No. 728, James Eugene Burnett, Jr.; Calendar No. 729, Joseph Trippe Nall; Calendar No. 731, under the Coast Guard; Calendar No. 732, John William Bode; Calendar No. 733, C.C. Hope, Jr.; and the nominations placed on the Secretary's desk in the Coast Guard, beginning with Douglas W. Anderson and ending with Christopher N. Zendan.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, there is no objection.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate go into executive session to consider the nominations just identified.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nominations will be stated.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the nominations be considered en bloc and confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The nominations considered en bloc and confirmed en bloc are as follows:

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK OF THE UNITED STATES

John A. Bohn, Jr., of Virginia, to be President of the Export-Import Bank of the United States for a term of 4 years.

THE JUDICIARY

J. Daniel Mahoney, of New York, to be U.S. circuit judge for the second circuit vice a new position created by Public Law 98-353, approved July 10, 1984.

Barbara K. Hackett, of Michigan, to be U.S. district judge for the eastern district of Michigan.

NATIONAL TRANSPORTATION SAFETY BOARD

James Eugene Burnett, Jr., of Arkansas, to be a member of the National Transportation Safety Board for the term expiring December 31, 1990. (Reappointment.)

Joseph Trippe Nall, of North Carolina, to be a member of the National Transportation Safety Board for the remainder of the term expiring December 31, 1987.

COAST GUARD

Pursuant to the provisions of 14 U.S.C.729, the following named captain of the Coast Guard Reserve to a permanent commissioned officer in the Coast Guard Reserve in the grade of rear admiral (lower half):

Daniel J. Murphy.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

John William Bode, of Oklahoma, to be a member of the Board of Directors of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

C. C. Hope, Jr., of North Carolina, to be a member of the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for a term of 6 years.

NOMINATIONS PLACED ON THE SECRETARY'S DESK IN THE COAST GUARD, SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE

Coast Guard nominations beginning Douglas W. Anderson, and ending Christopher N. Zendan, which nominations were received by the Senate and appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of March 12, 1986.

JOHN BODE NOMINATION

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, the Senate is now considering the nomination of John William Bode to be a member of the Commodity Credit Corporation Board. I have known John for over 10 years. He served as a student intern and later became a member of my staff during my tenure as Governor of Oklahoma. In both positions, he did an outstanding job.

In 1979, he became a professional staff member of the Senate Agriculture Committee and later began working in the Department of Agriculture. At the present time, he serves as the Assistant Secretary for Food and Consumer Services in the Department of Agriculture. He has consistently handled his responsibilities in a superb manner.

John Bode's background and experience in farming will make him an outstanding member of the Board. His extensive knowledge of the business of farming will prove to be an invaluable asset while he serves on the Board.

All Oklahomans are extremely proud of the record he has established in the Government. I am very pleased the President has chosen to nominate a young man with the integrity and ability of John Bode.

I urge my colleagues to confirm his nomination to be a member of the Commodity Credit Corporation Board.

C.C. HOPE NOMINATION

Mr. EAST. Mr. President, it gives me great pleasure to endorse the Senate Banking Committee's recommendation of C.C. Hope for confirmation as a Director of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and urge my colleagues to support his nomination.

C.C. Hope is a man of considerable ability and talent with an excellent background of banking experience. He is one of North Carolina's most outstanding citizens with a remarkable career in banking spanning nearly 40 years. He is dedicated, hard-working, and a man whose service in this position would benefit the FDIC and the country.

C.C. Hope has had the opportunity to work in practically every aspect of banking operations. Early in his career, he worked as a teller and a branch manager. As his institution began to grow and expand, he worked in the field negotiating bank mergers. When he retired last year as vice chairman of the First Union National Bank, his work formed the basis of an institution which is one of the most respected and successful in the Nation.

In addition to his exemplary service as a banker, the nominee has devoted his life to serving North Carolina, his community, and the public in so many ways that I sometimes wonder how he was able to do so much so well. He has been president of the American Bankers Association, chairman of the North Carolina Bankers Association, treasurer of the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce, a deacon in the First Baptist Church of Charlotte, and a leader and member of charitable and service organizations too numerous to enumerate.

C.C. Hope is highly regarded among his peers and fellow citizens as an individual of great industry, dedication, and high moral character. I am confident that he will provide extraordinary leadership to the FDIC at this period of regulatory change, and I urge my colleagues to approve his nomination as Director of the FDIC.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the nominations were confirmed.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President be immediately notified of the confirmation of these nominations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate return to the consideration of legislative business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SIMPSON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The assistant majority leader.

PROGRAM

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, let me recap matters for our time of reconvening on Tuesday, April 8, 1986. We will reconvene at 12 noon following an adjournment. The two leaders then will have their time under the standing order of 10 minutes each.

There will be special orders in favor of the following Senators for not to exceed 5 minutes each: Senator PROXMIRE, Senator HAWKINS, and Senator CRANSTON.

There will be routine morning business for not to extend beyond the hour of 12:30 p.m. with Senators permitted to speak therein for not more than 5 minutes each.

ORDER FOR RECESS BETWEEN 12:30 P.M. AND 2 P.M.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess at 12:30 p.m. until 2 p.m. in order for the weekly party caucuses to meet.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, following the recess, by a previous unanimous agreement, the Senate will turn to S. 1660, the Confederate Memorial Association bill, and S. 8, a bill to grant Federal charter to the Vietnam Veterans of America, Inc.

Rollcall votes will occur on passage of S. 8 at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 8, 1986.

Then, Mr. President, the Senate could be asked to turn to any other legislative or executive items cleared for action.

COMMENDATION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I want to thank the minority leader for his support of the majority leader during a most important 2 days of deliberations on the aid to the Contras and Nicaragua.

I have watched that accord between them develop on that issue. That is most appreciated by those of us who must of necessity be about that type of business.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the very distinguished assistant Republican leader.

I must say that during our discussions back and forth, and during our meetings which took place with respect to the very controversial legislation, there was very good cooperation, a good spirit of working together, and good will.

We knew that we would not be able to agree on some things. But we disagreed in a very agreeable manner speaking of the majority leader, and in particular of Senators on the other side of the question, and on the other side of the aisle.

I thank the distinguished assistant leader.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL TUESDAY, APRIL 8, 1986

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move that the Senate stand in adjournment in accordance with the provisions of House Concurrent Resolution 304 until the hour of 12 noon on Tuesday, April 8, 1986.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to adjourn.

The motion was agreed to, and at 8:34 p.m., on Thursday, March 27, 1986, the Senate adjourned until Tuesday, April 8, 1986, at 12 noon.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, April 8, 1986

The House met at 12 noon and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. Foley].

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

Washington, DC, March 25, 1986.

I hereby designate the Honorable Thomas S. Foley to act as Speaker pro tempore on Tuesday, April 8, 1986.

Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr.,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PRAYER

The Reverend Dr. Frank L. Fowler III, pastor, Trinity United Methodist Church, Hackettstown, NJ, offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, in whom alone is the strength of our heart and the hope of our world, we pause to open our lives to Your higher power, which we know as the true source of internal peace and international brotherhood.

Lead us, Lord, that the business and busyness of daily work might not divert us from understanding Your plan, and our part in it. Guide and direct these servants in their thought and labor. Fill them with the calm assurance of Your perpetual presence, that their deliberations and decisions would reflect divine truth in seeking the welfare of each of Your children.

Give us courage daily to act in accordance with Your will, seeking to reveal Your perfect love, as given through Jesus, the Christ. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, bills of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 6. An act to provide for the conservation and development of water and related resources and the improvement and rehabilitation of the Nation's water resources infrastructure; and

H.R. 1349. An act to reduce the costs of operating Presidential libraries, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H.R. 6) "An act to provide for the conservation and development of water and related resources and the improvement and rehabilitation of the Nation's water resources infrastructure," requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Stafford, Mr. Abdnor, Mr. Domenici, Mr. Durenberger, Mr. Bentsen, Mr. Moynihan, and Mr. Baucus, from the Committee on Environment and Public Works, Mr. Packwood, Mr. Roth, Mr. Danforth, Mr. Long, and Mr. Matsunaga, from the Committee on Finance for section 606 and title VIII of the Senate amendment and section 109 and title XV of the House bill, to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 410) "An act to repeal the Commercial and Apartment Conservation Service, and for other purposes," requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. McClure, Mr. Hatfield, Mr. Domenici, Mr. Murkowski, Mr. Nickles, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Bumpers, Mr. Ford, and Mr. Metzenbaum, to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed joint resolutions and a concurrent resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S.J. Res. 263. Joint resolution to designate the week of September 7 through September 13, 1986, as "National Independent Retail Grocer Week";

S.J. Res. 264. Joint resolution designating April 28, 1986, as "National Nursing Home Residents Day";

S.J. Res. 279. Joint resolution to designate the month of October 1986, as "Lupus Awareness Month";

S.J. Res. 283. Joint resolution relating to Central America pursuant to the International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1985;

S.J. Res. 294. Joint resolution to designate the month of April 1986 as "National Child Abuse Prevention Month";

S.J. Res. 296. Joint resolution to designate October 16, 1986, as "World Food Day";

S.J. Res. 308. Joint resolution designating March 25, 1986, as "Greek Independence Day: A National Day of Celebration of Greek and American Democracy"; and

S. Con. Res. 95. Concurrent resolution to recognize and honor the contributions of Consumers Union.

The message also announced that pursuant to section 9355(a), title 10, of the United States Code, the Vice President appoints Mr. Stevens from the Committee on Appropriations, and Mr. Goldwater from the Committee on Armed Services to the Board of Visitors of the Air Force Academy.

The message also announced that pursuant to section 6968(a), title 10, of the United States Code, the Vice President appoints Mr. Hatfield from the Committee on Appropriations, and Mr. Denton from the Committee on Armed Services, to the Board of Visitors of the Naval Academy.

The message also announced that pursuant to section 194(a), title 14, of the United States Code, the Vice President appoints Mr. Danforth from the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, and Mr. Packwood, from the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, to the Board of Visitors of the Coast Guard Academy.

The message also announced that pursuant to Public Law 96-114, as amended by Public Laws 98-33 and 99-161, the Chair, on behalf of the majority leader and the minority leader, appoints Mr. Wallop, Mr. Simon, Mr. Ben H. Love from private life, Mr. Joshua Miner from private life, Sir Gordon White from private life, Miss Cathy Lee Crosby from private life, Mr. Donald R. Keough from private life, Mr. S. Lee Kling from private life, the Honorable Shirley A. Chisholm from private life, and Mr. Phillip V. Sanchez from private life, to the Congressional Award Board.

The message also announced that pursuant to section 1295(b), title 46, of the United States Code, the Vice President appoints Mr. Kasten from the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, and Mr. Danforth from the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, to the Board of Visitors of the Merchant Marine Academy.

THE REVEREND FRANK L. FOWLER III

(Mr. COURTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COURTER. Mr. Speaker, it gives me indeed a great deal of personal pleasure to introduce to the body today Rev. Frank L. Fowler III.

Reverend Fowler is my minister in Hackettstown, NJ. He is an ordained elder of the United Methodist Church, a member of the Northern New Jersey Conference.

He received his bachelor degree at West Virginia Wesleyan College, master of divinity at Wesley Theological Seminary. He attended the New College University of Edinberg, Scotland, and received his doctorate of philosophy from New York University.

He was, for a period of time, an associate pastor in Plainfield, NJ, and for 8 years, pastor at the United Methodist Church in Newfoundland, NJ.

He is a free lance writer. He is a true friend and a great minister.

Indeed, it is a pleasure for me to welcome here today the Reverend Frank Fowler.

VOTE AGAINST HUGHES "LAW ENFORCEMENT" AMENDMENT

(Mr. VOLKMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to issue a warning to everybody that tomorrow when we consider the Volkmer substitute for H.R. 4332, Congressman Hughes will offer an amendment he designates the "law enforcement amendment."

We want to beware. This amendment is nothing more than the most strident gun control measure he could offer. It is very insidious.

The Hughes amendment would require every gun owner who has ever traded, sold, given away, or in any way transferred any firearm, and that includes a rifle, a shotgun, or a handgun, to acquire a dealer's license before that gun owner can legally dispose of any second firearm, rifle, shotgun, or handgun thereafter.

That means that we would be registering through dealerships every gun owner in the United States.

Also, the "engaged in business" language of the Hughes amendment would in effect require virtually all of your sportsmen and hunters to become licensed dealers.

Additionally, many hand loaders, people who out there are loading their own shells—we have them all over the United States—would be licensed as manufacturers of ammunition under the Hughes amendment.

The Hughes amendment would force a majority of the Nation's 60 million firearms owners to be licensed by the Federal Government.

I urge you to oppose this gun control amendment by Congressman Hughes.

HONDURAN PRESIDENT JOSE AZCONA REBUTS REPORTS OF UNITED STATES PRESSURE

(Mr. LAGOMARSINO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, recent news reports have called into question the severity of the Nicaraguan invasion into Honduras last month. One would get the impression that perhaps the administration's concern would have been justified if 1,500 Nicaraguan soldiers had crossed the Honduran border, but if it had been only 800, then perhaps that was not so bad. Well, whether the number was 800 or 1,500, the implications of the Nicaraguan invasion of Honduras must not be minimized. Nor should we minimize the reaction of the Hondurans themselves.

News reports have said that the United States pressured the Hondurans to react strongly to the Nicaraguan invasion. Honduran President Jose Azcona rebutted those reports of United States pressure in an address to his nation last Friday night. President Azcona confirmed that 1,500 Nicaraguan troops had entered Honduran territory as Washington had reported. He also stated that Honduras had killed five Sandinista soldiers and had taken seven prisoners. President Azcona said he made his decision to seek U.S. military aid "without outside or domestic pressures" and was willing to "ask for U.S. military support as many times as is necessary to defend the nation."

ENCOURAGING NEWS ON DEFENSE MANAGEMENT REFORM

(Mr. SKELTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, the recent announcement that the President will support changes recommended in the Packard Commission report on defense management is welcome news to those of us in Congress who have been working for years to reform the way the Pentagon does business.

The President's support in essence reversing past opposition expressed through the Secretary of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff means that we are considerably closer to final enactment of legislation reorganizing the Defense Department.

Mr. Speaker, I have been pushing for reorganizing of the Defense Department, particularly the Joint Chiefs of Staff, since I first introduced legislation on this subject back in 1983.

With the participation and strong support of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Nichols], the chairman of the Investigation Subcommittee, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Aspin], the chairman of the full Armed Services Committee, as well as Members of the other party in the House Armed Services Committee, we have twice been successful in getting this legislation through the House. Although the Senate was initially cool to this proposal, they have reversed themselves this past year and now seem favorably disposed toward Department of Defense reorganization.

Mr. Speaker, now that the President has embraced the conclusions of the Packard Commission and has joined those of us in Congress who have been advocating a more efficient, cost-effective national defense, we are much closer to ultimate success.

Mr. Speaker, I welcome the President onboard, although belatedly.

NATIONAL INSURANCE AVAILABILITY CRISIS COMMISSION

(Mr. SCHULZE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SCHULZE. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation to address a crisis in America. A crisis touching every segment of our society and adversely afflicting our economy and the health and education of our children. The crisis is the cost and availability of liability insurance.

My legislation would establish a National Insurance Availability Crisis Commission. The Commission would include representatives from the legal profession, the insurance industry, the Federal Government and the States, and the various business sectors hit by the availability crisis. The Commission would examine all aspects of the current crisis be it tort reform or insurance pricing, and make recommendations to the Congress with mandated congressional action.

The Commission is designed to work. It includes strict timetables for action and, perhaps, most importantly, it costs no Federal dollars. My bill requires action within 11 months of enactment.

I urge my colleagues to support the establishment of a National Insurance Availability Commission and to support my legislation.

FACE BRANDING

(Mr. HORTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, today I am being joined by 18 of our colleagues in introducing a sense-of-Congress resolution urging the Secretary of Agriculture to investigate identification procedures to be used in place of the hot-iron branding of animals' cheeks.

Hot-iron cheek branding has generated substantial controversy across the country. To participate in the dairy termination program, dairy farm owners must brand all cows with a 3-inch X on the right cheek. For calves, a 2-inch X must be burned in.

While most cattle and dairy farm owners in the West and Midwest have used flank branding for years, very few dairy farmers in the Northeast have chosen this method. Because of this inexperience, the danger to both the animal and the brander is greatly increased. Alternatives must be found.

The letters I have here are just a sample of the tremendous outpouring of opposition to this practice in upstate New York. People are writing in, "horrified" and "appalled" at this "cruel and inhumane" treatment. Dairy farmers, many who have even named their cows, are outraged that the Government would force them to brand on the cheek. Cows are beautiful animals. I urge the Secretary of Agriculture to halt this means of identification immediately.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution directs Secretary Lyng to take immediate steps to investigate effective alternatives to hot-iron cheek branding, and to predicate future animal identification on these findings. The Secretary is directed to report to the House Agriculture Committee within 90 days of passage, and annually thereafter on the long-term findings.

I urge my colleagues to join with me in this sense-of-Congress message to the Secretary.

SQUANDERING THE CHANCES FOR PEACE

(Mr. WEISS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, in Washington, the President is discussing a second summit with Soviet Ambassador Dobrynin. But in Nevada, the Reagan administration is squandering the one good opportunity for arms control that we've had in a long time.

Today's scheduled nuclear explosion at the Nevada test site will likely mean the end of the 8-month-old Soviet moratorium on nuclear tests. And that means that the unrestrained superpower race for more powerful and more accurate nuclear weapons will continue unabated.

The administration argues that a test ban isn't verifiable. It argues that we need to test to ensure the reliability of our weapons. But these arguments have as many holes as the Nevada desert has craters.

The real reason for testing is to continue development of a new generation of increasingly dangerous weapons, including the President's star wars fantasy.

Since the President refuses to act, Congress must. We should, as the bill introduced by the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. Schroeder] urges, cut off all funding for nuclear tests, and we should maintain that posture so long as the Soviets do not test. Let us not squander this rare opportunity to slow down the nuclear arms race.

TRIBUTE TO AMBASSADOR JOHN GAVIN

(Mr. BADHAM asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BADHAM. Mr. Speaker, I read in this morning's Washington Post, with some dismay, that John Gavin, the Ambassador of the President of the United States to Mexico, has resigned.

I would just like to say that I have known John Gavin for many years; that he and I went to elementary school, high school, and indeed the university together in California. I was somewhat amused when people were saying that, "John Gavin is an actor," when appointed by the President of the United States, not even taking time to recognize the fact that John Gavin was born in Mexico, speaks fluent Spanish, and has been probably in business in Mexico for more years than many people have even visited Mexico. He was highly trained, highly capable, highly successful as a businessman; indeed, on a first-name basis with Presidents of Mexico and served as a credit to the President of the United States, his policies, and the people of the United States in his representation.

I will be sorry to see Ambassador Gavin go, and I wish him the best of all possible things that can come his way in the future. We will miss a good Ambassador.

TRIBUTE TO UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE CARDINALS AND COACH DENNY CRUM

(Mr. HUBBARD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HUBBARD. Mr. Speaker, our colleague Ron Mazzoli, who represents Louisville, KY, in the House, has already congratulated our University of Louisville Cardinals.

As a member of the Kentucky delegation who is a proud alumnus of the University of Louisville, I also want to congratulate our U. of L. Cardinals upon winning the 1986 NCAA basketball tournament in Dallas, TX, on March 31.

Special congratulations to U. of L. Basketball Coach Denny Crum upon winning his second NCAA basketball tournament in the past 7 years and upon his teams' reaching the final four in the NCAA tournaments four times in the past 7 years.

Hopefully, some year in the future Denny Crum will be recognized and voted "Coach of the Year" in college basketball.

Please attend the reception which our colleague Ron Mazzoli mentioned earlier and meet Coach Crum and the U. of L. championship Cardinals. That's Wednesday of next week, April 16, 3–5 p.m. in S–207 of the Capitol.

THIS OIL POLICY IS MISSION IMPOSSIBLE

(Mr. SCHUMER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, in 1968, George Romney said he was brainwashed. In 1972, Ed Muskie cried in the snows of New Hampshire. In 1984, Walter Mondale guaranteed a tax increase to the American people. Now, in 1986, George Bush has gone to Saudi Arabia to bolster OPEC.

Everyone else in the administration has been crowing about how OPEC has been busted and what a great thing low oil prices are for America, and Mr. Bush is over there in the Middle East conducting his own private, foreign policy. It would be one thing if the Vice President were getting backup from the administration, but his mission is like "Mission Impossible"; they have disavowed any knowledge of his actions.

Mr. Vice President, this is not a Texas Chamber of Commerce field trip. You are supposed to be representing the American people. Certainly many would argue that we need to bolster domestic prices and encourage domestic oil conservation but, then, why do you not urge the President to go for an oil tax and in that way see that the money from domestic prices ends up in Uncle Sam's pockets and not in King Fahd's robes.

BEST WISHES FOR A SPEEDY RECOVERY TO CONGRESSMAN MANUEL LUJAN

(Mr. RICHARDSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, I know that my colleagues join with me today in sending our best wishes for a speedy recovery to a member of the New Mexico congressional delegation, Congressman Manuel Lujan.

Over the weekend, Congressman Lujan had a heart attack and underwent a bypass operation. The good news is that he is resting comfortably in Albuquerque.

Manuel, I am anxiously awaiting your return to Congress. With the House back in session, it is time to resume some of the major New Mexico battles of the day—not deficits, not taxes, not Nicaragua. I look forward to the day when you will again lead the charge to once again establish chili, good old New Mexico chili, as the national dish.

Mr. Speaker, I know I speak for my colleagues in wishing Congressman Lujan a speedy recovery, one of the more decent Members of this House who is desperately needed back. I join in sending to Mr. Lujan from my colleagues good wishes to his family, his lovely wife, Jean, his constituents. The message from the Congress, Manuel is, get well, Manuel.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Kildee) laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

Washington, DC,
March 31, 1986.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule XV.

Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken on Wednesday, April 9, 1986.

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES TO FILE REPORT ON H.R. 4420, MILITARY RETIREMENT REFORM ACT

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Armed Services may have until 6 p.m. today, April 8, 1986, to file a report on the bill, H.R. 4420, the Military Retirement Reform Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

EXECUTIVE EXCHANGE PROGRAM VOLUNTARY SERVICES ACT OF 1986

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3002) to provide for the establishment of an experimental program relating to the acceptance of voluntary services from participants in an executive exchange program of the Government, as amended.

H.R. 3002

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Executive Exchange Program Voluntary Services Act of 1986".

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

For the purposes of this Act—

(1) the term "Government" means the Government of the United States;

(2) the term "participant in an executive exchange program" means an executive, manager, or other individual from the private sector participating in an executive exchange program administered by the President's Commission on Executive Exchange (described in Executive Order 12493, dated December 5, 1984) or by a successor entity in function;

(3) the term "agency" means an Executive agency (as defined by section 105 of title 5, United States Code), the United States Postal Service, and the Postal Rate Commission; and

(4) the term "employee of the Government" means an individual employed in or under an agency.

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

SEC. 3. EXPERIMENTAL PROGRAM.

(a) The President may establish an experimental program, to be conducted during fiscal years 1987 through 1989, under which voluntary services may be accepted by the Government, without regard to section 1342 of title 31, United States Code.

(b) Under the program, the voluntary services of an individual may be accepted if—

(1) such individual is a participant in an executive exchange program;

(2) the acceptance of such services will not result in the displacement of any employee of the Government; and

(3) the voluntary services will be performed in or under an agency.

(c)(1) An individual performing voluntary services under the experimental program shall, for purposes of any laws, rules, and regulations of the United States (including those relating to conflicts of interest, financial disclosure, and standards of conduct) be considered an individual employed in or under the agency to which assigned, except that such individual shall not be covered by chapter 51, 53, 63, 83, 87, or 89 of title 5, United States Code, or any comparable provision relating to pay, leave, retirement, life insurance, or health benefits for employees of the Government.

(d) Not more than ten individuals may commence participation in the experimental program during any fiscal year.

(A) the continuation of pay and other benefits from the private-sector employer, or

(B) continued participation in a bona fide pension, retirement, group life, health or accident insurance, profit-sharing, stock bonus, or other employee welfare or benefit plan maintained by the private-sector employer, for an individual performing voluntary services in the experimental program.

(2) For the purpose of this section, the term "private-sector employer", as used with respect to an individual, means the corporation or other person by which such individual was employed immediately before beginning to perform voluntary services in the experimental program.

SEC. 4. REPORTS.

Not later than March 31, 1989, the President's Commission on Executive Exchange (or a successor entity in function) shall transmit to the Congress a report on the experimental program under this Act. The report shall include a description of the administration of the program, the findings of the Commission (or successor entity) relating to the advantages and disadvantages of accepting voluntary services from participants in an executive exchange program, and recommendations for legislation (if any) relating to the continuation of the program.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from New York [Mr. HORTON] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3002 was introduced by our colleague FRANK HORTON at the request of the President's Commission on Executive Exchange. The executive exchange is a program created by President Johnson and supported by every President since then. It brings private sector executives into the Government and sends Government executives out to the private sector for 1-year exchange programs.

The program is one small way that the mutual distrust which sometimes exists between these two kinds of executives can be reduced.

H.R. 3002 as reported by the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service establishes an experimental program to be run during fiscal years 1987 through 1989, in which 10 of the private sector participants in the Executive Exchange Program may work for the Government but be paid by their regular employers. This will permit 10 of the private sector participants each year to be paid by their companies at rates above the Federal pay cap.

This legislation was requested by the administration because it claims that the Executive Exchange Program is unable to attract the senior level private sector managers it wants with the Federal pay cap. Obviously, what we are seeing is that Federal executives are paid far less than their private sector counterparts.

All private sector executive exchange participants, including those in the experimental program, are subject to laws relating to conflict of interest, financial disclosure, and standards of conduct. We requested an opinion from the Justice Department on the applicability to executive exchange participants of the criminal statute (18 U.S.C. 209) which prohibits executive branch employees from receiving compensation from sources other than the Government. I include a copy of the letter from the Department of Justice in the RECORD at this point.

Washington, DC, April 2, 1986

Hon. PATRICIA SCHROEDER,
U.S. House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE SCHROEDER: You have asked for the opinion of this Department as to whether H.R. 3002, the "Executive Exchange Program Voluntary Services Act of 1985," conflicts with 18 U.S.C. 209, which generally prohibits executive branch employees from receiving compensation from sources other than the Government.[1] Section 3(b)(2) of the bill provides that participants in the Executive Exchange Program of the President's Commission on Executive Exchange must receive their compensation solely from the nongovernmental entity responsible for nominating them for participation in the program. While the proposed program does not directly conflict with the terms of section 209, it is somewhat at odds with the policy underlying that statute, and accordingly, we direct your attention to several matters of concern.

By its own terms, section 209's prohibition on extra-governmental compensation does not extend "to an officer or employee of the Government serving without compensation, whether or not he is a special Government employee, or to any person paying, contributing to, or supplementing his salary as such." 18 U.S.C. 209(c). Executive Exchange Program participants under H.R. 3002 would receive no compensation from the government, and thus would not be prevented from receiving compensation from their sponsoring organizations.[2] Nonetheless, while the law is technically inapplicable, we believe that the policies it embodies ought to be closely examined in the context of this bill.

The principal animating section 209 and its predecessor statutes is "that no Government official or employee should serve two masters to the prejudice of his unbiased devotion to the interests of the United States." 33 Op. A.G. 273, 275 (1922). A number of considerations underlie this concern: (1) government employees who are paid by outside sources may be subject to pressures from those sources that can adversely affect their service to the federal government; (2) such employees may tend to favor the interests of the outside sources of payment even in the absence of actual pressure; (3) employees paid by outside sources are less subject to agency discipline, and are often substantially better paid, than their fellow employees, which may lead to internal personnel difficulties; and (4) even in the absence of any specific problems, such payment may result in the appearance of impropriety. All of these considerations call for special care in authorizing the use of volunteer services, to ensure that such authorization is consistent with the interests of the government and its tradition of independent and unbiased service to the public.

Several features of the Executive Exchange Program highlight the need for careful scrutiny. First, unlike special government employees, who by statute are limited to working a relatively short period,[3] or

[1] Section 209(a) provides: Whoever receives any salary, or any contribution to or supplementation of salary, as compensation for his services as an officer or employee of the executive branch of the United States Government, of any independent agency of the United States, or of the District of Columbia, from any source other than the Government of the United States, except as may be contributed out of the treasury of any State, county, or municipality; or

Whoever, whether an individual, partnership, association, corporation, or other organization pays, or makes any contribution to, or in any way supplements the salary of, any such officer or employee under circumstances which would make its receipt a violation of this subsection—

Shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

[3] Special government employees include principally those who perform, "with or without compensation, for not to exceed one hundred and thirty days during any period of three hundred and sixty-five consecutive days, temporary duties either on a full-time or intermittent basis * * *." 18 U.S.C. 202(a).

most volunteers, who work part-time, the participants in the Executive Exchange Program will be working for one year as full-time government employees. The legislative history of section 209 suggests that the exception embodied in section 209(c) was largely intended to accommodate part-time or intermittent employees.[4] Again, while the express terms of section 209(c) are not so limited, we believe that the policy behind the exception has less force with respect to full-time volunteers receiving full salaries from outside sources.[5] Second, Executive Exchange Program participants will presumably serve in relatively high-level jobs within the government, participating in precisely the kinds of decisions that the conflict of interest laws most clearly contemplated.

On the other hand, we believe that H.R. 3002 substantially mitigates these concerns by proposing only a three-year experimental program limited to at most ten employees, and by making the conflict of interest laws, other than Section 209,[6] applicable to all program participants. As a result of these important qualifications, we do not object to the enactment of H.R. 3002. Nevertheless, since we have consistently noted the concerns discussed in this letter in the past, we ask that you give them serious consideration as you proceed. In particular, we would be wary of any proposal to extend this or a similar program beyond the limits set out in H.R. 3002.

The Office of Management and Budget has advised this Department that there is no objection to the submission of this report from the standpoint of the Administration's program.

Sincerely,

JOHN R. BOLTON,
Assistant Attorney General.

Mr. Speaker, participants in the experimental program are not considered Federal employees for purposes of classification, pay rates, leave, retirement, and life and health insurance. Other participants are treated like other Federal employees who are subject to a limited 1-year appointment.

The President's Commission on Executive Exchange will administer the program. At the end of the 3-year experimental program, the Commission will report to Congress on the advantages and disadvantages of the voluntary program, so we can decide whether to continue it.

I urge approval of this legislation.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3002 establishes a 3-year experimental program that I believe will greatly improve the operation and objectives of the President's Commission on Executive Exchange.

I believe that a better understanding between the private and public sectors is essential to the future of this country—economically, socially, and politically. That is why I introduced H.R. 3002. The Executive Exchange Program is one vehicle that has fostered this understanding, and at low cost to the Federal budget. It allows private and public sector executives to change jobs for a 1-year period. Selected public sector executives go to work for private corporations and private sector participants come to work for the Government. To my knowledge, the participant endorsement throughout its 18-year history has been 100 percent. All agree that the experience was worthwhile and improved understanding and fostered cooperation between the two sectors.

H.R. 3002 is an attempt to correct a problem that now inhibits the participation in the program of senior private sector executives. In many instances, senior private sector executives are paid more than their public sector counterparts. And, because their compensation during their year of Federal service must fall within Federal pay scales, these executives choose not to participate because of the substantial salary reductions they would suffer. H.R. 3002 allows the sponsoring corporation to assume the full compensation of the senior executives, thereby eliminating this inhibition.

H.R. 3002 establishes this new compensation dimension of the Executive Exchange Program on an experimental basis for a 3-year period. Only 10 employees could participate each year. After the 3-year period, we can evaluate the success of the program and determine whether we want to make it permanent. My inclination is that we will, but this trial period allows us the opportunity to determine its success in attracting more senior executives from the private sector into the program. I believe this will allow the President's Commission more flexibility to meet this administration's stated commitment to a strong and effective executive exchange network.

Finally, I want to publicly commend the outgoing Chairman of the President's Commission on Executive Exchange, Mr. James Burke. Mr. Burke is the chairman of Johnson & Johnson Corp. and a firm believer in the Executive Exchange Program. I think he has done more to elevate the importance of the Commission and its efforts than anyone in recent memory.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to take this opportunity to thank my chairwoman, the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] for her work in bringing this bill to the floor. She has done an excellent job as chairperson of the subcommittee, as she explained, to get the background information so that we could be certain that we met all of the requirements.

I also want to take this occasion to thank my colleague on the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY] for his work. So to both of them, I salute them for the fine job that they have done to bring this bill to the floor, and I urge its approval.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3002, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENDING APPEAL RIGHTS FOR CERTAIN FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 917) to amend title 5, United States Code, to extend to certain employees in the excepted service the same procedural and appeal rights as are afforded to employees in the competitive service with respect to certain adverse personnel actions, as amended.

H.R. 917

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) section 7511 of title 5, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 7511. Definitions; application

"(a) For purposes of this subchapter—

"(1) 'employee' means—

"(A) an individual in the competitive service—

"(i) who is not serving a probationary or trial period under an initial appointment; or

"(ii) who has completed 1 year of current continuous service under other than a temporary appointment limited to 1 year or less;

"(B) a preference eligible in the excepted service who has completed 1 year of current continuous service in the same or similar positions—

"(i) in an Executive agency; or

"(ii) in the United States Postal Service or the Postal Rate Commission; and

"(C) an individual in the excepted service (other than a preference eligible) who has completed 2 years of current continuous service in the same or similar positions in an Executive agency;

[5] Similarly, the part-time character of special government employees justifies their partial exclusion from the ban in 18 U.S.C. 205 on participation by government employees (or their partners) as agents or attorneys in matters involving the United States. Special employees (and their partners) are generally within this ban only with respect to matters in which they or their department or agency are directly involved. Thus, if an attorney temporarily serves as a special master in government litigation, his law firm is not necessarily obliged to withdraw from all proceedings involving the government.

[6] See, e.g., 18 U.S.C. 208 (participation in matters in which the employee is financially interested); 18 U.S.C. 1906 (unauthorized disclosure of financial or proprietary information obtained in the course of government employment).

"(2) 'suspension' has the same meaning as set forth in section 7501(2) of this title;

"(3) 'grade' means a level of classification under a position classification system;

"(4) 'pay' means the rate of basic pay fixed by law or administrative action for the position held by an employee; and

"(5) 'furlough' means the placing of an employee in a temporary status without duties and pay because of lack of work or funds or other nondisciplinary reasons.

"(b) This subchapter does not apply to an employee—

"(C) the President or the head of an agency for a position excepted from the competitive service by statute;

"(3) whose appointment is made by the President;

"(4) who is receiving an annuity from the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund or the Foreign Service Retirement and Disability Fund;

"(5) who is described in section 8337(h)(1) of this title, relating to technicians in the National Guard;

"(6) who is a member of the Foreign Service, as described in section 103 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980;

"(7) whose position is within the Central Intelligence Agency, the General Accounting Office, or the Department of Medicine and Surgery, Veterans' Administration;

"(8) whose position is within the United States Postal Service, the Postal Rate Commission, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, or the National Security Agency, except as provided in subsection (a)(1)(B) of this section; or

"(9) who is described in section 5102 (c)(11) of this title.

"(c) The Office may provide for the application of this subchapter to any position or group of positions excepted from the competitive service by regulation of the Office.".

(b)(1) This Act shall become effective on the ninetieth day after the date of the enactment of this Act, and shall apply with respect to any personnel action taking effect on or after such day.

(2) No appeal or other proceeding in the nature of review lawfully commenced before the effective date of this Act shall abate by reason of the enactment of this Act. Determinations with respect to any such appeal or proceeding shall be made as if this Act had not been enacted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from New York [Mr. HORTON] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation before us extends due process rights to about 150,000 Federal workers—mainly scientists and attorneys—who do not now have these rights because they are in the excepted service and are not preference eligibles.

Most Federal civil servants are in the competitive service, which means they are hired off of central examinations and Office of Personnel Management [OPM] registers. Some positions, such as those for scientists, chaplains, and translators, are excepted from the competitive service because it is impractical to create a central examination for these positions. Attorney positions are excepted from the competitive service because Congress has declared that it does not want lawyers subject to competitive examination.

This does not mean that employees in these positions are not competitively hired. To get a job as an attorney in the Justice Department requires enduring some of the most rigid competition which the Government has to offer. The Government aggressively recruits the best scientists and engineers out of graduate schools. Getting a job in the excepted service does not come without competition.

Attorneys, scientists, and engineers who are veterans of periods of combat get the same appeal rights as competitive service employees under the Veterans Preference Act of 1944. So, extending these due process rights to other employees in the same agencies will not undermine the effectiveness of these agencies.

Moreover, extending these rights does not dilute veterans' preference. Both the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars wrote to me last year to say that they had no objection to the enactment of H.R. 917, just as long as it did not weaken veterans' rights. The bill does not do so. I include in the RECORD at this point the letters of these two organizations.

THE AMERICAN LEGION,
Washington, DC, September 11, 1985.

Hon. PATRICIA SCHROEDER,
Chairwoman, House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, Subcommittee on Civil Service, Cannon House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE SCHROEDER: This letter is in response to your August 1 request for the Legion's views on H.R. 917, a bill to extend certain procedural and appeal rights to government employees in the excepted service facing adverse job actions.

According to The American Legion's Economic Division, this legislaton is in line with the history of veterans preference and the federal merit system whereby a provision is first made for veterans and is then extended to the rest of the employees. The American Legion's historic position has been that this organization will not object to such an extension of rights, provided that the rights of veterans are not weakened in the process.

Congresswoman, thank you for your interest in the views of The American Legion and if we can be of further assistance please do not hesitate to let us know.

Sincerely,

E. PHILIP RIGGIN,
Director, National Legislative Commission.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, DC, August 12, 1985.

Hon. PATRICIA SCHROEDER,
Chairwoman, Subcommittee on Civil Service, Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, Washington, DC.

DEAR MADAM CHAIRWOMAN: This is in response to your recent letter and enclosures thereto with respect to H.R. 917 to extend to certain employees in the Excepted Service the same procedural and appeal rights as are afforded to employees in the Competitive Service with respect to certain adverse personnel actions.

It is the opinion of the professional members of my staff who deal with legislation and Civil Service matters that H.R. 917 would eliminate an inequity visited only upon certain employees in the Excepted Service. In addition, H.R. 917 would place tighter control on the latitude exercised by the Office of Personnel Management in relief of individuals in the Excepted Service.

Thank you for your courtesy in this matter; and with best wishes and kind regards, I am

Sincerely,

BILLY RAY CAMERON,
National Commander-In-Chief.

The due process rights which this legislation would extend to a new class of employees center around the right of the employee to challenge adverse actions outside of their own agency: the right to appeal to the Merit Systems Protection Board in the case of a removal, reduction in grade or pay, furlough, or suspension. Other due process rights granted include the right to notice, to answer the charges, to representation, and to a written decision.

H.R. 917 was introduced by our colleague, MERVYN DYMALLY, of California. Through his work on behalf of a Federal attorney who did not have appeal rights to challenge his removal, Mr. DYMALLY, became convinced that due process rights should be extended to virtually all Federal employees.

The bill, as reported by the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, achieves that goal. It extends the due process and appeal rights contained in chapter 75 of title 5, United States Code, to many employees in the excepted service.

While those in the competitive service and veterans in the excepted service acquire these rights after 1 year of continuous service, those to whom the rights are extended by H.R. 917 acquire them after 2 years of current continuous service in the same or similar positions in an executive agency.

Due to special circumstances, H.R. 917 explicitly excludes certain categories of employees from coverage. These categories are:

Presidential appointees, including White House staff and Schedule C's;

Reemployed civil service or Foreign Service annuitants;

National Guard technicians;

Members of the Foreign Service, because they have their own grievance system which provides comparable rights;

Noncitizens of the United States who work for the Government outside the United States;

Central Intelligence Agency employees, because section 102(c) of the National Security Act of 1947 gives the Director clear authority to deal with CIA employees;

General Accounting Office employees, because the GAO Personnel Act of 1980 set up a GAO Personnel Appeals Board to provide due process rights of GAO workers;

Employees of the Department of Medicine and Surgery of the Veterans' Administration, because they have their own peer review system;

Employees other than preference eligibles of the U.S. Postal Service and the Postal Rate Commission, because the House has already passed legislation dealing with appeal rights for postal supervisors; and Employees other than preference eligibles of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the National Security Agency. In the case of these two sensitive agencies, we maintained the status quo and thereby avoided eroding the rights of veterans but did not expand the case of covered employees.

The Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence contacted the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service yesterday to ask about the coverage of other intelligence agencies, including the Defense Intelligence Agency [DIA]. We had tried to gain the views of these intelligence units prior to committee consideration. Unfortunately, both the Intelligence Committee and the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service only became aware of the concerns of these agencies yesterday.

Before making a judgment about the merit of an exception for other intelligence agencies, the committee wants an opportunity to consider their arguments. I can assure the Intelligence Committee that we will work closely with it to review the issue of coverage of excepted service employees in intelligence agencies. If there is a good reason to withhold these due process rights from employees of DIA and other intelligence agencies, we will be sure to do so.

The amendment sets an effective date of 90 days after the date of enactment. The new law would apply to adverse actions taking effect on or after that date, but would not apply to any appeal or review proceeding which began the effective date.

I urge support for this legislation.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 917, a bill that provides certain adverse action rights to civil service employees hired under the excepted service. The bill was reported unanimously from both the Civil Service Subcommittee and the full Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

I am especially pleased with the manner by which this legislation was developed, and I commend both Chairwoman SCHROEDER and Congressman DYMALLY for their careful and conscientious efforts. Not all excepted service employees are covered under this bill, nor should they be. There are good compelling reasons to exclude from the bill certain employees within the intelligence, law enforcement, and defense communities. They are excluded. In fact, every agency with an interest in this bill was contacted by the subcommittee so that we might have their views on whether their employees ought to be covered or not covered by H.R. 917. This was a very thorough process.

Now to the merits of the bill. I cosponsored and support H.R. 917 for a very important reason. One of the principal reasons this legislation was introduced was to give Federal Government attorneys adverse action rights. In other words, this bill would give attorneys and others due process rights if they were summarily fired without explanation. They don't enjoy these rights today. In my mind, it is essential that attorneys at the SEC, who are investigating multibillion-dollar mergers, acquisitions, securities fraud, or other violations, have these rights. The same is true for attorneys at the Federal Trade Commission, the Food and Drug Administration and the many other agencies where sensitive investigations and legal actions are pursued. Attorneys especially should know that, as they pursue their work, they are protected from any adverse action that might be taken against them as a result of their work.

Mr. Speaker, this is an excellent bill, and I urge its passage.

Mr. Speaker, I have no requests for time.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DYMALLY], the author of the bill.

Mr. DYMALLY. Mr. Speaker, I thank our distinguished subcommittee chairwoman, Mrs. SCHROEDER, for her support of H.R. 917 and for her work to improve upon the bill as originally introduced. Let me also thank my subcommittee colleague, Mr. HORTON, for his support of my efforts and his interest in the issue of adverse action protections for Federal employees.

As the sponsor of H.R. 917, I am pleased that this legislation has progressed to the House floor with bipartisan support from the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. More importantly, I am proud that our committee has again, in a united manner, approved legislation which recognizes the value of a great national resource—our Federal Government workforce.

It is not necessary for me to repeat in detail the provisions of H.R. 917. As Chairwoman SCHROEDER has pointed out, this bill gives Federal employees in the excepted service certain administrative due process rights when they are faced with a conduct-related adverse action. There are literally hundreds of thousands of Federal workers hired under the excepted service, as opposed to the competitive service. They include attorneys, physicians, handicapped employees, scientists, and many other Government positions for which a competitive examination is not available. Under current law, Federal workers in the competitive service and veterans in the excepted service have certain statutory rights of appeal when adverse personnel actions are taken against them. These rights include the right to appeal an adverse action to the Merit Systems Protection Board, an independent Federal agency.

I strongly believe that Federal employees, except under special circumstances, should not be subject to the loss of their jobs, grade, or pay, without any means of recourse or ability to properly defend themselves. Not only does such a system offend our notions of due process and justice, but it may subject many of our Federal workers to the whims of internal or external politics. This situation simply is not the type of position in which career civil servants should be placed.

H.R. 917 does not give excepted service employees a right which is foreign or untested. Rather, it extends to these employees the same rights which are enjoyed, under the law, by their counterparts who are veterans preference eligibles and who are in the competitive service. It gives employees covered under the bill the right to defend themselves against an adverse personnel action before an impartial, administrative review board. There should be no question that most excepted service employees deserve the minimum due process rights afforded others in the civil service. The right to work free from the fear of arbitrary, or even capricious, actions by one's employer, should be fundamental.

Finally, let me point out that the committee has taken careful steps to ensure that the rights extended to certain excepted service employees under H.R. 917 do not infringe on the need of Federal agencies to remove employees for reasons of national security. While title 5, U.S. Code, already provides for a rapid means of dealing with an employee problem affecting national security, H.R. 917 was amended in committee to explicity exclude from coverage of the bill certain agencies which have national security related missions.

H.R. 917 was carefully drafted and received an unusually thorough review by the Subcommittee on Civil Service before action on the bill was taken this year. I urge my colleagues to approve this legislation today.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend my good friend, Representative Mervyn Dymally, for his untiring efforts on the Subcommittee on Civil Service on behalf of this legislation and the chairwoman, Representative Pat Schroeder, who worked very had to improve the bill and shepherd it to the floor today.

This legislation will provide a long denied right of due process to certain excepted employees who have worked for the Government for more than 2 years. It grants to them the same right the Congress granted veterans in the excepted service back in 1944. Primarily, the bill offers chaplains, attorneys, doctors, and scientists the right to appeal to the Merit System Protection Board in the event they face removal, suspension for more than 14 days, reduction in grade or pay, or furlough for 30 days or less. This law will give them the opportunity to have written notice of 30 days in advance of the action and the opportunity to respond and repeal to the Board if necessary.

The subcommittee has removed the controversy from this bill by excluding employees whose positions are unique either for their policy implications or their impact on security and safety. I understand that National Guard technicians have been temporarily excluded, but will be handled in other legislation soon to be before the good chairwoman's subcommittee and the Committee on Armed Services. I will look forward to cosponsoring that legislation as well, since these workers certainly deserve that protection against arbitrary action that we offer to other Federal workers.

Again, I congratulate the sponsor of this important bill and urge my colleagues to support this equitable legislation.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. Schroeder] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 917, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bills just passed, H.R. 3002 and H.R. 917.

Mr. SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

CHRISTA McAULIFFE NATIONAL TALENTED TEACHER FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4143) to name the National Talented Teacher Fellowship Program after Christa McAuliffe.

H.R. 4143

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 571 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The fellowships awarded under this part shall be referred to as 'McAuliffe Fellowships'.".

Sec. 2. The heading of part F of title V of the Higher Education Act of 1965 is amended to read as follows: "Part F—Christa McAuliffe National Talented Teacher Fellowship Program".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Ford] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Coleman] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Ford].

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, it is indeed a singular honor and a privilege to be recognized here today by Speaker Dale Kildee of Flint, MI, presiding over the U.S. House of Representatives, a very special pleasure that I have seldom seen the like of in my 22 years in this House.

Mr. Speaker, on January 28, 1986, in the early afternoon, I was in a meeting in my office with members of the Michigan chapter of the National School Boards Association when we were told that the space shuttle Challenger had exploded, 73 seconds into launch.

All of us were, of course, instantly aware that this was the flight that carried the first "teacher in space," as the NASA program had come to be popularly called.

It was at the suggestion of President Reagan in late 1984 that NASA designed the "Teacher in Space" Program and the response on the part of teachers nationwide was immediate. Out of more than 10,000 applicants, Mrs. Christa McAuliffe of New Hampshire was selected, and she proceeded to win the heart of the Nation through her personal dedication to teaching and her obvious love for children.

In the year after her selection, we all experienced vicariously her rigorous NASA training for the flight, and children delighted to see a teacher turn flip-flops in a gravity-free environment as Mrs. McAuliffe prepared for her historic space launch.

Sitting in my office with a group whose daily work embraced school and teacher-related issues at the time the explosion occurred, you can imagine our horror, and our immediate desire to express our grief over the deaths of Mrs. McAuliffe and her six companions. Then, as now, it is difficult to give expression to our collective compassion for the families of those seven brave astronauts. But in our modest way, we can pay tribute to a fine teacher and express our deep appreciation for her, by naming the National Talented Teacher Fellowship Program after Christa McAuliffe.

H.R. 4143 was introduced on February 6, 1986 by the chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, Mr. Hawkins, together with myself, Mr. James Jeffords of Vermont, and Mr. William Lehman of Florida. The bill now has 51 cosponsors.

On March 11, 1986 the Committee on Education and Labor favorably and unanimously reported the bill. Today, we ask the House of Representatives to pass H.R. 4143, renaming the Talented Teacher Fellowship Program the "Christa McAuliffe Talented Teacher Fellowship Program."

The Talented Teacher Fellowship Program was signed into law by President Reagan in October 1984. It makes available to the States a means of identifying and rewarding outstanding teachers through State selection panels, consisting of teachers, school administrators, and parents. Selected teachers will be given opportunities to obtain further professional development and training, or to perform research in education-related fields.

Teachers honored through these fellowships will receive 1-year's pay while they are on sabbatical, based on the national average teacher salary in the award year, to be determined by the Secretary of Education. In return for the year away from the classroom, each teacher-recipient will be required to return to teaching for an additional 2 years.

Passage of H.R. 4143 will pay tribute to Christa McAuliffe and, by extension, to all teachers everywhere. Through our action today, we are reaffirming as a national policy that it is the right of every child to have a quality education so that each may achieve to their full potential as individuals. By our action today, we also reaffirm our strong belief that there is no better nor more important investment our Government can make than in education, and our belief that education should be given equal standing with Federal investments in technology, military preparedness, and balancing the budget.

Mr. Speaker, this amendment to part F of title V of the Higher Education Act, renaming the National Talented Teacher Fellowship Program after Christa McAuliffe, entails no new costs beyond those contained in the original enacting legislation, Public Law 98-558. The committee, in its desire to honor Christa McAuliffe in an appropriate and timely manner, also expresses the hope and expectation that the modest authorized appropriation of $2 million in fiscal year 1987 will be given serious consideration by the Committees on Appropriations in both the House and Senate, so that the Christa McAuliffe Teacher Fellowship Program can be implemented nationwide.

Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4143, a bill to name the National Talented Teachers Fellowship Program after Christa McAuliffe, one of seven astronauts who perished on January 28, 1986 in the tragic explosion of NASA's Challenger space shuttle.

The National Talented Teachers Fellowship Program, which this bill renames for Christa McAuliffe, was enacted into law in October 1984 as part of the Talented Teachers Act. The purpose of the fellowship program is to make funds available to States to provide talented teachers with the opportunity to take a 1-year sabbatical from the classroom to pursue professional development and training activities aimed at enhancing their teaching skills. Once the fellowship is completed, teachers would be committed to bring their experiences back to the classroom for at least 2 years. The intent of this program is to encourage good teachers to stay in the teaching profession by giving them the opportunity to improve and develop themselves professionally.

Mrs. McAuliffe was to have been the "first citizen in space." She was selected from more than 10,000 of her peers in a national competition to become the first participant in NASA's Teacher in Space Program. Mrs. McAuliffe volunteered to participate in what she called the ultimate field trip so she could share with her students the wonders and excitement of space and the expansive opportunities in space technology and science.

Christa McAuliffe represented the bright, spiritied educator we all want to teach our children. Her energy, enthusiasm, and commitment to education has been an inspiration to all teachers and every American. Her example of excellence in teaching will continue to inspire many young people to "reach for the stars" and be the best they can be. Renaming the National Talented Teachers Fellowship Program for Christa McAuliffe is a fitting tribute to her and her profession.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting H.R. 4143.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to call to the attention of the House the fact that the gentleman who just spoke is the ranking member of the minority party on the Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education, and it was through his cooperation that we passed last fall a very comprehensive reauthorization of the Higher Education Act, which carried with it a reauthorization of the program that we are today renaming in honor of Christa McAuliffe.

With that, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon, Mr. Ron Wyden, who originally introduced this legislation in 1983 and saw it successfully passed into law for the first time in 1984.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I particularly want to commend the gentleman from Michigan, Chairman Ford, for his tremendous leadership in going forward with this renaming of the Talented Teacher Fellowship. I think it is a very appropriate, truly fitting tribute, and I want to commend the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Ford] for his great leadership in this regard.

I also want to commend the gentleman from Missouri who for more than 2 years has worked with a group of us to pass the Talented Teacher Act, and commend him for both his effort in the original legislation and going forward with this tribute.

Mr. Speaker, what the Talented Teacher Act is all about is trying to bring the best and brightest into the teaching profession. You can go into any classroom in America and what you see all too often is that the best and brightest want to become lawyers, doctors, businessmen, businesswomen, or engineers, or just about anything except teachers. What our legislation does it try to reverse that. That is what Christa McAuliffe was all about. More than anything what she wished to do was to open up new vistas in education to young people both in her classroom and around the country. What she offered up to all Americans, particularly to young people, was the opportunity to participate in what she called the classroom space. Ms. McAuliffe set her sights on this achievement because she wanted to share her enthusiasm for unlocking the mysteries of space with the schoolchildren of this country. She did this regardless of risk and she was well aware of the dangers. But she put fear aside in the spirit of sharing knowledge with millions of children who she knew would be watching.

Mr. Speaker, we have been able to fund the national talented teacher scholarship portion of this program and we expect that the scholarships will be available to young people later this year. We have not been able to fund the fellowship portion of this program and I would suggest to my colleagues that we take one step today, which is to rename the Talented Teacher Program on behalf of Mrs. Christa McAuliffe, and we take another step in the days ahead, and that is to actually fund the fellowship portion of the program. Up to this point unfortunately the fellowship portion of the program has not been one that we could put in place because it has not received adequate appropriation.

So I hope today and in the days ahead we will be able to give new meaning to the living memorial to Mrs. McAuliffe, who deserves our remembrance as one who committed her life to educational achievement and excellence.

I just want to join with all my colleagues today in supporting this memorial because I cannot think of a more fitting gesture to remember her by than to reward and promote the highest standards of her colleagues in the teaching profession.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Nelson].

Mr. NELSON of Florida. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman and our colleague from Oregon for their leadership, and our colleague from Missouri, in bringing this legislation to the floor.

Yesterday, in Boise, ID, I was with Barbara Morgan, who along with Christa were the 2 selected out of the 10 finalists for the Teacher in Space Program; Barbara being selected as the backup teacher in space who went through all the training with Christa.

The three of us trained together on several occasions, particularly in the zero-gravity training in the KC-135.

Barbara and I were musing yesterday as we were visiting her native

State of Idaho where she is an elementary school teacher in McCall, ID, about the impact of Christa's life and the impact of this program.

Indeed, Christa being the first teacher in space, albeit with a tragic ending in this national tragedy that we have all participated in, she has had a profound influence on this Nation and on the children in school in this Nation.

What I found, and Barbara was corroborating this with me, in all of our contacts in the schools, far from the children being psychologically scarred after having watched this accident on television, it has just whetted their appetite, their enthusiasm for the space program and their interest in high technology.

We had been concerned, my colleague from Michigan, my colleague from Missouri remember the report a couple of years ago on the condition of the Nation's educational system in the public schools which was entitled "The Nation at Risk." It said that we are deficient in mathematics, we are deficient in science, and we have seen the statistics about how many engineers the Soviet Union and Japan are producing as compared to a much smaller number which we are producing.

So what Christa McAuliffe's legacy has done has so interested school students all across this Nation in matters of high technology, in science, in math. Then when Barbara Morgan flies as the next teacher in space, as the backup to Christa, and when she teaches that classroom in space, it is going to ignite the imaginations of our students all across this land.

So it is with tremedous pleasure, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ranking Member, Mr. Speaker, that you would allow me to come and to speak on behalf of this legislation, to say that it is most fitting.

As someone who has worked with, who has played with, who has enjoyed the company and the friendship, and who has been part of the love that has outpoured to Christa McAuliffe, this is a fitting tribute and I appreciate it.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would advise that visitors from the gallery will be notified that no expression of approval or disapproval is permitted in the Chamber.

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. Speaker, today we are considering H.R. 4143, a bill to name the National Talented Teachers Fellowship Program after Christa McAuliffe, the teacher from New Hampshire who died in the Challenger space shuttle along with the other brave crew members on their fateful mission in January. Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. FORD of Michigan, and Mr. LEHMAN of Florida joined with me as original cosponsors of this bill.

This is not a new program; it simply renames a program first created by our colleagues, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. SIMON, Mr. GOODLING, and Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri, to encourage good teachers to remain in the profession. Enacted in 1984 as part of Public Law 98–558, it has never been funded. The bill seems uniquely appropriate today as a living tribute to a fine teacher, who personified in public view the best of what a talented teacher is and does.

We all know that scattered throughout our Nation are hundreds of other teachers of Ms. McAuliffe's caliber and ideals, who have never been recognized in a public way, and who ought to be singled out and encouraged to excel at what they are best at—teaching our children.

That is what the Christa McAuliffe National Talented Teacher Fellowship Program would attempt to do. We, on the Education and Labor Committee, hope that this bill will not only be enacted, but that the program can be properly funded, as a tribute to a fine teacher, and also as a bipartisan affirmation—a small signal—that we, in the U.S. Congress, still believe that education is of the utmost importance, and that people, after all, are our first priority.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4143, a bill to rename the National Talented Teachers Fellowship Program after Christa McAuliffe, one of the seven astronauts who died on January 28, 1986, on NASA's space shuttle Challenger.

Christa McAuliffe represents the essence of that spirit and daring that can be characterized as America at its best. Because Christa McAuliffe was a teacher, she was special; she represented a profession that has touched the lives of all of us and she was a symbol to millions of students. Because of her, our young citizens can understand that the adventure, challenge, opportunity, and risk associated with scientific exploration involve people that they know in their own lives. A "teacher in space" brings the space program directly into the lives of every student.

This bill, which renames the Talented Teacher Fellowship Program in Christa McAuliffe's honor, is proper and fitting. The purpose of the fellowship program is to give outstanding teachers the opportunity to expand their skills and renew their enthusiasm for teaching. The program provides teachers a 1-year sabbatical away from the classroom, providing them with a stipend equal to the national average teacher salary, paid in the year that the award is made. Teachers will use this fellowship for the professional development experience of their choice. In exchange for this fellowship experience, teachers would return to teach in the classroom for a minimum of 2 years.

Teachers all across our land share in this tribute to Christa McAuliffe. Because of her courage, she will go down in history as an example to us. She truly is an inspiration and may this vote today add to the tributes she deserves. I urge enactment of H.R. 4143.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4143, a bill to rename the National Talented Teachers Fellowship Program after Christa McAuliffe, one of the seven astronauts who died on January 28, 1986, a little more than 1 minute into their mission on NASA's Space Shuttle Challenger.

As a member of the task force which originally recommended enactment of the Talented Teachers Fellowship Program, I can hardly think of a better tribute to Mrs. McAuliffe's great spirit. The purpose of the fellowship program is to give outstanding teachers the opportunity to expand their skills and renew their enthusiasm for teaching. Christa McAuliffe's enthusiasm for their chosen profession certainly would have qualified her. The program provides teachers with a 1-year sabbatical away from the classroom, providing them with a stipend equal to the national average teacher salary paid in the year that the award is made. Teachers will use this fellowship for the professional development experience of their choice. In exchange for this fellowship experience, teachers would return to teach in the classroom for a minimum of 2 years.

We are frequently told that Christa McAuliffe was an average citizen, but she was much more—she was a daring citizen, a pioneer, and the essence of America at its finest. She was to have been the first teacher in space. Her mission was simple. She was going to reawaken the pioneer spirit in Americans, especially students, by demonstrating that the space program is accessible to all. We must not permit the tragic ending of the flight of the space shuttle Challenger to thwart the achievement of Christa's goal.

In Christa McAuliffe, we have suffered a terrible loss. From her comments prior to the flight, it was clear Christa relished this opportunity to learn and explore. This is what I hope our children and students will remember about her, for in the words of Henry Adams, "A teacher affects eternity; she can never tell where her influence stops."

Through this tribute to Christa McAuliffe, we are encouraging our teachers to imitate her courage, her energy, and her vigor for the teaching profession by giving them the opportunity to grow personally and professionally, sharing that growth with our children. With this tribute, Christa McAuliffe's influence never has to stop.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4143.

Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4143, to rename the National Talented Teacher Fellowship program after Christa McAuliffe. This program, enacted in 1984, is designed to encourage good teachers to remain in the profession. It rewards these outstanding teachers from communities across our entire Nation by providing them the opportunity to obtain further professional development and training while on a 1-year paid sabbatical from teaching.

It is certainly a fitting tribute that we name this fellowship program after the courageous and beloved teacher from New Hampshire, one of the seven astronauts who died in the Challenger tragedy. Selected from more than 1,000 of her peers to be the first teacher and citizen in space, she truly exemplified the characteristics of her profession and the ideals of this Nation. Her launch into space was an important step toward securing a better future for our children.

Christa McAuliffe was a person who excelled in all of her roles in life—woman, wife, mother, teacher, and friend. Her strength, energy, and commitment were witnessed by all as she prepared and trained for her journey into space. It is these very traits that have made a meaningful and lasting contribution to this Nation. We are all inspired to learn, to study, to achieve, and to "reach for the stars."

It is with my deepest respect and appreciation that we recognize the contributions of Mrs. McAuliffe and her teacher colleagues everywhere. They are entrusted with the future of individuals, and more importantly, the future of this great Nation. These fellowships serve to reaffirm our commitment that each and every person in our Nation is entitled to a quality education.

We will never forget Christa McAuliffe. She was the spirited and inspiring teacher we all want to teach our children. H.R. 4143 is a sincere and lasting tribute to her, and to teachers everywhere. Through them, her ideals will live on.

Mr. BONER of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in support of H.R. 4143, naming the National Talented Teacher Fellowship Program after teacher-astronaut Christa McAuliffe.

Through this tribute to Christa McAuliffe, and by extension to all teachers, the Congress reaffirms its support for the national principle that every child has the right to a quality education. By assisting teachers, we provide the means for our children to achieve all that they can as individuals. With this measure, Congress further reaffirms its strong belief that there is not a better nor more important investment our Government can make than in education. Education remains not only a national priority, but an important public policy, alongside and in equal standing with Federal investments in technology, military preparedness, and reducing the deficit.

H.R. 4143 is being considered by this House out of the respect and deep appreciation for a fine teacher, Christa McAuliffe. I believe that this recognition will also carry out a wish of Christa McAuliffe that her launch into space be an important step toward a better future for our children. H.R. 4143 is meant as a sincere and lasting tribute to Christa, and to her teacher-colleagues everywhere. Through them, Christa McAuliffes ideals will live on.

I am proud to join my colleagues in support of this measure. Christa McAuliffe was a spirited and inspiring teacher, as are all the teachers I know. Her selection to be the first teacher in space was a tribute to the important role teachers play in the lives of our children and to the role space exploration plays in our future.

I urge passage of H.R. 4143.

Mr. COLEMAN of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4143.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. FORD of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 4143, to name the National Talented Teacher Fellowship Program after Christa McAuliffe, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

HAWAIIAN HOMES COMMISSION ACT AMENDMENTS

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 17) to consent to an amendment enacted by the legislature of the State of Hawaii to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920, as amended.

H.J. RES. 17

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, as required by section 4 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the admission of the State of Hawaii into the Union", approved March 18, 1959 (73 Stat. 4), the United States hereby consents to all amendments to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920, as amended, adopted between August 21, 1959, and June 30, 1985, by the State of Hawaii, either in the Constitution of the State of Hawaii or in the manner required for State legislation, except for Act 112 of 1981.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Arizona [Mr. UDALL] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. MCCAIN] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. UDALL].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the joint resolution now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Joint Resolution 17 provides necessary consent of the United States to numerous amendments made by the Legislature of the State of Hawaii to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1920.

The 1920 act was passed to rehabilitate native Hawaiians by providing lands to permit them to regain the mode of living to which their ancestors had been accustomed. Under the act, native Hawaiians of at least one-half degree native blood are permitted to lease Hawaiin homelands for a nominal fee for a period of 99 years. The lands could be used for homesite, farming, or pasture purposes.

In the 1959 act admitting Hawaii to the Union, Congress transferred the management and disposition of the Hawaiian homelands to the State of Hawaii. The act gave the State the right to make amendments to the act, but provided that certain kinds of amendments and amendments to certain provisions of the act would require the consent of the United States.

The bill, as introduced, provided for U.S. consent to a State amendment which would have lowered from one-half to one-quarter the degree of native blood necessary to inherit interests in a Hawaiian homelands lease. Under the existing law, the spouse and children of a native lessee who are nonnatives or less than one-half native blood cannot inherit the interest and must vacate the lands upon the death of the lessee.

Upon the recommendation of the administration and State witnesses, the committee amended the bill to provide a blanket consent to all amendments made by the State to the 1920 act since 1950 with one exception. The amendment excepted from consent is a provision which deals with the method of appraising leasehold interests. This amendment is in irreconcilable conflict with a later State amendment.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is not without controversy within the State of Hawaii and within the native Hawaiian community. However, on balance, I believe that it does justice to the native community and recommend that it be passed as amended.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to House Joint Resolution 17, a bill consenting to an amendment enacted by the Legislature of the State of Hawaii to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1920.

Mr. Speaker, our Nation's history of dealing with native people is not a pleasant one, and Hawaii is no exception. When Captain Cook arrived in Hawaii in 1776 over 300,000 native people lived on the islands. Now, millions of people live in the Hawaiian Islands, but only a handful constitute native Hawaiians.

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

In 1920, Congress took an appropriate action—it set aside a portion of the public lands in Hawaii for homesteading by native Hawaiians, to preserve the culture of this distinct group of people. Unfortunately, Congress did little to fulfill the homestead requests. As part of the Statehood Act, Congress transferred the responsibility for the Hawaiian Homes Act to the State. From our committee hearings, it is abundantly clear that the State hasn't done a much better job than the Federal Government.

In fact the case can be made that it is far worse.

There are currently 9,000 families awaiting a homestead lease. The State of Hawaii, according to information given at our hearing, finances the program out of State bonds for about $3 million or $4 million a year. At this rate it will take decades to fulfill the requests for homesteads of those who are presently eligible. Now the State of Hawaii has petitioned Congress to approve expanding the eligibility for retaining a lease.

I might add, and I would like to ask my colleague from Hawaii some questions later on, I have not heard of any increase in funding, also, in order to allow these newly eligible Hawaiians to move onto these lands which they are being made eligible for.

The hearing before the committee was brief and to the point. There was no opposition to this legislation present at the hearing, Mr. Speaker, because the opponents of the legislation were not represented. The only opposition to this bill is from the people affected by House Joint Resolution 17, the native Hawaiians of 50 percent blood quantum or more, the people who are trying to live within the present law, the people, 9,000 of them still waiting to be located on lands which are supposed to have been allocated them beginning in 1920.

Mr. Speaker, I received letters, postcards, telegrams, and phone calls from native Hawaiians in opposition to House Joint Resolution 17, including organizations such as the Kahea and the Hou Hawaiians.

The State attempted in the hearing to show that native Hawaiians do support the bill. If there was a low point in this hearing, Mr. Speaker, it had to be when the State of Hawaii revealed that they had a survey of which a thousand families were surveyed, and 16 percent of them responded and of the 16 percent who responded, 57 percent supported a change in the law. This bill, Mr. Speaker, is making a tremendous change in the eligibility for lands for native Hawaiians, and 16 percent of the people surveyed responded, and of those, barely over half of them approved. And if my math is correct, that is an error margin of plus or minus 65 percent. It is not a valid survey, Mr. Speaker. The native Hawaiians may support this legislation. But many of us do not know, because no evidence of this was presented to us in committee.

What I am asking for, Mr. Speaker, is for this Congress to require at least the participation of the people affected in the process.

Congress has an obligation to preserve the rights of individuals and minority groups in relation to the desires of the majority. In this instance, we have denied these rights to native Hawaiians, and are about to rubber stamp a decision of a State legislature, that in any other State would be viewed with a jaundiced eye.

I can understand the desire of current leaseholders to pass their lease on to their families, but let us not penalize those families who have not had the opportunity to get a lease in that effort. Let us have further hearings on the subject and allow the native opposition to this bill to have their day in court before they disappear altogether.

Mr. Speaker, I have one final point. While this situation does differ from our relationship with Indian tribes, we are doing a disservice to native Hawaiians that we could not do to Indian tribes. We are determining who is a native Hawaiian without consulting with the currently recognized native Hawaiians for this program. It would be similar to Congress determining tribal membership without consulting the tribe.

What about if 20 years from now there are a number of native Hawaiians of 12.5 percent native Hawaiian blood who live on these lands? Are we going to have to come back and again change the eligibility by an act of Congress?

I hope that the next time this issue is revisited that we will at least consult those people who are affected by it.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I believe this legislation far too premature until we give all parties an opportunity to present their views. Therefore, in closing, I would like to quote a letter I received from a native Hawaiian who said it is, "(a) sad commentary on our times when one considers the stakes are the survival of the native Hawaiian people as an identifiable culture."

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCAIN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, there were several questions that were not satisfactorily answered at the committee hearing on the primary issue of lowering the blood quantum requirement. An amendment to the bill grants U.S. consent to an additional 52 amendments to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. Does the gentleman from Arizona know if any hearings were held on any of the other 52 amendments?

Mr. McCAIN. No hearings have been held to my knowledge on the additional 52 amendments which were adopted between 1959 and 1985.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. That certainly is a long span of time. I note that the committee report does not explain or even list the nature of the 52 additional amendments. House Joint Resolution 17, which we are now debating, merely approves the primary amendment and the other 52 amendments by reference. Does the gentleman from Arizona believe the committee has adequately examined the amendments to permit Congress, in good conscience, to wholly approve them?

Mr. McCAIN. The committee has had insufficient time to examine the 52 amendments. It is important to note that no testimony was received by the indigenous Hawaiians who are affected by the amendments. Since questions remain unanswered regarding the only one of the 52 amendments that was addressed in the committee hearing, I do not believe that the Congress could discharge its duty, in good conscience, and without lingering doubts and reservations, if this bill is approved without further oversight.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. I thank the gentleman from Arizona for his comments and I want to commend him for his efforts on behalf of the indigenous Hawaiian people.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 7 minutes to the distinguished author of the measure before us, the gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. AKAKA].

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Arizona for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of House Joint Resolution 17, legislation to consent to amendments enacted by the legislature of the State of Hawaii to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, 1920.

As the sponsor of House Joint Resolution 17, this measure represents an opportunity for Congress to fulfill a longstanding but little-known obligation which arises from the Hawaii Statehood Act. The present legislation is supported by the entire Hawaii congressional delegation, the State of Hawaii, and the administration. In addition, the measure is supported by the Department of Hawaiian Home Lands, the Office of Hawaiian Affairs, Alu Like, the Waianae Valley Homestead Community Association, and many other Hawaiian groups.

By way of background, the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act was enacted by Congress in 1921 as a homesteading program to place native Hawaiians on land in Hawaii designated for that purpose. Approximately 200,000 acres were set aside as available land under the act. This program was operated by the Federal Government until the admission of Hawaii into the Union in 1959.

At that time, Congress required that the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act become a provision of the State constitution. In addition, title to Hawaiian home lands which had previously been entrusted to the United States was transferred to the State of Hawaii. Responsibility for administration of the HHCA passed to the State, although under section 4 of the Statehood Act, Congress reserved the authority to grant its consent to certain amendments to the HHCA passed by the State of Hawaii.

The sole purpose of the bill that is before us today is to fulfill the obligation of the United States to render consent to amendments enacted by the State of Hawaii to the HHCA. Fifty-three amendments to the HHCA have been adopted by the State since Hawaii's admission, of which 14 require U.S. consent under the Admission Act. While these amendments improve the operation and administration of the Homesteading Program, some of the State amendments are by their terms not effective until U.S. consent is granted; others are by their terms effective until they are held otherwise, because of the absence of U.S. consent. It is now incumbent upon Congress to render its consent to these amendments so that the State of Hawaii can continue to operate this important program in the manner which serves the needs of native Hawaiians.

The need for expeditious action is clear. Indeed, it is a key recommendation of the Federal-State Task Force on the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. Jointly established by the U.S. Secretary of the Interior and the Governor of the State of Hawaii, the task force conducted a comprehensive 9-month review of every facet of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1920. The purpose of the task force was to make recommendations to the Governor of the State of Hawaii and to the Secretary of the Interior on ways to better effectuate the purposes of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act and to accelerate the distribution of benefits of the act to the beneficiaries.

In its report of August 1983, the joint Federal-State Task Force on the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act recognized that the potential for mischief under the status quo is great if consent is not rendered. Uncertainty prevails, for it is not clear whether amendments, duly enacted by the legislature of the State, are effective or not. Litigation is thereby invited, which inevitably results in inefficient operations since litigation is always expensive in terms of dollars, time, and state of mind.

While the need for consent is evident, the question may be raised as to Congress' intent in requiring such consent. Unfortunately, little exists in the record of decades of legislative activity on the matter. The record shows, in fact, that when it turned to statehood for Hawaii, the Congress devoted upward of 99 percent of its energies to arguments about statehood such as noncontiguity, non-Caucasian residents, the Communist influences, and almost no attention was given to the statutory details of how the consent of the United States should be evidenced. While Federal consent is sometimes evidenced by the approval of the President or of some lesser Federal official, that level of consent is usually the product of language so stipulating. In the absence of any provision or suggestion to the contrary, it seems appropriate that Federal consent in the case of amendments to the HHCA be granted by an act of Congress.

A related issue is the scope of congressional review in granting consent. The question is therefore posed: "To what extent should Congress scrutinize amendments made to the HHCA by the State?" As the Federal agency responsible for this matter, officials from the Department of Interior have testified that, "the subject of the amendment are all peculiarly matters of State concern. Many are and have at all times been free of controversy in Hawaii, but others—particularly the 1982 amendment with which House Joint Resolution 17 deals—have been the subject of some argument in Hawaii. Our position * * * is that we think it appropriate that such issues be resolved in Hawaii, and once they are, that the U.S. Congress be asked to consent to the decision reached at the State level." I am in full agreement with this philosophy.

This notion is relevant to one amendment in particular, Act 272, as passed on June 18, 1982. Some of my colleagues have raised the point on this matter and I feel compelled to comment on it. Act 272, Session Laws of Hawaii, 1982, seeks to amend section 209, in relation to successors to lessees, of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. Under the original section 209, upon the death of the lessee, his or her interest in the tract or tracts and the improvements thereon, would vest in the relatives of the decedent provided that such persons are qualified beneficiaries—native Hawaiians of not less than one-half part of the blood of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands previous to 1778.

Act 272 seeks to amend section 209 to allow for successorship of a lessee's interest in the tract to certain relatives—husband, wife, or children, who are at least one-quarter Hawaiian. The impetus behind Act 272 is the need to confront factors which threaten the security and stability of Hawaiian families, and frustrate the intent of the HHCA—to assist the Hawaiian people by returning them to the land. Since 1975, a number of leases have been canceled because the spouse or children of the deceased lessee did not meet the blood requirement.

Passage of Act 272 required 6 years of review and revision by the State legislature. The act passed the Senate by a margin of 22 to 1 with the single opponent favoring a complete repeal of the blood quantum provision. The vote in the House was unanimous. The bill was approved by Gov. George Ariyoshi on June 18, 1982. Indeed, a great deal of time and effort was spent on this matter, affording native Hawaiians ample opportunity to assist the legislature in drafting a sound measure. Testimony delivered by the Waianae Valley Homestead Community Association, Inc. serves as a good example of the sentiments of the majority of native Hawaiians on this matter:

> We strongly urge you support the amendment as it applies to the lessee who was eligible through the 50-percent blood criteria, and that to lessen it to no less than 25 percent for his/her spouse or children * * * would give the family security of continuity, the opportunity to advance themselves further * * * enabling them to look hopefully into a future of stability in economics and personal achievement.

Furthermore, the Federal-State task force addressed this issue in its 1983 report. Finding that the Act 272 cannot be implemented without congressional approval, the task force recommended that:

> As soon as possible, the State of Hawaii and the United States should seek congressional approval for the amendment to the HHCA passed by the Hawaii State Legislature in 1982 which lowers the blood quantum for successorship.

Because House Joint Resolution 17 consents to all amendments—excluding Act 112 of 1981—to the HHCA, regardless of statutory requirement, I want to offer some explanation of this process. As originally introduced, House Joint Resolution 17 sought consent solely for Act 272. On the recommendation of the executive branch, the committee amended the resolution to include consent for all amendments enacted since statehood. As to the precise wording of the committee version of House Joint Resolution 17, the Department of the Interior concluded that;

> While the draft resolution could be limited to those amendments that fall unarguably within the consent requirements of section 4, we have concluded that, given the passage of so many years and so many amendments, and believing as we do that the act should now be placed on as secure a footing as possible, it may be wisest to seek consent to all amendments.

As previously noted, Act 112 of 1981 has been expressly excluded from the list of amendments being ratified under this measure. Briefly, Act 112 contains provisions that are in irreconcilable conflict with later amendments to the act. This is particularly evident in connection with leasehold appraisals, with Act 112 prescribing one approach, and Act 272 of 1982 a different one. Act 272 repeals the provisions contained in Act 112, and as such, should be construed as the most recent amendment. In this light, consent to the former would only confuse the applicability of the latter. Because the objective of this legislation is clarity of result, it is in the interest of Congress to exclude Act 112 from consideration. Furthermore, the State supports the exclusion of Act 112 from the legislation we are considering today.

In the future, questions may arise about the precedential value of House Joint Resolution 17. This legislation does not dictate the need for congressional consent for all amendments made to the act in the future. Rather, it is simply intended to serve as a housekeeping matter in an effort to bring Congress up to date in fulfilling its obligation under the law. In fact, the committee report states that in order that future amendments requiring U.S. consent receive consideration in a timely manner, the Secretary of the Interior and the Governor of the State of Hawaii should enter into consultations regarding the manner in which such amendments will be brought to the attention of Congress. This will no doubt result in Congress' ability to fulfill its obligation more expeditiously.

Mr. Speaker, because of the significant impact of this issue on the native Hawaiian beneficiaries of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act and the existing lessees of Hawaiian home lands, I find this measure to be a priority issue. Passage is necessary to foster the original intent of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, that of returning the native Hawaiian to the land in order that the Hawaiian race may be perpetuated. Without the authority to enforce the proposed changes, the State of Hawaii believes that it is not able to confront current forces which threaten family stability and security, frustrate the intent of the HHCA, and deny the assurance and protection which allows the beneficiary to regard Hawaiian home lands as ancestral lands.

This legislation and the process in the Hawaii Statehood Act which established it are rather unique. House action would ensure fulfillment of the requirements established in the Hawaii Statehood Act.

Let me note, in closing some points which will be of interest to many Members: All changes recommended by the administration have been incorporated into House Joint Resolution 17, and the administration supports its passage. The CBO reports that there will be no cost to the Federal Government, or to State and local governments, from the enactment of House Joint Resolution 17. And, the State of Hawaii and its entire delegation support its passage.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the passage of House Joint Resolution 17.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. Young).

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, as the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Interior has pointed out, House Joint Resolution 17 is necessary to provide Federal consent to amendments to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. Without these amendments, many individuals now holding leases of Hawaiian homelands will not be able to pass on their land interest to their spouses or their children. We would be denying inheritance by spouses and children solely because of arbitrary blood quantum levels established by statute.

It is not our intent to frustrate the interests of others seeking leases. However, if we do not provide a change in eligibility standards, we will be depriving 500 leaseholders an opportunity to leave lands to their descendants. This loss of family homestead would frustrate the intent of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation has received careful consideration of the Hawaiian delegation. Our colleagues from Hawaii have worked diligently on the bill, and it is supported by the administration. For all of these reasons I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, may I continue in saying that it has been my premise on this floor of the House that when the delegation from a State speaks on an issue affecting only that State, then this body should be listening intently and support them as far as possible, because these are truly the representatives of the people they come from.

The gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. Akaka] has worked very hard on this legislation and strongly supports it. The administration supports it. The whole delegation, including the Senators, support it. But, more than that, I cannot imagine not allowing descendants or spouses receiving the lands that they cannot under the present act without these amendments. So I strongly urge that this body accept this resolution, House Joint Resolution 17, and see that justice is done.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from American Samoa [Mr. Sunia].

Mr. SUNIA. I thank the chairman of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, it is my great honor and high privilege to join my fellow Polynesian, the gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. Akaka] in strong support of House Joint Resolution 17. As we have heard, this resolution, if enacted, will give congressional consent to amendments enacted by the Hawaii Legislature to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1920.

In granting statehood to Hawaii, Congress reserved the authority to give its consent to certain amendments to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act that became law in Hawaii. This resolution provides the means by which Congress may fulfill its obligation to render consent to those amendments. The Reagan administration recommended that House Joint Resolution 17 incorporate all such amendments. The resolution reflects that change, and the administration supports its passage. Having reviewed House Joint Resolution 17, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that enacting this resolution will not cost the Federal Government or the State of Hawaii or any of its political subdivisions anything.

Having myself lived and been educated in Hawaii for 5 years and still having many relatives and constituents in that State, I am particularly interested and keenly concerned about any Federal legislation that directly affects Hawaii. Touching on the subject of land, an issue dear to the residents of the American Pacific Islands, this resolution strikes a response in the heart of an American Samoan. Like native Hawaiians, we too have land laws based on blood quantum. My district follows quite closely the action that the Hawaii Legislature has taken and that Congress will take on this resolution. Sharing so much of our heritage with the people of the Hawaiian Islands, American Samoans maintain ties of affection and strong mutual interest with their fellow Polynesians.

Mr. Akaka has been most kind to me since my arrival here on Capitol Hill in January 1981. House Joint Resolution 17 was introduced by Mr. Akaka, like me an alumnus of the University of Hawaii. In preparing for and conducting the hearing of the Interior Committee on this resolution, my staff and I have valued working with Mr. Akaka and his able assistant, Miss Kehaulani Lum. I hope and fully anticipate that such warm rapport will always remain between the Members of Congress from Hawaii and American Samoa and their constituents.

It is Congress' statutory responsibility to grant consent to amendments passed by the Hawaii Legislature and signed by the Governor of Hawaii. For that purpose the Interior Committee, having called the hearing that chairman Udall asked me to chair, reported this resolution favorably to the House. House Joint Resolution 17 represents the clearly expressed will of the Hawaiian people. The executive and legislative branches of government in Hawaii and Messrs. Akaka, Heftel, Inouye, and Matsunaga support its passage. I urge passage by this House.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

If I could have the attention of the distinguished gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. Akaka], I have some questions, and if the gentleman feels free to answer these questions, I would like to engage in a colloquy with him.

Mr. Speaker, I am very concerned about this bill. Before I ask these questions, I would like it to be known that I clearly understand the track is greased, the train is going down the track, and there is no way that I can prevent the passage of this legislation. But I think it is of the utmost importance that I point out the injustice that is being perpetrated here today, so that possibly some day in the future we can avoid a repetition of this kind of action which inflicts, I believe, such pain on native Hawaiians and native Americans.

I am concerned over the level of effort by the State of Hawaii to provide homesteads to the 9,000 native Hawaiians on the waiting list. All of these individuals are of 50 percent blood quantum or more. Some have been on the waiting list for over 30 years. Yet, the representative from the Department of Hawaiian Homelands testified at the committee hearing that the State spends only $3 to $4 million of its general bond revenue per year to finance homesteads for those on the waiting list. Recent studies estimate that if this level of effort continues, it would take 50 years to provide benefits just for those on the waiting list now, to say nothing of new applicants. Wouldn't it be appropriate for the State to step up its efforts on behalf of those currently eligible, rather than to add a new class of beneficiaries?

Mr. AKAKA. If the gentleman will yield, the State of Hawaii has really stepped up its efforts in helping Hawaiians.

As a bit of history, let me start off by noting that from 1921, when the program first started, until 1974, not much development occurred. In fact, 2,200 awards were made over the period of 53 years. The reality of the situation is that no funds were made available when the act was administered under the United States between 1921 and 1959, nor were substantial funds made available between that time up to 1974.

The program was created with the intent that it be self-sufficient, and money was not appropriated at the beginning. Then beginning in 1974, however, the State's interest in the program was sparked and the fear of expending general fund dollars on the program dissipated. From 1974 to 1984, in one-sixth of the time of the program's entire existence a total of 1,300 new awards were made. In addition to these new awards, the State upgraded the drainage systems and roads in areas where problems had existed for over 50 years. More than $70 million was spent by the Department of Hawaiian Homelands on this endeavor.

In addition to annual budget appropriations, the State also guarantees the repayment of moneys barred by the department from Government agencies or private lending institutions and on departmental guarantees of loans made to lessees up to $21 million. This loan guarantee started in the late 1960's at roughly $8 million and has since risen to the current amount. The department of homelands has made the acceleration of awards its highest priority and is working on good faith to see that more beneficiaries are placed on the land.

In fiscal year 1985, 1,000 awards were made; 1,500 additional lots have been identified for awards in the next fiscal year. The Department's appropriation for fiscal year 1986 will total close to $10 million, $6 million for award acceleration, $2 million to improve the water system on the Island of Molokai, and $2 million for the development of commercial properties, one of the department's major revenue-generating sources.

So these are parts of the acceleration that the State has launched.

Mr. McCAIN. I appreciate that information.

I have two more questions, if I might request the indulgence of my distinguished colleague from Hawaii.

Mr. Speaker, my concern over the State's level of effort is increased by reports concerning extremely poor financial management by the Department of Hawaiian Homelands. Recent studies indicated that the department's accounting system was in such a shambles that it could not be audited, that its financial statements were inaccurate and incomplete, and that its cash management system had serious flaws. In a 9-month period in 1983, the department lost a total of $280,000 in interest due to uninvested cash balances. Don't these problems raise serious concerns about whether the State can handle even its current workload?

Mr. AKAKA. If the gentleman will yield, yes, it certainly does raise a big concern. As I pointed, out, over the 53 years, there was not much movement. For the first time, I want to inform my distinguished colleague, an audit was held, and the audit has been reported. The Department of Hawaiian Homelands now is taking that audit and is reorganizing some parts of it to improve its service.

Mr. McCAIN. I thank the gentleman.

The representative from the Department of Hawaiian Homelands testified at the committee hearing that there is plenty of land available for everyone on the waiting list, and that in fact, only 20 percent of the 200,000 acres of Hawaiian homelands are currently used by native Hawaiians. However, I am concerned that there is not enough land to go around. I cite four factors in support of this concern.

First, recent studies indicate that the State has no accurate inventory of Hawaiian homelands. This is due in significant part to the poor recordkeeping and limited resources of the Department of Hawaiian Homelands. As of late 1983, the department could not account at all for nearly 20,000 acres of homelands.

Second, over 30,000 acres of homelands are being used by local governments and other entities for purposes not authorized by the Homes Commission Act. The State has been very slow to recover this land and seek compensation on behalf of native Hawaiians. Furthermore, the unauthorized uses have rendered surrounding homelands unsuitable as homesteads.

Third, 80,000 acres of homelands, over 40 percent of the available land, are leased to private, non-native Hawaiian interests, for very modest rents.

Fourth, those on the waiting list are entitled to express a geographic preference for their homesteads. In some areas, the supply of available land is insufficient to accommodate everyone on the waiting list.

All of this indicates to me that there will be serious problems in providing land to those currently eligible, much less to a new group of beneficiaries. Should not these issues be cleared up before we move further on House Joint Resolution 17?

Mr. AKAKA. I must commend my distinguished colleague for his information.

There have been movements to correct this. I did mention in my testimony that the Federal-State Task Force on the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act did cite these problems that the gentleman is mentioning and did make recommendations which are being considered, and corrections are being made. I want to assure my colleague that I am personally looking into this also, to look for the best improvements in the services that are being given by the Hawaiian Homelands Commission and assure you that these improvements are coming about.

Mr. McCAIN. I appreciate very much the information and the commitment on the part of my colleague from Hawaii to see that this legislation will be fairly and equitably carried out, as well as many of the other problems which I have raised in our colloquy here today.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say that we are writing another chapter, in my opinion, of making decisions and passing laws without informing or receiving consent of those minorities who are affected by this legislation. My colleague mentioned there is no cost. Indeed there is no cost, according to the Office of Management and Budget. I think there is a great deal of cost to those 9,000 native Hawaiians who have been waiting for over 30 years to locate on lands that were allocated to them many years ago.

I do not think that it is fair or equitable of this body to pass a piece of legislation which in my mind at the very minimum has not received the consent and agreement of those who were directly affected by it.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. McCAIN. I am glad to yield.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman very much for yielding.

The passage of that Act 272 in the State legislature required 6 years of review and revision by the State legislature. I am saying this by way of the support that has come from Hawaii. That act passed the State senate by a margin of 22 to 1, with a single opponent favoring complete repeal of the blood quantum provision and his reason for that was that he felt that there should be no quantum.

The vote in the house was unanimous.

The bill was approved by the Governor on June 18, 1982.

A great deal of time and effort was spent on this matter, affording native Hawaiians in Hawaii opportunity to assist the legislature in drafting some measure.

Testimony delivered by the Hawaiian High Valley Homestead Committee Association, Inc., serves as a good example of the sentiments of a majority of native Hawaiians on this matter, and I quote:

> We strongly urge you to support the amendment as it applies to the lessee who is eligible through the 50 percent blood criteria and to lessen it to no less than 25 percent for his or her spouse or children would give the family security of continuity, the opportunity to advance themselves further, enabling them to look hopefully to a future of stability in economics and personal achievement.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, to close debate, I would like to thank the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. McCAIN] for the constructive way in which he has gone about his reservation on this legislation. It has been helpful and I think we have made a better record because the gentleman has come forward with these objections.

Having said that, I think it would be a grave mistake for the House not to pass this legislation. As has been pointed out, there is absolutely no cost to the Federal Government. It is supported unanimously by the House delegation and by the delegation at the other end of the Capitol. The State legislature supports it. It has strong support in our committee, as evidenced by my presence here today and the statement by the gentleman from Alaska, who is the ranking Republican on our committee.

Mr. BLAZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 17 and to complement our colleagues from the State of Hawaii, DAN AKAKA and CEC HEFTEL, for calling this matter to the attention of Congress, and to Chairman MO UDALL for his outstanding leadership in bringing the joint resolution expeditiously to the House floor.

In 1959 this Congress admitted the great State of Hawaii into the Union and transferred this management and disposition of the Native Hawaiian Homesteading Program, commonly referred to as the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, to the State. The Hawaiian Homes Commission Act was subsequently adopted as a part of the constitution of the State of Hawaii. For some innocuous reason, Congress reserved the authority to grant its consent to certain amendments to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act passed by the State of Hawaii.

For the past 27 years, the State of Hawaii has administered the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act effectively, conscientiously, and diligently in keeping with the mandate of Congress. The State of Hawaii is the only body that can deal appropriately with the subject matters of the HHCA which are of local nature, and the State has given careful and prudent consideration to the amendments incorporated in House Joint Resolution 17. The joint resolution is endorsed and supported by all the leaders of Hawaii, including the Hawaii delegations of both Houses of Congress and the State legislature. Congress should acquiesce to the determination of the State and must now render its consent to the joint resolution.

House Joint Resolution 17 before this House would approve, en masse, all the amendments to the HHCA previously enacted by the State of Hawaii, except one. Congressional consent to those amendments is necessary to avoid any confusion and legal challenge with respect to the validity of those amendments, and I urge all my colleagues in this body to vote for the adoption of the joint resolution.

Thank you.

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, in drafting the Hawaii Admission Act, I believe that the intent of all parties to the act, especially the residents of Hawaii, was to transfer the jurisdiction of a native Hawaiian homesteading program to the State of Hawaii.

What we are here to decide is if, under the provisions of admission, we will allow the elected government of Hawaii to determine the future of the homesteading program, the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act [HHCA].

The legislature of Hawaii, after lengthy debate and laborious compromise, passed a measure which would allow for a change in the blood gantum requirements for the inheritance of homesteaded land under the HHCA. Additionally, the Hawaii delegation to the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate unanimously supports passage of the bill which would permit these changes—House Joint Resolution 17.

I believe it is the obligation to this Congress to render consent to the amendments passed by the Hawaiian Legislature. The measure involves absolutely no cost to any governmental body. The change in the law would only affect heirs to homesteaded land, not new applicants. This is a reasonable change, the Hawaiian people want it, and we should allow them to have it.

Those who oppose this measure are compassionate in their philosophy and I appreciate their special concerns, however, I must disagree. The issue was debated in Hawaii, among Hawaiians in a thoroughly sound and democratic manner. I believe we should consent to this reasonable and sound amendment to HHCA and not question the wisdom of the Hawaiian people who have spoken through their elected representatives

Mr. HEFTEL of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Joint Resolution 17, a bill of great importance to the native people of Hawaii.

House Joint Resolution 17, sponsored by my distinguished colleague DANIEL AKAKA and me, grants the consent of Congress to amendments enacted by the State of Hawaii to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. As part of the Hawaii Statehood Act in 1959, the Federal Government turned over its control of the Hawaiian Homes Commission to the State of Hawaii. Congress reserved the right to grant authority to certain amendments made to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act, thus, we bring House Joint Resolution 17 to the House floor today to fulfill this congressional obligation.

These amendments, which include all amendments made to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act since statehood, are primarily to facilitate the operations of the Hawaiian Homes Program. The most significant of these amendments allows native Hawaiians living on Hawaiian homestead lands to pass the land onto either a spouse or offspring who have a minimum of one quarter Hawaiian blood quantum. Current law requires that anyone leasing Hawaiian Home Land must have at least 50 percent Hawaiian blood and thus prevents a spouse or child from staying on the land if they do not meet this requirement once the lessee dies. This amendment does not affect other successors to the land, such as siblings or other relatives of the lessee, who will still have to meet the one half Hawaiian blood quantum requirement.

This amendment is necessary because intermarriage is reducing Hawaiian blood quantums. Of over 175,000 natives of Hawaiian ancestry in Hawaii, only 27 percent have 50 percent or more Hawaiian blood quantum. We can anticipate that the next generation of lessees' children will probably not meet the Hawaiian blood requirement. Over the past 10 years only eight leases have been cancelled because the spouse or children of the deceased lessee did not meet the 50 percent Hawaiian blood requirement. This number will increase. Failure to lower the blood quantum now would be inequitable and would penalize Hawaiian children of a heritage that is rightfully theirs.

House Joint Resolution 17 was originally introduced to grant congressional consent solely to this blood quantum amendment. At the recommendation of the U.S. Department of the Interior during a hearing on the bill last November, House Joint Resolution 17 was amended to include congressional consent to all amendments made to the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act. Again, these amendments are primarily housekeeping in nature, and do not represent any cost to the Hawaii State or Federal governments.

I urge my colleagues to support House Joint Resolution 17 to fulfill this Congressional obligation to the Hawaiian people.

Mr. UDALL. Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of this joint resolution, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. UDALL] that the House suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution, House Joint Resolution 17, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the joint resolution, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WILD AND SCENIC RIVERS ACT AMENDMENTS

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4350), to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4350

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—WILD AND SCENIC RIVER DESIGNATIONS

SEC. 101. (a) Section 3(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1274) is amended by adding the following new paragraph at the end:

"(56) CACHE LA POUDRE, COLORADO.—The following segments as generally depicted on the proposed boundary maps numbered fs-56 and dated March 1986, published by the United States Department of Agriculture, each to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture; except that those portions of the segments so designated which are within the boundary of Rocky Mountain National Park shall continue to be administered by the Secretary of the Interior:

"(A) Beginning at Poudre Lake downstream to the confluence of Joe Wright Creek, as a wild river. This segment to be designated the 'Peter H. Dominick Wild River Area'.

"(B) Downstream from the confluence of Joe Wright Creek to a point where the river intersects the Easterly North-South line of the W 1/2 SW 1/4 of Section 1, Township 8 North, Range 71 West of the 6th P.M., as a recreational river.

"(C) South Fork of the Cache la Poudre River from its source to the Comanche Peak Wilderness Boundary, approximately four miles, as a wild river.

"(D) Beginning at the Comanche Peak Wilderness Boundary to a point on the South Fork of the Cache la Poudre River in Section 1, Township 7 North, Range 73 West of the 6th P.M., at elevation 8050 mean sea level, as a recreational river.

"(E) South Fork of the Cache la Poudre River from its intersection with the easterly section line of Section 30, Township 8 North, Range 72 West of the 6th P.M., to confluence of the main stem of the Cache la Poudre River, as a wild river.

With respect to the portions of the river segments designated by this paragraph which are within the boundaries of Rocky Mountain National Park, the requirements of subsection (b) of this section shall be fulfilled by the Secretary of the Interior through appropriate revisions to the general management plan for the park, and the boundaries, classification, and development plans for such portions need not be published in the Federal Register. Such revisions to the general management plan for the park shall assure that no developments or use of park lands shall be undertaken that is inconsistent with the designation of such river segments as a wild river. For the purposes of the segments designated by this paragraph, there are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal years commencing after September 30, 1986, such sums as may be necessary for the acquisition of lands and interests in lands and for development.".

(b) Inclusion of the designated segments of the Cache la Poudre River in the Wild and Scenic Rivers system under subsection (a) of this section shall not interfere with the exercise of existing decreed water rights to water which has heretofore been stored or diverted by means of the present capacity of storage, conveyance, or diversion structures that exist as of the date of enactment of this Act, or operation and maintenance of such structures. Nor shall inclusion of the designated segments of the Cache la Poudre River in the Wild and Scenic Rivers system be utilized in any Federal proceeding, whether concerning a license, permit, right-of-way, or other Federal action, as a reason or basis to prohibit the development or operation of any water impoundments, diversion facilities, and hydroelectric power and transmission facilities below Poudre Park located entirely downstream from and potentially affecting designated segments of the Cache la Poudre River, or relocation of Highway 14 to any point east of the north-south ½ section line of Section 2, Township 8 North, Range 71 West of the 6th P.M., as necessary to provide access to Poudre Park around such facilities; provided due consideration shall be given to reasonable measures for minimizing the impact of such facilities and road relocation on the designated segments. Congress finds that development of water impoundments, diversion facilities, and hydroelectric power and transmission facilities located entirely downstream from the designated segments of the Cache la Poudre River below Poudre Park, in accordance with the provisions of this section, is not incompatible with the designation of segments of the Cache la Poudre River in the Wild and Scenic Rivers system under subsection (a) of this section. The reservation of water established by the inclusion of segments of the Cache la Poudre River in the Wild and Scenic Rivers system shall be subject to the provisions of this Act, shall be adjudicated in Colorado Water Court, and shall have a priority date as of the date of enactment of this Act.

(c)(1) The Secretary of Agriculture, acting through the Chief of the United States Forest Service, shall provide grants and technical assistance to the City of Fort Collins, Colorado, to carry out a study regarding the designation of the following area as a national recreation area: the 18.5 mile segment of the Cache la Poudre River Corridor from the northwest boundary of the city of Fort Collins urban growth area to the Weld-Larimer County line.

(2) The study under this subsection shall include each of the following:

(A) A comprehensive evaluation of the public recreation opportunities and flood plain management options which are available with respect to the river corridor involved.

(B) An evaluation of the natural, historical, and recreational values of such corridor.

(C) Patterns for possible land acquisition within the corridor which are deemed necessary for the purpose of resource protection, scenic integrity, or management and administration of the corridor area.

(D) Cooperative management proposals for the administration of the corridor area.

(E) The number of visitors and types of public use within the corridor area that can be accommodated in accordance with the full protection of its resources.

(F) The facilities deemed necessary to accommodate and provide access for such visitors and uses, including the location and estimated costs of such facilities.

(3) Within 3 years after enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall transmit to the Congress a comprehensive report containing the results of the study conducted pursuant to this section.

(4) Effective October 1, 1986, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this subsection.

(5) Not more than 75 percent of the cost of the study carried out under this subsection shall be paid by the United States. The remaining portion of such costs shall be contributed by the city of Fort Collins. The portion contributed by the city of Fort Collins may consist of appropriated funds or contributed services.

SEC. 102. Section 3(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1274(a)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph after paragraph (56):

"(57) SALINE BAYOU, LOUISIANA.—The segment from Saline Lake upstream to the Kisatchie National Forest, as generally depicted on the Proposed Boundary Map, numbered fs-57, and dated March, 1986; to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture. For the purposes of the segment designated by this paragraph, there are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal years commencing after September 30, 1986, such sums as may be necessary for the acquisition of lands and interests in lands and for development.".

Sec. 103. Section 3(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1274(a)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph after paragraph (57):

"(58) Black Creek, Mississippi.—The segment from Fairley Bridge Landing upstream to Moody's Landing as generally depicted on a map entitled 'Black Creek Wild and Scenic River', numbered fs-58 and dated March 1986, to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture as a scenic river area under section 2(b)(2). For the purposes of the segment designated by this paragraph, there are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal years commencing after September 30, 1986, such sums as may be necessary for the acquisition of lands and interests in lands and for development.".

Sec. 104. Section 3(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1274(a)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph after paragraph (58):

"(59) North Fork Kern River, California.—The segment of the main stem from the Tulare-Kern county line to its headwaters within Sequoia National Park, as generally depicted on a map entitled 'Proposed North Fork Kern River', numbered fs-59 and dated March, 1986; to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture; except that those portions of the river within the boundaries of the Sequoia National Park shall be administered by the Secretary of the Interior. With respect to the portions of the river segments designated by this paragraph which are within the boundaries of Sequoia National Park, the requirements of subsection (b) of this section shall be fulfilled by the Secretary of the Interior through appropriate revisions to the general management plan for the park, and the boundaries, classification, and development plans for such portions need not be published in the Federal Register. Such revisions to the general management plan for the park shall assure that no developments or use of park lands shall be undertaken that is inconsistent with the designation of such river segments as a wild river. For the purposes of the segment designated by this paragraph, there are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal years commencing after September 30, 1986, such sums as may be necessary for the acquisition of lands and interests in lands and for development."

Sec. 105. Section 3(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1274(a)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph after paragraph (59):

"(60) South Fork Kern River, California.—The segment from its headwaters in the Inyo National Forest to the southern boundary of Domelands Wilderness in the Sequoia National Forest, as generally depicted on the Proposed Boundary Map, numbered fs-60, and dated March, 1986; to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture. For the purposes of the segment designated by this paragraph, there are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal years commencing after September 30, 1986, such sums as may be necessary for the acquisition of lands and interests in lands and for development.".

TITLE II—WILD AND SCENIC RIVER STUDIES

Sec. 201. (a) Section 5(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1271-1287) is amended by adding the following new paragraph at the end thereof—

"(92) Henry's Fork, Idaho.—The segment of approximately 11 miles from Big Springs downstream to Island Park Reservoir, and the segment of approximately 31 miles from Island Park Dam downstream to the confluence with Warm River.".

(b) Section 5(b)(3) of such Act is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: "The study of the river named in paragraph (92) of subsection (a) shall be completed not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this sentence.".

Sec. 202. (a) Congress finds that—

(1) The West Branch of the Farmington River and related land areas possess resource values of national significance, such as significant white water rapids, undeveloped lands, scenic and cultural areas, important sport fisheries, and prime agricultural lands.

(2) Based on the National Rivers Inventory by the National Park Service, published in January 1982, this portion of the Farmington River is eligible for study for inclusion in the wild and scenic rivers system.

(3) There is strong support among local, State, and Federal officials, area residents, and river users for a concerted cooperative effort to manage the river in a productive and meaningful way.

(4) In view of the longstanding Federal practice of assisting States and local governments in protecting, conserving, and enhancing rivers of national significance, the United States has an interest in assisting the State of Connecticut and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the appropriate local governments in managing the river.

(b) Section 5(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1276(a)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph after paragraph (92):

"(93) Farmington, West Branch, Connecticut and Massachusetts.—The segment from the intersection of the New Hartford-Canton, Connecticut, town line upstream to the base of the West Branch Reservoir in Hartland, Connecticut; and the segment from the confluence with Thorp Brook in Sandisfield, Massachusetts, to Hayden Pond in Otis, Massachusetts.".

(c) Section 5(b) of such Act (16 U.S.C. 1276(b)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7) The study of the river named in paragraph (93) of subsection (a) shall be completed and the report submitted thereon not later than the end of the third fiscal year beginning after the enactment of this paragraph. Such report shall include a discussion of management alternatives for the river if it were to be included in the national wild and scenic river system."

(d)(1) At the earliest practicable date following the enactment of this Act, but not later than 45 days after enactment, the Secretary of the Interior shall establish the Farmington River Study Committee (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as the "Committee"). The Secretary shall consult with the Committee on a regular basis during the conduct of the study. Membership on the Committee shall consist of 17 members appointed by the Secretary of the Interior as follows:

(A) One member shall be appointed by the Secretary.

(B) Two members shall be appointed by the Secretary from a list of candidates supplied to the Secretary by the Governor of the State of Connecticut.

(C) Two members shall be appointed by the Secretary from a list of candidates supplied to the Secretary by the Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

(D) Two members shall be appointed by the Secretary from a list of candidates supplied to the Secretary by the Farmington River Watershed Association.

(E) One member shall be appointed by the Secretary from each of the 8 towns located along the West Branch of the river. The governing body of each of the 8 towns shall provide a list of candidates to the Secretary from which the 8 appointments under this paragraph shall be made.

(F) Two members shall be appointed by the Secretary from a list of candidates supplied to the Secretary by the Metropolitan District Commission of Hartford, Connecticut.

(2) The members of the Committee shall elect a chairman, vice chairman, and recording secretary from the membership at the first official meeting of the Committee. Official minutes shall be kept of each regular and special meeting of the Committee and shall be open for public inspection.

(3) Any vacancy on the Committee shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointment was made. Any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring before the expiration of the term for which his predecessor was appointed shall be appointed only for the remainder of such term. Vacancies in the membership of the Committee shall not affect its power to function if there remain sufficient members to constitute a quorum under paragraph (4) of this subsection.

(4) A majority of the members of the Committee shall constitute a quorum for all meetings.

(5) The Committee shall advise the Secretary in conducting the study of the Farmington River segment specified in section 5(a)(93) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act. The Committee also shall advise the Secretary concerning management alternatives should the river be included in the wild and scenic rivers system.

(6) Members of the Committee shall serve without compensation but may be compensated for reasonable and necessary expenses incurred by them in the performance of their duties as members of the Committee.

(7) The Committee may accept and utilize the services of voluntary, uncompensated personnel.

(8) The Committee shall terminate on the later of the following:

(A) The completion of the river study of the Farmington River described in section 5(a)(93) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act.

(B) The completion of management alternatives should the river be included in the wild and scenic rivers system.

(e) As used in this section (other than in subsection (b) the term "River" means the segments of the Farmington River described in paragraph (93) of section 5(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1276(a)).

(f) Effective October 1, 1986, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

SEC. 203. GREAT EGG HARBOR RIVER.

(a) Study.—Section 5(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1271-1287) is amended by adding the following new paragraph at the end thereof—

"(94) Great Egg Harbor River, New Jersey.—The entire river.".

(b) Completion Date.—Section 5(b)(3) of such Act is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: "The study of the river named in paragraph (94) of subsection (a) shall be completed not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of this sentence.".

TITLE III—TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS TO THE WILD AND SCENIC RIVERS ACT

Sec. 301. (a) Section 3(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1274(a)) is amended by redesignating the paragraphs relating to the Au Sable River, the Tuolumne River, the Illinois River, and the Owyhee River as paragraphs (52) through (55) respectively.

(b)(1) The first sentence of section 3(b) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended as follows:

(A) Strike out "one year from the date of this Act" and substitute "one year from the date of designation of such component under subsection (a)".

(B) Strike out the second parenthetical statement and substitute the parenthetical statement, "(which boundaries shall include an average of not more than 320 acres of land per mile measured from the ordinary high water mark on both sides of the river)".

(C) Strike out the semicolon and the remainder of the sentence after the words "its various segments" and substitute a period.

(2) The second sentence of section 3(b) of such Act is amended by striking out "Said boundaries, classification, and development plans" and substituting the words "Notice of the availability of the boundaries and classification, and of subsequent boundary amendments".

(3) Section 3 of such Act is amended by adding the following new subsections at the end:

"(c) Maps of all boundaries and descriptions of the classifications of designated river segments, and subsequent amendments to such boundaries, shall be available for public inspection in the offices of the administering agency in the District of Columbia and in locations convenient to the designated river.

"(d)(1) For rivers designated on or after January 1, 1986, the Federal agency charged with the administration of each component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System shall prepare a comprehensive management plan for such river segment to provide for the protection of the river values. The plan shall address resource protection, development of lands and facilities, user capacities, and other management practices necessary or desirable to achieve the purposes of this Act. The plan shall be coordinated with and may be incorporated into resource management planning for affected adjacent Federal lands. The plan shall be prepared, after consultation with State and local governments and the interested public within 3 full fiscal years after the date of designation. Notice of the completion and availability of such plans shall be published in the Federal Register.

"(2) For rivers designated before January 1, 1986, all boundaries, classifications, and plans shall be reviewed for conformity within the requirements of this subsection within 10 years through regular agency planning processes.".

Sec. 302. Section 4 of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by adding a new subsection (d) after subsection (c):

"(d) The boundaries of any river proposed in section 5(a) of this Act for potential addition to the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System shall generally comprise that area measured within one-quarter mile from the ordinary high water mark on each side of the river. In the case of any designated river, prior to publication of boundaries pursuant to section 3(b) of this Act, the boundaries also shall comprise the same area. This subsection shall not be construed to limit the possible scope of the study report to address areas which may lie more than one-quarter mile from the ordinary high water mark on each side of the river.".

Sec. 303. Section 5 of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended as follows:

(1) In subsection (a) paragraph (90) relating to the North Umpqua is redesignated as paragraph (91).

(2) At the end of subsection (b)(1) add: "Studies of the river named in paragraphs (38), (55), (83), and (87) shall be completed and the reports transmitted to the Congress not later than January 1, 1987.".

(3) Amend paragraph (4) of subsection (b) to read as follows:

"(4) For the purposes of conducting the studies of rivers named in subsection (a), there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as necessary.".

Sec. 304. (a) Section 6(e) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by striking out "Congress in authorized" and substituting "Congress is authorized".

(b) Section 6(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by striking out "donation, and lands" in the second sentence and substituting "donation or by exchange in accordance with the provisions of section 206 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976. Lands".

(c) Section 6(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by inserting "(1)" after "(a)" and by adding the following at the end:

"(2) When a tract of land lies partially within and partially outside the boundaries of a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, the appropriate Secretary may, with the consent of the landowners for the portion outside the boundaries, acquire the entire tract. The land or interest therein so acquired outside the boundaries shall not be counted against the average 100-acre per mile fee title limitation of subsection (a)(1). If not needed for outdoor recreation, administrative, or other purposes in furtherance of this Act, the lands or interests therein outside such boundaries, may be disposed of, consistent with existing authorities of law, by sale, lease, or exchange.".

(d) Section 6(b) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended as follows:

(1) Insert in the first sentence "outside the ordinary high water mark on both sides of the river" after the word "acreage".

(2) Insert "in fee title" after the word "owned".

Sec. 305. (a) The second sentence of section 7(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by deleting "approval of this Act" and substituting "designation of a river as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System".

(b) Section 7(b) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended as follows:

(1) In the first sentence after clause (i) insert a new clause (ii) as follows:

"(ii) during such interim period from the date a report is due and the time a report is actually submitted to the Congress; and".

(2) Redesignate existing clause (ii) as clause (iii).

(3) At the end of the second sentence, delete "approval of this Act" and insert in lieu thereof the words, "designation of a river for study as provided for in section 5 of this Act".

Sec. 306. Section 8(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: "This subsection shall not be construed to limit the authorities granted in section 6(d) or section 14A of this Act.".

Sec. 307. Section 9(b) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by striking out "issuance or leases" in the second sentence and substituting "issuance of leases".

Sec. 308. Section 11 of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by deleting the second sentence in subsection (a) and by amending section (b) to read as follows:

"(b)(1) The Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, or the head of any other Federal agency, shall assist, advise and cooperate with States or their political subdivisions, landowners, private organizations, or individuals to plan, protect, and manage river resources. Such assistance, advice, and cooperation may be through written agreements or otherwise. This authority applies within or outside a federally administered area and applies to rivers which are components of the Wild and Scenic River System and to other rivers. Any agreement under this subsection may include provisions for limited financial or other assistance to encourage participation in the acquisition, protection, and management of river resources.

"(2) Wherever appropriate in furtherance of this Act, the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior are authorized and encouraged to utilize the following:

"(A) For activities on federally owned land, the Volunteers in the Parks Act of 1969 (16 U.S.C. 18g-j) and the Volunteers in the Forest Act of 1972 (16 U.S.C. 558a-558d).

"(B) For activities on all other lands, section 6 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (relating to the development of statewide comprehensive outdoor recreation plans).

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, the appropriate Secretary or the head of any Federal agency may utilize and make available Federal facilities, equipment, tools and technical assistance to volunteers and volunteer organizations, subject to such limitations and restrictions as the appropriate Secretary or the head of any Federal agency deems necessary or desirable.

"(4) No permit or other authorization provided for under provision of any other Federal law shall be conditioned on the existence of any agreement provided for in this section.".

Sec. 309. Section 12(c) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by deleting the words "Secretary of the Interior" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "Administrator, Environmental Protection Agency".

Sec. 310. Section 14 of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by inserting "(a)" after "14." and adding a new subsection (b) as follows:

"(b) For the conservation purposes of preserving or enhancing the values of components of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, and environs thereof as determined by the appropriate Secretary, landowners are authorized to donate or otherwise convey qualified real property interests to qualified organizations consistent with section 170(h)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Such interest may include, but shall not be limited to, rights-of-way, open space, scenic, or conservation easements, without regard to any limitation on the nature of the estate or interest otherwise transferable within the jurisdiction where the land is located. The conveyance of any such interest in land in accordance with this subsection shall be deemed to further a Federal conservation and policy and yield a significant public benefit for purposes of section 6 of Public Law 96-541.".

Sec. 311. Section 16(c) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by adding at the end thereof: "For any designated wild and scenic river, the appropriate Secretary shall treat the acquisition of fee title with the reservation of regular existing uses to the owner as a scenic easement for purposes of this Act. Such an acquisition shall not constitute fee title ownership for purposes of section 6(b).".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from California [Mr. Lagomarsino] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento].

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to insert their remarks in the Record on the pending measure.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of H.R. 4350 is to amend the National Wild and Scenic Rivers Act to designate segments of five rivers, add three rivers for study, and make several amendments to the general provisions of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act.

In brief, H.R. 4350 would amend the National Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating segments of the Cache la Poudre River, Colorado; Saline Bayou, Louisiana; Black Creek, Mississippi; North Fork Kern River, California; and South Fork Kern River, California for inclusion in the wild and scenic system. The bill also would provide for the study of segments of the Henry's Fork River, Idaho; the Farmington River, Connecticut and Massachusetts; and the Great Egg Harbor River, New Jersey, for possible addition to the wild and scenic river system. In addition, a number of technical amendments are made to the National Wild and Scenic Rivers Act to clarify areas of interpretation and improve direction for the managing agencies.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4350 is a composite, in amended form, of many wild and scenic rivers bills that were introduced separately by out distinguished colleagues. H.R. 4350 was introduced by myself and the sponsors of all of those original bills.

Mr. Speaker, we would not be here today if it were not for the leadership of many of our colleagues who saw the need for action to protect some of our outstanding river resources before those valuable national assets were degraded or destroyed. I want to express my thanks to Nancy Johnson who introduced H.R. 2191 and Interior Committee member Sam Gejdenson who worked on this compromise measure to study the West Branch Farmington River; Jerry Huckaby who introduced H.R. 2230, to protect the Saline Bayou; Richard Stallings who introduced H.R. 2569, to study the Henry's Fork River; Hank Brown who introduced H.R. 3547, to protect the Cache la Poudre River; Chip Pashayan who introduced H.R. 3934, to protect the north and south forks of the Kern River and to clarify some language in the general sections of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers Act; Trent Lott who introduced H.R. 4091 to protect Black Creek; and Bill Hughes who introduced H.R. 4293, to study the Great Egg Harbor River.

The Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs has been working over the last year to perfect this legislation and could not have done so without the assistance of these Members and their fine staffs. I particularly wish to commend the outstanding dedication and hard work of Chris Brown and Eric Olson of the American Rivers Conservation Council [ARCC]. The many members of ARCC across the Nation can be proud of these two dedicated people.

Last but not least, I want to thank the Forest Service for its helpful and cooperative efforts to perfect this bill.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill and I urge all of my colleagues to support it.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the chairman of the subcommittee has explained the bill adequately and very eloquently. The Subcommittee on National Parks has been working on components of this bill since last fall. There were several very difficult compromises that needed to be made and I want to commend the chairman for his efforts in working out those problems in the bill.

As did the gentleman, I would also like to commend all the members, the same ones the gentleman mentioned. I will not name them again. Their hard work and spirit of cooperation resulted in the development of what I think is an outstanding omnibus piece of legislation. I was certainly pleased to join them as a cosponsor of the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 4350, the Omnibus Wild and Scenic Rivers bill.

This significant legislation designates segments of the Cache la Poudre River, Colorado; the Saline Bayou, Louisiana; the Black Creek, Mississippi; and the north fork and south fork of the Kern River, California, for inclusion in the Wild and Scenic Rivers System. This legislation will result in an addition of approximately 267 miles to the current National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, which was initiated in 1968 through passage of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act.

The bill also provides for studies of several other river segments for potential addition to the Wild and Scenic Rivers System. These include the Henry's Fork River, Idaho; the West Branch Farmington River, Connecticut and Massachusetts; and the Great Egg Harbor River, New Jersey. A total of 116 miles of rivers will be studied.

Finally, the bill contains several generic amendments to the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act intended to correct some minor technical deficiencies in the act. These changes were recommended by the administering Federal agencies, primarily the U.S. Forest Service, to assist them with implementation of the act.

Mr. Speaker, the Subcommittee on National Parks and Recreation, of which I am the ranking member, has been working on the components of H.R. 4350 since last fall. Several difficult compromises were made along the way and I want to commend Chairman Vento for his efforts in working out the problems associated with the bill. I would also like to commend the Members who sponsored the individual river measures included in the bill. Their hard work and spirit of cooperation resulted in the development of this outstanding omnibus legislation. I was certainly pleased to join with them as a cosponsor of H.R. 4350 when it was recently introduced.

Mr. Speaker, the enactment of this legislation will provide needed protection for some of the Nation's most scenic and valuable recreational river resources. In addition, it will provide some positive changes to the original act. Furthermore, it enjoys broad-based bipartisan support. Therefore, I strongly support H.R. 4350 and urge my colleagues to act favorably upon it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished minority whip, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Lott].

Mr. LOTT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4350, a bill which adds five new river segments to the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System. I am proud, Mr. Speaker, to say that a segment of the Black Creek, in the Fifth Congressional District of Mississippi, is one of the five rivers being proposed for designation today.

The Black Creek is located in the heart of my district in southern Mississippi. It is a unique river with special scenic value, and its incorporation into the Wild and Scenic Rivers System would be the first such designation in the State of Mississippi. I am excited about being a part of the preservation of the Black Creek and of the enhancement of the recreational value of the river by this designation.

Mr. Speaker, section 103 of this bill designates a 21-mile segment of the Black Creek as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System. This 21-mile section is almost totally included in the DeSoto National Forest and 5 miles are within the Black Creek Wilderness. Both the Forest Service and I recommend that the Black Creek segment from Fairley bridge landing upstream to Moody's landing be classified as a scenic river. This designation would have the least impact on private lands while preserving a portion of the river in a scenic condition at a minimum cost.

Mr. Speaker, I want to express my appreciation to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, the gentleman from Arizona, and to the distinguished ranking member of the committee, the gentleman from Alaska. In addition, I would like to thank the National Parks and Recreation Subcommittee chairman and ranking member, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento] and the gentleman from California [Mr. Lagomarsino]. I also want to extend my gratitude to the U.S. Forest Service for their assistance to me in this endeavor.

Mr. Speaker, I am happy to join with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle in support of this omnibus rivers bill. I believe that the bill is worthwhile and I urge all Members to support it.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. Johnson].

Mrs. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this measure and wish to express my sincere appreciation to the chairman of the Interior Committee and the National Parks Subcommittee, Mr. Udall and Mr. Vento, as well as the ranking members, Mr. Young and Mr. Lagomarsino, for their leadership in bringing H.R. 4350 to the floor. I commend you on your hard work and trust that our colleagues will join us in voting for this important bill.

And, although many groups and individuals worked on this bill, I would be remiss if I did not single out my Connecticut colleague, Sam Gejdenson, a member of the committee, for his particular attention to the Farmington River in this bill, as well as Chris Brown and Eric Olson of the American Rivers Conservation Council for their yeoman efforts on behalf of this country's wild, scenic, and recreational rivers.

I am very pleased to say that one of the study rivers in this bill, the west branch of the Farmington River, is in my district in Connecticut and provides thousands of people many hours of fishing, boating, and hiking pleasures and provides a habitat for many species of fish, plant, and animal life only minutes from downtown Hartford.

Mr. Speaker, the Farmington River is one of Connecticut's polished gems. It graces the green and gentle New England countryside with its clear, cascading water, its wooded banks, and its two swiftest gorges, Tariffville Gorge and Satan's Kingdom. One-hundred years ago the Farmington was nearly poisoned by the many paper mills, tanneries, cotton mills, foundries, and sawmills that lined its shores. But today, thanks to enlightened neighbors and the ever-watchful Farmington River Watershed Association, the river is clean and supports a growing population of Atlantic salmon.

The west branch of the Farmington River was included on the Interior Department's January 1981 nationwide rivers inventory with good reason: This river is the largest trout fishery in Connecticut; two State parks and five State forests dot the river corridor; and whitewater canoeing unique to southern New England is enjoyed by thousands of people annually and still more thousands use tubes or kayaks on the river's waters.

The Farmington River serves hundreds of thousands of people throughout southern New England and is unique in its ability to provide a truly scenic and recreational environ so close to a metropolitan area. This river deserves the protections offered by the study called for in the bill and I trust that the other body will agree with the House in approving H.R. 4350.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the committee has approved this legislation and I strongly urge an affirmative vote on passage.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Huckaby], a member of the committee and a sponsor of one of the major components of this designation of the Saline Bayou. He has worked very hard and I want to commend the gentleman for his work with regard to this. I am sure with his continued work we will have success.

Mr. HUCKABY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I rise in strong support of this legislation also and I want to commend the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento] and the gentleman from California [Mr. Lagomarsino] for packaging these various bills that were introduced into what I am sure will be a noncontroversial measure, with the addition of five rivers within the Nation's Wild and Scenic River System.

I am particularly interested in the Saline Bayou which flows through my congressional district. It is unique and it is also flowing through a major national forest and hence it enjoys widespread support in the State of Louisiana, not only from the press, as well as conservation and environmental groups, but in addition to that, virtually all of the State and local elected officials in the area. So I think it is very fitting and proper that we should include this Saline Bayou, one of the last of the remaining wild and free rivers in north Louisiana.

Again I want to commend the chairman for his excellent work in this and I urge its passage.

□ 1345

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Brown], author of one of the significant river portions in the bill.

Mr. BROWN of Colorado. I thank the gentleman from California for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to extend my thanks to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Vento] for his fine leadership in this area. This is an area in which there are sometimes more things thrown at one than there are praises for the fine work one does, but the gentleman from Minnesota has been a forthright leader in this area. He has been dedicated to getting the compromise through, of working with both sides, and the bill that we have before us is the product of that hard work, of his leadership, and the leadership of the gentleman from California, in bringing both sides of the aisle together in a bill that I am convinced is a plus for this Nation.

This bill includes under section 101 a designation of a portion of the Cache La Poudre River in Colorado. With the passage of this legislation, that will become the first wild and scenic river so designated in the State of Colorado. It is with great pride, I think, that I think the entire State will enjoy the beautiful amenities that this river includes.

What I want to point out, Mr. Speaker, is that there is an important aspect of this bill, particularly with regard to the Cache La Poudre. It is a step forward. It is a compromise. But it is a compromise where both sides were listened to, and the best of both ideas combined into a piece of legislation.

This bill enhances the environment and also preserves essential options for water storage. It does both, and I think by doing both it helps all the people of Colorado. It is a place where a compromise helped both sides win, not one side lose and one side win. That is the kind of positive legislation I think this area needs, one that listens, one that is responsive, and one that makes winners out of all Americans.

I might point out that some of the concern that has been expressed about this legislation is with regard to projects that are outside of the designated area, projects like the Trap Lake II project which is located outside of the designated corridor. All this bill simply means is that, that project must stand on its own. This legislation does not preclude the development of Trap Lake II and is not meant to. By standing on its own, it has the opportunity to show that it meets the guidelines that are set forth by existing law.

Mr. Speaker, I would be remiss if I did not note at this time that the portion of the river that is designated as wild is named after Peter H. Dominick, Senator Dominick served a term in this House of Representatives and went on to serve several terms in the United States. No more fitting tribute could be found than one that puts his name on a wild river in the mountains of Colorado. His memory is preserved in a way I think he would have loved.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, as reported by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, H.R. 4350 would deem certain donations of real property interests to qualified organizations as qualifying for a Federal income tax deduction as a qualified charitable conservation contribution.

In order to qualify for a charitable deduction under the Internal Revenue Code, a conservation contribution must be made exclusively for conservation purposes. H.R. 4350 deems conveyances under this act to meet that standard and, consequently to qualify for the tax deduction. Expansions of allowable tax deductions certainly should be considered by the Committee on Ways and Means before being brought before the House.

It is possible that many or all contributions of real property interests under the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act would be qualified conservation contributions. However, the determination of whether the appropriate requirements are satisfied should be made under the Internal Revenue Code and not deemed to be met by some other statute.

Since this bill provides certain tax results regardless of the operation of the Internal Revenue Code, this bill is clearly a revenue measure and, as such, is a matter which falls within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means pursuant to House Rule X.

Mr. Speaker, it is my hope that the jurisdictional concerns of the Committee on Ways and Means regarding this matter can be remedied as this bill proceeds through the legislative process. I must point out that I intend to protect the prerogatives of the Committee on Ways and Means as this bill proceeds. In addition, I intend to pursue appropriate jurisdictional referral of any future legislation which contains similar or identical provisions.

Mrs. KENNELLY. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4350, the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act Amendments, provides for a study of the west branch of the Farmington River in Connecticut and Massachusetts. The Farmington River is nothing less than a treasure, a unique and beautiful resource of our highly urbanized State. Down the Farmington's 70-mile course through Connecticut, we are blessed with beautiful countryside, open spaces and prime farmland, whitewater rapids and gorges, historical buildings, and unique ecological phenomena.

The question how best to manage and preserve this important resource has been a vexing one in the State of Connecticut. The Farmington River is, to put it mildly, a multiuse river. It is an invaluable recreational resource, bordered by two State parks and five State forests. It plays an important role in efforts to restore Atlantic salmon to the Connecticut River basin. Its waters are used to dilute waste water from treatment plants and industrial sources in the valley. Another section of the Farmington is vital for public water supply, providing high quality drinking water to over 400,000 people in the Hartford/New Britain metropolitan areas.

Obviously, many different interests have many different ideas about how to balance these various uses of the river. An environmentally comprehensive management plan for Connecticut's water resources is a real challenge, and one that must be met. With the pressures of population growth, land development, and drought upon us, now is the time to ensure that health, recreational, environmental, and industrial needs will be met in the future working together on the Federal, State and local levels.

The study called for in this bill should be very helpful in grappling with these issues. While I had some reservations about some provisions of the original legislation, I am grateful for the efforts made to address these concerns in H.R. 4350. The bill represents an important component in the development of an environmentally comprehensive policy for a valuable water resource in Connecticut. Whether or not the legislation passed today ever leads to the designation of the west branch for inclusion in the national wild and scenic river system, the study should assist State and local interests in putting together information that might not otherwise be available to protect and manage this valuable resource.

I am pleased that the committee report makes clear that this wild and scenic study is explicitly intended to include an examination of the west branch in the context of Connecticut's water supply needs and that the Secretary of the Interior is instructed to closely coordinate the wild and scenic study with the Connecticut plan, the State of Connecticut's own ongoing comprehensive efforts to develop a master plan for future management of potable water resources. As Connecticut faces problems with chemical contamination of over 800 ground water wells and has suffered a serious drought in the past year, it would be shortsighted to study the west branch without looking at these questions. In addition, the report calls attention to the fact that the Secretary of the Interior has the authority to permit waivers of Federal regulations should water from the west branch be needed at the time of a drought, and this authority should be granted a liberal interpretation in an emergency.

H.R. 4350 establishes an advisory committee to assist the Secretary of the Interior in the development of the wild and scenic study and of the management alternatives for the west branch should it be included in the wild and scenic system. This study committee is a thoughtful innovation for the wild and scenic program and I am pleased it is more broadly representative under H.R. 4350 than had been the case in the original bill. It should also be noted however that the Secretary of the Interior is still expected to seek out a broad cross-section of local public opinion as required under the law so that all those with interests and concerns will be heard.

Mr. THOMAS of California. Mr. Speaker, because some people in California are confusing legislation affecting the Kern River, I want to explain the difference between the bill I cosponsored (H.R. 3934) and the bill I oppose (H.R. 4350) that is before the House of Representatives.

H.R. 3934, a bill which I cosponsored, would have added an area beginning 5,600 feet north of Johnsondale Bridge on the North Fork of the Kern to the Wild and Scenic Rivers System. That is the only area H.R. 3934 affected. H.R. 3934 did not put the South Fork or a stretch of the North Fork between a point north of Johnsondale Bridge and the Tulare-Kern County line into the Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

The bill before the House, H.R. 4350, is a significantly different bill. H.R. 4530 would also make the North Fork above Johnsondale Bridge part of the Wild and Scenic Rivers System. In addition, H.R. 4350 would include the South Fork and the stretch of the North Fork from the vicinity of Johnsondale Bridge to the Tulare-Kern County line in the Wild and Scenic Rivers System. I did not support these changes. I oppose H.R. 4350; it is not the bill I cosponsored.

Mr. LAGOMARSINO. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4350, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE FIGHTING CARDINALS WIN COLLEGE BASKETBALL NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP

(Mr. MAZZOLI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, along with the Kentucky Derby, a trip to the NCAA Final Four basketball championships is becoming another rite of spring for the University of Louisville and its legions of loyal fans.

That rite was celebrated on Monday, March 31, before a capacity crowd in Reunion Arena in Dallas, TX, as the University of Louisville Fighting Cardinals won college basketball's national championship.

The Cards claimed that honor in a hard-fought, tense, emotion-draining duel against a Duke University team previously ranked No. 1 in the Nation.

This victory marks the second national championship for the University of Louisville, the first school to repeat as champion in the decade of the 1980's.

Coach Denny Crum and his able staff, in their customary fashion, assembled for the 1985-86 season a fine group of talented young athletes, blending experience and youth, size and speed. But, most of all, the group had discipline, determination, and devotion to their coaches, their school, and to the game.

This recipe produced another national title for the "Fighting Cardinals."

Those of us who have followed the Cards over the years know the tradition of excellence that has characterized U. of L. basketball under coaches Peck Hickman and John Dromo, but this tradition has been enhanced further under Coach Crum. Six trips to the Final Four under Coach Crum—four in the last 7 years—are convincing evidence to the strength of his coaching talents.

As they seem to do each season, the "Cardiac Cards" start slowly but turn into stretch-running thoroughbreds when tournament time arrives. This year, playing one of the most competitive schedules in the country, the Cards began their stretch drive early. The team jelled and was able, time and again, to rise to the occasion, winning at one point 21 of 22 games—the last 17 in a row—to finish the season 32-7.

Led by a corps of experienced seniors in Milt Wagner, Billy Thompson, and Jeff Hall, the Cards success was a result of exceptional balance and team play. Freshman "Never Nervous" Pervis Ellison, named Most Valuable Player of the Final Four, was a stalwart performer who showed remarkable poise all year. Sophomore Herbert Crook contributed yeoman-like efforts all through the campaign. And, when the need arose, there were always players who came off the bench to pick up the team with clutch performances.

As a native Louisvillian and an alumnus of the University of Louisville's Law School, I take special pride and gratification in representing this great university and its excellent basketball team.

Many congratulations to the University of Louisville for a job well done. These young men have provided us a marvelous winter of enjoyment and allowed us to share the exhilaration of their triumphs and the memories of this championship season.

We, of the Kentucky congressional delegation, are justly proud of our national champion Louisville Cardinals, and we invite Members to meet the Cardinals and their esteemed and greatly successful coach, Denny Crum, at a reception in S-207 (the Mansfield Room) in the Capitol, on Wednesday, April 16, from 3 to 5 p.m.

I am inserting at this point in the RECORD the Cardinals' NCAA Tournament record and the player and staff roster of this outstanding team.

COST-EFFECTIVE PLAN TO RESTRUCTURE THE DEBT OF THE FARM CREDIT SYSTEM

(Mr. THOMAS of Georgia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. THOMAS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing a concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress regarding a cost-effective plan to restructure the debt to the Farm Credit System.

This resolution is designed to encourage an attitude of common sense and forbearance to the actions of the Farm Credit System, instead of the policy of foreclosure that is cutting at the heart of American agriculture, and rural America in general. The impact of the proposals of the resolution would be to put the outstanding loans of the System on a more solid foundation, and ultimately to reduce the prospect of losses to the System and its borrowers.

Last year, thousands of farmers and ranchers throughout the Nation were forced into bankruptcy and foreclosure under the procedures of the Farm Credit System, the Nation's largest agricultural lender. In the process, the system lost an unprecedented $2.7 billion.

Each day, the situation grows worse as more and more of our very best farmers lose the land that they love and have labored on for many years or even many generations. Our national agricultural base is shrinking, and the Farm Credit System itself is threatened with devastation and the prospect of a Federal bailout.

This concurrent resolution is identical to Senate Concurrent Resolution 122, introduced by Senators NICKLES and GRASSLEY last month.

The resolution expresses the sense of Congress that the Farm Credit System should:

One, facilitate and participate in an agricultural loan restructuring program. Two, classify restructured loans as performing loans as long as payments on the restructured loans are being made. Three, permit multiyear amortization of loan losses. Four, compare the cost of foreclosure and the cost of forbearance, and utilize forbearance if it is less costly. Five, consider the use of two-tiered loan restructuring as a viable alternative to farm foreclosures wherever feasible.

The heart of the measure relates to the provision that if the costs associated with foreclosure equal or exceed the cost of restructuring a loan, the the Farm Credit System is encouraged to consider restructuring. When considering restructuring alternatives, the Farm Credit System is encouraged to consider the use of a restructuring program recently proposed by the American Farm Bureau Federation, known as a two-tier debt restructuring program.

Under this approach, portions of the farm debt a borrower can service under existing terms would be placed in the first tier. Debt the borrower is unable to fully service is placed in the second tier. No principal payments would be made on second tier debt while a reduced interest could be charged. As debt in the first tier is payed off, portions of the second tier debt would be transferred to the first tier, keeping its balance constant.

Mr. Speaker, this proposal has one simple objective and one simple impact—it would reduce the number of foreclosures and it would reduce the losses to the Farm Credit System, and potentially, the losses to the taxpayer.

Mr. Speaker, I include the text of the resolution for the information of my colleagues.

The text of the resolution follows:

H. Con. Res. 310

Concurrent resolution to express the sense of Congress with respect to agricultural loan restructuring

Resolved by the House (the Senate concurring), That it is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) the Farm Credit Administration and its associated agencies and lending institutions should take additional regulatory and administrative actions immediately to help alleviate the unusual financial situation facing many thousands of agricultural producers and farm lenders by providing additional time to resolve these problems in the agricultural sector, recognizing that such actions may be in the best interests of both the Farm Credit System and the borrower when there is a reasonable prospect that the borrowers will eventually be able to repay the loan;

(2) the Farm Credit Administration and its associated agencies and lending institutions should—

(A) facilitate and participate in agricultural loan restructuring programs;

(B) classify restructured loans as performing, provided the payments, as restructured, are being made; and

(C) permit, to the extent feasible, the multiyear amortization of agricultural loan losses;

(3) before instituting a proceeding to foreclose a loan made to a borrower, the Farm Credit System and its associated institutions and agencies should determine—

(A) the cost of foreclosure; and

(B) the cost of restructuring the loan, using a two-tier or other system of forbearance;

(4) if the Farm Credit System or any of its associated institutions or agencies determine that the cost of foreclosure of a loan made to a borrower is equal to or exceeds the cost of restructuring the loan, the System should utilize restructuring rather than foreclosure. Such restructuring should include consideration of the use of a two-tier loan structure which is based on the borrower's ability to pay and under which—

(A) there would be a reduced interest rate applicable to the second tier of debt, containing the portion of debt the borrower is unable to fully service;

(B) portions of the outstanding principal balance in the second tier of debt are periodically reassigned to the first tier, containing the serviceable debt, so that the outstanding principal balance in the first tier remains constant; and

(C) an agreement that, during the period of the restructuring, all debt incurred beyond normal operating expenses would be subordinated to the restructured debt.

FROM LIBERTY'S VIEW

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Kleczka] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, it is the inexorable fate of us all that we cannot serve in positions of leadership forever. As generations before us have done, our mortality requires us to prepare our youth for the responsibilities, challenges, and inevitability of succession to leadership.

With this in mind, I am proud to commend to my colleagues the following essay written by a future leader who resides in my district: Mr. Christian Tentoni. Chris is a 10-year-old fourth grader attending Jefferson School in West Allis. His essay, "From Liberty's View," is a work of extraordinary perception and outstanding writing for someone so young. It reflects proudly on his parents, his school, and his community, and it reassures all of us that the future leadership of this great Nation will be left in good hands with people like Chris among our successors. The text of the essay follows:

From Liberty's View

(As Told To Christian T. Tentoni)

> I am having a birthday this summer. I will be 100 years old. It feels like it was yesterday that they took me to Liberty Island. I was a present to America. Some people think I am just a statue and have no job. My job is very important. I have seen many things in my life.
> I was hardly put in place on Liberty Island when people started coming to America to be free. I watched them come here on ships. I saw them carry everything they owned to come here. They all had dreams about how wonderful America would be. They were excited to see me. I could hear them speak to each other in their own languages. They never knew that I was watching them too. The new people were hard workers and helped make our country great. They all studied to be Americans. I was happy that the new people came here to make new lives.
> There were sad times. I was sad when I saw America's young boys line up on ships to fight in World War I. They left America as boys and came back as men. Many men died in the war and many more were injured. I cried inside for the men who did not come home. Nobody saw me cry because I had to be strong. Those men fought for me. Those coming home cheered when they saw me from their ships.
> I watched America's young boys do it all over again in World War II. These boys had to become men real fast. Many of these men were the children of the new people who came here when I did. Some of these men fought for me in World War I. They wanted to fight for their new country. They wanted to fight for freedom. I still lost many more of my children.
> There were two more wars in countries near China. I lost more children who died or are still missing. These boys were grandchildren to the people who came here when I did. They believed in me and fought to help other countries become free. I must stay here for them.
> The years I have been outside have made me weak. Parts of me were falling apart. I started to think that nobody cared about me anymore. Many of you remembered me and sent men to fix me. I want to look good for my birthday. I still have my job to do. The workers will finish fixing me soon. People gave money to get me repaired. They forget the children who gave their lives to keep all Americans free. I will keep waiting for them with my new torch lit. I will not forget.

$42 MILLION MORE FOR CONGRESSIONAL MAILING

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Walker] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, within the next few days, the House is going to be taking up a supplemental appropriations bill. In other words, once again we are going to have add-on spending over and above that which we have committed ourselves to in appropriations bills that were passed last year. Once again we go through the budget-busting that Congress has become so famous for and has resulted in us overspending the last 5 years' budgets by a total of $160 billion.

When we want to know where deficits come, from, they come from right here. Congress votes for them by voting in spending over and above that which we budgeted for year after year after year. We are the cause of deficits.

We have a supplemental appropriation that will be out here in the next few days that will be another add-on to deficits and there is one particular provision of that which I think the American people are particularly interested in and that we ought to deal with, and that is an amendment to spending within the supplemental that would add $42 million for mailing costs for the Congress. In other words, we are saying that we want to spend another $42 million over and above that which was previously appropriated to allow ourselves to do mailings out to the country.

At a time when we are attempting to do something about controlling Federal deficits, the very least we might be able to do around here is control our own mailing expenses. Let us understand that Congress did not exactly underfund mailing to begin with. We funded $95 million worth of spending originally in the bill. Actually, we had $100 million of spending in the bill in the last session of Congress, but then when Gramm-Rudman came in that was cut back by about $5 million, so we ended up with a little bit better than $95 million of mailing expenses that Congress can incur.

Let us understand how much money that is. That means for every Member of the House and the other body, there is $175,000 for mailing. That means that if here in the House if we mailed all six newsletters that we are allowed each year, and not all of us mail six newsletters, but if we did mail all six we would spend $102,000 of that $175,000. That still would leave $73,000 for mailing. Most people would think that you could probably get through the year spending $73,000 over and above that which you spent for your newsletter, because what that means is, that is 292,000 pieces of first-class mail that every Member of this body could send out. That amounts to 1,500 pieces of mail every working day that Members of Congress can send out of their offices.

It seems to me that that is plenty of money, and yet we are going to come back here, probably some time next week, with a proposal to spend $42 million more for mail; in other words, to have about $95,000 more for every Member of this body to spend on mail in the next few months.

I think that is an outrage, and I think the very least that we ought to be doing is spending only the money that we originally appropriated for mailing expenses in this particular year. We can live with what we have and we ought to live with what we have.

Therefore, I will be offering an amendment when that supplemental appropriation comes to the floor to strike the entire $42 million in spending that is in that bill for additional franking expenses. I am going to go to the Committee on Rules and I am going to try to make certain that that amendment will be in order when it comes to the floor, and I want to take this time this afternoon to assure the Members of this body that when that amendment is offered on the floor and after it is debated on the floor that we will, in fact, be voting on that particular amendment. I think it is entirely appropriate that the American people should know who among us will stand up and say, "Let us get along with what we originally appropriated for mailing expenses; let us not add $42 million more to the deficit of the country."

UNIFORM HEALTH-CARE INFORMATION ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. English] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws recently approved and recommended for enactment by the States a Uniform Health-Care Information Act. This is a significant accomplishment, and I want to call it to the attention of my colleagues and the States that will be asked to consider this proposal.

The recent history of efforts to provide legislative protection for medical records dates back to the 1977 report of the Privacy Protection Study Commission. The Privacy Commission, which was established under the Privacy Act of 1974, found that the control over information in medical records once exercised by medical care providers has been greatly diluted as a result of developments within the medical profession, Government, and elsewhere. The Commission recommended that Federal legislation be enacted to protect medical record privacy.

In April 1979, President Jimmy Carter endorsed that recommendation. President Carter stated that threats to personal privacy inherent in modern information practices are not the product of any plan to invade the privacy of individuals. Information systems have developed naturally with the growth of the economy, the expansion of public and private institutions, the mobility of citizens, and the development of computers. As essential as these facilities are, President Carter warned that they can be misused to create a dangerously intrusive society.

Bills to implement the recommendations of the Privacy Protection Study Commission were considered during the 96th Congress in both the House and the Senate. Committees in both Houses reported out similar bills. While there appeared to be general agreement on the inadequacy of existing guidance on the proper use of medical records, the legislation failed to be enacted. One of the main arguments used against Federal legislation was that regulation of medical records practices should be left to the States.

This is one reason why the new proposal of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws is so important. Medical records will not acquire the needed protections unless the States take action to pass comprehensive laws regulating the record keeping practices of health-care providers. Laws enacted many years ago providing a privilege for medical information are woefully inadequate in today's computerized society. Only a few States have modern laws that adequately address the medical record keeping problems that confront today's physicians and patients.

The proposed Uniform State law includes all of the basic elements of a privacy law. The proposal would regulate the disclosure of health-care information by health-care providers, both with and without the consent of the patient; provide rules allowing patients to examine, copy, and correct records; require health-care providers to notify patients of information practices; and include both civil and criminal sanctions for violations of privacy protections.

It is not an easy task to write privacy laws because there are so many different interests that must be balanced. I congratulate the committee that prepared the Uniform Health-Care Information Act for doing such a fine job. The committee was chaired by K. King Burnett of Salisbury, MD. The reporters for the committee were Robert R. Belair, Washington, DC, and Alan R. Bennett, Washington, DC. Members of the committee were Harvey Bartle III, Philadelphia, PA; Geoffrey D. Cant, Annapolis, MD; Timothy J. Cronin, Jr., Boston, MA; Michael Franck, Lansing, MI; Charles W. Joiner, Ann Arbor, MI; John W. Wagster, Nashville, TN; William H. Wood, Harrisburg, PA; Carlyle C. Ring, Jr., Alexandria, VA; Phillip Carroll, Little Rock, AR; William J. Pierce, Ann Arbor, MI; and Elmer R. Oettinger, Chapel Hill, NC.

Copies of the proposed legislation are available from the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, 645 North Michigan Avenue, Suite 510, Chicago, IL 60611.

GREEK INDEPENDENCE DAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Annunzio] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, Greek Independence Day has a special meaning for Greek-Americans in this country, for 165 years ago, on March 25, 1821, Greek patriots raised the flag of revolt and began a series of uprisings against their Turkish oppressors.

This flag of revolt was blessed by Bishop Germanos of Palaeion Patron, at the monastery of Aghia Lavra, and was followed by 7 years of fierce fighing during which a handful of rebels were able to contain the combined forces of the Sultan's Ottoman Empire. These Greek patriots fought courageously and valiantly against the might of the Turks and for the victories they were able to obtain they suffered many losses and endured much tragedy.

The confrontations at Valtetsi, Dervenaia, as well as Missolonghi, where Lord Byron fought and died, rank among the most glorious pages of Greek history, and the exploits of the Greek Navy, under Miaoulis, Kanaris, and Sachtouris, inspired the peoples of Europe, who finally brought pressure upon their governments to intervene in the fight and compel the Sultan to recognize Greek independence.

In the United States feelings ran high in support of the Greeks. John Adams remarked:

> My old imagination is kindling into a kind of missionary enthusiasm for the cause of the Greeks.

Also, in an address to Congress, President Monroe expressed the feelings of the United States when he said:

> Genius and delicacy in the arts, daring and heroism in action, unselfish patriotism, enthusiastic zeal, and devotion to public and private liberty, all these are connected with the name of ancient Greece. It is natural, therefore, that their contest should arouse the sympathy of the entire United States.

On October 20, 1827, at the battle of Navarino, the Turkish fleet was finally defeated and destroyed by the combined elements of the British, French, and Russian navies. This victory gave the Greeks additional incentives in their fight against Turkish oppression, and on September 14, after many centuries of foreign rule, freedom for the Greeks was regained by the Treaty of Adrianople of 1829 and later by the London Protocol of 1830.

Mr. Speaker, the idea of democracy, born in ancient Greece over 2,000 years ago, has prevailed and has inspired other nations in their struggle against persecution. The contributions made and still being made to the growth and greatness of the United States by Greeks who have chosen to make their home in our country continue, and it is a pleasure to extend greetings to Greek-Americans in the 11th Congressional District of Illinois which I am honored to represent, and Americans of Greek descent all across our Nation, on the occasion of Greek Independence Day. Let us celebrate the precious heritage of freedom our two countries have shared in the century and a half of genuine friendship between the people of America and the people of Greece.

RESIGNATION OF RUSSELL ROURKE AS SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Montgomery] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I was disappointed to learn today that Russell Rourke has resigned as Secretary of the Air Force. I have known Russ Rourke for a number of years and can tell you that he will be missed by the Department of Defense.

Though he was Air Force Secretary for only a short time, Russ has dedicated a great part of his life to the military and to the service of this country. He was assistant secretary of defense for legislative affairs and was a great help to me in that capacity. Russ has a vast knowledge of defense issues and he knows how things work here on Capitol Hill. That is why he has been so effective in his dealings with Congress.

Russ Rourke is a great American and a good friend. I am sorry to see him leave Government service. He has made significant contributions in the effort to improve our national defense. He will be missed.

TRUTH IN NEGOTIATIONS AMENDMENTS OF 1986

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Spratt] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing legislation to enhance the effectiveness of the Truth in Negotiations Act of 1962.

The Truth in Negotiations Act [TINA] was designed to prevent firms from reaping excessive profits on contracts with the Department of Defense, by providing Government negotiators with accurate up-to-date information on contract proposals. However, a series of court decisions over the past decade has limited the act's applicability and frustrated its original intent. This bill will correct those decisions and restore the act as the Government's most effective weapon against excess profits on defense contracts.

The Truth in Negotiations Act was passed in the wake of several General Accounting Office reports which disclosed that defense contractors were making excessive profits on negotiated, sole-source contracts. Sole-source contractors often have a monopoly on plant and equipment and technical know-how, and also on production cost data. Without competition, and without legal access to current cost data, the Government had to rely before TINA on good faith negotiations with the contractor to ensure the lowest possible price.

Contractors had little incentive to disclose the most accurate, current, and complete information concerning contract prices. In many cases, such cost data would have indicated that the contractors would actually incur lower material, labor and other costs than they were using to support their contract pricing proposals. As a result, negotiated prices were often too high and contractors' profits were in some cases excessive.

The Truth in Negotiations Act was designed to give the Government the same cost data the contractor uses when negotiating contracts. To some extent, it was to be a substitute for competition on these contracts. The law requires contractors to submit a certified statement of current, accurate, and complete cost data on contract proposals valued at more than $100,000. It also authorizes the Government to audit the records of these contractors to find out whether they possessed, but failed to submit, better and more accurate cost and pricing data. Under the law, procurement officials can reduce the contract price or recover overpayments when they find that overstated cost data was submitted to support a contract offer.

During the last 10 years, decisions made by the Armed Services Board of Contract Appeals [ASBCA] have weakened the effect of the Truth in Negotiations Act.

In one case (Whittaker Corporation, ASBCA No. 17267, 74–2 BCA 10,938), ASBCA denied a refund under the Truth in Negotiations Act by requiring the Government to prove it had no knowledge of the accurate data. The ASBCA stated that the Government's burden of proof is not satisfied merely by showing that disclosure was not made during negotiations. The Government bears the added burden of proving the disclosure was not made to other Government personnel prior to the negotiations.

In another decision (Universal Restoration, Inc., ASBCA No. 22833, 82–1 BCA 15,762), ASBCA found that a contract is not subject to price adjustment if the contractor failed to disclose all cost information, when the Government should have known the data was not disclosed. In this particular case, the Board concluded that Government officials should have known that if quantity purchased was increased, the contractor's overhead rate per unit of output would decline.

Other decisions allow a contractor who has violated the Truth in Negotiations Act to escape the act's consequences because of the sole-source nature of the procurement, the superior bargaining position held by a contractor, or the "bottom-line" form of negotiation. For example, the Board decided in one case (American Machine & Foundry Company, ASBCA No. 15037, 74–1 BCA 10,409) that the contractor's failure to disclose pricing data may not have caused an increase in price because of the firm's superior bargaining position. This decision adds another complication to enforcing TINA, which the text of the statute does not call for and legislative intent does not support.

Another decision by the Court of Claims (Cutler-Hammer, Inc. v. U.S., 416 F.2d 1306 (Ct.Cl. 1969)) concluded that price reduction required by overstatement of some costs could be offset by underestimates of other costs. There is no indication in the statute that Congress intended to allow offsets to defective pricing submissions. Moreover, TINA imposes on the contractor a duty to develop current, accurate and complete cost data, on which the Government can rely. By allowing the contractor an offset for underestimated costs, the court has lessened the contractor's duty to certify accurately and reliably its estimated costs. These and similar decisions have reduced the act's effect and made it much more difficult for Government negotiators to obtain fair and reasonable prices on contracts.

Exceptions created by the case law also discouraged Government officials from pursuing defective pricing cases. Until recent prodding from Congress and the Department of Defense Inspector General, the Defense Contract Auditing Agency [DCAA] gave low priority to conducting defective pricing audits. Less than 5 percent of DCAA's resources were devoted to such audits. Furthermore, procurement officers have often settled defective pricing cases for as little as 10 to 20 cents on each dollars of inaccurate data uncovered by DCAA.

Until last year, the Truth in Negotiations Act did not contain incentives to encourage contractors to settle defective pricing cases in a timely manner or to discourage them from submitting incomplete or inaccurate contract proposals. Contractors who submitted defective pricing data in support of a contract have often been paid many months or years before the contracting officers are able to settle their cases.

As a consequence, contractors who submit defective pricing data have long-term use of the taxpayers' money, and until recently, paid no interest for the use of that money or penalties for submitting defective pricing data. Clearly, contractors had every incentive not to settle cases. For example, the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee uncovered one case in which a contractor agreed that it owed the Government $2 million in overcharges and yet it took almost 3 years to reach a final payment settlement. The contractor paid no fines or interest charges during the time before the case was resolved.

This situation changed with the enactment of the Defense Procurement Improvement Act of 1985 (title IX of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1986). Section 934 of this act makes contractors who receive overpayments resulting from defective pricing data liable for interest on the amount of such overpayment. Interest charges are incurred from the date of the overpayment to the contractor to the date the Government is repaid. This section also provides that if the contractor knowingly submitted inaccurate, incomplete, or noncurrent data, he must also pay a penalty equal to the amount of the overpayment.

The bill I offer today would codify this currently free-standing provision into the Truth in Negotiations Act in United States Code, title 10, section 2306.

In addition, my bill would:

Eliminate offsets when the contractor underpriced a portion of his proposal;

Require cost and pricing data to be provided only to the contracting officer or his negotiating representative; and

Exclude the following defenses for submission of defective pricing data:

The price would not have been modified because the contractor was in a sole-source bargaining position;

The price would not have been modified because the contractor was in a superior bargaining position;

The contracting officer should have known the data submitted were defective;

The contract was for sale to a foreign government;

The subcontractor furnished cost data after the conclusion of an agreement;

The contracting officer negotiated only the bottom line (total cost) of the contract; and

The prime contractor or subcontractor did not prepare and submit a certificate as required under the act.

These minor changes will enhance the effectiveness of the Truth in Negotiations Act. The amendments are supported by the DOD Inspector General and received a thorough hearing before the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs. The House Armed Services Panel on Acquisition Policy, of which I am a member, is scheduled to hold hearings on these changes to TINA next week.

Although this bill would add to the use of TINA, it could reduce the need for bureaucratic oversight by making it unnecessary to reestablish the Renegotiations Board, which Congress terminated in 1979. In the opinion of the DOD Inspector General, a strengthened Truth in Negotiations Act, supported by good defective pricing audits, would be much more effective in eliminating excessive profits than any of the renegotiation proposals.

For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this bill.

EMERGENCY ASSISTANCE FOR DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS AMENDMENTS OF 1986

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York [Mr. LaFalce] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. LaFALCE. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation that represents an important and necessary step in our continuing efforts to resolve the serious financial problems facing many members of our Nation's thrift industry and certain sectors of the banking industry as well.

The changing economic environment of the 1980's has caused many financial institutions to experience serious, and sometimes irreperable, financial difficulties. In response to these problems and the concerns of bank and thrift regulators, Congress enacted the Garn-St Germain Depository Institutions Act of 1982. That legislation authorized, on a temporary basis, the FDIC and the FSLIC to permit interstate acquisitions of failing thrift institutions and failed banks by other healthy financial institutions. It also authorized the FDIC and FSLIC to purchase net worth certificates from ailing thrift institutions in order to bolster their net worth and allow thrifts time to restructure their financial portfolios and return to profitability.

Both the emergency acquisition procedures and Net Worth Certificate Program authorized by the Garn-St Germain Act are due to expire on April 15, 1986. Unless these vital provisions are renewed by Congress, the FDIC and the FHLBB will lose two absolutely essential tools that enable them to deal more effectively with troubled financial institutions so as to minimize the costs both to their deposit insurance funds and to the communities in which those troubled financial institutions are located.

Mr. Speaker, the bill I am introducing today would extend for 3 additional years the existing Net Worth Certificate Program with one technical change. It would also amend aspects of the emergency acquisition procedures enacted by the Garn-St Germain Act and would make the emergency acquisition procedures permanent, with the exception of a special procedure for agricultural banks which would sunset 3 years after enactment.

The existing Net Worth Certificate Program partially offsets a thrift institution's losses and is designed to bolster its net worth. The program works as follows: A thrift approved to participate in the program gives its insuring agency—either the FDIC in the case of a savings bank or FSLIC in the case of a savings and loan association—a capital instrument called a "net worth certificate." In return, the insuring agency gives the thrift a promissory note for the same amount. The exchange of a promissory note and a net worth certificate is similar to the idea of raising new capital through the sale of stock. If the thrift eventually fails and is liquidated, the promissory note from the regulator is available as an asset to satisfy the claims of creditors.

Mr. Speaker, it is essential that Congress act to extend the Net Worth Certificate Program for an additional 3 years. Both the FDIC and the FHLBB, as well as thrift industry representatives, have recommended extension of this valuable program. One of the principal benefits of the program is that it provides the FDIC and FSLIC with increased flexibility in dealing with troubled thrift institutions so that they do not have to immediately close a failing thrift or arrange for a fire sale of a troubled institution.

Moreover, the Net Worth Program has the added advantage in these times of budget austerity and strains on our deposit insurance funds of not requiring any immediate cash outlays by the regulators since no cash is involved in a net worth transaction unless a participating institution is actually liquidated. As of this date, neither the FDIC nor FSLIC have had to cash out any outstanding net worth certificates. In sum, the Net Worth Program provides weakened thrifts with an essential commodity they need to restructure their operations for survival in a changing, deregulated banking environment, and that commodity is time. It also provides regulators increased flexibility over the short run in order for them to arrange for longer term solutions to thrift industry problems.

In July of 1985, the GAO issued a report which may have cast some doubt on the effectiveness of the Net Worth Certificate Program. In particular, the GAO report pointed out that thrift institutions that are receiving net worth certificates continued to lose money in 1984 while the rest of the thrift industry had begun to show a slight profit.

In my view, it is not surprising that thrift institutions that were troubled enough to qualify for net worth certificates should still be showing losses in 1984, only 2 years after the Net Worth Program was enacted into law, and even less time after FSLIC and the FDIC had established the administration of their programs and approved applications for net worth certificates. Moreover, the figures for the first three quarters of 1985 provide heartening news about thrifts in the Net Worth Program. During the first quarter of 1985, 34 percent of the net worth certificate institutions were making a profit. By the second quarter, a full 59 percent were profitable. By the third quarter, 60 percent of the net worth certificate thrifts were making a profit. In sum, there is evidence that the Net Worth Program is working and that it has the potential to help ailing thrifts work through their problems and return to profitability.

In light of these facts, it simply does not make sense for Congress to allow the Net Worth Certificate Program to expira. If interest rates increase sharply in the future, the Net Worth Program is an inexpensive way of helping the thrift industry manage during a period of high interest rates. If the Net Worth Program expires, the thrift regulators would be left without a valuable tool which enables them to postpone—and quite probably avoid—more drastic and costly measures to help ailing thrifts. In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, it is very important that Congress act quickly to renew the Net Worth Certificate Program. The program provides many important benefits to thrifts and regulators, and it is a solution that requires no initial cash outlays. In addition, it does not reduce the regulators' authority and flexibility in disposing of problem thrifts if the opportunity to do so exists. Rather, it provides the regulators with a vehicle to temporarily postpone immediate and costly measures to help ailing thrifts.

My bill would make one change in the statutory definition of a thrift qualified to receive net worth certificates. Specifically, under current law, a thrift with low net worth must have incurred losses for two consecutive quarters in order to be eligible for net worth certificates. My bill would continue these existing eligibility requirements, except that it would provide that the determination of a thrift's losses in determining eligibility for net worth certificates should be made without taking into account extraordinary or unusual transactions by a thrift that may give it a temporary paper profit for one quarter. This change is necessary to enable thrifts that engage in one-time transactions for liquidity purposes to still qualify for net worth certificates since their underlying financial condition has not actually improved.

The other provisions of my bill would amend the emergency acquisition procedures of the Garn-St Germain Act with the goal of encouraging more healthy financial institutions to acquire problem banks and thrifts. Amending existing law to promote such acquisitions is a most cost-effective way of infusing essential capital into troubled financial institutions. Moreover, it is a solution that has been advocated by every Federal bank and thrift regulator in recent testimony before the House Banking Committee on ways to solve the financial problems affecting our financial institutions.

Existing law—which expires on April 15, 1986—contains a number of requirements which impose unnecessary and burdensome requirements which have had the unintended effect of discouraging acquisitions of troubled financial institutions. The first of these, which is one of the most burdensome for bank and thrift regulators, is the so-called required bidding order that regulators must follow before they may approve acquisitions of failing thrifts and failed banks under the Garn-St Germain Act's emergency acquisition procedures. Under the required bidding order, FSLIC and the FDIC are required to approve bids for ailing thrifts and banks using the following priorities: First, depository institutions of the same type in the same State; second, institutions of the same type in different States; third, institutions of different types in the same State; fourth, institutions of different types in different States. Also, if the qualified offer presenting the lowest expense to FSLIC or the FDIC is from an institution that is not an instate institution of the same type as the financially ailing bank or thrift, the regulators are required to solicit additional offers from any such instate offeror whose original bid was within 15 percent or $15 million, whichever is less, of the initial lowest acceptable offer.

As I mentioned above, both the FHLBB and the FDIC have advocated the elimination of these required bidding priorities established by the Garn-St Germain Act. Eliminating these mandated bidding preferences will increase the regulators' flexibility to negotiate emergency acquisitions of thrifts and banks and will result in at least two concrete benefits. First, it will allow more creative solutions to the problems of troubled financial institutions, which will benefit the regulators both administratively and financially. Second, it will encourage qualified and much needed capital sources, both instate and out of state, to participate more actively and at an earlier stage in the restructuring of troubled institutions.

In recent testimony before the Financial Institutions Subcommittee of the House Banking Committee, the FHLBB noted that the Garn-St Germain Act's required bidding and rebidding process contains a clear bias against out-of-state bidders which often discourages them from participating in bidding conferences at all. Discouraging a large block of financial institutions from participating in such bidding conferences precludes many potential offers presenting the lowest expense to FSLIC. These arguments apply equally to the FDIC, which must use the same bidding process when arranging emergency acquisitions of failed banks and failing thrifts under its jurisdiction. Again, these four-tiered bidding priorities have perhaps had the unintended effect of slowing down the process of eliciting the best possible bids—or even any bids—for financially troubled thrifts and banks at the earliest possible time. Such dilatory and discouraging requirements are the last things Congress should continue to burden the regulators with during a time when they need to act as quickly as possible to find creative and workable solutions for ailing banks and thrifts.

A number of other requirements of the Garn-St Germain Act's emergency acquisition procedures have also had the effect of discouraging acquisitions of problem depository institutions by healthy ones, thereby contributing significantly to the costs FSLIC and the FDIC must assume in dealing with ailing institutions. First, existing law permits acquisitions of banks under the emergency acquisition procedures only if they have assets of $500 million or more and if they are already closed.

According to figures available from the FDIC, as of December 31, 1984, there were only 484 banks and trust companies out of a total of 14,496 in this country with assets of $500 million or more. This means that 14,012 banks and trust companies, many of which are located in small communities without many banking alternatives, are completely excluded from the existing emergency acquisition procedures of the Garn-St Germain Act. Not allowing most of our banks to be acquired through emergency acquisition procedures results in signficantly higher costs to FDIC in dealing with failed and failing banks. In addition, permitting banks to fail, rather than arranging for their acquisition by other financially viable institutions, can cause devestating effects to communities served by the failed banks. These secondary effects of bank failures include business contraction in a community, unemployment, and the loss of banking services.

Another serious problem with the existing emergency acquisition provisions is that they only permit acquisitions of banks after they have actually closed. No less costly acquisition can be arranged by the FDIC when a bank is in imminent danger of closing, but has not yet closed.

Due in large part to the extremely restrictive nature of the Garn-St Germain emergency acquisition procedures for banks, only one interstate acquisition of a bank has been arranged under the emergency acquisition provisions since they were enacted in 1982. As we all know, there have been many more than a single bank failure since 1982. In 1985 alone, 118 insured commercial banks failed.

Mr. Speaker, to address these serious deficiencies in existing law which have had the unintended effect of contributing to the financial drain on the FDIC's resources and disrupting local communities, my bill would amend existing law to permit emergency acquisitions of banks that are either in danger of closing or closed and would lower the asset threshold level for ailing bank acquisitions from $500 million to $100 million. Both these essential changes will permit bank regulators more flexibility to arrange for less costly acquisitions of failing banks by healthy financial institutions.

Nowhere are banking industry's problems currently felt more urgently than by banks that lend primarily to the energy and agricultural sectors of our economy. Over the past several months, the economics of the world's energy markets have changed radically. The spot price for west Texas intermediate crude oil has fallen from $31 a barrel to about $12 a barrel today. These declines in oil prices have already begun to cause significant problems for many banks located in oil and gas producing States. Although the extent of these problems cannot yet be determined with precision, it is clear that the declining energy economy is having adverse effects on many industries that have ties to oil producers, including the banking industry. The changes my bill makes to the emergency bank acquisition provisions of the Garn-St Germain Act represent an important step in providing bank regulators with the additional flexibility they need to arrange for long-term solutions to the urgent problems which will be faced by many of our energy banks in the near future.

Another area in which a great many of our Nation's banks are experiencing severe financial difficulties is in the agricultural sector of our economy. The condition of many agricultural banks has seriously deteriorated due to their heavy concentration in farm lending and the growing credit quality problems in that sector.

As of mid-year 1985, there were about 3,900 agricultural banks—defined typically as a bank with 25 percent or more of its loan portfolio in agricultural loans—in our country. Most of them are located in the Midwestern States. These banks typically are very small, with average assets of only $28 million. Indeed, only seven agricultural banks had assets in excess of $200 million.

Moreover, according to a recent study by the FDIC on farm banks, the problems faced by our agricultural banks continue to grow more serious and are likely to worsen over the next 2 years. For example, the FDIC noted in its study that a full 23 percent of all farm debt may be in some near-term danger of liquidation, while another 22 percent is moving in that direction. According to the FDIC, agricultural bank failures as a percentage of total commercial bank failures have grown from 20 percent in 1982 to over 50 percent last year. While nonagricultural banks failed at about the same pace in 1985 as in 1984, agricultural bank failures increased significantly. In 1985, 62 of our country's agricultural banks failed with average assets of only about $21 million. Finally, the FDIC disclosed that, at yearend 1985, nearly 40 percent of problem commercial banks were agricultural banks, an increase from 24 percent only 2 years earlier.

Most indications are that farm bank problems will continue during 1986 and 1987. Estimates of additional losses on total farm loans under current conditions range from about $7 billion up to $20 billion over a 3- to 4-year period. Thus, it is likely that a substantial amount of losses have yet to be realized by farm banks. The FDIC estimates that agricultural bank failures could range from roughly 70 to 150 in 1986, and from 60 to 150 in 1987.

Something needs to be done to help these ailing farm banks and the communities they serve. While the Federal Reserve Board, the FDIC, and the OCC has recently initiated much-needed policies designed to ease the financial strains on agricultural banks and their borrowers through capital forbearance and the relaxation of reporting requirements for restructured debt, more needs to be done to help seriously ailing farm banks and their communities.

The existing Garn-St Germain Act emergency acquisition procedures virtually preclude emergency acquisition of agricultural banks since they are so small, with average assets of only about $28 million. Even under my bill, which would lower the threshold level for emergency bank acquisitions to $100 million, the vast majority of agricultural banks would be excluded from the general bank acquisition provision. For this reason, my bill would permit special treatment for emergency acquisition of agricultural banks on a temporary basis. Specifically, my bill would permit emergency acquisitions of agricultural banks without regard to their asset size for 3 years from the date of the bill's enactment. As is the case for all commercial banks under my bill, agricultural banks could be acquired if they were either "in danger of closing" or actually closed. These changes will encourage takeovers of problem agricultural banks by healthy financial institutions, reducing the adverse effects of farm bank problems and failures. Through such acquisitions, more communities will be able to retain their existing banking services, and the FDIC will have to become less involved in the financial affairs of farm communities.

Finally, my bill would amend the Garn-St Germain Act's emergency acquisition procedures to also encourage more acquisitions of problem thrift institutions by profitable depository institutions. Under current law, FSLIC may arrange acquisition of failed and failing thrifts if FSLIC also determines that a general situation exists throughout the thrift industry threatening the stability of FSLIC due to problems in a significant number of institutions.

My bill would change the existing requirements to permit emergency acquisitions of thrifts before they are in imminent danger of failing and without requiring a determination by FSLIC that general adverse conditions exist in the thrift industry as a whole. Specifically, under my bill, FSLIC could arrange an emergency thrift acquisition of a particular thrift that is either failed or danger of failing, or if FSLIC determines that severe financial conditions affecting that particular thrift pose a risk to the FSLIC insurance fund.

Mr. Speaker, both the thrift industry and its regulators have expressed their support for initiatives that will make acquisitions of problem thrift institutions more attractive to healthy financial institutions. One way to encourage such acquisitions is to permit thrift to be acquired before they are in such bad financial condition that they are in imminent danger of failing, as I am recommending. An added benefit of the change I am proposing is that it could potentially save FSLIC a great deal of money since arranging acquisitions is much less costly to FSLIC than is paying off depositors and trying to sell the assets of a failed thrift.

The change I am recommending is also a particularly timely one in light of information released in a recent GAO report indicating that nearly 1,300 out of 3,180 FSLIC-insured institutions were in a weakened condition when judged under conventional standards of financial strength. The assets of these institutions totaled approximately $433.3 billion, and they comprised a full 42.8 percent of the industry's total assets. While it is unlikely that all of these weakened thrifts will require financial assistance from FSLIC to resolve their problems, Chairman Gray of the FHLBB recently estimated that about 8 percent of FSLIC-insured institutions should be considered potential problem cases for FSLIC. In these times of severe strain on dwindling FSLIC reserves, it is absolutely essential that Congress act to provide FSLIC with the maximum flexibility it needs to arrange for resolutions of the problems faced by many of our thrift institutions. My bill would grant FSLIC such additional flexibility.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I urge Congress to enact the legislation I have introduced today. The emergency acquisition powers of the Garn-St Germain Act of 1982 were enacted to grant industry regulators more avenues to cope with the incipient crises among depository institutions, particularly thrifts, that the country faced in 1982. Although the crisis has subsided somewhat in the thrift industry due in part to falling interest rates and portfolio restructuring, the problems faced by our Nation's agricultural and energy banks continue to mount. In addition, there are still many difficulties facing the thrift industry and its insurance funds. These continuing problems argue strongly for extension of the Garn-St Germain Act's Net Worth Certificate Program and for continuation of its emergency acquisition procedures with the modifications I have proposed to them. Only through the enactment of my legislation, permitting a more flexible acquisition policy for troubled banks and thrifts, can more bidders be found for these problem institutions. In these times of budget cutting and high deficits, it is not easy to find solutions to problems that cost the Government little or no money. My bill is just such a solution.

My bill does not contain a comprehensive solution to every problem facing financial institutions. Rather, it represents a step in the right direction toward solving these problems. The Federal regulators have taken some steps on their own to ameliorate the difficulties faced by agricultural banks, and I applaud these efforts. However, more still needs to be done. I look forward to working with the Federal regulators and other members of the House and Senate Banking Committees in order to enact meaningful reforms that will encourage infusions of capital by healthy financial institutions into those institutions that are experiencing financial difficulties.

AMENDMENTS

Under clause 6 of rule XXIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H.R. 4332

By Mr. TORRICELLI:

—At the end of the bill add the following new section:

SEC. 16. PROHIBITION ON TRANSFER OF HANDGUNS TO JUVENILES.

Section 922 is amended by adding after the subsection added by section 2(b) the following:

"(o)(1) It shall be unlawful for any person (other than a licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, licensed dealer, or licensed collector) to transfer or deliver a handgun to any individual who the person knows or has reasonable cause to believe is less than twenty-one years of age.

"(2) Paragraph (1) does not prohibit the loan of a handgun to an individual for the purpose of that individual's engaging in a lawful sporting activity under the supervision of an individual who has attained the age of twenty-one years.".

By Mr. TRAFICANT:

—Page 14, line 6, insert "OR FIREARM USE IN ESPECIALLY SERIOUS DRUG TRAFFICKING CRIME" after "CRIME".

Page 14, line 12, insert "or if the drug trafficking crime is an especially serious drug trafficking crime" after "machinegun".

Page 14, line 16, insert "or if the drug trafficking crime is an especially serious drug trafficking crime" after "machinegun".

Page 14, line 18, strike out "DEFINITION" and insert "DEFINITIONS" in lieu thereof.

(3) Section 924(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after the paragraph added by section 10(a) the following:

"(3) As used in this subsection, the term 'especially serious drug trafficking crime' means a drug trafficking crime that involves—

"(A) 2 or more kilograms of a narcotic drug described in subparagraph (C), (D), or (E) of section 102(17) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802(17));

"(B) 1 or more kilograms of a narcotic drug in schedule I or II in the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.) that is not described in subparagraph (C), (D), or (E) of section 102(17) of such Act;

"(C) 1 kilogram or more of phencyclidine; or

"(D) 25 grams or more of lysergic acid diethylamide.".

By Mr. ZSCHAU:

—Page 18, strike out line 4 and all that follows through line 16 on page 19.

By Mrs. COLLINS:

(Amendment to Volkmer amendment in the nature of a substitute.)

—At the end insert the following:

SEC. . HANDGUN REGISTRATION.

(a) States Required to Establish Handgun Registration.—

(1) Not later than two years after the date of the enactment of this Act, each State shall establish a State handgun registration system.

(2) Each State shall design the State handgun registration system required under paragraph (1) so that—

(A) such system will contain an easily retrievable record identifying—

(i) the possessor of each handgun possessed by a resident of such State; and

(ii) such handgun; and

(B) suitable penalties (including mandatory imprisonment for a period of not less than 15 years) are imposed on persons possessing handguns in violation of the requirement of registration.

(3) each State shall maintain the State handgun registration system so established so that such system reasonably accomplishes such system's purposes.

(b) Federal Handgun Registration System in Noncomplying States.—

(1) The Attorney General shall declare that the Federal handgun registration system established under subsection (c) applies in any State the Attorney General determines, after opportunity for a hearing on the record, has not substantially complied with a requirement of subsection (a).

(2) Such Federal handgun registration system shall continue to apply in such State until the Attorney General is satisfied that substantial compliance by such State with the requirements of subsection (a) has been achieved.

(c) Federal Handgun Registration System.—

(1) The Attorney General shall establish a Federal handgun registration system for application to States in accordance with subjection (b).

(2) The Attorney General shall design such Federal handgun registration system so that such system will contain, in an easily retrievable record, information sufficient to identify—

(A) the possessor of each handgun possessed by a resident of each State in which such Federal handgun registration system applies; and

(B) such handgun.

(3) Whoever possesses a handgun in violation of the requirement of registration under the Federal handgun registration system established under this subsection shall be fined not more than $250,000 or imprisoned not less than 15 years, or both. The court shall not suspend a sentence of imprisonment imposed for an offense under this subsection, and a probationary sentence may not be imposed for an offense under this subsection.

(d) Definitions.—For the purposes of this section—

(1) the term "handgun" means a pistol or revolver originally designed to be fired by the use of a single hand and which is designed to fire or capable of firing fixed cartridge ammunition, or any other firearm (as such term is defined for the purposes of chapter 44 of title 18 of the United States Code), originally designed to be fired by the use of a single hand; and

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

(2) the term "State" includes the District of Columbia and any possession or other territory of the United States.

SENATE—Tuesday, April 8, 1986

The Senate met at 12 noon, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. Thurmond].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths.—Proverbs 3, 5 and 6.

Gracious Father in Heaven, we commend to your loving care Senator Paula Hawkins as she undergoes surgery today. Guide and direct the surgeon and all who support him that the operation will be successful and Senator Hawkins will be restored total and painless health and strength.

Eternal God, we thank you for the recess—for work accomplished, for rest, recreation and refreshing—for time with families—for safety in travel. Now the Senate faces certain hard facts: demanding legislation—inflexible deadlines—speedy passage of time—99 work days to the projected sine die adjournment—and the relentless approach of November 4. In the light of these hard facts, Father, political realities confront the Senate: 34 Senators seeking reelection—one party seeking to retain leadership in the Senate, the other party seeking to recover it. All this, Lord, in addition to the pressures of political campaigns: organizations, finances, implementation and operation. During these stressful days, Gracious God, help the Senators to hear the wisdom of Solomon in the proverb with which we began this prayer. Help them to trust in the Lord and allow Him to direct their paths. In His name who is the King of Kings. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, under the standing order, the two leaders have 10 minutes each. There are special orders in favor of Senators Proxmire, Hawkins, and Cranston. Following the execution of the special orders, there will be a period for the transaction of routine morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 12:30 p.m., with Senators permitted to speak therein for not more than 5 minutes each.

Following morning business, the Senate will stand in recess until 2 p.m. There will be a party caucus on this side. I understand tomorrow we will make the same accommodations for the distinguished minority leader.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished majority leader.

(Mr. HECHT assumed the chair.)

Mr. DOLE. At 2 p.m., unless changed by unanimous consent, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of S. 1660, a bill to grant a Federal charter to the Confederate Memorial Association.

Following the disposition of S. 1660, the Senate will turn to the consideration of S. 8, a bill to grant a Federal charter to the Vietnam Veterans of America, Inc. Time for debate on that bill is limited to 10 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Judiciary Committee.

We are trying to resolve all this, I might say, because we have some consent agreements previously agreed to. I understand many of our colleagues on both sides would like to defer votes until tomorrow. It is my hope that we can work that out and that there will not be any votes today.

I am also hopeful that, as part of that agreement, we could not bring up S. 1017, the airport transfer bill, for any other purpose but to bring it up and file cloture on the bill itself. I hope we can avoid rollcall votes today. I think Members on both sides have also made that request. We will try to work that out with the distinguished minority leader sometime in the early afternoon.

BEST WISHES TO SENATOR HAWKINS FOR A SPEEDY RECOVERY

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I also thank the distinguished Chaplain for his concern for Senator Hawkins. I might add that I talked with her husband, Gene, at about 10:45 or 11 o'clock. She was still undergoing surgery in the upper neck and shoulder, but they were very hopeful that the planned surgery would be successful. He indicated that Senator Hawkins is very optimistic, so her spirits were very good prior to the operation. I know we all join in wishing her every success and we extend every wish for her complete and speedy recovery.

SENATE RETURNS FROM EASTER RECESS

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the spring break is over and we do have a whole series of difficult decisions—and please note we only have 99 legislative days to do it all. The House is scheduled to take another look at aid for the Nicaraguan freedom fighters. With the apparent breakdown of the Contadora talks and the Sandinista incursion into Honduras, it should now be clear to House Members that they erred when they turned down the President's aid package. Next week, the House will have a second chance—a chance to join the Senate in reaffirming U.S. commitment to democratic principles in Central America by providing assistance to the Contras. I expect this time the House will make the right choice.

TERRORISM

Sadly, while we were gone, international terrorism struck again. Once more, the target was Uncle Sam—in a TWA jet high over Greece and in a Berlin disco. In each case, American lives were lost, and an angry Nation calls for justice. If a direct link can be established between these latest barbaric acts and the Libyans, I believe Republicans and Democrats will support whatever response President Reagan deems appropriate.

MOVEMENT ON BUDGET RESOLUTION

Mr. President, we also have a very large problem right here at home—the budget. It is quite clear that Congress is not going to meet the April 15 deadline for adoption of the fiscal 1987 budget resolution. The Senate Budget Committee did its job, unlike the House, which is sitting on its hands doing nothing.

In some ways, I do not blame my colleagues in the House. The choices we confront in order to meet the deficit reduction goals set out in Gramm-Rudman-Hollings are not very appealing. But if we do not make those choices and we fail to meet the deadlines, the consequences are far reaching—for everyone.

For the administration, failure to adopt a budget resolution soon, delays and could jeopardize tax reform. Because whether we have a revenue increase, and if so how much, is a major issue in both the budget and tax reform.

For Congress, it makes it very difficult to carry out the appropriations process. Without the spending priorities set out by the budget resolution, the Appropriations Committees and Congress are flying blind.

But most important for the economy and for the American people, failure to adopt a budget resolution and the followthrough in budget reconciliation makes it less and less likely that we will achieve deficit reductions in an orderly and thoughtful way.

The threat of the Gramm-Rudman automatic cuts looms large. Do we want to cut defense spending authority $50 billion below the President's request? That is what would happen with the automatic cuts under Gramm-Rudman. Do we want to cut more than 12 percent from every Government program and activity—with the exception of those few programs that are exempt—without regard to its relative importance? That is what we get with automatic cuts.

The bottom line is that we need to act on the budget and act soon. The White House cannot afford to sit on the fence and wait, and neither can House Democrats, House Republicans, Senate Republicans, or Senate Democrats. I hope we can meet with administration officials within the next few days and determine exactly what role the White House wants to play in the budget debate. I believe they can play a constructive and important role, if they are interested; and, if not, I guess Congress will have to go it alone.

Within the next couple of weeks, we have a good crack at putting the budget ball in play. I want to commend the distinguished chairman of the committee, Senator Domenici, and the ranking Democratic member, Senator Chiles, for their meeting the deadline, reporting a budget resolution. But I must say that in my view, and in the view of probably more than half the Republican Senators, they are too big on revenue increases and not enough on defense spending and not enough reductions in other areas.

So we do have our work cut out for us, but I believe we will be able to put something together. I am not certain quite what, at this point, but I hope it will be something that will have broad support in the Senate.

I really do not find any big demand for tax increases as I travel around the country. I do find considerable demand for Congress to be more responsive in reducing the rate of growth of Federal spending.

So it could be that we could put together a package, working with the Budget Committee members, particularly with the chairman on this side and I assume with the ranking Democratic member, Senator Chiles, on the other side, working with other committee chairman and ranking members, as I have indicated, as well as working with representatives of the President at the White House.

I do not know of any issue that is more important than deficit reduction, which, in turn, I think calls upon Congress to act responsibly on the budget.

Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority leader is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair.

THE BUDGET RESOLUTION

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the distinguished majority leader has discussed the budget resolution. It was reported out of the Budget Committee on a bipartisan vote.

I would hope that the budget resolution could and would be brought up before the Senate very soon. I do not wish to be presumptuous in saying this—and I should not be presumptuous, nor should I appear to be presumptuous, because, after all, it is the majority leader's decision as to when a matter will be scheduled. Having been the majority leader some years ago, I recognize that he has to make decisions on the schedule based on many things, perhaps, beyond the immediate piece of legislation, which in this case would be the budget, and I have expressed the hope that it will be called up soon.

It troubles me a little that I thought I heard the distinguished majority leader say that we would have to wait—perhaps I am not precise in what I am saying—but that we would have to wait or would want to wait until we know what the White House's role will be in this or until the White House knows what role that it wants to play.

Mr. President, there are 50 hours as a maximum limitation on this measure. That is quite a number of days. I feel that we have a duty here, not to wait to see what the White House role is, but to begin debating the resolution on the floor.

With 50 hours, we can have a lot of debate—which would be enlightening not only to the public but also to ourselves. There are those of us, like myself, who need to know considerably more about what this resolution entails, and, hopefully, if there are areas within that resolution that any Member on either side wishes to address, he can do so.

If we want to try to fix it here or fix it there—if it needs fixing—we can do that on the floor.

Unless we bring it out and begin airing it soon, of course, we will miss the upcoming deadline of April 15, but such deadlines have been made and broken before. Unless, however, we begin sooner, we are going to be delayed farther down the road than we should be.

I agree with the distinguished majority leader in the expressed thought that we need to act on this resolution. Hopefully, it will have bipartisan support when it is acted on here on the floor. But we certainly do not want to see Gramm-Rudman at the end of the road triggered into making draconian cuts in the event we fail to enact a budget.

Senators will remember that under the legislation that we have passed, in the event there is not a budget enacted in due time, then the Joint Committee, which will be made up of the Budget Committees in both Houses, will meet and within 5 days, as required, will report a budget based upon the advice, counsel, and information submitted by the CBO and OMB, and that measure then has 5 days for debate on the Senate floor and there will be no opportunity to amend it.

So, as one who voted against Gramm-Rudman, I do not want to see Gramm-Rudman take over and make draconian cuts in a situation in which Senators have no right to offer amendments.

So it seems to me that the Senate must act. I am not saying I support the budget that has been reported out. I do not know all of the details of it, but those will be brought to light for all of us as the debate opens here.

So I would just say, while the distinguished majority leader is still on the floor, it will be my hope that we can get the budget up this week, and begin the debate on it and that we would not hold back until somehow or other the resolution is rewritten or changed to draw more votes. Such discussions can be going on even while the budget resolution is debated on the floor here.

So I just make that suggestion and would express the hope that the distinguished majority leader would consider it seriously and call up the resolution and let the Senate get started on it.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. DOLE. Does the Senator from Kentucky seek recognition?

Mr. FORD. I just wanted to get 15 seconds from my leader for an extremely important statement. Would my leader give me 15 seconds?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, how much time do I have left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Three minutes and 25 seconds.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator may have any part of that time.

TRIBUTE TO 1986 NCAA BASKETBALL CHAMPIONS

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I wish to recognize an outstanding group of young men in the State of Kentucky, the University of Louisville Cardinal basketball team, who last week won the 1986 National Collegiate Athletic Association Championship.

Two weeks ago I shared with my colleagues in the Senate Chamber my feelings about the great tradition of basketball in Kentucky, and I am pleased to report that Coach Denny Crum and the Cardinals have since succeeded in their pursuit of the championship.

The Cardinals' achievement is an example of the rewards of teamwork and perseverance, and these young men should be commended for their performance. A young man by the name of Pervis Ellison earned the NCAA Final Four's Outstanding Player Award, only the second freshman in the tournaments history to receive the honor. Senior Milt Wagner, who sat out last year due to a broken foot, returned this year for an outstanding season. He clinched the final game by shooting two free throws to put the Cardinals three points ahead with only 2 seconds left in the game.

Coach Denny Crum has now earned his second NCAA title in the 1980's, and he has won his place in history as one of the Nation's most admired and respected college basketball coaches. As the third most successful among active college coaches, Coach Crum is one of the game's best.

Mr. President, the victory of these individuals was the result of teamwork which exemplified the cooperation and determination that only winners possess. I am proud to hale from a State where such team spirit and healthy competition are a part of the State's heritage, and I salute the University of Louisville Cardinals, the 1986 NCAA Basketball Champions.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, will that reflect K.U. beat Louisville earlier in the year?

Mr. FORD. Only when it counts do we put it in the RECORD.

I thank my distinguished leader.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE REVIEW OF MILITARY CHARTERS: A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, shortly after the tragic crash of an Arrow Air military charter in Newfoundland on December 12, 1985, I called for a special investigation of all civilian aircraft and airlines that are being used to provide charter service for the transport of American military personnel. A few months later, on March 12, 1986, a report by the General Accounting Office on the safety of military air charter airlines was released to the public. That report raised serious questions about the safety of such airlines. On March 28, the Washington Post carried a report that a military charter airline, Galaxy Airlines, was grounded by the FAA after the Air Force expressed concerns regarding the airline's maintenance practices.

According to the Post story, Galaxy Airlines was running two regular supply routes for the Air Force originating in San Antonio, TX. The aircraft flying these routes were Lockheed L-188 Electras. You may recall, Mr. President, that a Galaxy Airlines Electra crashed on takeoff from Reno, NV, in 1985. The latest action against Galaxy Airlines by the FAA and the Air Force came as a result of a plane that arrived at its destination leaking oil. According to the Post story, Galaxy Airlines continued to fly the aircraft despite the fact that one of its engines required 86 quarts of oil during 1 week of operation.

This past weekend the Defense Department announced the results of an internal review of its use of military charter airlines. According to another Washington Post story, this one appearing this past weekend and dated April 5, 1986, the review uncovered major shortcomings in the Pentagon's supervision of military charters. The Department has announced measures to assure the safety of air travel for military personnel and their dependents.

Mr. President, I am gratified at this response to my request for a special investigation. The measures announced by the Department of Defense should improve the safety of air travel for military personnel. However, I also urge that continued vigilence be the order of the day to ensure that a tragedy like the Gander crash will never again claim the lives of American servicemen.

I ask unanimous consent that the two articles from the Washington Post on this subject be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the articles were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AIR FORCE GROUNDS CHARTER FIRM AFTER ENGINE OIL LEAK IS FOUND

An unattended oil leak prompted the Air Force to suspend Galaxy Airlines from flying charters until inspectors are satisfied that the carrier has resolved maintenance problems, a spokesman said yesterday.

Galaxy was running two regular supply routes for the Air Force, both originating in San Antonio and both using Lockheed L188 Electras, Air Force Capt. Thomas LaRock said.

Two Galaxy Electras crashed last year; 70 people died in one crash.

The suspension of Galaxy stemmed from the grounding last Friday of a plane that arrived at its destination leaking engine oil, said LaRock. "Our records indicated that Galaxy continued to fly the aircraft" last week "despite the fact that engine No. 1 required 86 quarts of oil in that period," he said.

The Air Force informed the Federal Aviation Administration, which inspected and grounded the plane, an FAA spokesman said. It was allowed to resume flights after the engine was replaced, he added.

But LaRock said the Air Force still wants to look "at the overall problem and see that the safety problems have been resolved." He said he did not know how long the review would last.

Attempts to reach a spokesman for Galaxy were unsuccessful.

DEFENSE PROBE CRITICIZES SUPERVISION OF CHARTERS

A Defense Department review found major shortcomings in the Pentagon's supervision of military charters, and officials yesterday announced measures aimed at assuring safer air travel for service members and their dependents. But the study, prompted by the crash of a military charter carrying 248 soldiers at Gander, Newfoundland, last December, rejected suggestions that the military use more of its own aircraft to carry personnel.

Such a shift would require the Pentagon to buy $1.1 billion worth of planes, cost at least $334 million a year in other expenses, provide less comfort and probably not make flights safer, the study concluded.

James P. Wade, assistant secretary of defense for logistics, said a variety of changes—including expansion of the number of military inspectors and creation of a special review board—are under way to solve some of the problems.

"The department intends to take aggressive action to assure that air carriers who fly our people are concerned with quality and are fully complying with high standards of air safety," Wade told reporters.

While the report generally endorsed the military charter program, which carried more than 6 million people last year, it found a number of flaws in the way the program is monitored.

The study said inspection and review of the airlines, many of which are small carriers relying heavily on military business, were found to be infrequent and irregular; some survey teams lacked experience and knowledge about civilian airline operations; and line inspectors conducted too few ramp and cabin inspections.

It also said there was no standard rule to suspend an air carrier for violating safety regulations, and little exchange of information existed between Military Airlift Command officials and the Federal Aviation Administration, which has primary responsibility for certifying and inspecting commercial airlines.

Pentagon officials said their new measures include:

Revival of the FAA liaison office and establishment of a comparable military liaison at the aviation agency.

Doubling the staff of a special airline surveillance team from four to eight.

Requiring an in-depth surveillance of every airline every two years. Previously, an inspection was required only when the airline began working for the Pentagon.

RECOGNITION OF SENATOR PROXMIRE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE] is recognized for not to exceed 5 minutes.

AMERICAN PHYSICISTS SAY NIX TO STAR WARS

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, who are the best qualified experts in this country to pass judgment on the prospects for the failure or success of star wars? This Senator's nomination for the best qualified are the Nation's physicists. Why are they the best qualified? Because there is no group in this country that has a training and experience more relevant than physicists have to understand the scientific possibilities and limitations of space technology. Their specialty is obviously vital to any high technology missile defense. Where do these experts stand on star wars? On March 23, the New York Times reported the results of a poll by the respected firm of Peter Hart Research Associates, Inc. The poll was conducted in late February. It questioned 549 randomly selected members of the American Physical Society. That is the top organization of the physicists in this country. Were the physicists in any kind of conflict of interest situation that would bias them for or against the star wars project? Mr. President, if there was a conflict-of-interest bias, it was in favor of the star wars program. Here's why: 25 percent of those physicists polled said that the Defense Department paid for some or all of their work.

So, Mr. President, here you have a group of preeminent experts whose bias if anything favors Defense Department projects because a significant proportion of them are on the Defense Department payroll. So what was the conclusion of this expert group on the wisdom of the Congress proceeding with star wars? They were asked whether they considered the missile defense program "represents a step in the right direction or a step in the wrong direction for America's national security policy." By a margin of 54 to 29 percent—2 to 1—these experts said they viewed it as the wrong direction. The rest were uncertain or said they thought it made little difference. What effect did the conflict of interest of these physicists who were on the Defense Department payroll have, if any? It did have some effect. That was shown by the much closer vote of those who worked largely or in part for the Pentagon. That group still opposed star wars but by only a 42 to 38 percent margin.

Some might argue that the physicists may have been dominated by pacifist or antimilitary attitudes? Were they? The answer is "No." How do we know? Here is how: The poll asked the physicists the same question about other military technology that they had asked about star wars. They found the respondents were not opposed to weaponry in general. A majority or plurality of those responding approved the Trident submarines, long-range missile programs, cruise missiles, the so-called Stealth bomber and Midgetman. Obviously these are not knee-jerk doves.

Even with respect to star wars these physicists partially approved. By a margin of 77 to 21, the physicists approved continuing basic laboratory research on missile defense. A small majority opposed testing and developing prototypes. But 62 percent opposed actually deploying a star wars system. As in any Federal program cost is important. And it is specially important in the star wars program because the potential cost is so immense. How did these experts view the cost of the program? Less than 3 percent said the cost would be below $100 million. Twenty-five percent said the cost would come in between $100 and $500 billion. A majority said it would cost more than $500 billion. Twenty-seven percent saw the cost coming between $500 billion and $1 trillion. Twenty-nine percent estimated the cost at more than $1 trillion. Seventy percent said the cost would be worth it at $100 billion. At $500 billion only 42 percent thought the project worthwhile. If the cost exceeded $1 trillion, only 20 percent found the cost would be worthwhile.

Mr. President, to the best of my knowledge no Member of the Senate is a physicist. The President is not a physicist. Secretary Weinberger is not a physicist either. These technologically qualified physicists will not make the decision on whether or not to fund star wars. We in the Congress will. The physicists are experts. We are not. But we were elected to assume the responsibility for the hundreds of billions or trillions of dollars this program will cost. How do we make that decision? First we must determine whether or not there is a genuine likelihood the project will work. Will it? A majority of the physicists tell us it may protect missile silos and command centers, but it will not protect population centers.

Second, if we decide to protect with star wars as protection for our nuclear deterrent we have to calculate the cost of this protection and whether there is a surer and less costly way to provide the protection for our nuclear weapons. Can we preserve a fully credible deterrent without star wars? Can we do it by keeping enough of our submarines at sea at all times, and enough of our bombers in the air at all times, and enough of our proposed mobile missiles moving at all times, so that whatever preemptive attack the Soviets might launch we could retaliate with an absolutely devastating counter attack? The answer is clear and convincing. It is an emphatic yes.

We have precisely that kind of deterrent available now at sea in our submarines. We have it in the air with our bombers. We will have it on land with our mobile midgetman missiles within a very few years. We will have this at far less cost than the star wars cost. The cost of star wars research will be $50 billion over the next 10 years or so. That research cost will continue with increasing billions every year so long as we keep star wars in operation. The cost of star wars hardware—that is, building battle stations, satellites, and so forth—will certainly be in the hundreds of billions. The cost of lifting this immense amount of material into space and putting it into orbit will also be in the hundreds of billions. And all of that is the beginning. Once in space the cost of maintaining this complex hardware and the cost of constantly modernizing it to keep it ahead of advances in offensive missiles designed to penetrate it will also go on forever.

The terrible irony is that after so many costly years and such an infinity of investment, the world will not be safer. It will be less safe as both super powers build ever more complex nuclear offenses and defenses.

The arms race is absolutely senseless. America's physicists deserve our attention.

MYTH: U.S. FACES NO HOSTAGE CRISIS

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, the myth of the day is that the United States presently does not face a hostage crisis.

How can that be, Mr. President? There are no headlines in the newspapers of any hostage crisis. No bulletins on the network news of hostages in chains. No late-night vigils at the White House like we had during the Iranian hostage crisis, where negotiators scramble to free Americans held in captivity.

No, the only news out of the Middle East is that the President is riding tall in the saddle after humiliating Mu'ammar Qadhafi in the Gulf of Sidra.

So where is the hostage crisis, Mr. President?

It is in Lebanon.

Six Americans are being held hostage in that country. And even if you do not read of their plight in this Nation's newspapers, even if their tragic stories cannot be found on the network news, they still represent a hostage crisis for this Nation.

In fact, some of these Americans have been or likely will be hostages longer than the U.S. Embassy personnel were hostages in Iran.

These six Americans are:

Terry Anderson, an Associated Press bureau chief, who has been a hostage for more than a year;

Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest, who has been held hostage for 14 months;

David Jacobsen, a hospital administrator, held in captivity for 10 months;

Thomas Sutherland, a dean at the American University in Beirut, who was kidnaped last June;

Peter Kilburn, the university's librarian, who has been missing since December 1984;

And there is the sixth American, U.S. Embassy political officer William Buckley, who is believed to have been killed in Iran. We all hope those reports are not true.

These six forgotten Americans, Mr. President, make up our hostage cirsis. And it is a myth to believe that this crisis does not exist.

I yield the floor.

SENATOR HAWKINS' SPECIAL ORDER

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, under the previous order, the distinguished Senator from Florida would now be recognized for 5 minutes. As earlier indicated, she has been undergoing surgery this morning at Duke University Hospital. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed to read her statement at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. The statement of Mrs. HAWKINS reads as follows:

MEXICO: A YEAR WITHOUT JUSTICE

Mrs. HAWKINS. Mr. President, today, April 8, is an anniversary of shame. One year ago today, the First District Judge for Criminal Matters in the Federal District of Mexico City formally indicted Rafael Caro Quintero, an accused murderer of DEA Special Agent Enrique Camarena Salazar.

We should take time today to recall this brave, fallen soldier, Enrique Camarena, and to ponder the lessons we have learned from the case surrounding his death.

Last April in a hearing of the Subcommittee on Children, Family, Drug and Alcoholism, I expressed my intense frustration with the Mexico Government over their handling of the Enrique Camarena murder case. That case seemed to drive home the sweeping scope of corruption in Mexico.

We all remember the situation in this country and south of the border during the time of Enrique Camarena's disappearance. At first, the Mexico Government did nothing. We all read the reports of then Drug Enforcement Administration Director Bud Mullen, who had to go to Guadalajara, and literally pound on the desk to get even the slightest bit of cooperation from Mexico.

The DEA, in my opinion, was betrayed, and with the cooperation of the Customs Service, they decided to respond, and to hit Mexico where it hurts, in the pocketbook.

Customs virtually closed down the border, conducting thorough searches of every car that passed from Mexico to the United States. The 15 minutes wait at the border stretched to 5 hours. Tourists stayed away from Mexico in droves. The Drug Enforcement Administration also attempted to place an advisory on travel to Mexico, and succeeded in tainting the reputation of Guadalajara. Word was spread to the media that seven Americans had been killed there that year, and that two teenage Canadian tourists had been raped and killed there.

As you would expect, the Mexicans screamed. President de la Madrid contacted President Reagan. The Mexicans were furious but things were beginning to move. Then all of a sudden, the first weekend in March of last year, there was a break in the case. Mexican police were involved in a shoot-out at a remote ranch where Camarena was said to have been spotted. Five prisoners were taken, leads were developed, and finally, the week of March 3, 1985, the bodies were found.

I am quite sorry to tell you that since that time, little has changed. I have recently had reconfirmed for me that corruption is rampant in Mexico's government and its police establishment. That corruption spreads from top to bottom.

Since last April, the Mexicans have done nothing on Camarena. They have done nothing on eradication and, in fact, the flow of drugs from Mexico is getting worse. Our country is now in imminent danger of being flooded with a sea of Mexican brown heroin.

Our experience with the Camarena case proves something I have been saying for years—trade and aid, that is the key to stopping the flow of illegal drugs. Try the carrot and if the carrot does not work, try the stick. In Mexico, it was too late for Enrique Camarena. We got nothing from the Mexicans that time around. Nothing.

Last week, I wrote to President de la Madrid. I reminded him that though a year has passed, there has been no evident progress in the prosecution of the case against Rafael Caro Quintero.

I know of President de la Madrid's commitment to the war against the drug traffickers, and that is why I am surprised and disappointed that the Caro Quintero case has not been used as a model of Mexican justice and an expression of that government's desire to deal with the drug traffickers in a tough and diligent manner. The failure to see progress on this case raises serious questions about Mexico's commitment to fighting the war on drugs and convicting the murderers of Enrique Camarena.

I know that Mexican anti-narcotics agents have died in the war on drugs. I am sure President de la Madrid holds his anti-narcotics agents in as high a regard as we do ours. They are our front line of defense against the merchants of death who seek to undermine our values and destroy our society.

I urged the President to press his federal judicial officials to make the Caro Quintero case and other cases involved in the Camarena murder a top priority, and to move these cases through the judicial system as quickly as possible.

In the meantime, the U.S. should continue to use the leverage we have at our disposal to see that drugs are wiped out at their source. As I said last April, in the midst of this case, "The United States should no longer do business with those who do business with drug dealers. Drug dealers are mass murderers and it is time we started to treat them that way."

Enrique Camarena's twisted and broken body has been laid to rest. His fate was removed from his control. It is time for those who love justice to take control of the lives of this brave man's killers.

Until significant steps are taken, we cannot go back to business as usual with Mexico. We will not back up and say, "Hit us again."

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, that is the statement of the distinguished Senator from Florida, Senator HAWKINS, which she would have delivered today had she been here.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of routine morning business, not to extend beyond the hour of 12:30 p.m., with statements limited therein to 5 minutes each.

CONGRESS SPENDS LESS THAN THE PRESIDENT REQUESTS

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I am inserting in the RECORD today for the information and use of my Senate collegues a table showing enacted versus requested discretionary appropriations over the last 7 fiscal years, fiscal years 1980 through 1986.

In this 7-year period of the Reagan administration, the President has requested discretionary appropriations totaling $2,735,556 million and the Congress has enacted appropriations totaling $2,717,007 million, slightly less than 1 percent below the requested level. If you take into account the March 1, 1986, sequester of fiscal year 1986 funds under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act—Public Law 99-177—enacted appropriations are reduced by $16,985 million making the accumulated total for discretionary appropriations provided $1,700,022 million.

I would also like to point out that in real terms total domestic discretionary appropriations have fallen from $200,060 million in fiscal year 1980 to $131,127 million, in fiscal year 1986, a 34.5-percent reduction. In fact, total domestic discretionary appropriations now represent 14.4 percent of the total Federal budget, whereas they represented 25 percent in fiscal year 1980.

These are important facts, Mr. President. We have faced a number of proposals in recent years to shift Congress' constitutional responsibility over Federal spending to the President, as if the President will do a better job allocating Federal resources at a lower cost. This is not so. The facts indicate that the Congress may have a different set of spending priorities than the President, but not more costly ones. The Congress has spent less than the President requested over the last 7 fiscal years.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a table showing total discretionary appropriations requested by the President and enacted by the Congress over fiscal years 1980 through 1986 be inserted in the RECORD at this point. I would like to note that this table is an update of the historical appropriations table I placed in the RECORD on February 5, 1985, on page 1744.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RECESS UNTIL 2 P.M.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now stand in recess until the hour of 2 p.m.

Thereupon, at 12:37 p.m., the Senate recessed until 2 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. MCCONNELL].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair, in his capacity as a Senator from Kentucky, suggests the absence of a quorum. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ARMSTRONG). Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

FEDERAL CHARTER TO THE CONFEDERATE MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report S. 1660.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1660) to grant a Federal charter to the Confederate Memorial Association.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

(By request of Mr. DOLE, the following statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD:)

● Mr. DENTON. Mr. President, I rise today in support of S. 1660, legislation to grant the Confederate Memorial Association a Federal charter, thereby providing the organization with the congressional recognition it so well deserves.

Mr. President, the War Between the States represents a part of our rich heritage which should be remembered by all Americans. One organization which has worked to preserve this part of our national heritage is the "Confederate Memorial Association."

The association was organized and incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia in 1907, and functions as the umbrella organization representing all manner of Confederate historical and curatorial organizations. Organizational support comes from, among others; the Sons of Confederate Veterans, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Children of the Confederacy. Membership of the United Daughters of the Confederacy is 27,829 members, with 783 charters in 31 States, and members in all 50 States; the membership of the Sons of Confederate Veterans is 8,157, with 171 camps in 22 States, and members in all 50 States; and the membership of the Children of the Confederacy is 24,311 members, with 237 charters in 14 States, and members in all 50 States. The association is open to membership without regard to race, color, religion, regional or national origin.

The noble objectives of the association include a continuing commitment, on a national basis, to:

First. Perpetuate Southern culture and history, including the memory of the patriotic deeds of the men and women of the Southern States (soldiers and civilians) during the War Between the States from 1861 to 1865;

Second. Maintain the Confederate Memorial Hall, the centerpiece of the association's public purpose, and the only shrine to the Confederacy in the Nation's Capitol;

Third. Preserve and maintain the Confederate Memorial Hall as a public historical library and a museum gallery of historical relics and memorabilia commemorating Southern history and culture;

Fourth. Encourage the preservation of historic sites and the construction and preservation of buildings, halls, and monuments commemorating Southern culture and history;

Fifth. Preserve and promote the education of the history of the war and of Southern culture and history generally;

Sixth. Participate, in a spirit of cooperation and reciprocity, in programs with other societies devoted to American history, veterans' affairs, or community interest.

The "Confederate Memorial Association" is an organization that merits the recognition of the Congress, recognition which has previously been extended to five War Between the States era organizations (i.e., the Grand Army of the Republic; the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic; the Legion of Valor of the United States of America, Inc.; the National Woman's Relief Corps, Auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic; and the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War).

Mr. President, I believe that it would be appropriate for the Congress to grant a Federal charter to this organization. The bill is currently cosponsored by 40 Members of this body, and I urge my remaining colleagues to support the legislation.●

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. EVANS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill is before the Senate and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 1660) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

S. 660

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

CHARTER

SECTION 1. The Confederate Memorial Association, organized and incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia in 1907 is hereby recognized as such and is granted a charter.

POWERS

SEC. 2. The Confederate Memorial Association (hereinafter referred to as the "corporation") shall have only those powers granted to it through its bylaws and articles of incorporation filed in the State or States in which it is incorporated and subject to the laws of such State or States.

OBJECTS AND PURPOSES OF CORPORATION

SEC. 3. The objects and purposes for which the corporation is organized shall be those provided in its articles of incorporation and, more broadly, shall include a continuing commitment, on a national basis, to—

(1) perpetuate southern culture and history, including the memory of the patriotic deeds of the men and women of the Southern States (soldiers and civilians) during the War Between the States from 1861 to 1865;

(2) maintain the Confederate Memorial Hall, the centerpiece of the corporation's public purpose, and the only shrine to the Confederacy in the Nation's Capitol;

(3) preserve and maintain the Confederate Memorial Hall as a public historical library and a museum gallery of historical relics and memorabilia commemorating southern history and culture;

(4) encourage the preservation of historic sites and the construction and preservation of buildings, halls, and monuments commemorating southern culture and history;

(5) preserve and promote the education of the history of the war and of southern culture and history generally;

(6) participate, in a spirit of cooperation and reciprocity, in programs with other societies devoted to American history, veterans' affairs, or community interests.

SERVICE OF PROCESS

SEC. 4. With respect to service of process, the corporation shall comply with the laws of the States in which it is incorporated and those States in which it carries on its activities in furtherance of its corporate purposes.

MEMBERSHIP

SEC. 5. Eligibility for membership in the corporation and the rights and privileges of members shall, except as provided in this Act, be as provided in the constitution and bylaws of the corporation, and terms of membership and requirements for holding office within the corporation shall not be discriminatory on the basis of race, color, religion, or national origin.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS; COMPOSITION; RESPONSIBILITIES

SEC. 6. The board of directors of the corporation and the responsibilities thereof shall be as provided in the articles of incorporation or bylaws of the corporation and in conformity with the laws of the State or States in which it is incorporated.

OFFICERS OF CORPORATION

SEC. 7. The officers of the corporation, and the election of such officers shall be as is provided in the articles of incorporation or bylaws of the corporation and in conformity with the laws of the State or States wherein it is incorporated.

RESTRICTIONS

SEC. 8. (a) No part of the income or assets of the corporation shall inure to any member, officer, or director of the corporation or be distributed to any such person during the life of this chapter. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prevent the payment of reasonable compensation to the officers of the corporation or reimbursement for actual necessary expenses in amounts approved by the board of directors.

(b) The corporation shall not make any loan to any officer, director, or employee of the corporation.

(c) The corporation and any officer and director of the corporation, acting as such officer or director, shall not contribute to, support, or otherwise participate in any political activity or in any manner attempt to influence legislation.

(d) The corporation shall have no power to issue any shares of stock nor to declare or pay any dividends.

(e) The corporation shall not claim congressional approval or Federal Government authority for any of its activities.

(f) The corporation shall retain and maintain its status as a corporation organized and incorporated under the laws of the State or States wherein it is incorporated.

LIABILITY

SEC. 9. The corporation shall be liable for the acts of its officers and agents when acting within the scope of their authority.

BOOKS AND RECORDS; INSPECTION

SEC. 10. The corporation shall keep correct and complete books and records of account and shall keep minutes of any proceeding of the corporation involving any of its members, the board of directors, or any committee having authority under the board of directors. The corporation shall keep at its principal office a record of the names and addresses of all members having the right to vote. All books and records of such corporation may be inspected by any member having the right to vote, or by any agent or attorney of such member, for any proper purpose, at any reasonable time. Nothing in this section shall be construed to contravene any applicable State law.

AUDIT OF FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS

SEC. 11. The first section of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for audit of accounts of private corporations established under Federal law", approved August 30, 1964 (36 U.S.C. 1101), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(71) The Confederate Memorial Association".

ANNUAL REPORT

SEC. 12. The corporation shall report annually to the Congress concerning the activities of the corporation during the preceding fiscal year. Such annual report shall be submitted at the same time as is the report of the audit required by section 11 of this Act. The report shall not be printed as a public document.

RESERVATION OF RIGHT TO AMEND OR REPEAL CHARTER

SEC. 13. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this Act is expressly reserved to the Congress.

DEFINITION OF "STATE"

SEC. 14. For purposes of this Act, the term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the territories and possessions of the United States.

TAX-EXEMPT STATUS

SEC. 15. The corporation shall maintain its status as an organization exempt from taxation as provided in the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. If the corporation fails to maintain such status, the charter granted hereby shall expire.

TERMINATION

SEC. 16. If the corporation shall fail to comply with any of the restrictions or provisions of this Act, the charter granted hereby shall expire.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

FEDERAL CHARTER TO THE VIETNAM VETERANS OF AMERICA, INC.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to the consideration of S. 8, which the clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 8) to grant a Federal charter to the Vietnam Veterans of America, Inc.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with amendments, as follows:

S. 8

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

RECOGNITION AS CORPORATION AND GRANT OF FEDERAL CHARTER

SECTION 1. The Vietnam Veterans of America, Inc., a nonprofit corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York, is hereby recognized as such and is granted a charter.

CORPORATE POWERS

SEC. 2. The Vietnam Veterans of America, Inc. (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "corporation"), shall have only those powers granted to it through its articles of incorporation filed in the State in which it is incorporated and its constitution and bylaws, and subject to the laws of such State.

OBJECTS AND PURPOSES OF CORPORTATION

SEC. 3. The objects and purposes of the corporation are those stated in its articles of incorporation, consitution, and bylaws and include a commitment to—

(1) uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States;

(2) foster the improvement of the condition of Vietnam-era veterans;

(3) promote the social welfare (including educational, economic, social, physical, and cultural improvement) in the United States by encouraging the growth and development, readjustment, self-respect, self-confidence and usefulness of Vietnam-era veterans and other veterans;

(4) improve conditions for Vietnam-era veterans and develop channels of communication to assist Vietnam-era veterans;

(5) conduct and publish research, on a nonpartisan basis, pertaining to the relationship between Vietnam-era veterans and the American society, to the Vietnam war experience, to the role of the United states in securing peaceful coexistence for the world community, and to other matters which affect the educational, economic, social, physical, or cultural welfare of Vietnam-era veterans and other veterans and the families of such veterans;

(6) assist disabled Vietnam-era veterans and other veterans in need of assistance and the dependents and survivors of such veterans; and

(7) consecrate the efforts of the members of the corporation and Vietnam-era veterans generally to mutual helpfulness and service to their country.

SERVICE OF PROCESS

SEC. 4. With respect to service of process, the corporation shall comply with the laws of the State in which it is incorporated and those States in which it carries on its activities in furtherance of its corporate purposes.

MEMBERSHIP

SEC. 5. Except as provided in section 8, eligibility for membership in the corporation and the rights and privileges of members shall be as provided in the constitution and bylaws of the corporation.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

SEC. 6. Except as provided in section 8, the board of directors of the corporation, and the responsibilities of the board, shall be as provided in the constitution and bylaws of the corporation and in conformity with the laws of the State in which it is incorporated.

OFFICERS

SEC. 7. Except as provided in section 8, the officers of the corporation, and the election of such officers, shall be as provided in the constitution and bylaws of the corporation and in conformity with the laws of the State in which it is incorporated.

NONDISCRIMINATION

SEC. 8. In establishing the conditions of membership in the corporation and in determining the requirements for serving on the board of directors or as an officer of the corporation, the corporation may not discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, handicap, or age.

RESTRICTIONS ON CORPORATE POWERS

SEC. 9. (a) No part of the income or assets of the corporation shall inure to any person who is a member, officer, or director of the corporation or be distributed to any such person during the life of this charter. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prevent the payment of reasonable compensation to the officers of the corporation of reimbursement for actual necessary expenses in amounts approved by the board of directors.

(b) The corporation shall not make any loan to any officer, director, or employee of the corporation.

(c) The corporation shall have no power to issue any shares of stock nor to declare or pay any dividends.

(d) The corporation shall not claim congressional approval or Federal Government authority by virtue of this Act for any of its activities.

LIABILITY FOR ACTS OF OFFICERS AND AGENTS

SEC. 10. The corporation shall be liable for the acts of its officers and agents when acting within the scope of their authority.

BOOKS AND RECORDS; INSPECTION

SEC. 11. The corporation shall keep correct and complete books and records of accounts and shall keep minutes of any proceeding of the corporation involving any of its members, the board of directors, or any committee having authority under the board of directors. The corporation shall keep at its principal office a record of the names and addresses of all members having the right to vote. All books and records of the corporation may be inspected by any member having the right to vote, or by any agent or attorney of such member, for any proper purpose, at any reasonable time. Nothing in this section shall be construed to contravene any applicable State law.

AUDIT OF FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS

SEC. 12. The first section of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for audit of accounts of private corporations established under Federal law", approved August 30, 1964 (36 U.S.C. 1101), is amended by inserting after paragraph [(67)] (71) the following new paragraph:

["(66)] "(72) The Vietnam Veterans of America, Inc.".

ANNUAL REPORT

SEC. 13. The corporation shall report annually to the Congress concerning the activities of the corporation during the preceding fiscal year. Such annual report shall be submitted at the same time as is the report of the audit of the corporation required by section 2 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for audit of accounts of private corporations established under Federal law", approved August 30, 1964 (36 U.S.C. 1102). The report shall not be printed as a public document.

RESERVATION OF RIGHT TO ALTER, AMEND, OR REPEAL CHARTER

SEC. 14. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this charter is expressly reserved to the Congress.

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

DEFINITION OF "STATE"

SEC. 15. For purposes of this Act, the term "State" includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and each of the territories and possessions of the United States.

TAX-EXEMPT STATUS

SEC. 16. The corporation shall maintain its status as an organization exempt from taxation as provided in the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

EXCLUSIVE RIGHT TO NAMES

SEC. 17. The corporation shall have the sole and exclusive right to use the name "The Vietnam Veterans of America, Inc.", "Vietnam Veterans of America, Inc.", and "Vietnam Veterans of America", and such seals, emblems, and badges as the corporation may lawfully adopt. Nothing in this section shall be construed to interfere or conflict with established or vested rights.

FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH RESTRICTIONS OR PROVISIONS

SEC. 18. If the corporation shall fail to comply with any of the restrictions or provisions of this Act, the charter granted by this Act shall expire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time for debate on this bill is limited to 10 minutes, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, with a vote on final passage to occur at 5:30 p.m. No amendments, except the committee-reported amendment, will be in order.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, after consultation with the Democratic leader—and I appreciate his fine cooperation in response to this request which will help us to conclude our business today and move on to our vote tomorrow—let me now ask unanimous consent that the agreement entered into with respect to S. 8 on March 27, 1986, be postponed, to begin at 2 p.m. on Wednesday, April 9, 1986, and that the vote with respect to S. 8 begin immediately following the debate and that paragraph 4 of rule XII be waived.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I will not object—I thank the distinguished assistant Republican leader, and I also thank the distinguished majority leader—this will mean, if I understand the distinguished Senator's request, that on tomorrow, at the hour of 2 p.m., the debate which, in the previous agreement, was limited to 10 minutes would begin and immediately after the 10 minutes has expired, or upon the yielding back of the time, the Senate would then proceed to vote on passage of S. 8. Am I correct in my understanding?

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, that is correct. That will be the procedure.

Mr. BYRD. That was my understanding. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished majority whip. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, for the information of our colleagues, we have now developed our agenda for tomorrow, and I am very much appreciative of the Democratic leader's assistance.

Tomorrow—and we shall develop this later in a concluding unanimous-consent agreement—we shall go to the regional airport issue in the morning, at approximately 10:30. That will become part of the formal agreement. For our colleagues who are listening, there will be no more rollcall votes today. I think that was expressed by the majority leader previously, but there could have been some doubt if we had not resolved matters in this recent fashion.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, at this point, I ask unanimous consent for a period of routine morning business to extend until 4:45 p.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT RECEIVED DURING ADJOURNMENT

Under the authority of the order of the Senate of January 3, 1985, the Secretary of the Senate, on April 7, 1986, during the adjournment of the Senate, received messagess from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received on April 7, 1986, are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Saunders, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session, the PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE ARTS AND THE NATIONAL COUNCIL ON THE ARTS—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM-128

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources:

To the Congress of the United States:

In accordance with the provisions of the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities Act of 1965, as amended, I transmit herewith the Annual Report of the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Council on the Arts for the Fiscal Year 1985.

RONALD REAGAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, April 8, 1986.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE RECEIVED DURING ADJOURNMENT

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

Under the authority of the order of the Senate of January 3, 1985, the Secretary of the Senate, on March 31, 1986, during the adjournment of the Senate, received a message from the House of Representatives announcing that the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. WRIGHT) had signed the following enrolled bill and joint resolution:

H.R. 3128. An act to provide for reconciliation pursuant to section II of the 1st concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1986 (S. Con. Res. 32, Ninety-ninth Congress); and

S.J. Res. 52. Joint resolution to designate the month of April 1986 as "National School Library Month."

Under the authority of the order of the Senate of January 3, 1985, the enrolled bill and joint resolution were signed on April 1, 1986, during the adjournment of the Senate, by the Vice President.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on today, April 8, 1986, she had presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled joint resolution:

S.J. Res. 52. Joint resolution to designate the month of April 1986 as "National School Library Month."

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, which were referred as indicated:

EC-2818. A communication from the Comptroller General of the United States transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the status of budget authority of two appropriations accounts which the President is withholding contrary to the Impoundment Control Act; jointly, pursuant to the order of January 30, 1975, to the Committee on Appropriations, the Committee on the Budget, the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-2819. A communication from the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to permit assignment of active duty Armed Forces outside the United States after basic training; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-2820. A communication from the Administrator of the GSA transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to provide authority for implementation of the President's national defense stockpile modernizaton proposal; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC-2821. A communication from the Comptroller General of the United States transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on scientific and policy implications of nuclear winter; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-2822. A communication from the Chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on abnormal occurrences at licensed nuclear facilities in the third quarter of 1985; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-2823. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on research activities relevant to the Clean Air Act; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-2824. A communication from the U.S. Trade Representative transmitting, pursuant to law, a confidential report on the lack of resolution of a dispute with the European Economic Community; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-2825. A communication from the Under Secretary of State transmitting, pursuant to law, a confidential report on the implementation of travel controls on certain U.N. Secretariat and Mission employees; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

EC-2826. A communication from the President of the African Development Foundation transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1987 and 1988; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

EC-2827. A communication from the D.C. Auditor transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the review of substance abuse testing programs; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2828. A communication from the D.C. Auditor transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the review of D.C. funds for alternative uses; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2829. A communication from the inspector general of Housing and Urban Development transmitting, pursuant to law, a Privacy Act report on a computer matching program; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2830. A communication from the chairman of the D.C. Council transmitting, pursuant to law, a copy of D.C. Act 6-143; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2831. A communication from the chairman of the D.C. Council transmitting, pursuant to law, D.C. Act 6-144; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2832. A communication from the chairman of the D.C. Council transmitting a request that the Congress refrain from using their original legislative power over the District of Columbia to name public places in honor of persons who have not been dead for more than 2 years; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-2833. A communication from the Executive Director of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the Corporation's Freedom of Information Act report; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2834. A communication from the national president of the Girl Scouts transmitting, pursuant to law, the annual report of the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A.; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2835. A communication from the president of INPO transmitting, pursuant to law, INPO's annual report; ordered to lie on the table.

EC-2836. A communication from the chief immigration judge transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on grants of suspension of deportation under section 244 of the Immigration and Nationality Act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC-2837. A communication from the Chairman of the National Advisory Council on Bilingual Education transmitting, pursuant to law, the Council's 10th annual report; to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

EC-2838. A communication from the Chairman of the FCC transmitting, pursuant to law, the Commission's annual report; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-2839. A communication from the Assistant Secretary of Defense transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on the feasibility of DOD issuance of food stamps to overseas households of members stationed abroad; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

EC-2840. A communication from the Secretary of the Navy transmitting, pursuant to law, a report on a breach of unit baseline cost of weapons system by 3,266.8 percent; to the Committee on Armed Services.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES SUBMITTED DURING ADJOURNMENT

Under the authority of the order of the Senate of March 27, 1986, the following reports of committees were submitted on April 4, 1986 during the adjournment of the Senate:

By Mr. THURMOND, from the Committee on the Judiciary, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute:

S. 1236. A bill to amend title 18 of the United States Code and other laws to make minor or technical amendments to provisions enacted by the Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 99-278).

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following executive reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. PACKWOOD, from the Committee on Finance:

Donald M. Newman, of Indiana, to be Under Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(The above nomination was reported with the recommendation that it be confirmed, subject to the nominee's commitment to appear and testify before any duly constituted committee of the Senate.)

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second time by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. DURENBERGER:

S. 2267. A bill exempting from bilateral arrangements subject to the Steel Import Stabilization Act steel products imported into the United States for processing into oil country tubular goods and subsequently exported; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. ROTH:

S. 2268. A bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to establish in the Department of Defense the position of Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition; and to require the Secretary of Defense to conduct a test program to streamline the efficiency of the management structure of major defense acquisition programs; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. D'AMATO (for himself and Mr. LAUTENBERG):

S. 2269 A bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to permit members of the Armed Forces to wear, under certain circumstances, items of apparel not part of the official uniform; to the Committee on Armed Services.

By Mr. SIMON:

S. 2270. A bill to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to deter immigration-related marriage fraud and other immigration fraud; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DENTON (for himself and Mr. HEFLIN):

S. 2271. A bill for the relief of Jens-Peter Berndt; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. QUAYLE:

S. 2272. A bill to limit the amount that may be expended in any fiscal year by a Member of Congress for franked mail; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. DURENBERGER:

OIL COUNTRY TUBULAR GOODS EXPORT PROTECTION ACT

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation that will permit domestic processors of oil country tubular goods to continue importing pipe and tube products that are finished in the United States and then exported. Since this legislation is designed to permit domestic processers of oil country tubular goods to compete in the fiercely competitive world market, it will serve to enhance our trade balance and retain jobs in the United States.

Many of the bilateral arrangements negotiated last year restrict the importation of pipe and tube products that are finished in the United States and reexported. Like so many other restrictions on free and open trade, these restrictions have had the effect of preserving jobs in one sector of the industry while sacrificing jobs in other sectors of the industry. Processors of oil country tubular goods often supply 50 to 60 percent or more U.S. value added during the finishing process. This translates into many new jobs in the steel industry.

This legislation would exempt casing, tubing, drill pipe, or line pipe used to process oil country tubular goods from any quantitative limits established under our bilateral steel arrangements. Although some of the pipe and tube products covered under this legislation is available from domestic suppliers, the domestic price for these products is so high that our domestic processors cannot compete effectively in foreign markets. As a result, if this legislation is not adopted, we will surely see a further decline in steel industry employment—a perverse and unintended affect of our bilateral steel import agreements.

Steel inputs covered under this legislation must be entered into the United States under a temporary import bond and certified by the selling country to be exported into the United States solely for processing into goods for subsequent export. If the U.S. processor does not export the finished product within the 1-year deadline of the temporary import bond, the processor will be penalized by an amount twice the FOB value of the imported merchandise. As under the current temporary import bond, the U.S. Customs Service may grant an extension of the bond for up to 3 years if the bond holder demonstrates the need for an extension.

This legislation also increases the temporary import bond value to twice the FOB value of the imported goods. This penalty ensures that if the processor does not reexport the finished product, it will not be able to undersell domestic competitors.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in RECORD, as follows:

S. 2267

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. This Act may be cited as the "Oil Country Tubular Goods Export Protection Act".

AMENDMENT TO STEEL IMPORT STABILIZATION ACT

SEC. 2. Section 805 of the Steel Import Stabilization Act (19 U.S.C. 2253 note) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(d)(1) The quantitative limitation established under any bilateral arrangement for any foreign country shall not apply to any casing, tubing, drill pipe, or line pipe that is—

"(A) a product of that country;

"(B) temporarily imported under bond into the United States for processing into oil country tubular goods meeting American Petroleum Institute (API) specifications by means of upsetting, full-length heat treating, threading, and tool joining; and

"(C) covered by documentation, issued by that country and presented to the customs officer concerned at the time of importation, that certifies that the casing, tubing, or pipe is intended for export from the United States after the processing referred to in sub-paragraph (B) is completed.

"(2) The Secretary of the Treasury shall require persons who import under paragraph (1) to submit such information regarding the processing in the United States and anticipated time and place of export of the merchandise as the Secretary considers appropriate for efficient administration of this subsection.

"(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of the customs laws, temporary importation bonds given on merchandise described in paragraph (1) shall be in an amount equal to twice the fob value of the merchandise centered under bond.

"(4) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection, any merchandise imported into the United States for processing into oil country tubular goods under this section which is not re-exported within a period of six months shall be charged against any quantitative limitation which would otherwise be applicable to such merchandise in the absence of this subsection."●

By Mr. ROTH:

S. 2268. A bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to establish in the Department of Defense the position of Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition; and to require the Secretary of Defense to conduct a test program to streamline the efficiency of the management structure of major defense acquisition programs; to the Committee on Armed Services.

ESTABLISHMENT OF POSITION OF UNDER SECRETARY OF DEFENSE FOR ACQUISITION

● Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, today I am introducing a bill which closely complements important recommendations of the President's Blue Ribbon Commission on Defense Management. This bill intends to strengthen the acquisition process in the Department of Defense (DOD) in two ways: First, it creates an Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition; second, it increases the efficiency of the management structure of major defense acquisition programs by reducing the number of officials to whom a program manager must report.

Mr. President, the first title of this bill creating an Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition should go far toward putting clear accountability in DOD's weapons acquisition process. The Under Secretary would be a civilian nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate who would be charged with setting overall policy for and supervising, directing, and controlling all DOD acquisition activities. The Under Secretary should have extensive experience in the defense industry, including a strong managerial background in the private sector.

The creation of the Under Secretary's position closely parallels the recommendation made in the Blue Ribbon Commission's interim report of February 28, 1988, and in their most recent report submitted to the President yesterday.

It is interesting to note Mr. Chairman, that 15 years ago, Gilbert Fitzhugh, then Chairman of the President's Blue Ribbon Defense Review Commission, said of DOD procurement, "There is nobody that you can point your finger to if anything goes wrong and there is nobody you can pin a medal on if it goes right, because everything is everybody's business and * * * what is everybody's business is nobody's business."

Mr. President, I would be the first to acknowledge that it is no small task to develop, produce, and manage complex weapon systems and to hold down the cost growth which routinely affects them. If it were, the dozens and dozens of acquisition improvement efforts which have been initiated by virtually every administration would certainly by now have given us a more efficient and well-managed acquisition process.

It hasn't happened. In fact, if anything, the problems in the acquisition process are as serious today as they have ever been and the public has the perception that we really don't know how to build dependable, reasonably-priced weapon systems.

Part of this perception of an acquisition system out of control stems from the very fact that the Defense budget—and in particular, the procurement portion of the budget—has grown dramatically over the last 3 years. The Defense Department procurement request for this year is approximately three times greater, in constant dollars, than it was less than a decade ago. About 15 million separate contract actions were made in 1985 alone to buy weapons and related spare parts. Nearly 1 job in 10 in the United States today is dependent to some degree on the defense contracting business. Somewhere around half of the general tax revenues now collected go to defense programs.

The public is also aware of these substantial increases in the defense budget. But they are just as aware of the cost growth, weapon system failures, and overpriced spare parts which have resulted from the existing acquisition system. As my colleagues know from their visits with constituents back home, the fact is that the public's view of defense matters is greatly influenced by their perceptions of the way in which weapon programs and spare parts purchases are managed. My concern, and I know that of other Senators as well, is that the public is becoming convinced the Defense Department is not effectively managing the defense acquisition process.

If we don't act soon, we run the risk of losing the consensus in support of the defense rebuilding effort which we need and which was so evident in 1981. Coupled with the budget deficit pressures which have now begun to affect the size of the defense program, the public's growing disillusionment with the management of the acquisition process is a serious matter and one that I, as a strong proponent of a revitalized defense, am anxious to reverse. The job of buying weapons and equipment not only has to be done well, the public has to be convinced it is being done well.

Mr. President, the acquisition process has been examined repeatedly over the years and we are all familiar with most of the many problems cited at one time or another as major factors in cost growth and mismanagement: poor or overly optimistic cost estimates, "gold-plating," poor testing, lack of competition in contracts and schedule "stretchouts." Whether these are in fact the real causes of cost growth, or just symptoms of the problem, there is little doubt in my mind that the acquistion process is ripe for improvement. More than 3 years of hearings on acquisition management in my Governmental Affairs Committee have convinced me of that fact. A report by the General Accounting Office dramatically illustrates the very serious cost growth and management problems affecting acquisition programs.

GAO reviewed the Defense Department's budget, planning, and cost estimating procedures for its major weapons programs to provide an assessment of the realism of the Department's 5-year projection of funding requirements. The GAO looked at the actual versus planned costs for 97 major weapons between the years 1963 and 1983 and found that Congress must consistently provide substantially greater appropriations than anticipated for weaponry, an average of 32 percent more. It also found that even with the additional money, the quantities of weapons which DOD is actually able to buy is consistently less than originally planned. In fact, since 1970, this pattern of receiving more money and purchasing fewer quantities of weapons has gotten worse, and in the 23-year time period between then and now, DOD has never once been able to purchase the planned quantities.

The GAO figures indicate that our acquisition system is in a serious state of disrepair, soaking up even the sizable increases in funding which have occurred over the last 3 years and producing far less than we had hoped. We are buying less but continuing to spend more. I am convinced the American people are willing to dig deep to build a strong defense but I am equally convinced they won't accept a defense which is wasteful and more costly than necessary.

In outlining the serious problems we face in improving the management of acquisition programs, it becomes apparent to me that the solutions of the past are no longer adequate. I believe we should consider more comprehensive and far-reaching changes which may threaten the status quo, but could help set the stage for real and lasting improvements.

That is why I am proposing the creation of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition.

How would such a proposal help improve the management of the defense acquisition process? It would ensure that someone—the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition—is identified and held accountable for the performance and cost of a weapon program. This person would have to answer for the cost increases and technical problems. This person would enjoy the rewards and recognition of a job well done.

Mr. President, in response to my request of the General Accounting Office (GAO) for their comments on my bill, they have responded in support of the legislation, particularly the provision consolidating the acquisition function within the Office Secretary of Defense.

The GAO also proposed that the Office of Assistant Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Logistics be reestablished as an office equivalent with the Director of Defense Research and Engineering. The GAO recommends that the person holding this office also report directly to the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition.

These are good recommendations and I believe they should be given serious consideration when this bill is studied by the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Mr. President, I ask that the letter from GAO be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE,
Washington, DC, April 7, 1986.

Hon. WILLIAM V. ROTH, Jr.,
Chairman, Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: At the request of your staff, we reviewed a proposal to establish in the Department of Defense (DOD) the position of Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition. We have long emphasized the need to improve DOD's decisionmaking process and we support the major thrust of the proposal, namely consolidating the acquisition function within the Office of the Secretary of Defense. In recent testimony, before the Subcommittee on Defense Acquisition Policy, Senate Committee on Armed Services, we noted that an advantage of this approach is that accountability for all acquisition phases would be found in one place.

Section 104 of the proposal would require the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation (OT&E) to report to the Secretary of Defense through the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition. As you know, the Congress mandated the Director to be the principal adviser to the Secretary of Defense on OT&E matters and report directly, without intervening review or approval, to the Secretary. We recommend deleting this section because it could either in practice or perception adversely impact on the independence and objectivity that the Director was established to ensure.

One additional comment we have deals with the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Acquisition and Logistics. The proposal does not mention the functions currently performed by the Assistant Secretary. We assume that there would continue to be an Assistant Secretary for Acquisition and Logistics who would report to the new Under Secretary. This relationship should be addressed in the proposal.

We are currently conducting a review on the feasibility of establishing a centralized civilian acquisition agency. The results of our review should be useful in evaluating proposals for making organizational adjustments to the defense acquisition function. We will keep your staff informed of the progress of our review.

We have enclosed an annotated copy of the proposal which suggests other changes intended to clarify the language. We appreciate the opportunity to comment on this proposal. If we can be of further assistance, please let us know.

Sincerely yours,
FRANK C. CONAHAN, Director.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, title II of my bill also closely parallels a Packard Commission recommendation calling for a streamlined acquisition process. If you remember, the Commission's February 28 interim report to the President states, and I quote:

> The Army, Navy, and Air Force should each establish a comparable senior position filled by a top-level civilian Presidential appointee. The role of the Services' Acquisition Executives would mirror that of the Defense Acquisition Executive. They would appoint Program Executive Officers (PEO), each of whom would be responsible for a reasonable and defined number of acquisition programs. Program Managers for these programs would be responsible directly to their respective PEO and report only to him on program matters. Each Service should retain flexibility to shorten this reporting chain even further, as it sees fit.
> Establishing short, unambiguous lines of authority would streamline the acquisition process and cut through bureaucratic red tape. By this means, the Department of Defense (DoD) should substantially reduce the number of acquisition personnel.

My bill would require the Secretary of Defense to put these recommendations into effect on two major defense acquisition programs in each military service. This would be a test program and after that program runs its course and is fully evaluated, I would expect streamlining of more major defense acquisition programs until this steamlining is effectively in place on all weapons programs.

Mr. President, these recommendations for streamlining the defense acquisition process could go a long way toward reducing the chain of decision-making levels of weapons programs. Streamlining could also reduce significantly the number of acquisition personnel in each of the military services.

It is time to reduce the number of acquisition personnel. I have believed for some time that staffing of acquisition personnel for major defense acquisition programs should be cut by one-fifth or one-tenth the size of what they are at present. Fewer personnel in defense acquisition and good management could lessen the acquisition cycle for a weapon system, prevent goldplating, and field a weapon that meets its mission requirements and military specifications.

Mr. President, I think this bill is needed. It closely approximate the recommendations of the Packard Commission and should have their support.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill and ask that it be printed in the Congressional Record.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

S. 2268

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—ESTABLISHMENT OF POSITION OF UNDER SECRETARY OF DEFENSE FOR ACQUISITION

ESTABLISHMENT OF POSITION

Sec. 101. Chapter 4 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 134 the following new section:

"§ 134a. Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition: appointment; powers and duties; precedence

"(a) There is an Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, appointed from civilian life by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"(b) Subject to the authority, direction, and control of the Secretary of Defense, the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition—

"(1) is responsible for setting overall policy for, and supervises, directs, and controls all acquisition activities of the Department of Defense; and

"(2) shall perform such duties and exercise such powers as the Secretary of Defense may prescribe.

"(c) The Under Secretary—

"(1) is the senior procurement executive for the Department of Defense for the purposes of section 16(3) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 414(3));

"(2) is the Defense Acquisition Executive for purposes of regulations and procedures of the Department providing for a Defense Acquisition Executive; and

"(3) to the extent directed by the Secretary of Defense, supervises, directs and controls all other officers in the Office of the Secretary of Defense who have procurement or acquisition responsibilities (notwithstanding any law providing that any such officer is responsible only to, and reports directly to, the Secretary or the Deputy Secretary).

"(d) The Under Secretary takes precedence in the Department of Defense after the Secretary of Defense and, among the Deputy Secretary of Defense and the Secretaries of the military departments, in the order prescribed by the Secretary of Defense.".

PAY GRADE

Sec. 102. Section 5313 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition.".

CONVERSION OF UNDER SECRETARY FOR RESEARCH AND ENGINEERING TO ASSISTANT SECRETARY LEVEL

Sec. 103. (a) The position of Under Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering is hereby redesignated as Director of Defense Research and Engineering. The Director of Defense Research and Engineering is an Assistant Secretary of Defense.

(b) Section 136(b) of title 10, United States Code (relating to Assistant Secretaries of Defense), is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(7) One of the Assistant Secretaries shall be the Director of Defense Research and Engineering. The Director shall perform such duties relating to research and engineering as the Secretary of Defense may prescribe.".

(c) Section 135 of such title is amended—

(1) by striking out the first two sentences in subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "There is an Under Secretary of Defense for Policy, appointed from civilian life by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.";

(2) by striking out the second sentence in subsection (b);

(3) in subsection (c)—

(A) by striking out "and the Secretaries of the military departments" and inserting in lieu thereof "the Secretaries of the military departments, and the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition"; and

(B) by striking out the second sentence; and

(4) by striking out the section heading and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"§ 135. Under Secretary of Defense for Policy: appointment; powers and duties; precedence"

(d) Section 5314 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out "Under Secretaries of Defense (2)" and inserting in lieu thereof "Under Secretary of Defense for Policy".

(e) The redesignation of the position of Under Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering as Director of Defense Research and Engineering and the amendments made by subsections (b), (c), and (d)—

(1) shall not affect the appointment in that position of the person holding that position on the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(2) shall not affect the rate of pay or other benefits to which that person is entitled on the date of the enactment of this Act as an Under Secretary of Defense.

GENERAL CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Sec. 104. (a) Section 136a(d) of title 10, United States Code (relating to the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation), is amended by striking out "Under Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering" in the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "Director of Defense Research and Engineering".

(b) Section 171(a) of such title (relating to the Armed Forces Policy Council) is amended—

(1) by redesignating clauses (3) through (10) as clauses (4) through (11), respectively;

(2) by inserting after clause (2) the following new clause (3):

"(3) the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition;"; and

(3) by striking out "Under Secretaries of Defense" in clause (7) (as so redesignated) and inserting in lieu thereof, "Under Secretary of Defense for Policy.".

CLERICAL AMENDMENT

Sec. 105. The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 4 of such title is amended by striking out the item relating to section 135 and inserting in lieu thereof the following new items:

"134a. Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisitions: appointments; powers and duties; precedence.

"135. Under Secretary of Defense for Policy: appointment; powers and duties; precedence.".

TITLE II—EXPERIMENTAL STREAMLINING OF MANAGEMENT OF MAJOR DEFENSE ACQUISITION PROGRAMS

DEFINITION

Sec. 201. In this title, "major defense acquisition program" has the meaning given that term in section 139a(a)(1) of title 10, United States Code.

REQUIREMENT TO CONDUCT EXPERIMENTAL PROGRAM

Sec. 202. (a) The Secretary of Defense shall conduct, through the Secretaries of the military departments, a test program with respect to increasing the efficiency of the management structure of major defense acquisition programs by reducing the number of officials through whom a program manager reports to the senior procurement executive of the military department concerned.

(b) The Secretary shall require that the Secretary of each military department designate two major defense acquisition programs of that department to participate in the test program described in subsection (a).

(c) A program may be designated under subsection (b) only if the program has not proceeded into full-scale engineering development as of September 30, 1986.

GUIDELINES

Sec. 203. (a) The Secretary of Defense shall issue guidelines governing the management of the major defense acquisition programs designated by the Secretaries of the military departments under section 202(b).

(b) The guidelines shall include the following requirements:

(1) The Secretary concerned shall designate a program executive officer for each program.

(2) The program manager for each program shall report directly, without intervening review or approval, to the program executive officer for that program. The program manager shall consider recommendations received from the competition advocate for the department with respect to decisions concerning that program.

(3) The program executive officer for a program shall report directly, without intervening review or approval, to the senior procurement executive of the military department concerned designated pursuant to section 16(3) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 414(3)).

(4) The competition advocate for the department may appeal to the program executive officer a decision of the program manager with respect to that program.●

By Mr. D'AMATO (for himself and Mr. Lautenberg):

S. 2269. A bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to permit members of the Armed Forces to wear, under certain circumstances, items of apparel not part of the official uniform; to the Committee on Armed Services.

ALLOWING THE MILITARY TO WEAR RELIGIOUS APPAREL

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today to offer legislation with my distinguished colleague, the junior Senator from New Jersey, to correct an injustice recently affirmed by the Supreme Court. On March 25, the Supreme Court ruled 5–4 in favor of a lower court ruling that the Department of Defense was within its rights in not allowing the wearing of a yarmulke indoors by military personnel. The case, Goldman versus Weinberger, involved an Air Force officer who, though serving as a psychologist, was an ordained Rabbi. As an Orthodox Jew, Capt. S. Simcha Goldman wore his yarmulke at all times. The Air Force insisted that this was not within regulations. The case eventually reached the Supreme Court.

Mr. President, the legislation we are introducing today offers a reasonable solution to this problem. This bill would amend chapter 45 of title 10 of the United States Code to allow the wearing of all neat, unobtrusive, and conservative religious apparel. Specifically, the bill allows members of the Armed Forces to wear any neat, conservative, and unobtrusive item of apparel if the wearing of such apparel is part of the religious observance of the member, unless the wearing of such apparel interferes with the performance of the member's military duties.

This legislation would not only resolve cases involving the wearing of the yarmulke, but also allow military personnel of any religion to wear, within reason, appropriate religious apparel. I believe the Air Force and the Department of Defense interpreted too strictly regulations that prevented Captain Goldman from wearing his yarmulke indoors. Indeed, the Supreme Court's less than unanimous decision on this specific case left much room for debate. It is uncertain whether the Supreme Court would have affirmed the lower courts decision if Goldman had not joined the Air Force of his own choice. I question whether we can afford to preclude a certain group within our society from voluntary military service because of their centuries-old legitimate religious beliefs concerning the wearing of certain types of religious apparel.

For this reason, Mr. President, I feel it is necessary for a legislative solution. Obtrusive and possibly interfering apparel should not be allowed, especially if such apparel would hinder the effectiveness of the service man or woman. In addition, religious apparel should not hinder the effectiveness of other military personnel. This is straightforward legislation that further strengthens the right of freedom of religion in this country. I have discussed this legislation with many groups, including the Anti-Defamation League. Our Armed Forces should not be in the position of completely dictating what religious behavior is acceptable.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to join with me on this important piece of legislation, and I urge its quick passage into law. I also ask unanimous consent that the full text of this legislation be printed in the Record at the conclusion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

S. 2269

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. WEARING RELIGIOUS APPAREL NOT PART OF THE OFFICIAL UNIFORM

(a) In General.—Chapter 45 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 774 as section 775; and

(2) inserting after section 773 the following new section:

"§ 774. Wearing religious apparel

"(a) Except as provided in subsection (b), a member of the armed forces may wear an item of religious apparel if—

"(1) the wearing of the item of apparel is part of the religious observance of the religious faith practiced by the member; and

"(2) the item of apparel is neat, conservative, and unobtrusive.

"(b) The Secretary concerned may prohibit a member from wearing an item of religious apparel if the Secretary determines that the wearing of such item significantly interferes with the performance of the member's military duties.".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—The table of chapters at the beginning of such chapter is amended—

(1) by redesignating the item relating to section 774 as 775; and

(2) by inserting below the item relating to section 774 the following new item:

"774. Wearing religious apparel.".●

S. 2270. A bill to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to deter immigration-related marriage fraud and other immigration fraud; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

IMMIGRATION MARRIAGE FRAUD

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I am introducing legislation today which will help solve what has become a serious problem for this country.

Mr. President, what is the quickest and easiest method to enter the United States legally? By marrying a U.S. citizen or permanent resident alien. Under our immigration laws, spouses are given special priority in the preference system and are allowed to immigrate faster than anyone else. Because of the special place spouses hold in our immigration pecking order, they are allowed to "leapfrog" ahead of brothers and sisters and others in the preference system who must endure lengthy waits.

For example, brothers and sisters of United States citizens awaiting United States immigrant visas from the Philippines must wait more than 10 years to enter legally. Those from Mexico face a 9-year wait and those from Hong Kong a 7- to 13-year wait.

According to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, 149,296 people entered the United States as spouses of U.S. citizens or permanent resident aliens in 1984, a 43-percent increase since 1977. While it is difficult to determine exactly how many of these were fraudulent marriages, the INS's internal surveys show that 30 percent of all petitions they receive involve suspect marital relationships.

Our Nation's policy of giving spouses first preference has been widely and shamelessly abused. Immigration marriage fraud has become a lucrative industry which allows an unscrupulous alien to remain in the United States with a green card.

Since October 1, 1985, the INS district office in Chicago has investigated 182 cases involving fraudulent marriages. It receives approximately 10 telephone calls and 5 letters per day charging marriage fraud.

There are two types of marriage fraud. The first is the most harmful and difficult to rectify. This usually involves an unwitting U.S. citizen or permanent resident being duped by an alien who never intends to remain married but who enters into the marriage solely for the immigration benefit he or she will receive. In these cases usually the U.S. citizen is without recourse because of the scarce investigative resources the INS currently has and because of the difficult legal tests to bring the alien to justice.

The second type involves the complicity of an alien and a U.S. citizen who intentionally enter into a marriage knowing that it will be terminated or annulled at some point in the future. Normally, the U.S. citizen receives a sum of money—between $500 and $10,000—to say "I do" which he or she collects after performing the crime.

In June 1985, the Subcommittee on Immigration and Refugee Policy, chaired by our distinguished colleague, Senator ALAN SIMPSON, held a hearing on marriage fraud. Several witnesses testified about the first type of fraud. They related stories about how they were duped by aliens claiming to be in love but who were only after the immigration benefit. One alien admitted to his American wife that she had only been his "ticket to America" and left her shortly.

Another case came to my attention from a constituent in Chicago whose daughter had been the victim of this kind of fraud. Shortly after the new husband had convinced his wife to petition for his permanent residency—which he received quickly—he left her, explaining that he had married her only for his green card. Legal battles proved fruitless in this case because of the standard of proof to convict him. The bride was told that she would have to prove that the alien had intended to defraud her from the start. According to the victim's family, to satisfy this standard, "We had to get inside of his mind. * * *" This demonstrates how difficult it is to remedy this type of crime.

The second marriage fraud scheme involves the complicity of a U.S. citizen and an alien. These are often arranged by marriage fraud rings which organize tens or hundreds of fraudulent marriages. In these cases, the organizer charges an alien several thousand dollars to have a fraudulent marriage arranged. The organizer then pays the U.S. citizen a portion of the fee for his or her participation in the marriage.

The INS in Chicago recently concluded a case involving three U.S. citizens who conspired in the arrangement of 29 sham marriages. In this case, the conspirators charged each male alien between $1,500 and $3,000 to arrange a fraudulent marriage.

Another case involved 5 U.S. citizens and 4 aliens who were known to have arranged 27 sham marriages. The arrangers were receiving between $2,500 and $3,000 from each male for whom they arranged fraudulent marriages. Each U.S. citizen female was receiving approximately $1,000 for marrying the alien men and for filing a petition to adjust status to that of lawful permanent resident on their behalf. In April 1985, eight defendants pled guilty and were sentenced.

These cases, however, point out the problem the Service currently faces: lack of resources. Currently, the INS has less than 700 investigators nationwide to cover all types of immigration fraud, including but not limited to marriage fraud. In marriage fraud cases, they are only able to devote their efforts to marriage fraud rings. During fiscal year 1984 alone, the INS investigated 62 marriage fraud rings.

There is another problem with current law in the area of fiancé(e) petitions. Right now, an alien can enter the country as a fiancé(e) as long as he or she intends to marry within 90 days. Section 214(d) of the Immigration and Nationality Act—8 U.S.C. 1184—says that an alien may receive a temporary fiancé(e) visa if the parties "* * * have a bona fide intention to marry and are legally able and actually willing to conclude a valid marriage in the United States within * * * 90 days after the alien's arrival."

If the marriage takes place within 90 days, the alien may receive his or her permanent resident status within a matter of weeks.

There is a gaping hole in the current statute which has helped create a large number of active and highly lucrative "mail-order bride" businesses. Because the current statute does not require that the two parties must meet each other prior to having a visa approved, a U.S. citizen may petition for someone he or she has never met.

In fiscal year 1984 alone, 11,721 alien fiancé(e)s were admitted to the United States. Of these, 4,935 adjusted their status to permanent resident status through marriage and 1,438 departed the United States, leaving 5,348 or nearly 45 percent unaccounted for. So, even though the intent of the statute was to make it easier for an alien fiancé(e) to be with the U.S. citizen petitioner before marriage, in a large number of cases the law is not being used for legitimate purposes.

My staff obtained a copy of a "mail-order bride" catalog which contains pictures of a number of foreign women, short descriptions of each, and instructions on how to subscribe to the company's service. The company helps the client complete the necessary INS forms to get the woman into the United States. This sort of business is alien to our culture and there is a real possibility that the alien will never marry and end up as one of the 45-percent alien fiancé(e)s unaccounted for, or marry for nothing other than the immigration benefits which can later be accorded.

The bill that I am introducing today contains several provisions which would drastically reduce the incidence of marriage fraud in three ways.

Instead of immediately receiving permanent resident status, the alien, under this bill, will be placed in a 1-year conditional resident status before he or she is given permanent residence. After this 1-year conditional status, the alien will have to provide evidence of the following things before receiving his or her permanent resident status:

First, that the marriage was not entered into for the purpose of procuring an alien's entry as an immigrant.

Second, the marriage has not been judicially annulled or terminated, other than through the death of a spouse.

Third, that no fee or other consideration—other than a lawyer's fee—was given for the filing of a petition under section 204(a) or 214(d); and

Fourth, the parties to the marriage have maintained a bona fide marital relationship, as evidenced by cohabitation, ownership of property jointly, filing of joint tax returns, or other relevant evidence during the previous period.

This sends a strong signal to those who, either through complicity or deceit, intend to use marriage solely for immigration purposes. This will discourage those who use the current system as an easy way to get permanent resident status.

Another beneficiary of this provision will be the INS. Currently, it is only able to invest its scarce investigative resources and personnel to marriage fraud rings, an extremely labor-intensive and costly undertaking. Since the alien will have to report back to the INS within 1 year to prove that the marriage was and is valid, the INS will not need to spend weeks on stakeouts and fact gathering as they do now since the burden will be each applicant to come back and prove that the marriage is still valid.

This provision will still allow the alien spouse to receive the benefits currently accorded. The only difference between the current system and this provision is that the alien must provide evidence, after 1 year, that there was no fraud involved in the receipt of his or her permanent resident status. Mr. President, this is a reasonable and fair approach to this problem. It does not allow the Government to overstep the bounds of personal liberties which the Constitution currently affords.

During the June 1985 hearing the Subcommittee on Immigration and Refugee Policy held, one of the witnesses testified that:

> * * * the United States should borrow something from the British. An alien marrying a British subject is granted, upon application, a nonimmigrant visa good for 1 year; the alien is allowed to work in the UK, to enter and leave the country, and, 1 year later to apply for permanent status if the marriage is still valid. (Emphasis is text.) If granted, the 1 year of nonimmigrant status can be counted toward naturalization. Neither the British subject nor the new spouse loses anything in this process but it must discourage abuse of the system and it certainly prevents any Briton from marrying an alien for money more than once a year. (Hearing on Immigration Marriage Fraud, Subcommittee on Immigration and Refugee Policy, Committee on the Judiciary, U.S. Senate, S. Hrng. 99-325 Serial No. J-99-43, July 26, 1985, p. 61.)

The provision in this bill would allow the alien to live and work in the United States, just as he or she is allowed now, but would require that he or she certify to the Government that the marriage is still valid 1 year later. If it is valid, that first year will be counted toward naturalization. This to me, Mr. President, is a sound and reasonable change to our current law.

The bill also provides that the Commissioner has the discretion to waive the requirement this bill places on fiancé(e) petitions if he is presented with an exceptional case.

I have asked the General Accounting Office [GAO] to investigate how other countries issue spousal and fiancé(e) visas and whether marriage fraud presents as big a problem to them. The results of this study should be available in May or June of this year and I am hopeful that the subcommittee can act after it receives the GAO report.

There have been some suggestions that this bill include a provision which would not only require that both parties meet in person but that they also speak the same language. Such a provision goes beyond what is desirable and would cause serious problems for the spouses of many U.S. service personnel.

The bill also insures that those who attempt to commit marriage fraud, but who are unsuccessful, be excluded from ever entering the United States. Congress should send an extremely strong signal that this is a serious crime which deserves stiff penalties.

My friend from Wyoming, Senator SIMPSON, should be congratulated for bringing this issue to the public's attention. It is my hope that in the next few months we can enact legislation and move to reduce this problem.●

By Mr. DENTON (for himself and Mr. HEFLIN):

S. 2271. A bill for the relief of Jens-Peter Berndt; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

FOR THE RELIEF OF JENS-PETER BERNDT

Mr. DENTON. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation for the relief of Jens-Peter Berndt. The bill would grant permanent residence to Mr. Berndt and expedite his naturalization as a citizen of the United States.

Mr. Berndt, or Peter, is 22 years old and a native of the German Democratic Republic, better known as East Germany, a Communist-bloc state. On January 7, 1985, while in Oklahoma City as a member of the East German swim team, Peter requested and was granted political asylum in the United States. He made that courageous decision, at great personal risk, because he wanted to become an American and live in freedom.

Peter was fortunate to be legally adopted in the summer of 1985, by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Patterson of Birmingham, AL. The Pattersons have provided him with the love, family life, and guidance that have been so immeasurably important in assisting Peter in making the transition to American life.

Peter is currently enrolled as a sophomore at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa, where he is a member of the swim team and has established an outstanding academic record. He is an amateur swimmer of Olympic caliber, and is a former world record holder in the 400-meter individual medley. Unfortunately, Peter was prevented from competing in the 1984 Summer Olympic Games in Los Angeles due to the Soviet-sponsored boycott of the Games which was joined by East Germany.

It is Peter's desire, and that of the U.S. Olympic Swimming Team, that he compete for the United States in the 1988 Olympic games. However, in order tó do so, the rules of the U.S. Olympic Committee require that he be a U.S. citizen. Furthermore, he must be a citizen in order to compete in a number of key international swimming meets which begin this summer and are important preliminary steps to qualifying for the 1988 Olympic Team.

Without private relief legislation, Peter would not satisfy the residency and physical presence requirements for naturalization under section 316 of the Immigration and Nationality Act until 1990. The bill I am introducing provides that he be deemed to have satisfied the residency and physical presence requirements so that he may be naturalized at the earliest possible date. This will permit Peter to represent the United States in upcoming international competition and the 1988 Olympics.

The bill also provides that Peter be admitted for permanent residence in the United States, as that is a prerequisite for naturalization. Although he is lawfully present in the United States by reason of his asylum status, he has not yet been granted permanent resident status.

Finally, the bill provides that Peter will not be ineligible for U.S. citizenship because of his former life in a Communist country. Peter was raised in a country in which, tragically, Communist repression permeates every segment of public and private life, and in which athletes, in particular, are exploited for the government's purposes. Peter did not choose to be born into such a system; but, when the time came to make a choice, he bravely chose to be free and to be an American.

If Peter's only interest was to compete in international competition and the 1988 Olympics, he could become a West German citizen automatically and swim for West Germany. But that is not his sole motivation. As Peter says, "I want to become an American, not a West German."

I am proud to sponsor legislation to assist this fine young man in his quest for American citizenship. His story is an inspiration to us all and an embodiment of the American dream in its finest sense. He has demonstrated his devotion to American ideals and his desire and willingness to work hard to succeed in this country. I believe Peter will make an outstanding citizen, and I urge my colleagues to support the bill vigorously and to expedite its movement to final passage.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

S. 2271

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) notwithstanding paragraphs (14) and (28) of section 212(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, for purposes of such Act, Jens-Peter Berndt shall be held and considered to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of the date of the enactment of this Act. Upon the granting of permanent residence to such alien as provided for in this Act, the number of refugee admissions available for adjustment of status of aliens under section 209(b) of such Act shall be reduced by one number.

(b)(1) Jens-Peter Berndt shall be held and considered to have satisfied the provisions of section 316 of the Immigration and Nationality Act which relate to required periods of residence and physical presence within the United States and shall not be held or considered to be within any of the classes of persons described in section 313 of such Act.

(2) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 310(d) of such Act, Jens-Peter Berndt may be naturalized at any time after the date of enactment of this Act if otherwise eligible for naturalization under this Act and the Immigration and Nationality Act.

By Mr. QUAYLE:

S. 2272. A bill to limit the amount that may be expended in any fiscal year by a Member of Congress for franked mail; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

FRANKING COST CONTROL ACT

● Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, it is time that we take some effective action to control our ever-escalating franking costs. I introduced a bill on this subject on February 6, 1986, but with further study and consultation with many colleagues I have developed a more effective approach.

The February 1986 issue of "Senate History" reported on the interesting and amusing history of the 19th century abuses of the frank that led to its temporary abolition in 1873 and its restoration in 1891. The current problem is nothing like that of the post-Civil War era; the reform we need now is nothing as drastic as abolition. In the prior era, the frank was misused; now it is overused.

The growth of franking costs has been well documented. We all know that these costs tend to be higher in even-numbered election years, and the growth from one such year to another has been phenomenal. From 1978 to 1980, franking costs increased by 36 percent; from 1980 to 1982, they increased by 51 percent; from 1982 to 1984, the increase was "only" 14 percent; and, if we do not act, franking costs will rise by an estimated 32 percent from 1984 to 1986. Unless we act to curb them, franking costs will have risen almost $100 million in just 8 years—from the 1978 level of $47 million to the $146 million projected for this year.

Under current law, there is no effective limit on the amount of franking costs that may be incurred by the Congress as a whole, because there is no effective limit on the amount that may be incurred by any Senator or Representative. As a practical matter—even if not as a matter of legal theory—the frank is an entitlement; we can run up the costs as high as we like, and then the taxpayer is obligated to pay the bill.

I doubt this frank-now-and-pay-later approach was ever justified, but I am absolutely certain that it is inappropriate in these days when we are trying to get the budget under control. We are freezing, reducing, and capping programs of vital concern to all our citizens. We should do no less with programs that concern and benefit Senators and Representatives.

Today I am introducing a very simple proposal that is an elaboration of a bill, S. 2059, which I introduced on February 6, 1986. I intend to offer this new bill as an amendment to the supplemental appropriations bill in lieu of the $42 million additional for official mail costs that has been included in that measure as reported by the House Appropriations Committee. The basic thrust of my bill is that the frank, or more correctly "official mail costs," should be treated as a regular budgeted item rather than as an entitlement. In other words, Congress should be limited to the amount that it votes through the regular appropriation process, instead of spending as much as it likes and making up the difference in a supplemental.

I can see no reason why we should not decide on an appropriate amount for official mail costs, and then live within our budget. I have little doubt that we will come up with a reasonable amount as long as it is done openly during the appropriation process and in the context of competing priorities for scarce funds. The difficult issue, it seems to me, is not the principle, but how to convert it into practice.

My bill would implement franking cost control by giving each Senator and each Representative an allowance for official mail. Each Member will be forbidden to spend more than that amount. Enforcement of this limit would be achieved by regular public reports on the amount of each Member's allocation and the amount of his or her spending.

It is, of course, crucial that the system of allocation be fair, and my bill meets that test. The available amounts are split evenly between the House of Representatives and the Senate. Five percent is set aside from the amount available to each House to cover the mailing costs of the body as a whole, such as those incurred by the Clerk of the House, the Secretary of the Senate, and the legal counsels. The amount remaining for the House is divided among the Members equally; that for the Senate is divided among Senators proportionately to the population of their States.

I recognize that it will be difficult to implement this franking cost control system in the middle of a fiscal year, but that is still better than voting for the $42 million supplemental reported by the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives. Under my bill, the amounts available for the remainder of 1986; that is, the amount, appropriated—$100 million—less the amount of the sequester—$4.3 million—less the amount already spent, as determined by the Post Office, would be allocated in the same way as the full appropriation would be allocated in later years.

Fiscal responsibility is never easy, and it is regrettably hard to apply it to Congress. But if we cannot control the frank, public indignation will force us to abolish it once again, and that would be a great mistake. As Senator F.T. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey said in debate over 100 years ago, the frank "is a most valuable right" because it provides for "free and unrestrained communication between the people and their representatives."

I ask unanimous consent that the February 1986 "Senate History" article on the franking privilege, and the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2272

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Franking Cost Control Act".

SEC. 2. Section 3210 of title 39, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, the total amount which may be incurred by a Member of Congress for official mail costs for any fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1987), and for the period beginning on March 15, 1986, and ending on September 30, 1986, shall not exceed the amount allocated to such Member for such fiscal year or period, as the case may be, in accordance with this subsection.

"(2)(A) Not later than September 30 of each year (beginning in 1986) the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate, with respect to Senators, and the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, with respect to Members of the House of Representatives, shall, for the fiscal year beginning on October 1 of such year (beginning with fiscal year 1987)—

"(i) determine, in accordance with this subsection, the allocation of official mail costs for each Senator or each Member of the House of Representatives, as the case may be, for such fiscal year; and

"(ii) provide written notice to each Senator or each Member of the House of Representatives, as the case may be, of the allocation of such Senator or Member of the House of Representatives under this subsection for such fiscal year.

"(B) Not later than 10 days after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate, with respect to Senators, and the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, with respect to Members of the House of Representatives, shall, for the period beginning March 15, 1986, and ending September 30, 1986, make the allocations described in clause (i) of subparagraph (A), and provide the notices required by clause (ii) of such subparagraph.

"(3) The allocation of each Member of Congress under this section for a fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1987) shall be determined as follows:

"(A) The total amount to be allocated for official mail costs for all Members of Congress for a fiscal year shall be the amount which is equal to the difference between—

"(i) the total amount appropriated under section 3216(a) of this title for such fiscal year, minus

"(ii) the product of the amount described in clause (i) of this subparagraph multiplied by 5 percent.

"(B) The allocation of a Senator under this subsection for a fiscal year shall be an amount which is equal to the product of—

"(i) one-half of the amount determined for such fiscal year under subparagraph (A), multiplied by

"(ii) the ratio that the population of the state represented by the Senator bears to the population of all States, multiplied by

"(iii) 50 percent.

"(C) The allocation of each Member of the House of Representatives under this subsection for a fiscal year shall be equal to the quotient obtained by dividing one-half of the amount determined for such fiscal year under subparagraph (A) by the total number of Members of the House of Representatives.

"(4) The allocation of each Member of Congress under this section for the period beginning March 15, 1986, and ending September 30, 1986, shall be determined as follows:

"(A) The total amount available for official mail costs for the period beginning March 15, 1986, and ending September 30, 1986, shall be the amount equal to the difference between—

"(i) the total amount appropriated under section 3216(a) of this title for fiscal year 1986 (after making the reduction required for such fiscal year by the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985), minus

"(ii) the total amount of official mail costs incurred by the officers and employees specified in section 3216(a)(1)(A) of this title during the period beginning October 1, 1985, and ending March 14, 1986, as determined by the Postmaster General pursuant to paragraph (7) of this subsection.

"(B) The total amount to be allocated for official mail costs for all Members of Congress for the period beginning March 15, 1986, and ending September 30, 1986, shall be an amount which is equal to the difference between—

"(i) the amount determined for such period pursuant to subparagraph (A), minus

"(ii) the product of the amount described in clause (i) of this subparagraph multiplied by 5 percent.

"(C) The allocation of a Senator under this subsection for the period beginning March 15, 1986, and ending September 30, 1986, shall be an amount which is equal to the product of—

"(i) one-half of the amount determined for such period under subparagraph (B), multiplied by

"(ii) the ratio that the population of the State represented by the Senator bears to the population of all States, multiplied by

"(iii) 50 percent.

"(D) The allocation of each Member of the House of Representatives under this subsection for the period beginning March 15, 1986, and ending September 30, 1986, shall be equal to the quotient obtained by dividing one-half of the amount determined for such period under subparagraph (B) by the total number of Members of the House of Representatives.

"(5)(A) In any case in which a Member of Congress is defeated in an election, the allocation of such Member under this subsection for the fiscal year or period in which the term of office of such Member ends shall be divided between such Member and the Member-elect to the office of such Member in proportion to the number of months that such Member and such Member-elect hold such office during such fiscal year or period.

"(B) In any case in which there is a vacancy in the office of a Member of Congress, the allocation of such Member under this subsection for the fiscal year or period in which such vacancy occurs shall be divided between such Member and the successor in office to such Member in proportion to the number of months that such Member and such successor hold such office during such fiscal year or period.

"(6) Not later than 10 days after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate, with respect to Senators, and the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, with respect to Members of the House of Representatives, shall prescribe rules and procedures to ensure that Senators and Members of the House of Representatives, as the case may be, comply with the provisions of this subsection.

"(7) Not later than 7 days after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Postmaster General shall prepare and transmit to the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate and the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives a statement specifying the best estimate of the Postmaster General of the amount described in clause (ii) of paragraph (4)(A).

"(8) Not later than 15 days after the end of each quarter of a fiscal year, the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate, with respect to Senators, and the Committee on House Administration of the House of Representatives, with respect to Members of the House of Representatives, shall make available to the public a statement specifying—

"(A) the amount of official mail costs incurred by each Senator or each Member of the House of Representatives, as the case may be, during such quarter; and

"(B) in the case of—

"(i) fiscal year 1987 and each succeeding fiscal year, the allocation of each Senator or each Member of the House of Representatives, as the cse may be, under this subsection for such fiscal year; or

"(ii) fiscal year 1986, the allocation of each Senator or each Member of the House of Representatives, as the case may be, under this subsection for the period beginning March 15, 1986, and ending September 30, 1986.

"(9) For purposes of this section, the term 'official mail costs' means the equivalent of—

"(A) postage on, and fees and charges in connection with, mail matter sent through the mails under the franking privilege; and

"(B) those portions of the fees and charges to be paid for handling and delivery by the Postal Service of Mailgrams considered as franked mail under section 3219 of this title.".

SENATE HISTORY

WHEN THE SENATE GAVE UP THE FRANK

Franking privileges—the ability to send mail by one's signature rather than by postage—date back to the British House of Commons in the seventeenth century. The American Continental Congress adopted this procedure in 1775, and the First Congress wrote it into law in 1789. In addition to senators and representatives, the president, cabinet secretaries, and certain other executive branch officials also were granted the frank. In those days, every newspaper printer could send one paper postage free to every other newspaper printer in the country.

Then as now the frank was a controversial perquisite. Some nineteenth century senators mailed home their laundry each week, enclosing another frank for sending it back. Others franked barrels of china for free, but registered them for a few cents, thus making the government liable for any breakage. At the end of each session most members franked home a trunk that might contain documents, office paraphernalia, bedding, and other household goods. Legend had it that one antebellum senator attached his frank to his horse's bridle and sent the animal home to Pittsburgh. Critics accused incumbents of flooding the mails with government documents, speeches, and packages of seeds all designed to enhance their reelection prospects. The seeds, provided by the Department of Agriculture, were especially popular during the years when the rural population still outnumbered city dwellers. (One congressman received a letter from a constituent thanking him for the very fine grass seeds, but asking him to send no more since his canary had died.)

Constituents often asked congressmen to frank envelopes for their own use. One member boasted that if the papers were properly arranged he could write his frank three hundred times an hour. In the years following the Civil War, congressmen began having their signatures reproduced on rubber stamps, and having additional rubber stamps made for their friends to use. In 1869 it was estimated that a ton of free mail was leaving the Washington post office daily, only a small portion of which was the type of official correspondence originally intended to be franked. Gail Hamilton once described the franking habits of her cousin, House Speaker and later Senator James G. Blaine: "until /the frank/ was abolished, he used it freely, franking his own letters and letters of friends who happened to be under his roof, or under whose roof he happened to be, as he has been from the foundation of the frank, and just as freely he used his purchased postage stamps after the frank was abolished."

Hamilton's allusion to the abolition of the frank referred to a curious hiatus, between 1873 and 1891, when Congress relinquished its franking privileges. Pressure for reform had been mounting for years, led by various Postmasters General who objected to carrying large quantities of government mail without reimbursement. In 1869, Postmaster General John Creswell recommended against continuing the "evil" of franked mail as a means of reducing his department's deficit and making it more selfsustaining. The movement for this reform drew popular support during the administration of Ulysses S. Grant (1869-1877) when the public perceived widespread extravagance and corruption in the executive and legislative branches of the government. In 1872, the Republican party platform carried a plank demanding an end to the frank, and when Congress returned to session that December, following the election, many senators believed it time to enact that campaign promise into law.

The House passed H.R. 2982 to abolish the franking system and to charge previously franked correspondence at the prevailing rates of postage. However, the House bill also provided for special stamps for the free mailing of official House and Senate documents. When the bill reached the Senate floor, on January 22, 1873, this special stamp provision ran into opposition. Senator Hannibal Hamlin of Maine noted that the House bill "provides for the distribution of all your public matter, not your speeches, not your own private correspondence; but for all public printed matter stamps are to be furnished to the Secretary of the Senate, and by him to members." This arrangement, protested Hamlin, would do nothing to curb "the astonishing amount of useless public printing that is done." Senator George Edmunds of Vermont added that the Post Office intended to provide Senators with special machines to stamp official documents. "I have heard it said by the enemies of our great party, Mr. President, that the Post Office Department was a machine," Edmunds declared, "but I did not know that it was going into the business of making other machines, to be furnished to the various bureau officers, and so on, for the propagation of information among the people otherwise than by writing." The idea of machine stamped mail seemed deceitful to Edmunds. "If we have told the people of the United States in our /Republican/ convention at Philadelphia that we were going to abolish the franking privilege, where is the use of saying to them we have abolished it when we have not?"

A few senators spoke in favor of the frank. Senator F.T. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey defended "free and unrestrained communications between the people and their representatives," and argued that "the franking privilege has done much to promote human rights and liberty. . . . It is a most valuable right to those that I represent. It belongs to my constituents." Nevertheless, the Senate voted 33 to 15 for an amendment prohibiting compensation for postage of any sort. The bill then went to conference where House members tried to make the Senate's restrictions less sweeping, but failed. Abolition of the frank became law on January 31, 1873. A month later, as the 42nd Congress prepared to adjourn, its members voted themselves a pay raise from $5,000 to $7,500 a year, and made it retroactive over the past two years. Public indignation over the "salary grab" was intense, forcing the 43rd Congress to rescind the pay increase and obliterating whatever credit Congress might have won for cost-saving through abolishing its frank.

The next eighteen years saw a gradual restoration of the frank. In 1874, legislation provided for reduced postal rates for sending the Congressional Record and other public documents, and in 1875 they again became postage-free. Senator Edmunds, who sponsored this provision, cited the "large number of public documents . . . accumulated in our committee rooms." The 1875 law also allowed for free mailing of seeds and agricultural reports. In 1883 an act made it the duty of other government departments to enclose franked envelopes in all official communications with senators and representatives requiring responses. Finally, in 1891, Congress quietly restored full franking privileges for all its correspondence. Proponents argued that abolition of the frank had not made the slightest improvement in the Post Office's financial picture, and noted that members of Congress were the only government officials required to pay postage on their public mailings. Qualified, defined, and regulated frequently over the years since 1891, the franking of mail remains an important link in the communications between members of Congress and their constituents.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE ACQUISITION REORGANIZATION ACT

DIXON (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1728

(Ordered referred to the Committee on Armed Services.)

Mr. DIXON (for himself, Mr. Quayle, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Nunn) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill (S.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

2151) to amend title 10, United States Code, to establish within the Office of the Secretary of Defense an Office of Defense Acquisition for the centralized procurement of all property and services for the Department of Defense, to provide for an Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, and for other purposes; as follows:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Department of Defense Acquisition Reorganization Act of 1986".

SEC. 2. UNDER SECRETARY OF DEFENSE FOR ACQUISITION.

(a) Establishment of Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition.—Section 135 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking out "Research and Engineering" in the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "Acquisition";

(B) by adding "or Under Secretary for Acquisition" after "Policy" in the third sentence; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Only a person who is well qualified by reason of education, training, and experience in industry may be appointed Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition.";

(2) in subsection (b), by striking out all after the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition shall perform such duties and exercise such powers relating to the determination of requirements for weapons systems development and the acquisition of property and services for the Department of Defense as the Secretary of Defense may prescribe, including—

"(1) setting overall policy for procurement, research and development, logistics, testing, independent cost assessments, and the defense industrial base;

"(2) supervising the performance of the entire acquisition system;

"(3) establishing policy for administrative oversight and auditing of defense contractors;

"(4) all of the contract administration and contract audit functions of the Department of Defense;

"(5) the supervision, direction, and control of—

"(A) the competition advocates general of the agencies of the Department of Defense;

"(B) the functions and personnel of the Defense Acquisition Regulatory Council;

"(C) the functions and personnel of the Defense Logistics Agency;

"(D) the functions and personnel of the Office of Small and Disadvantaged Business Utilization for the Office of the Secretary of Defense, established pursuant to section 15(k) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 644(k)); and

"(E) the functions and personnel involved in the acquisition of command, control, communications and intelligence systems; and

"(6) cochair, with a senior military official designated by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Joint Requirements and Management Board. The Under Secretary shall be the acquisition executive of the Department of Defense."; and

(3) in subsection (c)—

(A) by striking out "Policy" in the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "Acquisition"; and

(B) by striking out the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The Under Secretary of Defense for Policy takes precedences in the Department of Defense immediately after the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition."

(b) Assistant Secretaries of Defense.—Section 136(b) of such title is amended by—

(1) in paragraph (5) by striking "Intelligence. He" and inserting in lieu thereof "Intelligence, and shall, subject to the authority, direction and control of the Secretary of Defense and the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition,"; and

(2) adding at the end the following:

"(7) One of the Assistant Secretaries shall be the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering and shall, subject to the authority, direction, and control of the Secretary of Defense and the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, perform such duties relating to research and engineering as may be prescribed, including—

"(A) being principal advisor to the Secretary and Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition on scientific and technical matters;

"(B) supervising all research and engineering activities in the Department of Defense; and

"(C) directing, controlling, assigning, and reassigning those research and engineering activities that the Secretary of Defense and the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition determine should have centralized management.".

(c) Director of Operational Test and Evaluation to Report to Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition.—Section 136a(d) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) striking out "Secretary of Defense" and inserting in lieu thereof "Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition"; and

(2) striking out "Under Secretary" and inserting in lieu thereof "Assistant Secretary".

SEC. 3. APPROVAL OF CERTAIN ACTIONS BY UNDER SECRETARY OF DEFENSE FOR ACQUISITION

(a) In General.—Chapter 137 of such title is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§ 2325. Approval of new starts, full-scale development, or production

"A major system new start, or the full-scale development of a major system, or the procurement of a major system, may not be entered into unless the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition has reviewed and approved the Acquisition program. In reviewing any proposed program for the acquisition of a major system, the Under Secretary shall evaluate the plans and requirements for the system, determine the necessity for production, consider the commonality of parts and components of the system, and consider the complexity and practicality of the system.".

(b) Reduction of Headquarters Staff.—Within two years after the establishment of the office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, the total number of civilian and military personnel assigned or detailed to permanent duty in the headquarters staffs reporting to the Under Secretary shall be reduced by a number equal to 10 percent of the number of civilian and military personnel assigned or detailed to permanent duty in such headquarters staffs reporting to the Under Secretary on the date of the enactment of this Act. Except in time of war or during a national emergency declared by Congress, the number of persons assigned to duty in the headquarters staffs reporting to the Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition may not be increased after the reduction required by the preceding sentence.

(c) Development of Policies and Programs for Procurement Personnel.—The Secretary of Defense shall develop appropriate policies and programs for the career recruiting, training, development, and placement of personnel of the Department of Defense assigned to duty in a procurement function of the Department. Such policies shall take into account the procurement management personnel requirements provided for in chapter 85 of title 19, United States Code.

SEC. 4. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS TO TITLE 5, UNITED STATES CODE

Title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 5313, by adding at the end the following new item:

"Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition."; and

(2) in section 5314—

(A) by striking out "Under Secretaries of Defense (2) and inserting in lieu thereof, "Under Secretary of Defense for Policy.".

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to provide for an Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, and for other purposes.".

● Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, today I am submitting an amendment to S. 2151, a bill I introduced on March 6, 1986, to establish within the Office of the Secretary of Defense a new position of Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition. This job will carry with it the responsibility for all procurement policy within the Department of Defense.

The amendment I am submitting today embraces the Packard Commission recommendations to the President on Defense acquisition. As a Member of the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Defense Acquisition Policy, I have been attending hearings chaired by Senator Quayle on the acquisition system. These hearings were called after the Armed Services Committee marked up the DOD reorganization bill and approved in principle my amendment to create an Under Secretary for Acquisition. The President has already implemented those Packard Commission recommendations which do not require legislative authority.

My amendment will complete the process. The amendment assures that the Under Secretary for Acquisition will be the Defense executive for acquisition with the mission to establish overall policy direction for acquisition that will have to be followed by the Department of Defense and the Services. This amendment gives the Under Secretary for Acquisition the authority to control the process for major system acquisition in DOD from inception through production. Acquisition does not begin on the production line; it begins in the laboratories. The process must therefore be a continuous one, and my amendment recognizes and underscores that premise.●

URANIUM MILL TAILINGS RECLAMATION ACT

DOMENICI AMENDMENT NO. 1729

(Ordered referred to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.)

Mr. DOMENICI submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1004) to revitalize the U.S. uranium industry and provide for reclamation and other remedial action with respect to active uranium and thorium processing sites, and to provide for a plan for the reorganization, self-financing, and eventual commercialization of the U.S. uranium enrichment program and facilities; as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE

This act may be cited as the "Uranium Revitalization and Tailings Reclamation Act of 1986"

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES

(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that—

(1) The United States uranium industry has long been recognized as vital to United States energy independence and as essential to United States national security, but has suffered a drastic economic setback, including a 90 percent reduction in employment, closure of almost all mills, more than a 75 percent drop in production, closure of many mines, and a permanent loss of uranium reserves;

(2) During the remainder of this century approximately 20 percent of United States electricity is expected to be produced from uranium fueled power reactors owned by domestic electric utilities.

(3) The United States has been the leading uranium producing nation and holds extensive proven reserves of natural uranium which offers the potential for secure sources of future supply.

(4) A variety of economic factors, policies of foreign governments, foreign export practices, new federal regulatory requirements, cancellation of nuclear powerplants and government uranium enrichment policies have caused most United States producers to close or suspend operations over the past five years and have resulted in the domestic uranium industry being found "not viable" by the Secretary of Energy.

(5) At the same time the United States Uranium Enrichment program has moved from a position of a virtual monopoly of the free world enrichment market to the highest priced enrichment supplier in a competitive market.

(6) Reestablishing a viable domestic uranium industry and a competitive domestic enrichment program are essential to:

(A) Assure an adequate long-term supply of domestic uranium and enrichment for the nation's nuclear power program to preclude an undue threat from foreign supply disruptions or price controls,

(B) Through foreign sales, aid in the nation's balance of trade payments, and

(C) Assist in our nation's nuclear non-proliferation efforts through our involvement in the nuclear fuel process.

(7) the Uranium Mill Tailings Radiation Control Act of 1978 (42 U.S.C. 7901 et seq.) was enacted to provide for the reclamation and regulation of uranium mill tailings;

(8) The owners or licensees of active uranium mills, the states in which active sites are located, the Federal Government, and owners or licensees of civilian nuclear power reactors have each benefitted from uranium produced at the active sites, and it is equitable that they share in the cost of reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action at the active sites.

(9) The Uranium Mill Tailings Radiation Control Act of 1978 (42 U.S.C. 7901 et seq.) did not provide for a comprehensive method of financing reclamation and remedial action at active uranium and thorium processing sites; and "The owners or licensees of active uranium mills, the states in which active mills are located, the Federal Government, and owner or licensees of civilian nuclear power reactors have each benefited from uranium produced at the active sites, and it is equitable that they share in the cost of reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action at the active sites. The funding formula contained herein will provide approximately, for an equal one-third sharing by the owners or licensees of active uranium mills, the Federal Government, and the owners or licensees of civilian nuclear power reactors, after considering sharing by the States."

(10) The creation of an assured system of financing will greatly facilitate and expedite reclamation and remedial actions at such active uranium and thorium processing sites. Financing should be shared on an equal basis by owners or licensees of active uranium mills, the Federal Government, and the owners or licensees of civilian nuclear power reactors with support from the States in which the active sites are located.

(11) Reorganization, self-financing and eventual commercialization of the Department of Energy's uranium enrichment program and facilities will improve the ability of U.S. enrichment services to compete with other suppliers, will improve the nation's balance of trade payments, will assure an adequate long term supply of domestic enrichment services and will preclude disruptions or excessive enrichment costs.

(b) Purpose.—It is the purpose of Congress with this Act to ensure an adequate long-term supply of domestic uranium and enrichment for the nation's nuclear power program; to re-establish a viable domestic uranium industry and re-establish a competitive domestic enrichment program, and to facilitate, expedite and establish a comprehensive system for financing reclamation and other remedial action at active uranium and thorium processing sites.

DEFINITIONS

Sec. 3. For Purposes of This Act.—(1) the terms "active uranium or thorium processing site" and "active site" mean—

(A) any uranium or thorium processing site, including the mill, containing byproduct material for which a license (issued by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission or its predecessor agency under the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, or by a State as permitted under section 274 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 2021)) for the production at such site of any uranium or thorium derived from ore—

(i) is in effect on January 1, 1978;

(ii) is issued or renewed after January 1, 1978; or

(iii) for which an application for renewal or issuance is pending on, or after, January 1, 1978; and

(B) any other real property or improvement on such real property that—

(i) is in the vicinity of such site; and

(ii) is determined by the Secretary, in consultation with the Commission, to be contaminated with residual byproduct material.

(2) The term "Administrator" means the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency.

(3) The term "byproduct material" has the meaning given such term in section 11e.(2) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2014(e)(2)).

(4) The term "civilian nuclear power reactor" means any civilian nuclear powerplant required to be licensed under section 103 or section 104 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2133).

(5) The term "Commission" means the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

(6) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Energy.

(7) The terms "source material" and "special nuclear material" have the meanings given such terms in section 11 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2014.)

(8) The term "tailings" means the wastes produced by the extraction or concentration of uranium or thorium from any ore processed primarily for its source material content.

(9) The term "reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action" includes long and short term monitoring, except for the purpose of determining the date for determining when reclamation decommissioning and other remedial action is complete for the purpose of making refunds under Section 215. Further, the term "reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action" shall include mill decommissioning only if the owner or licensee of an active site elects to make the contribution provided for in Section 213(b)(1)(C).

(10) The term "United States Usage Requirements" means the requirements for usage of at least fifty percent of the uranium contained in the aggregate of new fuel assemblies loaded in any civilian nuclear power reactor during any calendar year having been mined and milled in the United States, as provided in Sec. 112.

TITLE I—URANIUM REVITALIZATION NEGOTIATIONS TO VOLUNTARILY RESTRAIN URANIUM IMPORTS

Sec. 111. (a)(1) Negotiations Before United States Origin Usage Requirements.—The President, acting through the United States Trade Representative shall undertake negotiations with all major uranium producing countries for the purpose of achieving voluntary restraint agreements whereby the aggregate uranium not mined and milled in the United States contained in the aggregate of new fuel assemblies loaded in each domestic civilian nuclear power reactor during any calendar year beginning in 1988, and continuing until 2000, will not exceed fifty percent.

(2) A country shall be considered a major uranium producing country if there has been or likely will be, delivery of uranium mined or produced, in that country into the United States, of 3,000,000 pounds or more of U308 contained in uranium concentrate, or the equivalent amount of uranium, which has, or likely will be used for fuel in civilian nuclear power reactors during the years 1980 through 2000.

(3) If a country which is not considered a major uranium producing country on or before January 1, 1988, subsequently becomes a major uranium producing country thereafter, then the United States Trade Representative shall undertake negotiations with such country to achieve a voluntary restraint agreement accomplishing the purpose of this section.

(b) Action If Voluntary Restraint Agreements Take Effect.—If voluntary restraint agreements described in subsection (a) take effect between the United States and the major uranium producing countries, within one year from the date of enactment of this Act, the United States Trade Representative, with the cooperation of other appropriate Federal agencies, shall monitor the usage of uranium in domestic civilian nuclear power reactors during such period for the purpose of ascertaining if the terms of the agreements are being complied with. The United States Trade Representative shall report annually to the Congress on the results of the monitoring carried out with respect to that interval. Such annual report shall be submitted on or before March 1 of the year following the calendar year for which the report is prepared.

(c)(1) Action If Voluntary Restraint Agreements Not Entered.—Unless the President, through the United States Trade Representative, has reported to Congress within thirteen months after the date of this Act that all major uranium producing countries have entered into voluntary restraint agreements with the United States accomplishing the requirements of subsection (a) for the time period January 1, 1988 through December 31, 2000, then the United States Uranium Usage Requirements as provided in Sec. 112(a) shall become effective immediately.

(2) If voluntary restraint agreements entered into under subsection (a) are not complied with for any reason, including, the expiration, cancellation, termination, amendment or modification of such agreements, then the United States Uranium Usage Requirements as provided in Sec. 112(a) shall become effective immediately.

UNITED STATES URANIUM USAGE REQUIREMENT

Sec. 112. (a) In General.—If the United States Uranium Usage Requirement becomes effective as provided in Sec. 111(c), then at least fifty percent of the uranium contained in the aggregate of new fuel assemblies loaded into any civilian nuclear power reactor during any calendar year beginning January 1, 1988, and continuing until December 31, 2000, shall have been mined, and milled in the United States, subject to the provisions of subsection (b).

(b)(1) In making the calculation required in Sec. 112(a), uranium mined and milled in a country other than the United States included in new fuel assemblies loaded in a civilian nuclear power reactor during any calendar year shall not be considered if it was obtained under the terms of a contract for the purchase of uranium executed prior to April 8, 1986 between the licensee of such civilian nuclear power reactor and the supplier, including such contract as to which the quantity is fixed but with flexibility as to date of delivery, and including a contract with a domestic supplier which allows the supplier to select the origin of the uranium delivered. Uranium mined and milled in a country other than the United States included in new fuel assemblies loaded into a civilian nuclear power reactor during any calendar year shall be considered in calculating the requirements in Sec. 112(a) if it was obtained under the terms of contract executed on or after April 8, 1986 or obtained under an option which was exercised on or after April 8, 1986 or obtained under a contract executed before April 8, 1986 but which is modified or extended to increase the quantity of foreign source uranium delivered.

(2) If, as a result of certain foreign source uranium not being considered as provided in this subsection for the purpose of calculating the requirements of Sec. 112(a), less than 50% of the total uranium contained in the aggregate of new fuel assemblies loaded in such reactor from January 1, 1988 until December 31, 2000 will have been actually mined and milled in the United States, then all uranium loaded into the civilian nuclear power reactor, except that not considered as provided in this subsection, shall be uranium mined and milled in the United States until it is assured that at least 50% of the total uranium in the aggregate of fuel assemblies in such reactor from January 1, 1988 until December 31, 2000 will have been actually mined and milled in the United States.

(c) The percentages of foreign source uranium and uranium mined and milled in the United States, will be determined by dividing the weight of uranium mined and milled in the United States or enriched in the United States, in the aggregate of new fuel assemblies loaded into each civilian nuclear power reactor during a calendar year by the total weight of uranium in the new fuel loaded into such reactor during that year. For the purpose of this calculation, fuel loadings begun in one calendar year and which are completed in the following year will be counted in the year that the refueling outage was completed. Uranium weights and origins in the new fuel assemblies will be determined from the uranium weights and origin indicated on the DOE/NRC Form 741 for the new fuel assembly.

Sec. 113. (a) Any licensee who operates a civilian nuclear power reactor at any time during the period beginning January 1, 1988 and ending December 31, 2000 with uranium mined or milled in a country other than the United States shall be assessed a charge, to be imposed by the Secretary, of $500 per kilogram of uranium loaded in the civilian nuclear power reactor for each kilogram of uranium mined or milled in a country other than the United States in excess of fifty percent of the amount of uranium contained in the aggregate of the new fuel assemblies loaded into such reactor during any calendar year beginning January 1, 1988 and ending December 31, 2000 except as provided in section 112(b).

(b) The assessments imposed by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (a) shall be deposited in the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund.

VIABILITY

Sec. 114. The requirements, contained in Sec. 161(v)(B) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended (42 U.S.C. 2201(v)(B)), that the Secretary, to the extent necessary to assure the maintenance of a viable domestic uranium industry, shall not offer services, in facilities owned by the Department of Energy, for the production of enrichment of source or special nuclear material of foreign origin intended for use in the United States, and the provisions of Sec. 170(B) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended (42 U.S.C. 2210B), shall be suspended upon the date of enactment of this Act until December 31, 2000.

LICENSEE CERTIFICATION

Sec. 115. The licensee of each civilian nuclear power reactor must certify to the Secretary of Energy by March 1 of each year it has met the requirements of this Title for the previous year. The certification must include—

(a) the total weight of uranium loaded;

(b) the total weight of uranium mined and milled in the United States which was loaded;

(c) the total weight of uranium mined and milled outside of the United States which was loaded.

GOVERNMENT URANIUM PURCHASES

Sec. 116. After the date of enactment of this Act, the United States of America, its agencies and instrumentalities, including the Tennessee Valley Authority, shall not enter contracts or orders for the purchase of uranium other than for uranium mined or milled in the United States; provided, however, this section shall not affect purchases under a contract for delivery of a fixed amount of uranium entered before the date of enactment of this Act, or options exercised for fixed amounts prior to the date of enactment of this Act.

TITLE II—REMEDIAL ACTION PERFORMED BY THE OWNER OR LICENSEE OF ACTIVE URANIUM MILLS

Sec. 211. (a) In General.—The owner or licensee of an active uranium mill shall select and perform reclamation, decommissioning, other remedial actions, at active sites.

(b) Remedial Action To Be Performed in Accordance With Applicable Standards.—Any reclamation, decommissioning, or other remedial action performed under subsection (a) by an owner or licensee shall comply with all applicable requirements established pursuant to the Uranium Mill Tailings Radiation Control Act of 1978, as amended or, where appropriate, requirements established by a State that is a party to a discontinuance agreement under section 274 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2021).

(c) Costs of Remedial Action To Be Paid From Tailings Fund.—The costs incurred by the owner or licensee for reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action, performed by the owner or licensee under this Act shall be reimbursed from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund established in Section 212.

URANIUM MILL TAILINGS FUND

Sec. 212. (a) Establishment of Uranium Mill Tailings Fund.—There hereby is established in the Treasury of the United States a separate fund, to be known as the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund. The Tailings Fund shall consist of—

(1) all contributions to the Tailings Fund from the States in which active sites are located as provided in Section 213(a).

(2) all contributions to the Tailings Fund from owners or licensees of active sites as provided in Section 213(b).

(3) all contributions made to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund by the Secretary as provided in Section 213(c).

(4) all fees received from owners or operators of civilian nuclear power reactors as provided in Section 213(d).

(5) all assessments paid to the Secretary by a licensee of a civilian nuclear power reactor for failure to comply with the United States Uranium Usage Requirement.

(6) all interest earned on sums in the fund.

(b) Use of Uranium Mill Tailings Fund.—The Secretary may, subject to subsection (c), make expenditures from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund only for purposes of compliance with this Title.

(c) Administration of Uranium Mill Tailings Fund.—(1) The Secretary of the Treasury, after consultation with the Secretary, shall annually submit to the Congress a report on the financial condition and operation of the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund during the preceding fiscal year.

(2) The Secretary shall submit the budget of the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund to the Office of Management and Budget annually along with the budget of the Department of Energy in accordance with chapter 11 of title 31, United States Code. The budget of the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund shall consist of the estimates made by the Secretary of expenditures from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund and other relevant financial matters for the succeeding three fiscal years, and shall be included in the Budget of the United States Government.

(3) If the Secretary determines that the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund contains at any time amounts in excess of current needs, the Secretary shall request the Secretary of the Treasury to invest such amounts, or any portion of such amounts as the Secretary determines to be appropriate, in obligations of the United States—

(A) having maturities determined by the Secretary of the Treasury to be appropriate to the needs of the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund; and

(B) bearing interest at rates determined to be appropriate by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average market yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States with remaining periods to maturity comparable to the maturities of such investments, except that the interest rate on such investments shall not exceed the average interest rate applicable to existing borrowings.

(4) Receipts, proceeds, and recoveries realized by the Secretary under this section, and expenditures of amounts from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund, shall be exempt from annual apportionment under the provisions of subchapter 11 of chapter 15 of title 31, United States Code.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE URANIUM MILL TAILINGS FUND

Sec. 213. (a) Contributions by States Containing Active Sites.—(1) Each State containing an active site or sites shall contribute from non-federal funds to the Treasury of the United States to be deposited in the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund the sum of $0.50 for each dry ton of tailings, the uranium from which was processed for commercial sales prior to the enactment of this Act at an active site within such State whose owner or licensee has elected to participate in reclamation, decommissioning or other remedial action through the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund.

(2) Such payment shall be made in five equal annual installments commencing January 1, 1990.

(3) If any State containing an active site or sites, whose owner or licensee has elected to participate in reclamation, decommissioning or other remedial actions through the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund, fails or refuses to make the contributions, or any portion thereof, required by this section, this shall not affect the right of the owner or licensee of an active site in such state to participate in reclamation, decommissioning or other remedial action through the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund.

(b) Contributions by Owners or Licensees.—(1) Each owner or licensee of an active site who elects to participate in reclamation, decommissioning, and other remedial action, through the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund shall contribute to the Treasury of the United States, to be deposited in the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund—

(A) $2,000,000 per site as to which it is the owner or licensee of which—

(i) $1,000,000 shall be contributed in the Tailings Fund on or before January 31, 1990; and

(ii) $1,000,000 shall be contributed in the Tailings Fund on or before January 31, 1991.

(B) $1.00 per dry ton for all tons of tailings at such active site, the uranium from which was processed from commercial sales prior to the effective date of the Act of which—

(i) $0.50 per dry ton for all tons of tailings at such active site, the uranium from which was processed for commercial sales prior to the effective date of this Act, shall be contributed to the Tailings Fund on or before January 31, 1992.

(ii) $0.50 per dry ton for all tons of tailings at such active site, the uranium from which was processed for commerical sales prior to the effective date of this Act, shall be contributed in the Tailings Fund on or before January 31, 1993.

(C) Each owner or licensee of an active site who elects to decommission the mill as a part of the reclamation decommissioning and other remedial action to be undertaken pursuant to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund shall contribute an additional $500,000 to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund on or before January 31, 1994.

(c) Contribution on Behalf of Federal Government From Department of Energy Enrichment Services Revenues.—(1) There is authorized to be appropriated the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund, $350,000,000 to remain available until expended.

(2) Funds authorized under this section shall be derived from the Department of Energy Uranium Enrichment Program revenues. These contributions shall be in lieu of appropriations from the Treasury of the United States. These contributions shall be deemed to fully and completely repay the Treasury for one hundred percent of any and all debt the Department of Energy Uranium Enrichment Program has incurred prior to FY 1986.

(3) The Secretary shall transfer funds authorized by this subsection to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund as needed to carry out the purposes of this Title.

(d) Contributions by Licensees of Civilian Nuclear Power Reactors.—(1) Licensees for civilian nuclear power reactors shall contribute into the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund a fee of $22.00 per kilogram of uranium contained in fuel assemblies initially loaded into each civilian nuclear power reactor during each of the calendar years 1989 through 1993.

(2) The fee shall apply to fuel on its initial loading into the reactor and not to previously loaded fuel being loaded again. In calculating the total annual obligation by a licensee, fuel loaded in loadings which are begun in a calendar year and completed in the subsequent years shall be deemed to have occurred in the year in which loading is completed. The weight of uranium loaded will be determined by uranium weights indicated on the NRC/DOE Form 741 for the new fuel assemblies.

(3) The fee from each user so affected will be due on January 31 the following year with the first payment due on January 31, 1990.

(4) The contribution of this fee for the years 1989-1993 shall constitute the total obligation of licensees of civilian nuclear power reactors for uranium mill tailings reclamation, except to the extent that a user may be the owner or licensee of a uranium mill or as provided by contract executed prior to the effective date of this Act.

(5) Not later than one hundred and twenty days after the date of enactment of this Act the Secretary shall establish procedures for the collection and payment of the fee established by this Title.

ELECTION TO PARTICIPATE

Sec. 214. (a) Owner or Licensee Election to Participate.—The owner or licensee of an active site may elect to perform reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action through the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund and be entitled to receive reimbursement for the cost incurred by such owner or licensee for reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action performed in connection with the owner's or licensee's active site by notifying the Secretary of such election on or before January 1, 1989. If an owner or licensee makes an election to participate, the notice shall specify whether the owner or licensee elects to have decommissioning undertaken pursuant to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund. Such election to participate or not to participate shall be irrevocable.

REIMBURSEMENT OF COSTS INCURRED FOR RECLAMATION, DECOMMISSIONING, OR OTHER REMEDIAL ACTION FROM TAILINGS FUND

Sec. 215. (a) In General.—The Secretary shall reimburse to the owner or licensee of an active site who has elected to participate as provided in Section 214, the costs incurred by such owner or licensee for the reclamation, decommissioning or other remedial actions in connection with such site from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund. The amount reimbursed shall not exceed the total dry tailings at such site as of the date of this Act multiplied by $5.00; and provided, however, if one-third of the lower of (i) the cost of reclamation, decommission and other remedial action at an active site or (ii) the dry tons of tailings at such site at the date of the Act multiplied by $5.00 per dry ton, exceeds the sums payable to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund by such owner or licensee of such active site, and interest deemed earned thereon then the owner or licensee of such active site shall be reimbursed from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund an amount equal to the costs incurred by such owner or licensee for the reclamation, decommissioning or other remedial actions in connection with such site (not to exceed the total dry tons of tailings at such site as of the date of this Act multiplied by $5.00 per dry ton), LESS the amount by which one-third of the lower of (i) the cost of reclamation, decommission and other remedial action at such site or (ii) the dry tons of tailings at such site at the date of this Act multiplied by $5.00 per dry ton exceeds the sums payable to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund by such owner or licensee of such active site and interest deemed earned thereon.

(b) Owner's or Licensee's Account.—For the purposes of accounting, one-third of the cost incurred, for reclamation, decommissioning, and other remedial action at an active site, up to the $5.00 per ton of tailings maximum, by the owner of licensee shall be deemed to be reimbursed out of the sum contributed by such owner of licensee to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund as provided in Section 213, and interest deemed earned upon such contribution. If upon the completion of reclamation, decommissioning or other remedial action at a paticipating active site, one-third of the costs incurred therefore by the owner or licensee is less than the amount contributed to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund by such owner or licensee and interest deemed earned upon such contribution, then the owner or licensee shall be refuned from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund a sum equal to the amount by which one-third of the costs incurred by the owner or licensee is less than the amount contributed by such owner or licensee to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund and interest deemed earned thereon. The Secretary shall maintain accounts for each participating owner or licensee to reflect contributions by such owner or licensee, interest deemed earned on such contributions, reimbursements to such owner or licensee from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund, and the cost incurred by the owner or licensee for the reclamation, decommissioning or other remedial action in connection with such active site.

(c)(i) ACCOUNTS FOR OTHER CONTRIBUTORS TO THE TAILINGS FUND.—For the purpose of accounting, two-thirds of the costs incurred by participating owners or licensees at active sites, up to the maximum of $5.00 per dry ton of tailings at such sites as of the effective date of this Act, shall be deemed to have been reimbursed from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund out of the portion of the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund contributed (i) on behalf of the Federal Government by the Department of Energy as provided in Section 213(c); (ii) the States which have contributed as provided in Section 213(a), and (iii) the licensees of civilian nuclear power reactors as provided in Section 213(d), and interest deemed earned upon such contributions. The Secretary shall maintain accounts for each such person or entity making contributions to the Tailings Fund, reflecting the time and amount of such contributions, and the interest deemed earned thereon.

(ii) The Secretary shall determine as of January 31, 1996, whether the amount remaining in the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund, other than the amounts contributed by participating owners or licensees of active sites and interest deemed earned thereon, when considered with the $5.00 per dry ton limit on reimbursement, exceeds the total cost reimbursable to the participating owners or licensees of active (other than that deemed reimbursed out of such participating owners or licensees contributions and interest deemed earned thereon or to borne by owners or licensees), of the active sites where reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action has not been completed.

(iii) If the Secretary determines there is an excess, then the excess shall be refunded as set forth in subsection 215(d); provided, however, no amounts contributed to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund by the participating owners or licensees of active sites and interest deemed earned therein shall be refunded to any person or entity other than the owner or licensee making such contribution, or their successors or assigns.

(d) REFUNDS TO CERTAIN CONTRIBUTORS.—If as of January 31, 1996, the Secretary determines that the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund contains an excess as calculated in Section 215(c), then the Secretary shall refund the excess as follows:

(1) first, to the States which have made contributions to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund as provided in Section 213(a), until such States have been refunded the full amount of their contributions.

(2) the remaining excess, if any, shall be refunded:

(A) A total of five percent of such remaining excess to the States which contributed to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund, pro-rata basis in accordance with their respective contributions.

(B)(i) Ninety-five percent of the remainder of such excess to the United States Treasury. The Secretary shall make a determination annually after January 31, 1996, whether an excess as calculated pursuant to Section 215(c) exists in the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund, and if the Secretary determines an excess exists, the Secretary shall make refunds in the method provided in Section 215(d)(1) shall cease when State contributions pursuant to Section 213(a) have been refunded.

(e) INTEREST DEEMED EARNED.—For the purpose of this Act, the contributions made by any person or entity shall be deemed to have earned interest annually on the contribution from the date made. The appropriate interest rate for each year shall be determined by the Secretary, taking into consideration the average market yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States with one year maturity during the year for which calculation is being made; provided, however, contributions made by any anticipatory owners or licensees of active sites shall be deemed to bear interest during any such year only to the extent that the contributions made by such owner or licensee exceeds one-third of the costs reimbursed out of the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund to such owner or licensee.

LIMITATION OF REIMBURSEMENT

Sec. 216. (a) $5.00 PER TON LIMIT.—The total reimbursement from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund to the owner or licensee of an active site shall not exceed an amount equal to $5.00 multiplied by the dry tons of tailings located at the site as of the effective date of this Act. Costs in excess of $5.00 per ton shall be borne by the owner or licensee of the active site on its own account outside the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund.

(b) INFLATION ESCALATION INDEX.—The $5.00 per dry ton multiplier provided in Section 216(a) shall be increased based upon an inflation escalation index. The Secretary shall determine the appropriate index to apply.

TAILINGS GENERATED AFTER EFFECTIVE DATE OF ACT

SEC. 217. (a) IN GENERAL.—An owner or licensee of an active site who has elected to participate pursuant to Section 214 shall be entitled to reimbursement from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund, to the limits provided, for the costs incurred for the reclamation, decommissioning or other remedial action in connection with such active site on the basis of tailings existing at such active site as of the effective date of this Act. The participating owner or licensee of an active site shall be responsible on its own account outside the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund for the costs incurred for the reclamation, decommissioning or other remedial action associated with tailings generated at such active site after the effective date of this Act.

(b) ACTIVE SITES CONTAINING TAILINGS GENERATED BEFORE AND AFTER THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF THIS ACT.—If an active site whose owner or licensee has elected to participate contains tailings generated both before and after the date of this Act, then it shall be assumed that the costs incurred by the owner or licensee for the reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action in connection with such site were incurred pro-rata based upon the dry tons of tailings generated before and after the date of this Act, unless the Secretary determines that the costs incurred in connection with the tailings generated after the date of this Act were less than would result from the pro-rata formula, in which event such lower amount shall be used for the purposes hereof.

THORIUM SITE

SEC. 218. IN GENERAL.—At thorium sites, the cost of reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action shall be borne by the owner or licensee except for the portion generated solely as an incident of sales to the United States, or any of its agencies and instrumentalities, the United States shall bear such costs. Tailings arising from the co-production of thorium for the United States, or any of its agencies and instrumentalities and other products for the commercial market shall be allocated to the United States. The Secretary is hereby authorized to enter a cooperative agreement with the owner or licensee of a thorium site providing for the payment by the United States of its share of the cost of reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action at such site. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this section such funds as necessary are hereby authorized.

MAINTENANCE OF FUND BALANCE

SEC. 219. IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall manage disbursements from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund such that it never is in a deficit on a cash basis. Reimbursements to owners or licensees may be delayed until receipts allow disbursements. In such cases, owners or licensees of active sites will be treated pro-rata where only partial reimbursements can be made.

INTEREST ON COSTS INCURRED

SEC. 220. IN GENERAL.—Reimbursement from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund for costs incurred shall include interest at the rate provided in Section 215(e) on costs incurred by the participating owner or licensee of an active site from the date a statement for reimbursement of such cost is submitted by the owner or licensee to the Secretary until reimbursement for such costs is made from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund.

LIMITATION OF FINANCIAL OBLIGATIONS

SEC. 221. LIMITATION ON FINANCIAL OBLIGATION OF ACTIVE SITE OWNERS AND LICENSEES AND LICENSEES USING SOURCE MATERIAL OR SPECIAL NUCLEAR MATERIAL FOR A CIVILIAN NUCLEAR POWER REACTOR TO GENERATE ELECTRICAL ENERGY.—The contributions made and work performed by the owners or licensees of the active sites and the contributions made and fines paid by persons using source material or special nuclear material for a civilian nuclear power reactor to generate electrical energy shall be the sole liability and obligation imposed under federal laws in connection with the reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action at active uranium and thorium sites.

RECLAMATION ALREADY UNDERTAKEN

SEC. 222. IN GENERAL.—The owner or licensee of a participating active site who has undertaken reclamation, decommissioning or other remedial action at such site prior to the effective date of the Act shall be entitled to reimbursement for the cost thereof as if the work was done after the effective date hereof if such work, including disposal work, was accomplished in order to comply with the standards under Section 211. The timing of such reimbursement shall be subject to the management of the fund as specified in Section 219. An owner or licensee of an active site which has elected to participate in the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund and has performed reclamation work prior to the effective date of the Act may have any sums to which it is entitled to be reimbursed credited against any sum it is required to contribute. The Secretary shall determine whether the reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial action whether work performed at a site prior to the effective date of this Act was accomplished in order to comply with the standards under Section 211, and provide for the review of statements in connection therewith."

SECRETARY'S AUTHORITY TO MAKE REGULATIONS AND REIMBURSEMENTS

SEC. 223. IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall adopt and issue regulations to accomplish the purposes of this Title and shall review statements by participating owners or licensees for reimbursement from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund of costs incurred for reclamation, decommissioning and other remedial actions. Any such statement for reimbursement found appropriate shall be approved by the Secretary and reimbursement therefore shall be made from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund.

ATOMIC ENERGY ACT OF 1954

SEC. 224. STANDARDS AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR BONDING, SURETY, OR OTHER FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS, INCLUDING PERFORMANCE BONDS.—Section 161x. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2201(x)) is amended by inserting after "ensure" in the matter preceding paragraph (1) the following: ", for the share of costs for which the licensee is responsible".

TITLE III—UTILITY SERVICES CONTRACT

This Act hereby recognizes that the Department of Energy's Utility Services Enrichment Contract is approved by Congress and that such contract establishes the relevant criteria for the Department of Energy providing enrichment services, except that Department of Energy is precluded from charging for the selection of variable tails assays option (VTAO) between the 0.2% and 0.3% range authorized in the contract.

TITLE IV—URANIUM ENRICHMENT REORGANIZATION AND COMMERCIALIZATION

SEC. 401. IN GENERAL.—Within 180 days of the effective date of this Act the Secretary shall submit to Congress a plan for the reorganization of the Department of Energy's Uranium Enrichment Program to establish a mixed Government/private ownership uranium enrichment services corporation. The reorganization shall provide for the creation of a body corporate to be known by the name of the "Enrichment Services Corporation", all of the common stock of which shall be initially owned by the Treasury of the United States, with preferred stock issued for sale to the public. The Corporation is to be directed by a part-time (except for the Chairman) Board of five Directors for staggered 5-year terms. Initially, three Directors are to be appointed by the President, with advice and consent of the Senate. Two additional Directors are to be elected by the owners of the Corporation preferred stock after the sale of at least $10 million of preferred stock. The Board shall appoint a chief operating officer and other officers as appropriate. In appointing the three members of the Board, the President shall designate the Chairman, who is to be a full-time employee of the Corporation.

SEC. 402. The reorganization arrangement shall define the transfer of the Department of Energy's uranium enrichment facilities, technology, contracts and rights. The reorganization shall define the approach of the Enrichment Services Corporation for the production or enrichment of source or special nuclear material for persons or entities licensed to receive, possess, or own such material. The new organization plan shall identify:

(1) the criteria to be used in furnishing enrichment services by the Enrichment Services Corporation for the five year period after which such corporation commences the performance of enrichment services;

(2) the enrichment technology available to the Enrichment Services Corporation;

(3) financing of operations and undertakings by the Enrichment Services Corporation;

(4) protection of technical information deemed important to the national security;

(5) arrangement for furnishing technical information, inventions and discoveries, services, materials and equipment on the basis of recovery of all or part of the costs over a reasonable period of time, including provisions for royalties, if appropriate;

(6) approach to achieve eventual commercialization of the Enrichment Services Corporation, whether through ownership, in whole or in part, by private persons or entities;

(7) transition from the Department of Energy to the Enrichment Services Corporation;

(8) a business plan for the Enrichment Services Corporation; and,

(9) transfer from the Department of Energy of inventories of source and special nuclear material to the Enrichment Services Corporation;

SEC. 403. ENRICHMENT SERVICES CORPORATION.—The reorganization of the present Enrichment Services Program as the Enrichment Services Corporation shall include all of the items provided in Sec. 402, and shall not be implemented by the Secretary until reorganization plan for the Enrichment Services Corporation has been submitted to Congress, and a period of forty-five days shall elapse while Congress is in session. In computing the forty-five days there shall be excluded the days in which either House is not in session because of adjournment for more than three days.

SEC. 404. ENRICHMENT SERVICES CORPORATION.—The plan of reorganization of the Enrichment Services Program to the Enrichment Services Corporation shall not be implemented except as authorized by law by Congress.

TITLE V—SEPARABILITY OF PROVISIONS

SEC. 501. IN GENERAL.—If any provision of this amendment, or the application of such provision to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of this amendment, or the application of such provision to persons or circumstances other than those as to which it is held invalid, shall not be affected thereby.

TITLE VI—EFFECTIVE DATE

SEC. 601. The provisions of and amendments made by this Act shall become effective upon the expiration of the sixty-day period following the date of enactment of this Act, unless otherwise provided.

● Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, earlier in this Congress several of my colleagues and I introduced legislation to provide a comprehensive approach to the reclamation of uranium mill tailings. That legislation was the subject of an unusual joint hearing between the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee and the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs in the fall of last year. Today I am submitting an amendment in the nature of a substitute for that bill which not only addresses a number of the concerns raised about the earlier legislation but attempts to resolve a number of other issues related to the fuel cycle of commercial nuclear power reactors. I will insert a brief section-by-section summary of the amendment for the record, Mr. President, but I will give a short summary of the amendment now.

The comprehensive program for uranium mill tailings cleanup has been modified in the following ways. First, the contributions made by nuclear utilities to the cleanup fund have been reduced from 55 percent to about 30 percent of the estimated cost. Uranium mill owners would contribute the same amount, that is, 30 percent. The Federal share of the cleanup costs would also be about 30 percent representing the approximate proportion of the active uranium mill tailings piles that have resulted from Federal purchases of uranium. States would contribute 10 percent. None of these contributions are open ended. In the case of the utilities, for example, the contribution would be derived from a fee on uranium loaded into reactors over a set period of time. At the end of that time, the fee would end. A second major change is the removal of the Department of Energy from the role of manager of the cleanup. Each uranium mill owner or licensee would be responsible for their own cleanup, with the Secretary of Energy managing only the disbursement of funds. There would also be a cap on the amount that mill owners could be reimbursed from the fund to cover the cleanup costs. Anything over $5 per ton would have to be borne by the mill owner.

There are several new subjects covered by this amendment Mr. President. The first is a direction to the U.S. Trade Representative to seek to enter into voluntary trade restrictions with the major uranium producers in the world. This is a very different approach than existing law which would require import restrictions which in the past have gone as high as a 100-percent restriction. If these efforts at voluntary restrictions fail, then utilities would be prohibited from loading more than 50 percent foreign uranium in any given year until the year 2000. Foreign uranium already contracted for would, of course, be allowed to be used even if it exceeded that 50 percent limitation. However, U.S. Government uranium purchases would be required for 100 percent domestic origin uranium only in the future.

The second new subject is to approve the Department of Energy's Utility Service Contract with the exception of prohibition on charging a fee for the selection of Variable Tails Option between the 0.2- and 0.3-percent range.

The third new subject is to reorganize the Department's Uranium Enrichment Program into a Uranium Enrichment Service Corporation, whose common stock shall be owned initially by the Treasury of the United States. The amendment will set forth the plan to make a smooth transition to achieve the eventual commercialization of the Enrichment Service Corporation, through ownership in whole or in part by private persons or entities. Coincidentally, on April 7, 1986, the Department of Energy published in the Federal Register a notice to request for expressions of interest for participation in the DOE Uranium Enrichment Program. Through this program, DOE is hoping to obtain sufficient information pertaining to private sector willingness to participate in this initiative.

Mr. President, I am asking for unanimous consent that a section-by-section summary be printed in the Record today, and I hope that my colleagues will join me in support of this amendment.

There being no objection, the analysis was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Section-by-Section Analysis of the Uranium Revitalization and Tailings Reclamation Act

Sec. 1. Short Title.
Sec. 2. Findings and Purposes.
Sec. 3. Definitions.

TITLE I—URANIUM REVITALIZATION

Sec. 111. Negotiations to Voluntary Restrain Uranium Imports—The United States Trade Representative is directed to seek to enter into voluntary restraint agreements with all major uranium producing countries (defined as those countries capable of importing three million pounds or more of U308 in any calendar year) to assure that not more than fifty percent of the uranium loaded into domestic civilian nuclear power reactors between the years 1988 and 2000 would be of foreign origin.

Sec. 112. United States Uranium Usage Requirement—If voluntary restraint agreements cannot be reached, then fuel loaded into nuclear power reactors during any calendar year would have to be at least fifty percent domestic uranium each year through the year 2000. Foreign uranium delivered to domestic utilities under contracts entered into prior to April 8, 1986 could be loaded even if the total amount of foreign uranium loaded exceeded fifty percent.

Sec. 113. A charge of $500 per kilogram would be assessed a utility for every kilogram of foreign uranium loaded into a nuclear power reactor in a given year over the fifty percent limitation.

Sec. 114. Viability—The requirements of Sec. 161(v)(B) and Sec. 170(B) of the Atomic Energy Act for the Secretary to maintain a viable domestic uranium mining and milling industry would be waived through the year 2000.

Sec. 115. Licensee Certification—Nuclear power reactor licensees would self-certify their performance under the Uranium Usage Requirements on an annual basis.

Sec. 116. Government Uranium Purchases—Agencies and instrumentalities of the United States (including the Tennessee Valley Authority) would be required to purchase only domestic origin uranium in the future.

TITLE II—REMEDIAL ACTION PERFORMED BY THE OWNER OR LICENSEE OF ACTIVE URANIUM MILLS

Sec. 211. Uranium mill owners or licensees electing to participate in the program for remedial action established by this Act must perform the remedial action pursuant to applicable environmental standards established pursuant to the Uranium Mill Tailings Radiation Control Act of 1978 and they are entitled to compensation from the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund certain costs incurred.

Sec. 212. The Uranium Mill Tailings Fund is established from which reimbursements to mill owners or licensees are made by the Secretary of Energy.

Sec. 213. Contributions to the Uranium Mill Tailings Fund—Contributions to the Fund would be made by the following parties in the designated amounts:

	Percent
Uranium Mill Owners or Licensees	30
Nuclear Power Reactor Licensees	30
Federal Government	30
States with Active Uranium Mills	10

The total of these contributions would be approximately $1 billion. Fees for mill owners would be $2 million per site plus $1.00 per ton of tailings. The Federal contribution would be equivalent to the relative amount of mill tailings attributable to Federal procurement or $350 million. The contributions by the nuclear reactor licensees would come from a fee of $22.00 per kilogram of uranium loaded in each reactor during the years from 1989 to 1993. States would contribute $0.50 per ton of active site tailings within their borders.

Sec. 214. Any mill licensee electing to participate would have to do so be January 1, 1989.

Sec. 215. The maximum reimbursement per site to a mill licensee cannot exceed $5.00 per ton and the Secretary may not reimburse a licensee for any more than two-thirds of the cost of reclamation. If the Secretary of Energy determines that there are excess monies in the Fund, the Secretary must refund those funds to the States first, then an additional 2.5% of the remainder to the States with the balance to the Federal Treasury and the States (split on a 95/5% basis).

Sec. 216. Limitation of Reimbursement—No mill licensee could be reimbursed for an amount larger than $5.00 per ton of tailings. Any additional costs would be borne by the licensee.

Sec. 217. Tailings Generated After the Effective Date of the Act—No costs incurred for the reclamation of mill tailings generated after the effective date of this Act would be eligible for compensation under the Act.

Sec. 218. Thorium Sites—The Secretary of Energy is authorized to enter into cooperative agreements with licensees for such sites to provide funds for the cleanup of those portions of the site which were created as a result of Federal activities.

Sec. 219. The Secretary is required to manage the Fund in such a fashion that no deficits occur.

Sec. 220. Interest shall accrue on reimbursements owed from the date of submission until their disbursement.

Sec. 221. Limitation of Financial Obligations—The contributions made under this Title are the sole financial liability and obligation imposed under Federal law in connection with the reclamation of active mill sites.

Sec. 222. For those sites undergoing reclamation which elect to participate in this program, the Secretary shall determine what costs are necessary in order to comply with applicable environmental standards and are thus reimbursable under this Title.

Sec. 223. General authority for rulemakings necessary for the management of the Fund by the Secretary is provided.

Sec. 224. Surety requirements under the Atomic Energy Act are modified to take into account the shared responsibility for financing cleanup established under this Title.

TITLE III

The Department of Energy's Utility Services Contract is approved except for the prohibition on charging a fee for the selection of Variable Tails Option between the 0.2% and 0.3% range.

TITLE IV—URANIUM ENRICHMENT REORGANIZATION AND COMMERCIALIZATION

Sec. 401. Within 180 days of the effective date of this Act the Secretary should submit to Congress a planned reorganization of the Department's Uranium Enrichment Program to establish a Uranium Enrichment Services Corporation (all common stock of which shall be owned initially by the Treasury of the United States). The Corporation is to be directed by three Presidential Appointees and by two Directors elected by the Corporations owners of preferred stock (which the Corporation is authorized to issue).

Sec. 402. The plan shall include the following:

(1) the criteria to be used in furnishing enrichment services by the Enrichment Services Corporation for the five year period after which such corporation commences the performance of enrichment services;

(2) the enrichment technology available to the Enrichment Services Corporation;

(3) financing of operations and undertakings by the Enrichment Services Corporation.

(4) protection of technical information deemed important to the national security;

(5) arrangement for furnishing technical information, inventions and discoveries, services, materials and equipment on the basis of recovery of all or part of the costs over a reasonable period of time, including provisions for royalties, if appropriate;

(6) approach to achieve eventual commercialization of the Enrichment Services Corporation, whether through ownership, in whole or in part, by private persons or entities;

(7) transition from the Department of Energy to the Enrichment Services Corporation.

(8) a business plan for the Enrichment Services Corporation; and,

(9) transfer from the Department of Energy of inventories of source and special nuclear material to the Enrichment Services Corporation.

Sec. 403. Enrichment Services Corporation.—The reorganization of the present Enrichment Services Program as the Enrichment Services Corporation shall include all of the items provided in Sec. 402, and shall not be implemented by the Secretary until reorganization plan for the Enrichment Services Corporation has been submitted to Congress, and a period of forty-five days shall elapse while Congress is in session. In computing the forty-five days there shall be excluded the days in which either House is not in session because of adjournment for more than three days.

Sec. 403. The plan shall not be implemented until the plan has resided before the Congress for 45 days.●

NOTICES OF HEARINGS

SELECT COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the information of the public that the Select Committee on Indian Affairs will be holding the following hearings:

On Tuesday, April 15, 1986, in Senate Russell 385, at 10 a.m., on S. 1988, to establish a program for the prevention and control of diabetes among Native Americans. Those wishing additional information on this bill should contact Max Richtman or Patricia Zell of the committee at 224-2251.

On Thursday, April 17, 1986, in Senate Dirksen 485, at 10 a.m., on S. 2118, to provide for the distribution of funds appropriated to pay a judgment awarded to the Sisseton and Wahpeton Tribes of Sioux Indians in Indian Claims Commission dockets numbered 142 and 359, and for other purposes. Those wishing additional information on this bill should contact Pete Taylor or Dave Lundgren of the committee at 224-2251.

On Tuesday, April 22, 1986, in Senate Russell 385, at 10 a.m. on S. 1991, to extend programs under the Native American Programs Act of 1974 through fiscal year 1990. Those wishing additional information on this bill should contact Mike Mahsetky of the committee at 224-2251.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON RURAL DEVELOPMENT, OVERSIGHT, AND INVESTIGATIONS

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I wish to announce that Senator Mark Andrews, chairman of the subcommittee on Rural Development, Oversight, and Investigations of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, has scheduled a hearing to receive testimony on S. 1121, a bill to amend the U.S. Grain Standards Act to encourage foreign agricultural trade by improving the quality of grain shipped from U.S. export elevator facilities.

The hearing will begin at 9:30 a.m., on Thursday, April 24, 1986, in room 332, Russell Senate Office Building.

Please contact the committee staff at 224-2035 or Doug Mattson of Senator Andrews' staff if further information is needed.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS, RESERVED WATER, AND RESOURCE CONSERVATION

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the information of the Senate and the public that the Subcommittee on Public Lands, Reserved Water, and Resource Conservation of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources has made some changes to the measures on which the subcommittee will receive testimony at its hearing scheduled for Friday, April 11, 1986, at 9:30 a.m. in room SD-366 of the Senate Dirksen Office Building, Washington, DC.

S. 2029, to establish the Big Cypress National Preserve Addition in the State of Florida, and for other purposes, will not be considered at this hearing as previously announced and instead will be postponed to be considered at a hearing to be scheduled in the near future.

Testimony will be received on two additional measures as follows: S. 1946, to designate the West Branch of the Farmington River as a study area for inclusion in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, and for other purposes; and S. 2265, to authorize the establishment of the Burr Trail National Rural Scenic Road in the State of Utah, and for other purposes.

As previously announced, the subcommittee also will receive testimony on S. 977, S. 1374, S. 1413, H.R. 2067, S. 1542, and H.R. 3556.

For further information, please contact Patty Kennedy of the subcommittee staff at (202) 224-0613.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON SECURITY AND TERRORISM

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, there will be a closed hearing of the Subcommittee on Security and Terrorism on Tuesday, April 15, 1986, at 1 p.m. in room S-407, the Capitol, on FBI oversight. Chairman Denton will preside.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, there will be a hearing of the Committee on the Judiciary, on Tuesday, April 15, 1986, at 10:30 a.m., upon: S. 2162, Antitrust Remedies Improvement Act, room SD-226, Chairman Thurmond will preside.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON PATENTS, COPYRIGHTS, AND TRADEMARKS

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, there will be a hearing of the Subcommittee on Patents, Copyrights, and Trademarks on Tuesday, April 15, 1986, at 9:30 a.m. in room SR-485 on the Berne Convention. Chairman Mathias will preside.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

SUBCOMMITTEE ON STRATEGIC AND THEATER NUCLEAR FORCES

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Strategic and Theater Nuclear Forces of the Committee on Armed Services be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, April 8, in closed session, to hold a hearing on the Department of Energy Defense Programs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON DEFENSE ACQUISITION POLICY

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Defense Acquisition Policy of the Committee on Armed Services be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, April 8, to hold a hearing to receive testimony on the following legislation:

S. 2082, Defense Enterprise and Initiative Act of 1986; S. 2151, DOD Acquisition Reorganization Act of 1986; and, to discuss the report of the President's Blue Ribbon Commission on Defense Management.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

THE CONSOLIDATED OMNIBUS BUDGET RECONCILIATION ACT OF 1985

● Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, yesterday, April 7, President Reagan signed into law the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985. It is now Public Law No. 99-272. Because there is not yet available a final version of the act, I send to the desk the enrolled version of the bill as signed into law and ask that it be printed in the Record.

The enrolled version of the bill follows:

H.R. 3128

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SHORT TITLE

Section 1. This Act may be cited as the "Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985".

TITLE I—AGRICULTURE PROGRAMS

Subtitle A—Agricultural Program Savings

SEC. 1001. AGRICULTURAL PROGRAM SAVINGS.

The expenditures and outlays resulting from the provisions of title XI (relating to the export sales of dairy products) and title XIII (relating to emergency disaster loans and loan authorizations under the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund) of the Food Security Act of 1985 (H.R. 2100, 99th Congress) shall be counted for purposes of determining savings under the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 as having been enacted under this Act.

Subtitle B—Tobacco Program Improvements

SEC. 1101. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) Findings.—Congress finds that—

(1) the maintenance of a viable tobacco price support and production adjustment program is in the interests of tobacco producers, purchasers of tobacco, persons employed directly or indirectly by the tobacco industry, and the localities and States whose economies and tax bases are dependent on the tobacco industry;

(2) the present tobacco price support program is in jeopardy and in need of reform;

(3) under present law, the levels of price support for tobacco have resulted in market prices for tobacco that are not competitive on the world market;

(4) as a consequence, extremely large quantities of domestic tobacco have been put under loan and placed in the inventories of the producer-owned cooperative marketing associations that administer the tobacco price support program;

(5) the increased inventories have led to a significant increase in the assessments producers are required to pay to maintain the tobacco price support program on a "no net cost" basis;

(6) such increasingly large assessments are creating a severe hardship on producers;

(7) the existence of such large inventories poses a threat to the orderly marketing of future crops of tobacco;

(8) inventories of producer associations must be significantly reduced or the tobacco price support program will collapse;

(9) the Commodity Credit Corporation is threatened with substantial losses on disposition of these inventories should the tobacco price support program collapse;

(10) it is imperative that such excess inventories of tobacco be disposed of, under the supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture, in a manner that—

(A) will not disrupt the orderly marketing of new tobacco crops;

(B) will minimize any losses to the Federal Government; and

(C) will be fair and equitable to all tobacco producers and purchasers;

(11) the mutual cooperation of tobacco producers, tobacco purchasers, producer associations, and the Secretary of Agriculture is necessary—

(A) to restore the tobacco price support program to a stable condition; and

(B) to prevent substantial losses to taxpayers that would result from the collapse of the program;

(12) restoration of stability to the tobacco price support program through a sharing of the cost of that program by purchasers of tobacco along with producers of tobacco is necessary to prevent undue burdens on, or obstruction of, interstate and foreign commerce in tobacco; and

(13) the system of grading tobacco should be thoroughly reviewed to ensure that grades are assigned to tobacco that properly state the quality of such tobacco.

(b) Purposes.—The purposes of this subtitle are—

(1) to encourage cooperation among tobacco producers, tobacco purchasers, and the Secretary of Agriculture in reducing tobacco price support levels, assessment costs, the size of inventories of producer associations, and the exposure of taxpayers to large budget outlays;

(2) to adjust the method by which price support levels and production quotas are calculated to reflect actual market conditions;

(3) to facilitate the purchase and sale of Flue-cured and Burley tobacco presently in the inventories of producer associations through which producers of Flue-cured and Burley tobacco are provided price support;

(4) to provide that purchasers and producers of domestic tobacco share equally in the cost of maintaining the tobacco price support program at no net cost to the taxpayers; and

(5) to expedite reform of the system of grading tobacco so that grades assigned to tobacco more accurately reflect the quality of such tobacco.

SEC. 1102. PRICE SUPPORT ADJUSTMENTS.

(a) In General.—Effective for the 1985 and subsequent crops of tobacco, section 106(f) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445(f)) is amended by striking out paragraphs (4) and (5) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(4) For the 1985 and 1986 crops of Burley tobacco, the support level shall be $1.488 per pound.

"(5) For the 1986 crop of Flue-cured tobacco, the support level shall be $1.438 per pound.

"(6)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), for the 1986 and each subsequent crop of any kind of tobacco (other than Flue-cured and Burley tobacco) for which marketing quotas are in effect or are not disapproved by producers, the support level shall be the level in cents per pound at which the immediately preceding crop was supported, plus or minus, respectively, the amount by which—

"(i) the support level for the crop for which the determination is being made, as determined under subsection (b); is greater or less than

"(ii) the support level for the immediately preceding crop, as determined under subsection (b), as that difference may be adjusted by the Secretary under subsection (d) if the support level under clause (i) is greater than the support level under clause (ii).

"(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A) and subsection (d), if requested by the board of directors of an association through which price support for the respective kind of tobacco specified in subparagraph (A) is made available to producers, the Secretary may reduce the support level for such kind of tobacco to the extent requested by the association to more accurately reflect the market value and improve the marketability of such tobacco.

"(7)(A) For the 1987 and each subsequent crop of Flue-cured and Burley tobacco for which marketing quotas are in effect or are not disapproved by producers, the support level shall be the level in cents per pound at which the immediately preceding crop was supported, plus or minus, respectively, an adjustment of not less than 65 percent nor more than 100 percent of the total, as determined by the Secretary after taking into consideration the supply of the kind of tobacco involved in relation to demand, of—

"(i) 66.7 percent of the amount by which—

"(I) the average price received by producers for Flue-cured and Burley tobacco, respectively, on the United States auction markets, as determined by the Secretary, during the 5 marketing years immediately preceding the marketing year for which the determination is being made, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was the lowest in such period, is greater or less than

"(II) the average price received by producers for Flue-cured and Burley tobacco, respectively, on the United States auction markets, as determined by the Secretary, during the 5 marketing years immediately preceding the marketing year prior to the marketing year for which the determination is being made, excluding the year in which the average price was the highest and the year in which the average price was the lowest in such period; and

"(ii) 33.3 percent of the change, expressed as a cost per pound of tobacco, in the index of prices paid by tobacco producers from January 1 to December 31 of the calendar year immediately preceding the year in which the determination is made.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A)—

"(i) the average market price for Burley tobacco for the 1985 marketing year shall be reduced by $0.039 per pound;

"(ii) the average market price for Burley tobacco for the 1984 and each prior applicable marketing year shall be reduced by $0.30 per pound;

"(iii) the average market price for Flue-cured tobacco for the 1985 marketing year shall be reduced by $0.25 per pound;

"(iv) the average market price for Flue-cured tobacco for the 1984 and each prior applicable marketing year shall be reduced by $0.30 per pound; and

"(v) the index of prices paid by tobacco producers shall include items representing general, variable costs of producing tobacco, as determined by the Secretary, but shall not include the cost of land, risk, overhead, management, purchase or leasing of quotas, marketing contributions or assessments, and other costs not directly related to the production of tobacco.".

(b) Certain Grades of Flue-cured Tobacco.—Effective for the 1986 and subsequent crops of tobacco, section 106 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445) is further amended by striking out subsection (g).

SEC. 1103. DETERMINATION OF MARKETING QUOTAS FOR FLUE-CURED AND BURLEY TOBACCO.

(a) Definitions.—Section 301(b) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1301(b)) is amended—

(1) by adding at the end of paragraph (14) the following new subparagraphs:

"(C) 'Reserve stock level', in the case of Flue-cured tobacco, shall be the greater of—

"(i) 100,000,000 pounds (farm sales weight); or

"(ii) 15 percent of the national marketing quota for Flue-cured tobacco for the marketing year immediately preceding the marketing year for which the level is being determined.

"(D) 'Reserve stock level', in the case of Burley tobacco, shall be the greater of—

"(i) 50,000,000 pounds (farm sales weight); or

"(ii) 15 percent of the national marketing quota for Burley tobacco for the marketing year immediately preceding the marketing year for which the level is being determined."; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(17) 'Domestic manufacturer of cigarettes' means a person that produces and sells more than 1 percent of the cigarettes produced and sold in the United States.".

(b) Flue-cured Tobacco.—Section 317(a)(1) of such Act (7 U.S.C. 1314c(a)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "'National marketing quota'" in the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), 'national marketing quota'"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(B) For the 1986 and each subsequent crop of Flue-cured tobacco, 'national marketing quota' for a marketing year means the quantity of Flue-cured tobacco, as determined by the Secretary, that is not more than 103 percent nor less than 97 percent of the total of—

"(i) the aggregate of the quantities of Flue-cured tobacco that domestic manufacturers of cigarettes estimate the manufacturers intend to purchase on the United States auction markets or from producers during the marketing year, as compiled and determined under section 320A;

"(ii) the average annual quantity of Flue-cured tobacco exported from the United States during the 3 marketing years immediately preceding the marketing year for which the determination is being made; and

"(iii) the quantity, if any, of Flue-cured tobacco that the Secretary, in the discretion of the Secretary, determines is necessary to increase or decrease the inventory of the producer-owned cooperative marketing association that has entered into a loan agreement with the Commodity Credit Corporation to make price support available to producers of Flue-cured tobacco to establish or maintain such inventory at the reserve stock level for Flue-cured tobacco.

"(C) Notwithstanding any other provision of law—

"(i) the national marketing quota for Flue-cured tobacco for each of the 1986 through 1989 marketing years for such tobacco shall not be less than 94 percent of the national marketing quota for such tobacco for the preceding marketing year; and

"(ii) the national marketing quota for Flue-cured tobacco for each of the 1990 through 1993 marketing years for such tobacco shall not be less than 90 percent of the national marketing quota for such tobacco for the preceding marketing year.".

(c) Burley Tobacco.—Section 319 of such Act (7 U.S.C. 1314e) is amended—

(1) in subsection (c)—

(A) by striking out "The national marketing quota" in the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "(1) Except as provided in paragraph (3), the national marketing quota";

(B) by striking out the second sentence;

(C) by designating the third sentence as paragraph (2); and

(D) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(3)(A) For the 1986 and each subsequent crop of Burley tobacco, the national marketing quota for any marketing year shall be the quantity of Burley tobacco, as determined by the Secretary, that is not more than 103 percent nor less than 97 percent of the total of—

"(i) the aggregate of the quantities of Burley tobacco that domestic manufacturers of cigarettes estimate the manufacturers intend to purchase on the United States auction markets or from producers during the marketing year, as compiled and determined under section 320A;

"(ii) the average annual quantity of Burley tobacco exported from the United States during the 3 marketing years immediately preceding the marketing year for which the determination is being made; and

"(iii) the quantity, if any, of Burley tobacco that the Secretary, in the discretion of the Secretary, determines is necessary to increase or decrease the inventories of the producer-owned cooperative marketing associations that have entered into loan agreements with the Commodity Credit Corporation to make price support available to producers of Burley tobacco to establish or maintain such inventories, in the aggregate, at the reserve stock level for Burley tobacco.

"(B) In determining the quantity of Burley tobacco necessary to establish or maintain the inventories of the producer associations at the reserve stock level under subparagraph (A)(iii)—

"(i) the Secretary shall provide for initially attaining the reserve stock level over a period of 5 years; and

"(ii) any downward adjustment in such inventories of Burley tobacco may not exceed the greater of—

"(I) 35,000,000 pounds; or

"(II) 50 percent of the quantity by which—

"(aa) the total inventories of Burley tobacco of the producer-owned cooperative marketing associations that have entered into loan agreements with the Commodity Credit Corporation to make price support available to producers of Burley tobacco; exceed

"(bb) the reserve stock level for Burley tobacco.

"(C) Notwithstanding any other provision of law—

"(i) the national marketing quota for Burley tobacco for each of the 1986 through 1989 marketing years for such tobacco shall not be less than 94 percent of the national marketing quota for such tobacco for the preceding marketing year; and

"(ii) the national marketing quota for Burley tobacco for each of the 1990 through 1993 marketing years for such tobacco shall not be less than 90 percent of the national marketing quota for such tobacco for the preceding marketing year."; and

(2) by inserting ", except in the case of Burley tobacco," after "Provided, That" in the fourth sentence of subsection (e).

(d) Purchase Intentions.—Effective for the 1986 and each subsequent crop of tobacco, such Act is amended by inserting after section 320 (7 U.S.C. 1314f) the following new section:

"SUBMISSION OF PURCHASE INTENTIONS BY CIGARETTE MANUFACTURERS

"Sec. 320A. (a)(1) Not later than December 1 of any marketing year with respect to Flue-cured tobacco (or, in the case of the 1986 crop, 14 days after the date of enactment of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985) and January 15 of any marketing year with respect to Burley tobacco (or, in the case of the 1986 crop, 14 days after the date of enactment of such Act or January 15, 1986, whichever is later), each domestic manufacturer of cigarettes shall submit to the Secretary a statement, by kind, of the quantity of Flue-cured tobacco and Burley tobacco (for which a national marketing quota is in effect or for which the Secretary has proclaimed a national marketing quota for the next succeeding marketing year) that the manufacturer intends to purchase, directly or indirectly, on the United States auction markets or from producers during the next succeeding marketing year (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'quantity of intended purchases').

"(2) The Secretary shall aggregate the quantities of intended purchases in a manner that will not allow the identification of the quantity of intended purchases of any manufacturer.

"(b) If any domestic manufacturer of cigarettes fails to submit to the Secretary a statement of the quantity of intended purchases of the manufacturer, as required by this section, the Secretary shall establish the quantity of intended purchases to be attributed to such manufacturer for purposes of this Act, based on—

"(1) the quantity of intended purchases submitted by such manufacturer under this section for the marketing year immediately preceding the marketing year for which the determination is being made; or

"(2) if such manufacturer did not submit a statement of the quantity of intended purchases of the manufacturer for the marketing year immediately preceding the marketing year for which the determination is being made, the most recent information available to the Secretary.

"(c)(1) All information relating to the quantity of intended purchases that is submitted by domestic manufacturers of cigarettes under this section shall be kept confidential by all officers and employees of the Department of Agriculture.

"(2) Such information may only be disclosed by such officers or employees in a suit or administrative hearing—

"(A)(i) brought at the direction, or on the request, of the Secretary; or

"(ii) to which the Secretary or any officer of the United States is a party; and

"(B) involving enforcement of this Act.

"(3) Nothing in this section shall be considered to prohibit the publication, by direction of the Secretary, of the name of any person violating this Act, together with a statement of the particular provisions of the Act violated by such person.

"(4) Any officer or employee of the Department of Agriculture who violates this subsection, on conviction, shall be—

"(A) subject to a fine of not more than $1,000 or to imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or to both; and

"(B) removed from office.

SEC. 1104. MARKETING QUOTA ANNOUNCEMENT DATE; PROCLAMATION OF QUOTAS FOR FLUE-CURED AND BURLEY TOBACCO.

(a) In General.—Section 312 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1312) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and February 1 of any marketing year with respect to other kinds of tobacco" in the matter preceding clause (1) of subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof "February 1 of any marketing year with respect to Burley tobacco, and March 1 of any marketing year with respect to other kinds of tobacco"; and

(2) by striking out "and not later than the first day of February with respect to other kinds of tobacco" in the first sentence of subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof ", not later than the first day of February with respect to Burley tobacco, and not later than the first day of March with respect to other kinds of tobacco".

(b) Dark Air-cured and Fire-cured Tobacco.—Section 319(b) of such Act (7 U.S.C. 1313e(b)) is amended by striking out "February 1" each place it appears in the fourth paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof "March 1".

(c) Proclamation of Quota for Flue-cured Tobacco.—Section 317(d) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1314c(d)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentences: "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, for the 1986 marketing year, the Secretary shall proclaim the national marketing quota for Flue-cured tobacco not later than 21 days after the date of enactment of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985. Any proclamation with respect to the national marketing quota for the 1986 marketing year for Flue-cured tobacco made by the Secretary prior to such date of enactment shall become void on enactment of such Act.".

(d) Proclamation of Quota for Burley Tobacco.—Section 319(a) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1314e(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentences: "Notwithstanding any other provision of law, for the 1986 marketing year, the Secretary shall proclaim the national marketing quota for Burley tobacco not later than 21 days after the date of enactment of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 or February 1, 1986, whichever is later. Any proclamation with respect to the national marketing quota for the 1986 marketing year for Burley tobacco made by the Secretary prior to such date of enactment shall become void on enactment of such Act.".

SEC. 1105. REDUCTION IN EXCESS TOBACCO NOT SUBJECT TO MARKETING PENALTY.

(a) Penalty on Excess Tobacco.—Effective for the 1986 and subsequent crops of tobacco, the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 is amended—

(1) by striking out "110" in section 317(g)(1) (7 U.S.C. 1314c(g)(1)) and inserting in lieu thereof "103"; and

(2) by striking out "110" in section 319(i)(1) (7 U.S.C. 1314e(i)(1)) and inserting in lieu thereof "103".

(b) Price Support on Excess Tobacco.—Effective for the 1986 and subsequent crops of tobacco, section 106(c)(1) of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445(c)(1)) is amended by striking out "110" and inserting in lieu thereof "103".

SEC. 1106. PURCHASE REQUIREMENTS; PENALTY.

(a) In General.—Effective for the 1986 and subsequent crops of tobacco, the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (as amended by section 1103(d)) is further amended by inserting after section 320A the following new section:

"PURCHASE REQUIREMENTS; PENALTY

"Sec. 320B. (a)(1) At the conclusion of each marketing year, on or before a date prescribed by the Secretary, each domestic manufacturer of cigarettes shall submit to the Secretary a statement, by kind, of the quantity of Flue-cured and Burley quota tobacco purchased, directly or indirectly, by such manufacturer during such marketing year.

"(2) The statement shall include, but not be limited to, the quantity of each such kind of tobacco purchased by the manufacturer on the United States auction markets, from producers, and from the inventories of tobacco from the 1985 and subsequent crops of the producer-owned cooperative marketing associations that have entered into loan agreements with the Commodity Credit Corporation to make price support available to producers of Flue-cured or Burley tobacco.

"(b)(1) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, any domestic manufacturer of cigarettes that fails, as determined by the Secretary after notice and opportunity for a hearing, to purchase during a marketing year on the United States auction markets, from producers, or from the inventories of tobacco from the 1985 and subsequent crops of the producer associations described in subsection (a)(2) a quantity of Flue-cured quota tobacco and a quantity of Burley quota tobacco equal to at least 90 percent of the quantity of the intended purchases of Flue-cured tobacco and Burley tobacco, respectively, submitted by such manufacturer or established by the Secretary for such manufacturer for that marketing year under section 320A (as that quantity may be reduced under paragraph (2)) shall be subject to a penalty as prescribed in subsection (c).

"(2)(A) If the total quantity of Flue-cured or Burley quota tobacco, respectively, marketed by producers at auction in the United States during the marketing year in question is less than the national marketing quota (including any adjustments for overmarketings or undermarketings) for that kind of tobacco for that marketing year, the quantity of intended purchases of each domestic manufacturer of cigarettes, for purposes of paragraph (1), shall be reduced by a percentage equal to the percentage by which the total quantity marketed at auction in the United States during the marketing year is less than the national marketing quota (including any adjustments for overmarketings or undermarketings) for that kind of tobacco for the marketing year.

"(B) For purposes of this section, the term 'marketed' shall include disposition of tobacco by consigning the tobacco to a producer association described in subsection (a)(2) for a price support advance.

"(c) The amount of any penalty to be imposed on a manufacturer under this section shall be determined by multiplying—

"(1) twice the per pound assessment (as determined under section 106A or 106B of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445-1 or 1445-2)) for the kind of tobacco involved; by

"(2) the quantity by which—

"(A) the purchases by such manufacturer on the United States auction markets, from producers, or from the inventories of tobacco from the 1985 and subsequent crops of the producer associations described in subsection (a)(2) of Flue-cured and Burley quota tobacco, respectively, for the marketing year; are less than

"(B) 90 percent of the quantity of intended purchases of such kinds of tobacco, respectively, submitted by the manufacturer or established by the Secretary for such manufacturer for that marketing year under section 320A (as that quantity may be reduced under subsection (b)(2)).

"(d)(1) An amount equivalent to the penalty collected by the Secretary under this section shall be transmitted by the Secretary to the appropriate producer-owned cooperative marketing association that has entered into a loan agreement with the Commodity Credit Corporation to make price support available to producers of Flue-cured or Burley tobacco, as the case may be.

"(2) Each association to which amounts are transmitted by the Secretary under this section shall deposit such amounts in the No Net Cost Fund or Account of such association in accordance with section 106A or 106B of the Agricultural Act of 1949.

"(e) The limitations on disclosure set forth in subsections (c) and (d) of section 320A shall apply to information submitted by domestic manufacturers of cigarettes under this section with respect to the quantity of purchases of Flue-cured and Burley quota tobacco during a marketing year. Any officer or employee of the Department of Agriculture who violates such limitations on disclosure shall be subject to the penalties set forth in section 320A(c)(4).

"(f) As used in this section, the term 'quota tobacco' means any kind of tobacco for which marketing quotas are in effect or for which marketing quotas are not disapproved by producers.".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Effective for the 1986 and subsequent crops of tobacco, the last sentence of section 372(b) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1372(b)) is amended by striking out "The" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in section 320B, the".

SEC. 1107. LEASE AND TRANSFER OF BURLEY TOBACCO QUOTAS.

Effective with respect to the 1985 and subsequent crops of Burley tobacco, the fourth proviso of section 319(g) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1314e(g)) is amended by inserting after "July 1 of that crop year" the following: "or, if such record of the transfer is filed with the county committee after July 1, the county committee determines with the concurrence of the State committee that all interested parties agreed to such lease and transfer before July 1 and that the failure to file such record of the transfer did not result from gross negligence on the part of any party to such lease and transfer".

SEC. 1108. ASSESSMENTS TO NO NET COST FUNDS OR ACCOUNTS.

(a) No Net Cost Fund.—Effective for the 1986 and subsequent crops of tobacco, section 106A of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445-1) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (5);

(B) by redesignating paragraph (6) as paragraph (7); and

(C) by inserting after paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

"(6) the term 'purchaser' means any person who purchases in the United States, either directly or indirectly for the account of such person or another person, Flue-cured or Burley quota tobacco; and";

(2) by inserting "or paid by or on behalf of purchasers" after "producer-members" in the second sentence of subsection (c);

(3) in subsection (d)—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (i) of paragraph (1)(A);

(B) by inserting after clause (ii) of paragraph (1)(A) the following new clause:

"(iii) each purchaser of Flue-cured and Burley quota tobacco shall pay to the appropriate association, for deposit in the Fund of the association, an assessment, in an amount determined from time to time by the association with the approval of the Secretary, with respect to purchases of all such kind of tobacco marketed by a producer from a farm (including purchases of such tobacco from the 1986 and subsequent crops from the association); and";

(C) by striking out "The" in the last sentence of paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The amount of producer contributions and purchaser assessments shall be determined in such a manner that producers and purchasers share equally, to the maximum extent practicable, in maintaining the Fund of an association. In making such determination with respect to the assessment of a purchaser, only 1985 and subsequent crops of Flue-cured and Burley quota tobacco shall be taken into account. The";

(D) by inserting "and assessments" after "contributions" in the last sentence of paragraph (1);

(E) by striking out paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) require that any producer contribution or purchaser assessment due under paragraph (1) shall be collected—

"(A) from the person who acquired the tobacco involved from the producer, except that if the tobacco is marketed by sale, an amount equal to the producer contribution may be deducted by the purchaser from the price paid to such producer;

"(B) if the tobacco involved is marketed by a producer through a warehouseman or agent, from such warehouseman or agent, who may—

"(i) deduct an amount equal to the producer contribution from the price paid to the producer; and

"(ii) add an amount equal to the purchaser assessment to the price paid by the purchaser; and

"(C) if the tobacco involved is marketed by a producer directly to any person outside the United States, from the producer, who may add an amount equal to the purchaser assessment to the price paid by the purchaser;";

(F) by striking out "producers who contribute" in the proviso of paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "producers and purchasers who contribute or pay";

(G) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (5);

(H) by inserting "effective for the 1982 through 1985 crops of quota tobacco," after the paragraph designation in paragraph (6);

(I) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (6) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(J) by inserting after paragraph (6) the following new paragraph:

"(7) effective for the 1986 and subsequent crops of quota tobacco, provide, in loan agreements between the Corporation and an association, that if the Secretary determines that the amount in the Fund or the net gains referred to in paragraph (5) exceeds the amounts necessary for the purposes specified in this section, the association, with the approval of the Secretary, may suspend the payment and collection of contributions and assessments under this section on terms and conditions established by the association, with the approval of the Secretary."; and

(4) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h)(1)(A) Each person who fails to collect any contribution or assessment as required by subsection (d)(2) and remit such contribution or assessment to the association, at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary, shall be liable, in addition to any amount due, to a marketing penalty at a rate equal to 75 percent of the average market price (calculated to the nearest whole cent) for the kind of tobacco involved for the immediately preceding year on the quantity of tobacco as to which the failure occurs.

"(B) The Secretary may reduce any such marketing penalty in such amount as the Secretary determines equitable in any case in which the Secretary determines that the failure was unintentional or without knowledge on the part of the person concerned.

"(C) Any penalty provided for under this paragraph shall be assessed by the Secretary after notice and opportunity for a hearing.

"(2)(A) Any person against whom a penalty is assessed under this subsection may obtain review of such penalty in an appropriate district court of the United States by filing a civil action in such court not later than 30 days after such penalty is imposed.

"(B) The Secretary shall promptly file in such court a certified copy of the record on which the penalty is based.

"(3) The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction to review and enforce any penalty imposed under this subsection.

"(4) An amount equivalent to any penalty collected by the Secretary under this subsection shall be transmitted by the Secretary to the appropriate association, for deposit in the Fund of such association.

"(5) The remedies provided in this subsection shall be in addition to, and not exclusive of, other remedies that may be available.".

(b) No Net Cost Account.—Effective for the 1986 and subsequent crops of tobacco, section 106B of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445-2) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (6);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (7) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) the term 'purchaser' means any person who purchases in the United States, either directly or indirectly for the account of such person or another person, Flue-cured or Burley quota tobacco.";

(2) by inserting "and purchasers" after "producers" in subsection (c)(1);

(3) in subsection (d)—

(A) by inserting at the end of paragraph (1) the following new sentence: "The Secretary shall also require (in lieu of any requirement under section 106A(d)(1)) that each purchaser of Flue-cured and Burley quota tobacco shall pay to the Corporation, for deposit in the Account of such association, an assessment, as determined under paragraph (2) and collected under paragraph (3), with respect to purchases of all such kind of tobacco marketed by a producer from a farm (including purchases of such tobacco from the 1986 and subsequent crops from the association).";

(B) by striking out "area. Such amount" in paragraph (2)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof "area and the amount of the assessment to be paid by purchasers of tobacco. The amount of the assessment to be paid by producers and purchasers shall be determined in such a manner that producers and purchasers share equally, to the maximum extent practicable, in maintaining the Account of an association. In making such determination with respect to the assessment of a purchaser, only 1985 and subsequent crops of Flue-cured and Burley quota tobacco shall be taken into account. The amount of the assessment";

(C) by inserting at the end of paragraph (2)(A) the following: "Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this paragraph, the amount of any assessment that is determined by the Secretary for the 1986 and subsequent crops of Burley quota tobacco shall be determined without regard to any net losses that the Corporation may sustain under the loan agreements of the Corporation with such association with respect to the 1983 crop of such tobacco."; and

(D) by amending paragraph (3) to read as follows:

"(3)(A) Except as provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), any assessment to be paid by a producer or a purchaser under paragraph (1) shall be collected from the person who acquired the tobacco involved from such producer, except that if the tobacco is marketed by sale, an amount equal to the producer assessment may be deducted by the purchaser from the price paid to such producer.

"(B) If tobacco of the kind for which an Account is established is marketed by a producer through a warehouseman or agent, both the producer and the purchaser assessment shall be collected from such warehouseman or agent, who may—

"(i) deduct an amount equal to the producer assessment from the price paid to the producer; and

"(ii) add an amount equal to the purchaser assessment to the price paid by the purchaser.

"(C) If tobacco of the kind for which an Account is established is marketed by a producer directly to any person outside the United States, both the producer and the purchaser assessment shall be collected from the producer, who may add an amount equal to the purchaser assessment to the price paid by the purchaser."; and

(4) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j)(1)(A) Each person who fails to collect any assessment as required by subsection (d)(3) and remit such assessment to the Corporation, at such time and in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary, shall be liable, in addition to any amount due, to a marketing penalty at a rate equal to 75 percent of the average market price (calculated to the nearest whole cent) for the kind of tobacco involved for the immediately preceding year on the quantity of tobacco as to which the failure occurs.

"(5) The remedies provided in this subsection shall be in addition to, and not exclusive of, other remedies that may be available.".

(c) Implementation.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall implement sections 1102 through 1109, and the amendments made by such sections, without regard to the provisions requiring notice and other procedures for public participation in rulemaking contained in section 553 of title 5, United States Code, or in any directive of the Secretary.

(d) Conforming Amendment.—The section heading of section 106A of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445-1) is amended to read as follows:

"PRODUCER CONTRIBUTIONS AND PURCHASER ASSESSMENTS FOR NO NET COST TOBACCO FUND".

SEC. 1109. PURCHASE OF INVENTORY STOCK.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, in order to reduce or eliminate the excessive inventories of Flue-cured and Burley tobacco held by associations from the 1976 through 1984 crops, and in order to provide for the orderly disposition of such excessive inventories of tobacco in a manner that will not disrupt the orderly marketing of new tobacco crops and will minimize any losses to the Federal Government:

(a) Sale of Inventory Stock.—(1) The producer-owned cooperative marketing association that has entered into a loan agreement with the Commodity Credit Corporation to make price support available to producers of Flue-cured tobacco shall offer to sell the stocks of Flue-cured tobacco of the association from the 1976 through 1984 crops as provided in this section.

(2) Each producer-owned cooperative marketing association that has entered into a loan agreement with the Commodity Credit Corporation to make price support available to producers of Burley tobacco shall offer to sell its stocks of Burley tobacco from the 1982 and 1984 crops as provided in this section.

(3)(A)(i) Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this subtitle, the Commodity Credit Corporation shall acquire title to the Burley tobacco from the 1983 crop that is pledged as security for loans on such tobacco by calling the loans on such tobacco.

(ii) The Corporation shall, then, offer such tobacco for sale at such times, in such quantities, and subject to such conditions as the Corporation considers appropriate.

(B) If the Commodity Credit Corporation has not sold all of the stocks of the 1983 crop of Burley tobacco within 2 years from the date the Corporation calls the loans on such tobacco, the Corporation may offer to sell to domestic manufacturers of cigarettes the remaining stocks of such tobacco as provided in this section.

(b) Sale Prices.—(1)(A) The stocks of Flue-cured tobacco from the 1976 through 1984 crops shall be offered for sale at the base prices, including carrying charges, in effect as of the date of the offer, reduced by—

(i) 90 percent for Flue-cured tobacco from the 1976 through 1981 crops; and

(ii) 10 percent for Flue-cured tobacco from the 1982 through 1984 crops.

(B) The purchasers of the stocks of Flue-cured tobacco from the 1976 through 1984 crops shall pay the full carrying charges that have accrued to such tobacco from the date of the offer made under this section to the date that such tobacco is removed from the inventory of the association.

(2)(A) The stocks of Burley tobacco from the 1982 crop shall be offered for sale at the listed base price in effect as of July 1, 1985.

(B) The stocks of Burley tobacco from the 1984 crop shall be offered for sale at the cost of the association for such tobacco as of the date of enactment of this subtitle.

(C) The purchasers of the stocks of Burley tobacco from the 1982 crop shall pay the full carrying charges that have accrued to such tobacco.

(D) The purchasers of the stocks of Burley tobacco from the 1984 crop shall pay the full carrying charges that have accrued to such tobacco from the date of enactment of this subtitle to the date such tobacco is removed from the inventories of the associations.

(3)(A) After the 2-year period specified in subsection (a)(3)(B) has expired, if the Commodity Credit Corporation offers to sell the stocks of the Corporation of Burley tobacco from the 1983 crop to domestic manufacturers of cigarettes, such stocks shall be offered for sale at the cost of the association, including carrying charges, as of the date on which the Corporation calls the loans on such tobacco, reduced by 90 percent.

(B) Neither tobacco producers nor tobacco purchasers shall be responsible for carrying charges that accrue to the 1983 crop of Burley tobacco after the date on which the Commodity Credit Corporation calls the loans on such tobacco.

(c) Terms of Agreements.—(1)(A) Each domestic manufacturer of cigarettes may enter into agreements to purchase inventory stocks of Flue-cured and Burley tobacco, in accordance with this section.

(B) To be eligible for the reductions in price specified in this section, such manufacturer shall enter into such agreements as soon as practicable, but not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this subtitle, except that, with respect to the 1983 crop of Burley tobacco, if the Corporation offers to sell the stocks of such tobacco pursuant to subsection (b)(3)(A), such agreements shall be entered into as soon as practicable, but not later than 90 days after the end of the 2-year period referred to in subsection (a)(3)(B).

(C)(i) Such agreements shall provide that, over a period of time, each participating domestic manufacturer of cigarettes shall purchase a percentage of the stocks of Flue-cured and Burley tobacco held—

(I) by the producer-owned cooperative marketing associations at the close of the 1984 marketing year; or

(II) in the case of the 1983 crop of Burley tobacco, by the Commodity Credit Corporation at the time the Corporation offers such tobacco for sale to domestic manufacturers of cigarettes under this section.

(ii) The period of time referred to in clause (i) may not exceed—

(I) in the case of Flue-cured tobacco, 8 years from the date of enactment of this subtitle;

(II) in the case of Burley tobacco from the 1982 and 1984 crops, 5 years from the date of enactment of this subtitle; and

(III) in the case of the 1983 crop of Burley tobacco, 5 years from the end of the 2-year period referred to in subsection (a)(3)(B).

(2)(A)(i) The percentage to be purchased by each participating manufacturer shall be at least equal to the respective percentage of the participating manufacturer of the total quantity of net cigarettes manufactured for use as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture under this paragraph on the basis of the monthly reports ("Manufacturer of Tobacco Products—Monthly Reports") submitted (on ATF Form 3068) by manufacturers of tobacco products to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms of the Department of the Treasury.

(ii) The Secretary of Agriculture shall request from the Secretary of the Treasury copies of such monthly reports necessary to make the determinations required under this section.

(iii) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Treasury may release and disclose such information to the Secretary of Agriculture.

(B) "Net cigarettes manufactured for use" shall be computed by subtracting—

(i) the cumulative figures entered for large and small cigarettes in item 16f of ATF Form 3068 ("Reduction to tobacco"); from

(ii) the cumulative figures entered for large and small cigarettes in item 7 of such form ("Manufactured").

(C)(i) The percentage to be purchased by each participating manufacturer shall be determined—

(I) on the date of enactment of this subtitle; and

(II) annually thereafter over the course of the respective buy-out periods specified in this subsection.

(ii) Such percentage shall be determined by dividing—

(I) the average net cigarettes manufactured by a manufacturer for use for the 12-month period immediately preceding the appropriate determination date (the date of enactment of this subtitle and annually thereafter over the course of the respective buy-out periods specified in this subsection); by

(II) the aggregate average net cigarettes manufactured by all domestic cigarette manufacturers for use for such 12-month period.

(D)(i) The quantity of tobacco to be purchased by each participating manufacturer shall be determined annually.

(ii) Such quantity shall be based on—

(I) the percentage of net cigarettes of a manufacturer manufactured for use, as determined under subparagraph (C); multiplied by

(II) the appropriate annual quantity to be withdrawn from the inventories of the associations or the Commodity Credit Corporation.

(iii) The appropriate annual quantity to be withdrawn from inventories shall be—

(I) 12½ percent of the inventories of Flue-cured tobacco from the 1976 through 1984 crops on hand on the date of enactment of this subtitle;

(II) 20 percent of the inventories of Burley tobacco from the 1982 and 1984 crops on hand on the date of enactment of this subtitle; and

(III) 20 percent of the inventories of Burley tobacco from the 1983 crop held by the Commodity Credit Corporation on the date that is 2 years after the call of the loans on such tobacco by the Corporation.

(E) Any purchases by a manufacturer from the inventories of the associations or from the Commodity Credit Corporation for a crop covered by this section in any year of the buy-out period that exceed the quantity of the purchases of the manufacturer required under the agreement, as determined under this section, shall be applied against future purchases required of such manufacturer.

(3) In carrying out this section, manufacturers may confer with one another and, separately or collectively, with associations, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Commodity Credit Corporation, as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out this section and the purposes of this subtitle.

(d) Approval of Agreements.—(1)(A) Each agreement entered into under this section shall be submitted to the Secretary of Agriculture for review and approval.

(B) In the case of an agreement to purchase tobacco from the inventory of a producer association, the agreement shall be submitted by the association.

(C) No agreement may become effective until approved by the Secretary.

(2) The Secretary of Agriculture shall not approve any agreement submitted under this section unless the Secretary has determined that—

(A) the agreement—

(i) will not unduly impair or disrupt the orderly marketing of current and future tobacco crops during the term of the agreement; and

(ii) is otherwise consistent with the purposes of this subtitle; and

(B) the price and other terms of sale are uniform and nondiscriminatory among various purchasers.

(e) Disclosure.—The limitations on disclosure set forth in subsections (c) and (d) of section 320A of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 (as added by section 1103(d)) shall apply to information submitted by domestic manufacturers of cigarettes under this section with respect to net cigarettes manufactured for use, including information provided on ATF Form 3068. Any officer or employee of the Department of Agriculture who violates such limitations on disclosure shall be subject to the penalties set forth in section 320A(c)(4) of such Act.

SEC. 1110. REVIEW OF TOBACCO GRADING SYSTEM AND DISASTER CROP DESIGNATION.

(a) Study.—(1)(A) The Secretary of Agriculture shall conduct a comprehensive study of the methods and procedures for grading tobacco marketed in the United States.

(B) In carrying out such study, the Secretary shall evaluate, among other things—

(i) the extent to which grades assigned to tobacco accurately reflect the quality of such tobacco;

(ii) the extent to which the number of grades of tobacco affects the operation of the grading system; and

(iii) the competence and independence of tobacco graders.

(2) The Secretary shall also study the feasibility and desirability of—

(A) providing for a grade that would be used to designate tobacco that is of such poor quality as a result of a natural disaster as to affect substantially the marketability of such tobacco; and

(B) establishing a price support level, if any, for such tobacco that may be adjusted by the Secretary as necessary to facilitate the sale of such tobacco and protect the no net cost funds or accounts.

(b) Report.—(1) Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this subtitle, the Secretary of Agriculture shall report the results of the studies required under subsection (a), together with any recommendations for necessary legislation, to the Committee on Agriculture of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry of the Senate.

(2) As soon as practicable after submission of the report required under paragraph (1), but not later than the opening of the marketing season for the 1986 crop of Flue-cured tobacco, the Secretary shall implement any recommendations made in such report that may be implemented by the Secretary under existing authority.

SEC. 1111. INVESTMENT OF TOBACCO INSPECTION FEES.

Section 5 of the Tobacco Inspection Act (7 U.S.C. 511d) is amended—

(1) by inserting "late payment penalties, and interest earned from the investment of such funds," after "The fees and charges," in the ninth sentence;

(2) by inserting after the ninth sentence the following new sentences: "Any funds realized from the collection of fees or charges authorized under this section and section 6 and credited to the current appropriation account incurring the cost of services provided under this section and section 6, late payment penalties, and interest earned from the investment of such funds may be invested by the Secretary in insured or fully collateralized, interest-bearing accounts or, at the discretion of the Secretary, by the Secretary of the Treasury in United States Government debt instruments. Any income realized from this activity may be used to pay the expenses of the Secretary of Agriculture incident to providing services under this Act or reinvested in the manner authorized in the preceding sentence."; and

(3) by striking out "Such fees and charges" in the tenth sentence (as it existed before the amendment made by clause (2)) and inserting in lieu thereof "The fees and charges authorized in this section".

SEC. 1112. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Except as otherwise provided in this subtitle, this subtitle and the amendments made by this subtitle shall become effective on the date of enactment of this subtitle.

TITLE II—ARMED SERVICES AND DEFENSE-RELATED PROGRAMS

SEC. 2001. COLLECTION BY THE UNITED STATES OF INPATIENT HOSPITAL COSTS INCURRED ON BEHALF OF CERTAIN PERSONS.

(a) In General.—(1) Chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"§1095. Collection from third-party payers of reasonable inpatient hospital care costs incurred on behalf of retirees and dependents

"(a)(1) In the case of a person who is covered by section 1074(b), 1076(a), or 1076(b) of this title, the United States shall have the right to collect from a third-party payer the reasonable costs of inpatient hospital care incurred by the United States on behalf of such person through a facility of the uniformed services to the extent that the person would be eligible to receive reimbursement or indemnification from the third-party payer if the person were to incur such costs on the person's own behalf. If the insurance, medical service, or health plan of that payer includes a requirement for a deductible or copayment by the beneficiary of the plan, then the amount that the United States may collect from the third-party payer is the reasonable cost of the care provided less the appropriate deductible or copayment amount.

"(2) A person covered by section 1074(b), 1076(a), or 1076(b) of this title may not be required to pay an additional amount to the United States for inpatient hospital care by reason of this section.

"(b) No provision of any insurance, medical service, or health plan contract or agreement having the effect of excluding from coverage or limiting payment of charges for certain care if that care is provided through a facility of the uniformed services shall operate to prevent collection by the United States under subsection (a).

"(c) Under regulations prescribed under subsection (f), records of the facility of the uniformed services that provided inpatient hospital care to a beneficiary of an insurance, medical service, or health plan of a third-party payer shall be made available for inspection and review by representatives of the payer from which collection by the United States is sought.

"(d) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b), collection may not be made under this section in the case of a plan administered under title XVIII or XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395 et seq.).

"(e)(1) The United States may institute and prosecute legal proceedings against a third-party payer to enforce a right of the United States under this section.

"(2) The administering Secretary may compromise, settle, or waive a claim of the United States under this section.

"(f) The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the other administering Secretaries, shall prescribe regulations for the administration of this section. Such regulations shall provide for computation of the reasonable cost of inpatient hospital care. Computation of such reasonable cost may be based on—

"(1) per diem rates; or

"(2) such other method as may be appropriate.

"(g) In this section, 'third-party payer' means an entity that provides an insurance, medical service, or health plan by contract or agreement.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"1095. Collection from third-party payers of reasonable inpatient hospital care costs incurred on behalf of retirees and dependents.".

(b) Effective Date.—Section 1095 of title 10, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), shall apply with respect to inpatient hospital care provided after September

Section 9(c) of such Act is amended by striking out "and by" after "1983," and by inserting after "1984" the following: ", and not to exceed $1,279,000,000 on or after October 1, 1985".

SEC. 3004. PUBLIC AND INDIAN HOUSING FINANCING REFORMS.

Section 4 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) At such times as the Secretary may determine, and in accordance with such accounting and other procedures as the Secretary may prescribe, each loan made by the Secretary under subsection (a) that has any principal amount outstanding or any interest amount outstanding or accrued shall be forgiven; and the terms and conditions of any contract, or any amendment to a contract, for such loan with respect to any promise to repay such principal and interest shall be canceled. Such cancellation shall not affect any other terms and conditions of such contract, which shall remain in effect as if the cancellation had not occurred. This paragraph shall not apply to any loan the repayment of which was not to be made using annual contributions, or to any loan all or part of the proceeds of which are due a public housing agency from contractors or others.

"(2)(A) On the date of the enactment of the Housing and Community Development Reconciliation Amendments of 1985, each note or other obligation issued by the Secretary to the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to subsection (b), together with any promise to repay the principal and unpaid interest that has accrued on each note or obligation, shall be forgiven; and any other term or condition specified by each such obligation shall be canceled.

"(B) On September 30, 1986, and on any subsequent September 30, each such note or other obligation issued by the Secretary to the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to subsection (b) during the fiscal year ending on such date, together with any promise to repay the principal and unpaid interest that has accrued on each note or obligation, shall be forgiven; and any other term or condition specified by each such obligation shall be canceled.

"(3) Any amount of budget authority (and contract authority) that becomes available during any fiscal year as a result of the forgiveness of any loan, note, or obligation under this subsection shall be rescinded.".

SEC. 3005. RURAL HOUSING AUTHORIZATIONS.

Subsection (a)(1) of section 513 of the Housing Act of 1949 is amended to read as follows:

"(a)(1) The Secretary may insure and guarantee loans under this title during fiscal year 1986 in an aggregate amount not to exceed $2,146,600,000, of which—

"(A) $1,209,600,000 shall be for loans under section 502;

"(B) $17,000,000 shall be for loans under section 504;

"(C) $19,000,000 shall be for loans under section 514;

"(D) $900,000,000 shall be for loans under section 515; and

"(E) $1,000,000 shall be for loans under section 524.".

SEC. 3006. MANAGEMENT OF INSURED AND GUARANTEED RURAL HOUSING LOANS.

(a) Sale of Insured and Guaranteed Loans to Public.—Section 517(c) of the Housing Act of 1949 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Any loan made and sold by the Secretary under this section after the date of the enactment of the Housing and Community Development Reconciliation Amendments of 1985 (and any loan made by other lenders under this title that is insured or guaranteed in accordance with this section, is purchased by the Secretary, and is sold by the Secretary under this section after such date) shall be sold to the public and may not be sold to the Federal Financing Bank, unless such sale to the Federal Financing Bank is required to service transactions under this title between the Secretary and the Federal Financing Bank occurring on or before such date.".

(b) Interest Subsidy on Insured and Guaranteed Loans Offered for Sale to Public.—Section 517(d) of the Housing Act of 1949 is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after the subsection designation; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) Each loan made by the Secretary or other lenders under this title that is insured or guaranteed in accordance with this subsection shall, when offered for sale to the public, be accompanied by an agreement by the Secretary to pay to the holder of such loan (through an agreement to purchase such loan or through such other means as the Secretary determines to be appropriate) the difference between the rate of interest paid by the borrower of such loan and the market rate of interest (as determined by the Secretary) on obligations having comparable periods to maturity on the date of such sale.".

(c) Protection of Borrowers Under Loans Sold to Public.—Section 517(d) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended by subsection (b) of this section, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) Each loan made by the Secretary or other lenders under this title that is insured or guaranteed in accordance with this subsection shall, when offered for sale to the public, be accompanied by agreements for the benefit of the borrower under the loan that provide that—

"(A) the purchaser or any assignee of the loan shall not diminish any substantive or procedural right of the borrower arising under this title;

"(B) upon any substantial default of the borrower, but prior to foreclosure, the loan shall be assigned to the Secretary for the purpose of avoiding foreclosure; and

"(C) following any assignment under subparagraph (B) and before commencing any action to foreclose or otherwise dispossess the borrower, the Secretary shall afford the borrower all substantive and procedural rights arising under this title, including consideration for interest subsidy, moratorium, reamortization, refinancing, and appeal of any adverse decision to an impartial officer.

"(4) From the proceeds of loan sales under paragraph (2), the Secretary shall set aside as a reserve against future losses not less than 5 percent of the outstanding face amount of the loans held by the public at any time.".

(d) Use of Rural Housing Insurance Fund.—Section 517(j) of the Housing Act of 1949 is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (4);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) to make payments and take other actions in accordance with agreements entered into under paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (d).".

(e) Eligibility for Guaranteed Loans.—Section 517 of the Housing Act of 1949 is amended by striking out subsection (n).

(f) Regulations.—Section 517(o) of the Housing Act of 1949 is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after the subsection designation; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) Not later than the expiration of the 90-day period following the date of the enactment of the Housing and Community Development Reconciliation Amendments of 1985, the Secretary shall issue regulations to facilitate the marketability in the secondary mortgage market of loans insured or guaranteed under this section. Such regulations shall ensure that such loans are competitive with other loans and mortgages insured or guaranteed by the Federal Government.".

(A) by striking out "criteria set forth in section 404(d)(2)(B)" and inserting in lieu thereof "criterion set forth in section 404(d)(2)"; and

(B) by inserting after the first sentence thereof the following: "Beginning October 1, 1986, if such service is not projected to meet such criterion, the Corporation may discontinue, modify, or adjust such service so that the applicable criterion will be met.";

(2) in section 404(c)(3)(B) (45 U.S.C. 564(c)(3)(B))—

(A) by striking out "60" and inserting in lieu thereof "120";

(B) by striking out "either the Senate" and all that follows through "that it does" and inserting in lieu thereof "the Senate and the House of Representatives adopt a joint resolution during such period stating that they do"; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following: "For purposes of this subparagraph, continuity of session of the Congress is broken only by an adjournment sine die and the days on which either House is not in session because of adjournment of more than 3 days to a day certain are excluded in the computation of such 120-day period.";

(3) by amending section 404(c)(4)(B) (45 U.S.C. 564(c)(4)(B)) to read as follows:

"(B) The Corporation shall conduct an annual review of each route in the basic system to determine if such route is projected to meet the criterion appropriate to such route set forth in subsection (d), as adjusted to reflect constant 1979 dollars. If the Corporation determines on the basis of such review that such route will not meet such criterion, the Corporation shall discontinue, modify, or adjust the operation of rail passenger service over such route so that the criterion will be met.";

(4) in the first sentence of section 404(d)(1) (45 U.S.C. 564(d)(1))—

(A) by striking out "if—" and inserting in lieu thereof "if";

(B) by striking out "(A)"; and

(C) by striking out all after "mile" the second time it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof a period;

(5) in the second sentence of section 404(d)(1) (45 U.S.C. 564(d)(1)) by striking out "and passenger mile per train mile";

(6) by striking out the last sentence of section 404(d)(1) (45 U.S.C. 564(d)(1)); and

(7) in section 404(d)(2) (45 U.S.C. 564(d)(2))—

(A) by striking out "if—" and inserting in lieu thereof "if";

(B) by striking out "(A)"; and

(C) by striking out all after "mile" the second time it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

(b) Effective Date.—The provisions of this section shall take effect on October 1, 1986.

SEC. 4015. ICC REGULATION.

Section 306(a)(3) of the Rail Passenger Service Act (45 U.S.C. 546(a)(3)) is amended by striking out ", except as otherwise provided in this Act,".

SEC. 4016. MEANING OF "DISCONTINUANCE" FOR LABOR PROTECTION PURPOSES.

Section 405(a) of the Rail Passenger Service Act (45 U.S.C. 565(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "For purposes of subsection (c) of this section and any agreement designed to implement the provisions of such subsection, a 'discontinuance of intercity rail passenger service' shall not include any adjustment in frequency or seasonal suspension of intercity rail passenger trains the effect of which is a temporary suspension of service unless such adjustment or suspension causes a reduction of passenger train operations on a particular route to a frequency of less than three round trips per week at any time during any calendar year.".

SEC. 4017. NORTHEAST CORRIDOR COST DISPUTE DECISIONS.

(a) ICC Decisions.—(1) Section 1163(a)(2) of the Northeast Rail Service Act of 1981 (45 U.S.C. 1111(a)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) The Commission, in making such a determination, shall consider all relevant factors, and shall not permit cross subsidization between intercity rail passenger service and commuter rail passenger service.".

(2) Any decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission before the date of enactment of this Act under section 1163(a)(2) of the Northeast Rail Service Act of 1981 (45 U.S.C. 1111(a)(2)) shall have no force and effect after the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) Assignment of Costs.—Section 402(a) of the Rail Passenger Service Act (45 U.S.C. 562(a)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" immediately after "(a)";

(2) by inserting "(2)" immediately before "Notwithstanding";

(3) in the second sentence of paragraph (2), as so designated by paragraph (2) of this subsection, by striking out "180" and inserting in lieu thereof "120";

(4) in the last sentence of paragraph (2), as so designated by paragraph (2) of this subsection, by striking out "shall consider all relevant factors, and shall not permit cross subsidization among intercity, commuter," and inserting in lieu thereof "shall not permit cross subsidization between intercity rail passenger service"; and

(5) by adding at the end of paragraph (2), as so designated by paragraph (2) of this subsection, the following: "The Commission, in making such a determination, shall assign to a freight railroad obtaining services pursuant to this paragraph the costs incurred by the Corporation solely for the benefit of that railroad, plus a proportionate share of all other costs of providing services covered by this paragraph that are incurred for the common benefit of the Corporation and such freight railroad. The proportionate share of such other costs assigned to a freight railroad shall be based on relative measures of volume of car operations, tonnage, or other factors that reasonably reflect the relative use of the rail properties covered by this paragraph. Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to preclude parties from entering into an agreement under this paragraph either before or after a determination of the Commission under this paragraph.".

(c) Effectiveness of Standard.—The compensation standard established by the amendment made by subsection (b) of this section shall be effective in any proceeding instituted under section 402(a)(2) of the Rail Passenger Service Act (45 U.S.C. 562(a)(2)) after the date of enactment of this Act.

(d) Congressional Policy.—Nothing in this section, or any amendment made by this section, shall be construed to alter the Congressional policy against cross subsidization among intercity, commuter, and rail freight services expressed in the last sentence of section 402(a) of the Rail Passenger Service Act, as in effect before the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4018. LOCAL RAIL SERVICE ASSISTANCE.

Section 5(q) of the Department of Transportation Act (49 U.S.C. App. 1654(q)) is amended—

(1) by inserting after "September 30, 1984." the following: "Of the funds authorized to be appropriated under this subsection, there are authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $12,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, not to exceed $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, and not to exceed $8,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988."; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following: "No funds are authorized to be appropriated under this subsection for any period after September 30, 1988.".

Subtitle B—Highway Programs

SEC. 4101. REDUCTIONS IN HIGHWAY APPORTIONMENTS.

(a) Primary System.—The first sentence of section 105(a)(1) of the Highway Improvement Act of 1982 is amended by striking out "$2,450,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$2,375,000,000".

(b) Bridge Replacement and Rehabilitation.—Section 202(1) of the Highway Safety Act of 1982 is amended by striking out "$2,050,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,900,000,000".

(c) Interstate 4R.—The first sentence of section 105 of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1978 is amended by striking out "$3,150,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$2,975,000,000".

(d) Apportionment Adjustments.—

(1) Determination of adjustment amount.—On the first day following the effective date of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall determine—

(A) the amount of funds that would have been apportioned to each State on October 1, 1985—

(i) for the Federal-aid primary system program if the amendment made by subsection (a) had been in effect on such date;

(ii) for the highway bridge replacement and rehabilitation program if the amendment made by subsection (b) had been in effect on such date; and

(iii) for the program to resurface, restore, rehabilitate, and reconstruct routes on the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways if the amendment made by subsection (c) had been in effect on such date; and

(B) the amount by which the amount which was apportioned to such State on October 1, 1985, for such program exceeds the amount determined under subparagraph (A) for such program.

(2) Adjustments to current apportionment.—To the extent that any funds—

(A) which were apportioned to a State on October 1, 1985, for any program referred to in paragraph (1)(A); and do not exceed the amount determined under paragraph (1)(B) for such program, such apportioned and unobligated funds shall lapse on such first day.

(B) which are unobligated on the first day following the effective date of this section;

(3) Adjustment to future apportionment.—If the amount determined under paragraph (1)(B) with respect to the apportionment made on October 1, 1985, to any State for any program referred to in paragraph (1)(A) is greater than the amount of funds which lapse from the apportionment to such State for such program under paragraph (2), the Secretary of Transportation shall reduce the amount which, but for this paragraph, would otherwise be apportioned to such State for such program on October 1, 1986, by the amount of such excess.

SEC. 4102. OBLIGATION CEILING.

(a) General Limitation.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the total of all obligations for Federal-aid highways and highway safety construction programs shall not exceed—

(1) $13,125,000,000 for fiscal year 1986;

(2) $13,525,000,000 for fiscal year 1987; and

(3) $14,100,000,000 for fiscal year 1988.

(b) Exceptions.—The limitations under subsection (a) shall not apply to obligations—

(1) under section 125 of title 23, United States Code;

(2) under section 157 of such title;

(3) under section 320 of such title;

(4) under section 147 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1978;

(5) under section 9 of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1981;

(6) under sections 131(b) and 131(j) of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982; and

(7) under section 118 of the National Visitor Center Facilities Act of 1968.

(c) Distribution of Obligational Authority.—For each of the fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988, the Secretary of Transportation shall distribute the limitation imposed by subsection (a) by allocation in the ratio which sums authorized to be appropriated for Federal-aid highways and highway safety construction which are apportioned or allocated to each State for such fiscal year bears to the total of the sums authorized to be appropriated for Federal-aid highways and highway safety construction which are apportioned or allocated to all the States for such fiscal year.

(d) Limitation on Obligational Authority.—During the period October 1 through December 31 of each of the fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988, no State shall obligate more than 35 percent of the amount distributed to such State under subsection (c) for such fiscal year, and the total of all State obligations during such period shall not exceed 25 percent of the total amount distributed to all States under such subsection for such fiscal year.

(e) Redistribution of Unused Obligational Authority.—Notwithstanding subsections (c) and (d), the Secretary of Transportation shall—

(1) provide all States with authority sufficient to prevent lapses of sums authorized to be appropriated for Federal-aid highways and highway safety construction which have been apportioned or allocated to a State, except in those instances in which a State indicates its intention to lapse sums apportioned under section 104(b)(5)(A) of title 23, United States Code;

(2) after August 1 of each of the fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988, revise a distribution of the funds made available under subsection (c) for such fiscal year if a State will not obligate the amount distributed during such fiscal year and redistribute sufficient amounts to those States able to obligate amounts in addition to those previously distributed during such fiscal year giving priority to those States having large unobligated balances of funds apportioned under section 104 of title 23, United States Code, and giving priority to those States which, because of statutory changes made by the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 and the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1981, have experienced substantial proportional reductions in their apportionments and allocations; and

(3) not distribute amounts authorized for administrative expenses and Federal lands highways programs.

(f) Conforming Amendment.—Section 157(b) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking out the period at the end of the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "and section 4102(c) of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985.".

SEC. 4103. INCREASE IN THE STATE EMERGENCY REPAIR FUND LIMITATION.

The first sentence of section 125(b) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting after "$30,000,000" the following: "(and $55,000,000 for projects in connection with disasters or failures occurring in calendar year 1985)".

SEC. 4104. NATIONAL MINIMUM DRINKING AGE AMENDMENTS.

(a) Extension of Penalty for Non-Compliance.—Section 158(a)(2) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking out "the fiscal year succeeding" and inserting in lieu thereof "each fiscal year after".

(b) Complying State Laws.—Subsection (a) of section 158 of such title is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) State grandfather law as complying.—If, before the later of (A) October 1, 1986, or (B) the tenth day following the last day of the first session the legislature of a State convenes after the date of the enactment of this paragraph, such State has in effect a law which makes unlawful the purchase and public possession in such State of any alcoholic beverage by a person who is less than 21 years of age (other than any person who is 18 years of age or older on the day preceding the effective date of such law and at such time could lawfully purchase or publicly possess any alcoholic beverage in such State), such State shall be deemed to be in compliance with paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection in each fiscal year in which such law is in effect.".

(c) Period of Availability; Effect of Compliance and Noncompliance.—Subsection (b) of section 158 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Period of Availability; Effect of Compliance and Noncompliance.—

"(1) Period of availability of withheld funds.—

"(A) Funds withheld on or before September 30, 1988.—Any funds withheld under this section from apportionment to any State on or before September 30, 1988, shall remain available for apportionment to such State as follows:

"(i) If such funds would have been apportioned under section 104(b)(5)(A) of this title but for this section, such funds shall remain available until the end of the fiscal year for which such funds are authorized to be appropriated.

"(ii) If such funds would have been apportioned under section 104(b)(5)(B) of this title but for this section, such funds shall remain available until the end of the second fiscal year following the fiscal year for which such funds are authorized to be appropriated.

"(iii) If such funds would have been apportioned under section 104(b)(1), 104(b)(2), or 104(b)(6) of this title but for this section, such funds shall remain available until the end of the third fiscal year following the fiscal year for which such funds are authorized to be appropriated.

"(B) Funds withheld after September 30, 1988.—No funds withheld under this section from apportionment to any State after September 30, 1988, shall be available for apportionment to such State.

"(2) Apportionment of withheld funds after compliance.—If, before the last day of the period for which funds withheld under this section from apportionment are to remain available for apportionment to a State under paragraph (1)(A), the State makes effective a law which is in compliance with subsection (a), the Secretary shall on the day following the effective date of such law apportion to such State the withheld funds remaining available for apportionment to such State.

"(3) Period of availability of subsequently apportioned funds.—Any funds apportioned pursuant to paragraph (2) shall remain available for expenditure as follows:

"(A) Funds apportioned under section 104(b)(5)(A) of this title shall remain available until the end of the fiscal year succeeding the fiscal year in which such funds are so apportioned.

"(B) Funds apportioned under section 104(b)(1), 104(b)(2), 104(b)(5)(B), or 104(b)(6) of this title shall remain available until the end of the third fiscal year succeeding the fiscal year in which such funds are so apportioned.

Sums not obligated at the end of such period shall lapse or, in the case of funds apportioned under section 104(b)(5) of this title, shall lapse and be made available by the Secretary for projects in accordance with section 118(b) of this title.

"(4) Effect of noncompliance.—If, at the end of the period for which funds withheld under this section from apportionment are available for apportionment to a State under paragraph (1), the State has not made effective a law which is in compliance with subsection (a), such funds shall lapse or, in the case of funds withheld from apportionment under section 104(b)(5) of this title, such funds shall lapse and be made available by the Secretary for projects in accordance with section 118(b) of this title.".

(d) Conforming Amendments.—Such section 158 is further amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by inserting "Withholding of Funds for Noncompliance.—" before "(1) The";

(2) in subsection (a)(1) by inserting "First Year.—" before "The Secretary";

(3) by indenting paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) and aligning them with paragraph (3) of such subsection as inserted by subsection (b) of this section;

(4) in subsection (a)(1) by inserting "first" before "fiscal year" the second place it appears;

(5) in subsection (a)(2) by inserting "After the First Year.—" before "The Secretary"; and

(6) in subsection (c) by inserting "Alcoholic Beverage Defined.—" before "As".

SEC. 4105. OHIO RIVER BRIDGE FUND REPROGRAMMING.

Section 147 of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1978 is amended by inserting "(a)" after "Sec. 147." and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b)(1) Of the funds which have been set aside previously pursuant to the fourth and fifth sentences of subsection (a) of this section and which are in excess of the amounts needed to complete the projects authorized by such subsection—

"(A) $65,000,000 shall be available to the Secretary of Transportation to carry out the state-of-the-art technology projects described in paragraph (2) of this subsection; and

"(B) the remainder shall be apportioned under subsection (e) of section 144 of title 23, United States Code, for carrying out projects under such section.

"(2) The state-of-the-art technology projects referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection are the following:

"(A) Construction of a bridge (including approaches thereto) across the Ohio River between Newport, Kentucky, and Cincinnati, Ohio, to replace a bridge on a highway designated as a United States route.

"(B) Construction of a bridge (including approaches thereto) across the Ohio River between Covington, Kentucky, and Cincinnati, Ohio, to replace a bridge on a Kentucky State highway.

"(C) Construction of a bridge (including approaches thereto) across the Ohio River near Maysville, Kentucky, and Aberdeen, Ohio, to replace a bridge on a highway designated as a United States route.

"(3) In order to demonstrate the latest high-type geometric design features (including safety hardware) and new advances in highway bridge construction, the projects authorized by this subsection shall utilize state-of-the-art technology, and all design elements, including the decking, shall be designed to provide the best life-cycle costs, thereby minimizing future maintenance and rehabilitation costs.

"(4) The Secretary of Transportation may provide necessary technical assistance in the design and construction of projects under this subsection.

"(5) Not later than one year after the completion of the state-of-the-art technology projects under this subsection, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit a report to Congress, including but not limited to the results of such projects, the effects of using the best available technology on safety and other considerations, recommendations for applying the results to other bridge projects, and any changes that may be necessary by law to permit further use of such features.

"(6) In allocating funds made available to carry out the projects described in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Secretary shall give priority to completing the projects described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of such paragraph. At such time as the Secretary determines and certifies in writing that sufficient funds have been set aside, from the amount made available under paragraph (1)(A), to complete the projects described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (2), any remaining funds shall be used to carry out the project described in subparagraph (C) of paragraph (2).

"(7) Funds made available to carry out the projects described in paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be available for obligation in the same manner and to the same extent as if such funds were apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, except that such funds shall be available until expended and shall not be subject to any obligation limitation. The Federal share of the projects described in paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be that provided in subsection (a).".

TITLE V—CORPORATION FOR PUBLIC BROADCASTING AND FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

SEC. 5001. CORPORATION FOR PUBLIC BROADCASTING.

(a) Public Telecommunications Facilities.—Section 391 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 391) is amended—

(b) Allocation of Appropriations.—Section 393 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 393) is amended—

(1) by striking out subsection (c); and

(2) by redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (c).

(c) Financing of Corporation for Public Broadcasting.—(1) Section 396(k)(1)(C) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 396(k)(1)(C)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "and 1986" and inserting in lieu thereof "1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, and 1990";

(B) by striking out "and" after "fiscal year 1985,"; and

(C) by inserting ", $200,000,000 for fiscal year 1987, $214,000,000 for fiscal year 1988, $238,000,000 for fiscal year 1989, and $254,000,000 for fiscal year 1990" immediately before the period at the end thereof.

(2) Section 396(k)(3)(A)(i)(II) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 396(k)(3)(A)(i)(II)) is amended by striking out "research, training, technical assistance, engineering, instructional support, payment of interest on indebtedness,".

(3) Section 396(k) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 396(k)) is amended—

(A) by striking out paragraph (8); and

(B) by redesignating paragraphs (9) and (10) as paragraphs (8) and (9), respectively.

SEC. 5002. FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION.

(a) Authorization of Appropriations.—(1) Section 6 of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 156) is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 6. There are authorized to be appropriated for the administration of this Act by the Commission $98,100,000 for fiscal year 1986 and $97,600,000 for fiscal year 1987, together with such sums as may be necessary for increases resulting from adjustments in salary, pay, retirement, other employee benefits required by law, and other nondiscretionary costs, for each of the fiscal years 1986 and 1987.".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) of this subsection shall apply with respect to fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1985.

(b) Reimbursed Expenses.—Section 4(g)(2) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 154(g)(2)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (D), by striking out "1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "1987"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) Funds which are received by the Commission as reimbursements under the provisions of this paragraph after the close of a fiscal year shall remain available for obligation.".

(c) Annual Report.—Section 5(g) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 155(g)) is amended by striking out "January 31" and inserting in lieu thereof "March 31".

(d) Additional Savings.—For provisions of law which, through relocation of the Fort Lauderdale, Florida, Monitoring Station of the Federal Communications Commission, reduce spending for fiscal year 1986 in satisfaction of the reconciliation requirements imposed by section 2(e) of S. Con. Res. 32 (99th Congress), see the material under the heading "Federal Communications Commission" in the Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1985 (Public Law 99-88).

(e) Charges for Operations.—The Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 151 et seq.) is amended by inserting immediately after section 7 the following new section:

"CHARGES

"Sec. 8. (a) The Commission shall assess and collect charges at such rates as the Commission shall establish or at such modified rates as it shall establish pursuant to the provisions of subsection (b) of this section. The Schedule of Charges established under this subsection shall be implemented not later than 360 days after the date of enactment of this section.

"(b)(1) The Schedule of Charges established under this section shall be reviewed by the Commission every two years after the date of enactment of this section and adjusted by the Commission to reflect changes in the Consumer Price Index. Increases or decreases in charges shall apply to all categories of charges, except that individual fees shall not be adjusted until the increase or decrease, as determined by the net change in the Consumer Price Index since the date of enactment of this section, amounts to at least $5.00 in the case of fees under $100.00, or 5 percent in the case of fees of $100.00 or more. All fees which require adjustment will be rounded upward to the next $5.00 increment. The Commission shall transmit to the Congress notification of any such adjustment not later than 90 days before the effective date of such adjustment.

"(2) Increases or decreases in charges made pursuant to this subsection shall not be subject to judicial review.

"(c)(1) The Commission shall prescribe by regulation an additional charge which shall be assessed as a penalty for late payment of charges required by subsection (a) of this section. Such penalty shall be 25 percent of the amount of the charge which was not paid in a timely manner.

"(2) The Commission may dismiss any application or other filing for failure to pay in a timely manner any charge or penalty under this section.

"(d)(1) The charges established under this section shall not be applicable to the following radio services: Local Government, Police, Fire, Highway Maintenance, Forestry-Conservation, Public Safety, and Special Emergency Radio, or to governmental entities licensed in other services.

"(2) The Commission may waive or defer payment of a charge in any specific instance for good cause shown, where such action would promote the public interest.

"(e) Moneys received from charges established under this section shall be deposited in the general fund of the Treasury to reimburse the United States for amounts appropriated for use by the Commission in carrying out its functions under this Act.

"(f) The Commission shall prescribe appropriate rules and regulations to carry out the provisions of this section.".

(f) Until modified pursuant to section 8(b) of the Communications Act of 1934 (as added by subsection (e) of this section), the Schedule of Charges which the Federal Communications Commission shall prescribe pursuant to section 8(a) of such Act shall be as follows:

TITLE VI—MARITIME, COASTAL ZONE, AND RELATED PROGRAMS

SUBTITLE A—BOATING SAFETY FUND

SEC. 6001. BOATING SAFETY FUND.

An amount equal to one-third of the amount transferred for fiscal year 1985 to the Boat Safety Account under section 9503(c)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (26 U.S.C. 9503(c)(4)) shall be deposited in the general fund of the Treasury as proprietary receipts of the department in which the Coast Guard is operating and ascribed to Coast Guard activities. Section 13106(a) of title 46, United States Code, shall be applied with respect to fiscal year 1985 by substituting "one-third" for "two-thirds" in the first sentence.

SUBTITLE B—NOAA NAUTICAL AND AERONAUTICAL PRODUCTS

SEC. 6011. SALE AND DISTRIBUTION OF NOAA NAUTICAL AND AERONAUTICAL PRODUCTS.

(a) Section 1307 of title 44, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 1307. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration: nautical and aeronautical products, sale and distribution

"(a)(1) All nautical and aeronautical products created or published by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration shall be sold at such prices as the Secretary of Commerce shall establish annually, in accordance with the provisions of this subsection. The Secretary shall publish annually the prices at which nautical and aeronautical products are sold to the public.

"(2)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, the prices of nautical and aeronautical products may be increased over a period of not less than three years after the date of enactment of this section so as to recover all costs attributable to data base management, compilation, printing, and distribution of such products. The prices of such products may be maintained to recover all such costs thereafter. At the end of such period and every three years thereafter, the Secretary, after consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall report to the Congress on the effect of imposing or maintaining such increased prices, including any impact on aviation and marine safety.

"(B) The Secretary, after consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall adjust the prices of nautical or aeronautical products in such manner as is necessary to avoid any adverse impact on aviation and marine safety attributable to the prices specified in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph.

"(3) This section shall not be construed to require the establishment of any price for a nautical or aeronautical product where, in the judgment of the Secretary, furnishing of that product to a recipient is a reasonable exchange for voluntary contribution of information by the recipient to a program of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

"(4) Prices established under this section may not include costs attributable to the acquisition or processing of nautical or aeronautical data.

"(b) Fees collected from the sale of nautical or aeronautical products under this section and from any licensing of such products which is permitted under any other provision of law shall be deposited in the miscellaneous receipts fund of the United States Treasury.

"(c) The Secretary may distribute nautical and aeronautical products—

"(1) without charge to each foreign government or international organization with which the Secretary or a Federal department or agency has an agreement for exchange of these products without cost; and

"(2) at prices which the Secretary establishes, to the departments and officers of the United States requiring them for official use.

"(d) The fees provided for in this section are for the purpose of reimbursing the United States Government for the costs of creating, publishing or distributing aeronautical and nautical products of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The collection of fees authorized by this section shall not alter or expand any duty or liability of the United States under existing law for the performance of functions for which fees are collected, nor shall the collection of fees constitute an express or implied undertaking by the United States to perform any activity in a certain manner.

"(e) For purposes of this section, the term 'nautical and aeronautical products' includes all nautical and aeronautical charts, tide and tidal current tables, tidal current charts, coast pilots, water level products, and associated data bases which are created or published by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.".

(b) The item relating to section 1307 in the analysis of chapter 13 of title 44, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"1307. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration: nautical and aeronautical products, sale and distribution.".

SUBTITLE C—FOREIGN FISHING PERMIT FEES

SEC. 6021. FOREIGN FISHING PERMIT FEES.

Paragraph (10) of section 204(b) of the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act (16 U.S.C. 1824(b)(10)) is amended to read as follows:

"(10) FEES.—(A) Fees shall be paid to the Secretary by the owner or operator of any foreign fishing vessel for which a permit is issued pursuant to this subsection. The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of State, shall establish a schedule of such fees which shall apply nondiscriminatorily to each foreign nation.

"(B) Unless subparagraph (C) applies, the fees imposed under subparagraph (A) shall be at least in an amount sufficient to return to the United States an amount which bears to the total cost of carrying out the provisions of this Act during each fiscal year the same ratio as the aggregate quantity of fish harvested by foreign fishing vessels within the fishery conservation zone during the preceding year bears to the aggregate quantity of fish harvested by both foreign and domestic fishing vessels within such zone and the territorial waters of the United States during such preceding year.

"(C) If the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of State, finds that any foreign nation receiving an allocation under section 201(e)—

"(i) is harvesting anadromous species of United States origin at a level that is unacceptable to the Secretary; or

"(ii) is failing to take sufficient action to benefit the conservation and development of United States fisheries;

the fees imposed under subparagraph (A) for the next fiscal year shall be at least in an amount sufficient to return to the United States an amount which bears to the total cost of carrying out the provisions of this Act during that fiscal year the same ratio as the aggregate quantity of fish harvested by foreign fishing vessels within the fishery conservation zone during the preceding year bears to the aggregate quantity of fish harvested by both foreign and domestic fishing vessels within such zone during such preceding year. If the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of State, finds, at any time during a fiscal year in which fees calculated under this subparagraph are in effect with respect to a foreign nation, that the conditions requiring that calculation no longer exist, the fees imposed under this paragraph with respect to that nation for the remainder of the fiscal year shall be calculated under subparagraph (B).

"(D) Before the end of each fiscal year, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of State, shall review, based on the criteria established in subparagraph (C) (i) and (ii), the performance of every nation receiving an allocation under section 201(e) and provide written notice to the Congress of his findings and reasons therefor before the end of the fiscal year.

"(E) For purposes of this paragraph, the total cost of carrying out the provisions of this Act includes, but is not limited to, fishery conservation and management, fisheries research, administration, and enforcement, but excludes costs for observers covered by surcharges under section 201(i)(4).

"(F)(i) The amounts collected by the Secretary under this paragraph (except the amounts referred to in clause (ii)) shall be transferred to the fisheries loan fund established under section 4 of the Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956 (16 U.S.C. 742(c)) for so long as such fund exists and used for the purpose of making loans therefrom, but only to the extent and in amounts provided for in advance in appropriation Acts.

"(ii) The Secretary shall deposit into the general fund of the United States Treasury the difference between the amounts collected under subparagraph (C) and the amounts that would have been collected had that subparagraph not been enacted.".

SUBTITLE D—AMENDMENTS TO THE COASTAL ZONE MANAGEMENT ACT

SEC. 6041. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Coastal Zone Management Reauthorization Act of 1985".

SEC. 6042. REFERENCE.

Whenever in this subtitle an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment, or repeal, of a section, subsection, paragraph, or other provision, the reference is to be considered to be made to a section, subsection, paragraph, or other provision of the Coastal Zone Management Act of 1972 (16 U.S.C. 1451 et seq.) unless otherwise specified.

SEC. 6043. REDUCTION OF ADMINISTRATIVE GRANTS.

(a) Section 312(c) (16 U.S.C. 1458(c)) is amended by striking "if the Secretary determines" and all that follows thereafter and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "if the Secretary determines that the coastal state—

"(1) is failing to make significant improvement in achieving the coastal management objectives specified in section 303(2) (A) through (I); or

"(2) is failing to make satisfactory progress in providing in its management program for the matters referred to in section 306(i) (A) and (B).".

(b)(1) Subsection (a) of section 306 of the Coastal Zone Management Act of 1972 (16 U.S.C. 1455) is amended by striking out "The Secretary may" and all that follows through "if the Secretary—" and substituting in lieu thereof the following: "The Secretary may make grants to any coastal state for the purpose of administering that state's management program, if the state matches any such grant according to the following ratios of Federal to state contributions for the applicable fiscal year: 4 to 1 for fiscal year 1986; 2.3 to 1 for fiscal year 1987; 1.5 to 1 for fiscal year 1988; 1 to 1 for any fiscal year after fiscal year 1988. The Secretary may make the grant only if the Secretary—".

(2) Section 306A is amended by striking section (d)(1) and substituting in lieu thereof the following:

"(d)(1) The Secretary may make grants to any coastal state for the purpose of carrying out the project or purpose for which such grants are awarded, if the state matches any such grant according to the following ratios of Federal to state contributions for the applicable fiscal year: 4 to 1 for fiscal year 1986; 2.3 to 1 for fiscal year 1987; 1.5 to 1 for fiscal year 1988; and 1 to 1 for each fiscal year after fiscal year 1988.".

(c) Section 306(g) (16 U.S.C. 1455) is amended by striking out the period at the end of the first sentence and all that follows thereafter and inserting in lieu thereof the following: ", and subject to the following conditions:

"(1) The state shall promptly notify the Secretary of any proposed amendment, modification or other program change and submit it for Secretarial approval. The Secretary may suspend all or part of any grant made under this section pending state submission of the proposed amendment, modification or other program change.

"(2) Within 30 days from the date on which the Secretary receives any proposed amendment, the Secretary shall notify the state whether the Secretary approves or disapproves the amendment, or whether the Secretary finds it is necessary to extend the review of the proposed amendment for a period not to exceed 120 days from the date the Secretary received the proposed amendment. The Secretary may extend this 120-day period only as necessary to meet the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

"(3) The state may not implement any proposed amendment as part of its approved program pursuant to section 306, until after the proposed amendment has been approved by the Secretary.".

SEC. 6044. NATIONAL ESTUARINE RESERVE RESEARCH SYSTEM.

Section 315 (16 U.S.C. 1461) is amended to read as follows:

"NATIONAL ESTUARINE RESERVE RESEARCH SYSTEM

"SEC. 315. (a) ESTABLISHMENT OF THE SYSTEM.—There is established the National Estuarine Reserve Research System (hereinafter referred to in this section as the 'System') that consists of—

"(1) each estuarine sanctuary designated under this section as in effect before the date of the enactment of the Coastal Zone Management Reauthorization Act of 1985; and

"(2) each estuarine area designated as a national estuarine reserve under subsection (b).

Each estuarine sanctuary referred to in paragraph (1) is hereby designated as a national estuarine reserve.

"(b) DESIGNATION OF NATIONAL ESTUARINE RESERVES.—After the date of the enactment of the Coastal Zone Management Reauthorization Act of 1985, the Secretary may designate an estuarine area as a national estuarine reserve if—

"(1) the Governor of the coastal State in which the area is located nominates the area for that designation; and

"(2) the Secretary finds that—

"(A) the area is a representative estuarine ecosystem that is suitable for long-term research and contributes to the biogeographical and typological balance of the System;

"(B) the law of the coastal State provides long-term protection for reserve resources to ensure a stable environment for research;

"(C) designation of the area as a reserve will serve to enhance public awareness and understanding of estuarine areas, and provide suitable opportunities for public education and interpretation; and

"(D) the coastal State in which the area is located has complied with the requirements of any regulations issued by the Secretary to implement this section.

"(c) ESTUARINE RESEARCH GUIDELINES.—The Secretary shall develop guidelines for the conduct of research within the System that shall include—

"(1) a mechanism for identifying, and establishing priorities among, the coastal management issues that should be addressed through coordinated research within the System;

"(2) the establishment of common research principles and objectives to guide the development of research programs within the System;

"(3) the identification of uniform research methodologies which will ensure comparability of data, the broadest application of research results, and the maximum use of the System for research purposes;

"(4) the establishment of performance standards upon which the effectiveness of the research efforts and the value of reserves within the System in addressing the coastal management issues identified in subsection (1) may be measured; and

"(5) the consideration of additional sources of funds for estuarine research than the funds authorized under this Act, and strategies for encouraging the use of such funds within the System, with particular emphasis on mechanisms established under subsection (d).

In developing the guidelines under this section, the Secretary shall consult with prominent members of the estuarine research community.

"(d) PROMOTION AND COORDINATION OF ESTUARINE RESEARCH.—The Secretary shall take such action as is necessary to promote and coordinate the use of the System for research purposes including—

"(1) requiring that the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, in conducting or supporting estuarine research, give priority consideration to research that uses the System; and

"(2) consulting with other Federal and State agencies to promote use of one or more reserves within the System by such agencies when conducting estuarine research.

"(e) FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—(1) The Secretary may, in accordance with such rules and regulations as the Secretary shall promulgate, make grants—

"(A) to a coastal State—

"(i) for purposes of acquiring such lands and waters, and any property interests therein, as are necessary to ensure the appropriate long-term management of an area as a national estuarine reserve,

"(ii) for purposes of operating or managing a national estuarine reserve and constructing appropriate reserve facilities, or

"(iii) for purposes of conducting educational or interpretive activities; and

"(B) to any coastal State or public or private person for purposes of supporting research and monitoring within a national estuarine reserve that are consistent with the research guidelines developed under subsection (c).

"(2) Financial assistance provided under paragraph (1) shall be subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary considers necessary or appropriate to protect the interests of the United States, including requiring coastal States to execute suitable title documents setting forth the property interest or interests of the United States in any lands and waters acquired in whole or part with such financial assistance.

"(3)(A) The amount of the financial assistance provided under paragraph (1)(A)(i) of subsection (e) with respect to the acquisition of lands and waters, or interests therein, for any one national estuarine reserve may not exceed an amount equal to 50 per centum of the costs of the lands, waters, and interests therein or $4,000,000, whichever amount is less.

"(B) The amount of the financial assistance provided under paragraph (1)(A) (ii) and (iii) and paragraph (1)(B) of subsection (e) may not exceed 50 per centum of the costs incurred to achieve the purposes described in those paragraphs with respect to a reserve.

"(f) EVALUATION OF SYSTEM PERFORMANCE.—(1) The Secretary shall periodically evaluate the operation and management of each national estuarine reserve, including education and interpretive activities, and the research being conducted within the reserve.

"(2) If evaluation under paragraph (1) reveals that the operation and management of the reserve is deficient, or that the research being conducted within the reserve is not consistent with the research guidelines developed under subsection (c), the Secretary may suspend the eligibility of that reserve for financial assistance under subsection (e) until the deficiency or inconsistency is remedied.

"(3) The Secretary may withdraw the designation of an estuarine area as a national estuarine reserve if evaluation under paragraph (1) reveals that—

"(B) a substantial portion of the research conducted within the area, over a period of years, has not been consistent with the research guidelines developed under subsection (c).

"(g) REPORT.—The Secretary shall include in the report required under section 316 information regarding—

"(1) new designations of national estuarine reserves;

"(2) any expansion of existing national estuarine reserves;

"(3) the status of the research program being conducted within the System; and

"(4) a summary of the evaluations made under subsection (f).".

SEC. 6045. REPEALS.

The following are repealed:

(1) Section 310 (16 U.S.C. 1456c; relating to research and technical assistance programs and grants).

(2) Section 314 (16 U.S.C. 1460; establishing the Coastal Zone Management Advisory Committee).

(3) Subsection (c) of section 15 of the Coastal Zone Management Act Amendments of 1976, Public Law 94-370 (16 U.S.C. 1451 note; relating to certain additional personnel positions).

SEC. 6046. AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(1) by amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

"(1) such sums, not to exceed $35,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, not to exceed $36,600,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $37,900,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, $38,800,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and $40,600,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, as may be necessary for grants under sections 306 and 306A, to remain available until expended;";

(2) by striking paragraph (2) and renumbering the succeeding paragraphs; and

(3) by amending paragraphs (3), (4), and (5) (as renumbered by paragraph (2) of this section) to read as follows:

"(3) such sums, not to exceed $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, and not to exceed $1,500,000 for each of the fiscal years occurring during the period beginning October 1, 1986, and ending September 30, 1990, as may be necessary for grants under section 309, to remain available until expended;

"(4) such sums, not to exceed $2,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, not to exceed $3,800,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $4,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and $5,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, as may be necessary for grants under section 315, to remain available until expended; and

"(5) such sums, not to exceed $3,300,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, not to exceed $3,300,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $3,300,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, $4,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1989, and $4,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, as may be necessary for administrative expenses incident to the administration of this title.".

SEC. 6047. TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.

Section 308(h) (16 U.S.C. 1456a(h)) is amended by deleting "subsections (c)(1)" each place it appears and inserting instead "subsections (c)".

SUBPART E—NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 6051. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) For purposes of this section—

(1) The term "Administration" means the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

(2) The term "Department" means the Department of Commerce.

(b) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department to enable the Administration to carry out its executive direction and administration functions and duties under law, $47,667,000 for fiscal year 1986 and $49,812,000 for fiscal year 1987. Moneys appropriated pursuant to this authorization shall be used to fund those functions and duties relating to executive direction and administration authorized by the Act entitled "An Act to clarify the status and benefits of commissioned officers of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and for other purposes", approved December 31, 1970 (33 U.S.C. 857-1 et seq.), and any other law involving such functions and duties. Such functions and duties include management, administrative support, retired pay of National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration commissioned officers, and policy development.

(c) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department to enable the Administration to carry out its marine services functions and duties under law, $61,791,000 for fiscal year 1986 and $64,572,000 for fiscal year 1987. Moneys appropriated pursuant to this authorization shall be used to fund those functions and duties relating to marine services authorized by the Act entitled "An Act to define the functions and duties of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and for other purposes", approved August 6, 1947 (33 U.S.C. 883a et seq.), and any other law involving such functions and duties. Such functions and duties include ship operations, maintenance, and support.

(d) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department to enable the Administration to carry out its aircraft services functions and duties under law, $14,779,000 for fiscal year 1986 and $15,440,000 for fiscal year 1987. Moneys appropriated pursuant to this authorization shall be used to fund those functions and duties relating to aircraft services authorized by the Act entitled "An Act to increase the efficiency and reduce the expenses of the Signal Corps of the Army, and to transfer the Weather Service to the Department of Agriculture", approved October 1, 1890 (15 U.S.C. 311 et seq.), and any other law involving such functions and duties. Such functions and duties include aircraft operations, maintenance, and support.

(e) For the purpose of enabling the Administration to carry out its functions and duties under the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere Act of 1977 (33 U.S.C. 857-13 et seq.), there are authorized to be appropriated to the Department $500,000 for fiscal year 1986.

(f)(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department to enable the Administration to carry out its nonliving marine resource functions and duties under law, $1,800,000 for fiscal year 1986 and $1,881,000 for fiscal year 1987. Moneys appropriated pursuant to this authorization shall be used to fund those functions and duties relating to nonliving marine resources authorized by the Act entitled "An Act to define the functions and duties of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and for other purposes", approved August 6, 1947 (33 U.S.C. 883a et seq.), and any other law involving such functions and duties. Such functions and duties include research, development, and licensing responsibilities pertaining to ocean thermal energy conversion and the deep seabed mining of manganese nodules, and polymetallic sulfide analyses and research.

(2) The authorization provided for under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be in addition to moneys authorized under the Deep Seabed Hard Mineral Resources Act (30 U.S.C. 1401 et seq.), and the Ocean Thermal Energy Conversion Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9101 et seq.), for the purpose of carrying out such functions and duties relating to nonliving marine resources.

(g)(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department to enable the Administration to carry out its ocean research functions and duties under law, $33,884,000 for fiscal year 1986 and $35,409,000 for fiscal year 1987. Moneys appropriated pursuant to this authorization shall be used to fund those functions and duties relating to ocean research authorized by the Act entitled "An Act to define the functions and duties of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and for other purposes", approved August 6, 1947 (33 U.S.C. 883a et seq.), and any other law involving such functions and duties. Such functions and duties include undersea marine resources, air-sea interaction, and ocean and Great Lakes environmental research.

(2) The authorization provided for under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be in addition to ocean research moneys authorized under the National Ocean Pollution Planning Act of 1978 (33 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.) for the purpose of carrying out such functions and duties relating to ocean research.

(h)(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department to enable the Administration to carry out its ocean service functions and duties under law, $17,181,000 for fiscal year 1986 and $17,954,000 for fiscal year 1987. Moneys appropriated pursuant to this authorization shall be used to fund those functions and duties relating to ocean services authorized by the Act entitled "An Act to define the functions and duties of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and for other purposes", approved August 6, 1947 (33 U.S.C. 883a et seq.), and any other law involving such functions and duties. Such functions and duties include coordination of interagency research in ocean dumping and marine pollution, and provision of tide and current data for the safe and efficient use of the oceans and Great Lakes by government, commerce, and the private sector.

(2) The authorization provided for under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be in addition to moneys authorized under the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972 (33 U.S.C. 1441 et seq.), the Coastal Zone Management Act of 1972 (16 U.S.C. 1451 et seq.), and the National Ocean Pollution Planning Act of 1978 (33 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.), for the purpose of carrying out such functions and duties relating to ocean services.

(i) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department to enable the Administration to carry out its mapping, charting, and geodesy functions and duties under law, $47,943,000 for fiscal year 1986 and $50,100,000 for fiscal year 1987. Moneys appropriated pursuant to this authorization shall be used to fund those functions and duties relating to mapping, charting, and geodesy authorized by the Act entitled "An Act to define the functions and duties of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and for other purposes", approved August 6, 1947 (33 U.S.C. 883a et seq.), and any other law involving such functions and duties. Such functions and duties include aeronautical and nautical mapping and charting activities, and geodetic data collection and analysis.

(j) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department to enable the Administration to carry out its programs at current levels such sums as may be necessary to accommodate salary, pay, and other employee benefits authorized by law for fiscal years 1986 and 1987.

SEC. 6061. CONSOLIDATION OF REPORT.

Section 201 of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972 (33 U.S.C. 1441) is amended by striking out all that follows "connecting waters" and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

SEC. 6062. MARINE RESEARCH REQUIREMENTS.

Section 202 of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972 (33 U.S.C. 1442) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" before "The Secretary" in subsection (a);

(2) by striking out "in consultation" in the first sentence of subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof "in close consultation";

(3) by adding at the end of subsection (a) the following new paragraph:

"(2) The Secretary of Commerce shall ensure that the program under this section complements, when appropriate, the activities undertaken by other Federal agencies pursuant to title I and section 203. That program shall include but not be limited to—

"(A) the development and assessment of scientific techniques to define and quantify the degradation of the marine environment;

"(B) the assessment of the capacity of the marine environment to receive materials without degradation;

"(C) continuing monitoring programs to assess the health of the marine environment, including but not limited to the monitoring of bottom oxygen concentrations, contaminant levels in biota, sediments, and the water column, diseases in fish and shellfish, and changes in types and abundance of indicator species;

"(D) the development of methodologies, techniques, and equipment for disposal of waste materials to minimize degradation of the marine environment."; and

(4) by striking out subsection (c) and redesignating subsections (d) and (e) as subsections (c) and (d), respectively.

SEC. 6063. REGIONAL MANAGEMENT PLANS.

Section 203 of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972 (33 U.S.C. 1443) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(c) The Administrator, in cooperation with the Secretary, the Secretary of Commerce, and other officials of appropriate Federal, State, and local agencies, shall assess the feasibility in coastal areas of regional management plans for the disposal of waste materials. Such plans should integrate where appropriate Federal, State, regional, and local waste disposal activities into a comprehensive regional disposal strategy. These plans should address, among other things—

"(1) the sources, quantities, and types of materials that require and will require disposal;

"(2) the environmental, economic, social, and human health factors (and the methods used to assess these factors) associated with disposal alternatives;

"(3) the improvements in production processes, methods of disposal, and recycling to reduce the adverse effects associated with such disposal alternatives;

"(4) the applicable laws and regulations governing waste disposal; and

"(5) improvements in permitting processes to reduce administrative burdens.

"(d) The Administrator, in cooperation with the Secretary of Commerce, shall submit to the Congress and the President, not later than one year after the date of enactment of this provision, a report on sewage sludge disposal in the New York City metropolitan region. The report shall—

"(1) consider the factors listed in subsection (c) as they relate to landfilling, incineration, ocean dumping, or any other feasible disposal or reuse/recycling option;

"(2) include an assessment of the cost of these alternatives; and

"(3) recommend such regulatory or legislative changes as may be necessary to reduce the adverse impacts associated with sewage sludge disposal.".

SEC. 6064. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 204 of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972 (33 U.S.C. 1444) is redesignated as section 205; and such section as so redesignated is amended by striking out "and" immediately following "fiscal year 1981" and by striking out "1982." and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "1982, not to exceed $10,635,000 for fiscal year 1986, and not to exceed $11,114,000 for fiscal year 1987.".

SEC. 6065. CONSOLIDATION OF REPORTS.

Section 205 of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972 (33 U.S.C. 1445) is transferred to a point immediately following section 203 of such Act and redesignated as section 204; and such section as so transferred and redesignated is amended to read as follows:

"ANNUAL REPORT

"SEC. 204. (a) In March of each year, the Secretary of Commerce shall report to the Congress on his activities under this title during the previous fiscal year. The report shall include—

"(1) the Secretary's findings made under section 201, including an evaluation of the short-term ecological effects and the social and economic factors involved with the dumping;

"(2) the results of activities undertaken pursuant to section 202;

"(3) with the concurrence of the Administrator and after consulting with officials of other appropriate Federal agencies, an identification of the short- and long-term research requirements associated with activities under title I, and a description of how Federal research under titles I and II will meet those requirements; and

"(4) activities of the Department of Commerce under section 5 of the Act of March 10, 1934 (48 Stat. 401; 16 U.S.C. 665).

"(b) In March of each year, the Administrator shall report to the Congress on his activities during the previous fiscal year under section 203.".

SUBTITLE G—NATIONAL OCEAN POLLUTION PLANNING ACT AMENDMENTS

SEC. 6071. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) Section 2(a) of the National Ocean Pollution Planning Act of 1978 (33 U.S.C. 1701) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(6) Numerous Federal agencies have initiated and supported research projects to study, enhance, manage, preserve, protect, or restore the resources of the Great Lakes, the Chesapeake Bay, Puget Sound, and other estuaries of national significance.

"(7) Various research projects relating to the Great Lakes, the Chesapeake Bay, Puget Sound, and other estuaries of national significance, including those conducted at the college and university level and those conducted at the State and local governmental level, can be more effectively coordinated in order to obtain maximum benefits.".

(b) Section 2(b) of the National Ocean Pollution Planning Act of 1978 (33 U.S.C. 1701) is amended by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (2), by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4), and by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) to provide for the effective coordination of research conducted to support the preservation and protection of the environmental quality of the Great Lakes, the Chesapeake Bay, Puget Sound, and other estuaries of national significance, and to encourage the use of such research in determinations that affect the environmental quality of the Great Lakes, the Chesapeake Bay, Puget Sound, and other estuaries of national significance; and".

SEC. 6072. NATIONAL OCEAN POLLUTION PROGRAM OFFICE AND NATIONAL OCEAN POLLUTION POLICY BOARD.

The National Ocean Pollution Planning Act of 1978 (33 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.) is further amended as follows:

(1) Section 3 is amended—

(A) by redesignating paragraphs (3) through (6) as paragraphs (4) through (7), respectively;

(B) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(3) The term 'Board' means the National Ocean Pollution Policy Board established under section 3A(b)."; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) The term 'Office' means the National Ocean Pollution Program Office established under section 3A(a).".

(2) The following new section is inserted immediately after section 3:

"SEC. 3A. NATIONAL OCEAN POLLUTION PROGRAM OFFICE AND NATIONAL OCEAN POLLUTION POLICY BOARD.

"(a) PROGRAM OFFICE.—(1) The Administrator shall establish within the Administration the National Ocean Pollution Program Office.

"(2) The Office shall—

"(A) serve as the lead entity responsible for administering the program established under section 4;

"(B) be headed by a director who shall—

"(i) be appointed by the Administrator,

"(ii) serve as the Chair of the Board, and

"(iii) be the spokesperson for the program;

"(C) serve as the staff for the Board and its supporting committees and working groups; and

"(D) review each department and agency budget request transmitted under section 4(d) and submit an analysis of the requests to the Board for its review.

The analysis described in subparagraph (D) shall include an analysis of how each departmental or agency budget request relates to the priorities and goals of the Plan established under section 4.

"(b) Policy Board.—(1) The Administrator, with the cooperation of the Federal departments and agencies referred to in section 7, shall establish a National Ocean Pollution Policy Board consisting of representatives of those departments and agencies.

"(2) The Board shall—

"(A) be responsible for coordinated planning and progress review for the program established under section 4;

"(B) review all department and agency budget requests transmitted to it under section 4(d) and submit a report to the Office of Management and Budget and to the Congress concerning those budget requests;

"(C) establish and maintain such interagency groups as the Board determines to be necessary to carry out its activities; and

"(D) consult with and seek the advice of users and producers of ocean pollution data, information, and services to guide the Board's efforts, keeping the Director and the Congress advised of such consultations.".

SEC. 6073. FEDERAL PLANNING TO INCLUDE GREAT LAKES.

Section 4 of the National Ocean Pollution Planning Act of 1978 (33 U.S.C. 1703) is amended—

(1) by inserting after "general research on marine ecosystems" in subsection (b)(2)(A) the following: ", including the Great Lakes, the Chesapeake Bay, Puget Sound, and other estuaries of national significance,";

(2) in subsection (b)(4)—

(A) by striking out "Budget Review.—" and inserting in lieu thereof "Plan Review.—"; and

(B) by striking out "to coordinate the budget review process"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) Budgeting.—Each Federal agency and department included under the Plan shall prepare and submit to the Office of Management and Budget, the Office, and the Board on or before the date of submission of departmental requests for appropriations to the Office of Management and Budget, an annual request for appropriations to carry out the activities of that agency or department under the Plan during the subsequent fiscal year. The Office of Management and Budget shall review the request for appropriations as an integrated, coherent, and multiagency request, taking into account the review by the Board of those requests under section 3A(b).".

SEC. 6074. DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION ON GREAT LAKES.

Section 8 of the National Ocean Pollution Planning Act of 1978 (33 U.S.C. 1707) is amended by adding "(a)" after "Sec. 8." and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) The Administrator shall ensure that the findings and information regarding ocean pollution research activities associated with the Great Lakes identified pursuant to section 4(b) be disseminated in a timely manner and in useful forms to relevant departments of the Federal Government, State governments, and other persons with an interest in such information.".

SEC. 6075. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 10 of the National Ocean Pollution Planning Act of 1978, as amended (33 U.S.C. 1709), is amended by striking out "and" after "1981," and by striking out "1982." and inserting in lieu thereof "1982, and not to exceed $3,571,000 for fiscal year 1986, and not to exceed $3,732,000 for fiscal year 1987.".

Subtitle H—Weather Modification

SEC. 6081. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 6 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the reporting of weather modification activities to the Federal Government", approved December 18, 1971 (85 Stat. 736; 15 U.S.C. 330e), is amended—

(1) by striking "and"; and

(2) by inserting immediately after "1981," the following: "$100,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, $100,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1987, $100,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988,".

SEC. 6082. OCEAN SATELLITE DATA.

The Administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (hereinafter referred to in this subtitle as the "Administration") shall take such actions, including the sponsorship of applied research, as may be necessary to assure the future availability and usefulness of ocean satellite data to the maritime community.

SEC. 6083. AWARDING OF CONTRACTS.

The Administration may not award any contract for the performance of any "commercial activity", as defined by paragraph 6.a. of the Office of Management and Budget Circular Memorandum A-76, which is performed by Administration employees until at least 30 calendar days after the Administrator of the Administration has presented, in writing, to the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate, and the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries and the Committee on Science and Technology of the House of Representatives, a full and complete description of such proposed contract, together with supporting documentation. Such documentation shall include—

(1) a comparison of the cost of such activity as performed by employees of the Administration and the cost of such activity as performed under the proposed contract;

(2) a comparison of the services performed by employees of the Administration and the services to be performed under the proposed contract; and

(3) an assessment of the benefits to the Federal Government of proceeding with the proposed contract.

SEC. 6084. NATIONAL CLIMATE PROGRAM.

(a) Section 4 of the National Climate Program Act (15 U.S.C. 2903) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (3) as paragraphs (2) through (4), respectively; and

(2) by inserting before paragraph (2), as so redesignated, the following new paragraph:

"(1) The term 'Board' means the Climate Program Policy Board.".

(b) Section 5(c) of the National Climate Program Act (15 U.S.C. 2904(c)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" immediately before "The Secretary";

(2) by designating the third sentence as paragraph (4); and

(3) by striking the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(2) The Office shall—

"(A) serve as the lead entity responsible for administering the program;

"(B) be headed by a Director who shall represent the Climate Program Policy Board and shall be spokesperson for the program;

"(C) serve as the staff for the Board and its supporting committees and working groups;

"(D) review each agency budget request transmitted under subsection (g)(1) and submit an analysis of the requests to the Board for its review;

"(E) be responsible for coordinating interagency participation in international climate-related activities; and

"(F) work with the National Academy of Sciences and other private, academic, State, and local groups in preparing and implementing the 5-year plan (described in subsection (d)(9)) and the program.

The analysis described in subparagraph (D) shall include an analysis of how each agency's budget request relates to the priorities and goals of the program established pursuant to this Act.

"(3) The Secretary may provide, through the Office, financial assistance, in the form of contracts or grants or cooperative agreements, for climate-related activities which are needed to meet the goals and priorities of the program set forth in the 5-year plan pursuant to subsection (d)(9), if such goals and priorities are not being adequately addressed by any Federal department, agency, or instrumentality.".

(c) Section 5(d) of the National Climate Program Act (15 U.S.C. 2904(d)) is amended—

(1) by striking the semicolon at the end of paragraph (7) and inserting in lieu thereof the following: ". Such mechanisms may provide, among others, for the following State and regional services and functions: (A) studies relating to and analyses of climatic effects on agricultural production, water resources, energy needs, and other critical sectors of the economy; (B) atmospheric data collection and monitoring on a statewide and regional basis; (C) advice to regional, State, and local government agencies regarding climate-related issues; (D) information to users within the State regarding climate and climatic effects; and (E) information to the Secretary regarding the needs of persons within the States for climate-related services, information, and data. The Secretary may make annual grants to any State or group of States, which grants shall be made available to public or private educational institutions, to State agencies, and to other persons or institutions qualified to conduct climate-related studies or provide climate-related services;";

(2) by striking "biennially" in paragraph (9) and inserting in lieu thereof "at least once every four years"; and

(3) by striking "under section 6" in paragraph (9) and inserting in lieu thereof "described in paragraph (7)".

(d) Section 5(e) of the National Climate Program Act (15 U.S.C. 2904(e)) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) Climate Program Policy Board.—(1) The Secretary shall establish and maintain an interagency Climate Program Policy Board, consisting of representatives of the Federal agencies specified in subsection (b)(2) and any other agency which the Secretary determines should participate in the Program.

"(2) The Board shall—

"(A) be responsible for coordinated planning and progress review for the Program;

"(B) review all agency and department budget requests related to climate transmitted under subsection (g)(1) and submit a report to the Office of Management and Budget concerning such budget requests;

"(C) establish and maintain such interagency groups as the Board determines to be necessary to carry out its activities; and

"(D) consult with and seek the advice of users and producers of climate data, information, and services to guide the Board's efforts, keeping the Director and the Congress advised of such contacts.

"(3) The Board biennially shall select a Chair from among its members. A Board member who is a representative of an agency may not serve as Chair of the Board for a term if an individual who represented that same agency on the Board served as the Board's Chair for the previous term.".

(e) Section 5(f)(2) of the National Climate Program Act (15 U.S.C. 2904(f)(2)) is amended by inserting "with the Office" immediately after "cooperate".

(f) The first sentence of section 5(g)(1) of the National Climate Program Act (15 U.S.C. 2904(g)(1)) is amended by inserting immediately before the period the following: "and shall transmit a copy of such request to the National Climate Program Office".

(g) Section 6 of the National Climate Program Act (15 U.S.C. 2905) is repealed.

(h) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Administration, for purposes of carrying out the provisions of the amendments made by this section, $1,897,000 for fiscal year 1986 and $1,982,000 for fiscal year 1987. Of such funds, at least 25 percent shall be made available for intergovernmental climate-related activities described in section 5(d)(7) of the National Climate Program Act (15 U.S.C. 2904(d)(7)), and at least 20 percent shall be made available during each fiscal year for experimental climate forecast centers described in section 5(d)(8) of the National Climate Program Act (15 U.S.C. 2904(d)(8)).

SEC. 6085. COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS FOR MAPPING AND CHARTING SURVEYS.

Section 5 of the Act entitled "An Act to define the functions and duties of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and for other purposes", approved August 6, 1947 (61 Stat. 788, 33 U.S.C. 883e) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "Sec. 5.";

(2) by inserting "any Federal agency," after "or subdivision thereof,"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(2) The Secretary of Commerce is authorized to establish the terms of any cooperative agreement entered into under this section, including the amount of funds to be received, and may contribute that portion of the costs incurred by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, including shiptime and personnel expenses, which the Secretary determines represents the amount of benefits derived by the Administration from the cooperative agreement.".

Subtitle I—Maritime Authorizations

SEC. 6091. MARITIME PROGRAMS.

(a) Funds are authorized to be appropriated without fiscal year limitation as the appropriation Act may provide for the use of the Department of Transportation for fiscal year 1986 as follows:

(1) for payment of obligations incurred for operating-differential subsidy, not to exceed $335,084,000;

(2) for expenses necessary for research and development activities, not to exceed $9,900,000; and

(3) for expenses necessary for operations and training activities, not to exceed $71,967,000, including not to exceed—

(A) $34,847,000 for maritime education and training expenses, including not to exceed $19,633,000 for maritime training at the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, New York, $10,915,000 for financial assistance to State maritime academies, $3,000,000 for fuel oil assistance to State maritime academy training vessels, and $1,299,000 for expenses necessary for additional training;

(B) $9,277,000 for national security support capabilities, including not to exceed $7,932,000 for reserve fleet expenses, and $1,345,000 for emergency planning/operations; and

(C) $27,843,000 for other operations and training expenses.

(b) Funds are authorized to be appropriated for the use of the Federal Maritime Commission, in the amount of $11,940,000 for fiscal year 1986.

TITLE VII—ENERGY AND RELATED PROGRAMS

Subtitle A—Pipeline Programs

SEC. 7001. NATURAL GAS PIPELINE SAFETY AUTHORIZATIONS.

Section 17(a) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1684(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (2);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) $3,450,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986.".

SEC. 7002. AUTHORIZATIONS FOR FEDERAL GRANTS-IN-AID.

(a) Combined Program.—Section 17 of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1684) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(c) For the purpose of carrying out the Federal grants-in-aid provisions of section 5(d) of this Act and section 205(d) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2004(d)) there are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986.

"(d) Not less than 5 percent of any amounts appropriated for carrying out the Federal grants-in-aid provisions for any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1985, shall be available only for carrying out the Federal grants-in-aid provisions of section 205(d) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2004(d)).".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Section 5(d)(2) of such Act (49 U.S.C. App. 1674(d)(2)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "authorized to be appropriated by section 17(b) of this Act" and inserting in lieu thereof "appropriated for carrying out the Federal grants-in-aid provisions of this subsection"; and

(B) by striking out "(1) of this section" and inserting in lieu thereof "(1) of this subsection".

(2) Section 205(d)(2) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2004(d)(2)) is amended by striking out "authorized to be appropriated by section 214 of this title" and inserting in lieu thereof "appropriated for carrying out the Federal grants-in-aid provisions of this subsection".

(3) Section 214(a) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2013(a)) is amended by inserting after "subsection (b)" the following: "or section 17(c) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1684(c))".

(4) Section 17(a) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1684(a)) is amended by inserting after "subsection (b)" the following: "or (c)".

SEC. 7003. REPORTS.

(a) Grants Merger Report.—

(1) Merger recommendations.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prepare a report which shall contain details of the Secretary's recommendations with respect to the potential merger and joint administration of the Federal grants-in-aid provisions of section 5(d) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1674(d)) and section 205(d) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2004(d)).

(2) Consultation.—In preparing the report required by paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consult with appropriate State authorities. The Secretary shall include in such report a summary of the views and recommendations of such State authorities.

(b) Grants Allocation Report.—

(1) Contents.—The Secretary of Transportation shall prepare a report which shall contain an explanation of the method by which the Secretary allocates funds to the States under section 5(d) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C App. 1674(d)) and section 205(d) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2004(d)).

(2) Publication.—The Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register, as a matter of public information, the explanation contained in the report required by paragraph (1).

(c) Report Deadline.—The reports required by subsections (a)(1) and (b)(1) shall be submitted to Congress no later than July 1, 1986.

SEC. 7004. HAZARDOUS LIQUID PIPELINE SAFETY AUTHORIZATIONS.

Section 214(a) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2013(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (2);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) $875,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986.".

SEC. 7005. PIPELINE SAFETY USER FEES.

(a) Establishment.—

(1) Schedule.—The Secretary of Transportation (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall establish a schedule of fees based on the usage, in reasonable relationship to volume-miles, miles, revenues, or an appropriate combination thereof, of natural gas and hazardous liquid pipelines. In establishing such schedule, the Secretary shall take into consideration the allocation of departmental resources.

(2) Collection.—The Secretary shall establish procedures for the collection of such fees. The Secretary may use the services of any Federal, State, or local agency or instrumentality to collect such fees, and may reimburse such agency or instrumentality a reasonable amount for such services.

(3) Liability.—Fees established under this section shall be assessed to the persons operating—

(A) all pipeline facilities subject to the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2001 et seq.); and

(B) all pipeline transmission facilities and all liquefied natural gas facilities subject to the jurisdiction of the Natural Gas Pipeline

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21—AP 11 1986 UMI

Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1671 et seq.).

(b) Time of Assessment.—The Secretary shall assess and collect fees described in subsection (a) with respect to each fiscal year before the end of such fiscal year.

(c) Use of Funds.—Funds received under subsection (a) shall be used, to the extent provided for in advance in appropriation Acts, only—

(1) in the case of natural gas pipeline safety fees, for activities authorized under the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1671 et seq.); and

(2) in the case of hazardous liquid pipeline safety fees, for activities authorized under the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2001 et seq.).

(d) Fee Schedule.—Fees established by the Secretary under subsection (a) shall be assessed against all natural gas and hazardous liquids transported by pipelines subject to the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 and the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 after September 30, 1985, and shall be sufficient to meet the costs of activities described in subsection (c), beginning on October 1, 1985, but at no time shall the aggregate of fees received for any fiscal year under this section exceed 105 percent of the aggregate of appropriations made for such fiscal year for activities to be funded by such fees.

Subtitle B—Strategic Petroleum Reserve

SEC. 7101. AUTHORIZATIONS OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEARS 1986, 1987, AND 1988.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated in accordance with section 660 of the Department of Energy Organization Act for operating expenses for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve—

(1) to carry out part B of title I of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (including any drawdown and distribution of the Reserve), except acquisition, transportation, and injection of petroleum products, as defined for purposes of such part B, for the Reserve—

(A) for fiscal year 1986, $135,912,000;

(B) for fiscal year 1987, $358,996,000; and

(C) for fiscal year 1988, $156,692,000; and

(2) to carry out part B of title I of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act for the acquisition, transportation, and injection of petroleum products, as defined for purposes of such part B, for the Reserve and for any drawdown and distribution of the Reserve—

(A) for fiscal year 1986, $357,548,000;

(B) for fiscal year 1987, $333,695,000; and

(C) for fiscal year 1988, $357,000,000.

SEC. 7102. FILL-RATE OF THE RESERVE; LIMITATION ON UNITED STATES SHARE OF THE NAVAL PETROLEUM RESERVE.

(a) Fill-Rate of the Reserve.—Section 160(c) of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6240(c)) is amended by adding the following new paragraph at the end:

"(3) Notwithstanding paragraph (2), beginning in fiscal year 1986 and continuing through fiscal years 1987 and 1988 until the quantity of crude oil in storage within the Reserve is at least 527,000,000 barrels, the President shall carry out petroleum acquisition, transportation, and injection activities at a level sufficient to assure a minimum average annual fill-rate of at least 35,000 barrels per day in addition to any petroleum products acquired for the Reserve to replace petroleum products withdrawn from the Reserve as a result of a test drawdown and distribution.".

(b) Limitation on United States Share of the Naval Petroleum Reserve.—Section 160(d)(1) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 6240(d)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "500,000,000 barrels" in subparagraph (A) and inserting in lieu thereof "527,000,000 barrels"; and

(2) by striking out subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(C) acquisition, transportation, and injection activities for the Reserve are being undertaken, beginning in fiscal year 1986 and continuing through fiscal years 1987 and 1988 until the quantity of crude oil in storage within the Reserve is at least 527,000,000 barrels, at a level sufficient to assure that petroleum products in storage in the Reserve will be increased at a minimum annual average rate of at least 35,000 barrels per day in addition to any petroleum products acquired for the Reserve to replace petroleum products withdrawn from the Reserve as a result of a test drawdown and distribution.".

Subtitle C—Federal Energy Conservation Shared Savings

SEC. 7201. SHARED ENERGY SAVINGS.

(a) In General.—The National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 8201 and following) is amended by adding at the end the following new title:

"TITLE VIII—SHARED ENERGY SAVINGS

"SEC. 801. AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO CONTRACTS.

"The head of a Federal agency may enter into contracts under this title solely for the purpose of achieving energy savings and benefits ancillary to that purpose. Each such contract may, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be for a period not to exceed 25 years. Such contract shall provide that the contractor shall incur costs of implementing energy savings measures, including at least the costs (if any) incurred in making energy audits, acquiring and installing equipment, and training personnel, in exchange for a share of any energy savings directly resulting from implementation of such measures during the term of the contract.

"SEC. 802. PAYMENT OF COSTS.

"Any amount paid by a Federal agency pursuant to any contract entered into under this title may be paid only from funds appropriated or otherwise made available to the agency for fiscal year 1986 or any fiscal year thereafter for the payment of energy expenses (and related operation and maintenance expenses).

"SEC. 803. REPORTS.

"Each Federal agency shall periodically furnish the Secretary of Energy with full and complete information on its activities under this title, and the Secretary shall include in the report submitted to Congress under section 550 a description of the progress made by each Federal agency in—

"(1) including the authority provided by this title in its contracting practices; and

"(2) achieving energy savings under contracts entered into under this title.

"SEC. 804. DEFINITIONS.

"For purposes of this title—

"(1) the term 'Federal agency' means an agency defined in section 551(1) of title 5, United States Code, and

"(2) the term 'energy savings' means a reduction in the cost of energy, from a base cost established through a methodology set forth in the contract, utilized in an existing federally owned building or buildings or other federally owned facilities as a result of—

"(A) the lease or purchase of operating equipment, improvements, altered operation and maintenance, or technical services; or

"(B) the increased efficient use of existing energy sources by cogeneration or heat recovery, excluding any cogeneration process for other than a federally owned building or buildings or other federally owned facilities.".

(b) Table of Contents.—The table of contents of such Act is amended by adding the following at the end:

"TITLE VIII—SHARED ENERGY SAVINGS

"Sec. 801. Authority to enter into contracts.
"Sec. 802. Payment of costs.
"Sec. 803. Reports.
"Sec. 804. Definitions.".

Subtitle D—Biomass Energy and Alcohol Fuels Loan Guarantees

SEC. 7301. BIOMASS ENERGY AND ALCOHOL FUELS LOAN GUARANTEES.

Section 221 of the Biomass Energy and Alcohol Fuels Act of 1980 (Public Law 96-294; 42 U.S.C. 8821) is amended by—

(1) striking out "September 30, 1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "June 30, 1986"; and

(2) adding at the end thereof the following: "Notwithstanding any other provision of this subtitle, the Secretary of Energy may modify the terms and conditions of any conditional commitment for a loan guarantee under this subtitle made before October 1, 1984, including the amount of the loan guarantee. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted as indicating Congressional approval with respect to any pending conditional commitments under this Act.".

Subtitle E—Synthetic Fuels

SEC. 7401. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Synthetic Fuels Corporation Act of 1985".

SEC. 7402. CESSATION OF FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE AUTHORITY.

Effective on the date of enactment of this Act, the United States Synthetic Fuels Corporation (hereafter in this subtitle referred to as the "Corporation") may not make any legally binding awards or commitments for financial assistance (including any changes in an existing award or commitment) pursuant to the Energy Security Act for synthetic fuel project proposals, except that nothing in this Act shall impair or alter the powers, duties, rights, obligations, privileges, or liabilities of the Corporation, its Board or Chairman, or project sponsors in the performance and completion of the terms and undertakings of a legally binding award or commitment entered into prior to the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 7403. TERMINATION OF THE CORPORATION.

(a) Within 60 days of the date of enactment of this Act, the Directors of the Corporation shall terminate their duties under the Energy Security Act and be discharged.

(b) Within 120 days of the date of enactment of this Act, the Corporation shall terminate, except as otherwise provided in this subtitle, in accordance with subtitle J of part B of title I of the Energy Security Act.

SEC. 7404. DUTIES OF SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

(a) Within 60 days of the date of enactment of this Act (or earlier, in the event of absence of a Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Corporation), the Secretary of the Treasury shall assume the duties of the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Corporation.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the duties and responsibilities of the Secretary of the Treasury under subtitle J of part B of title I of the Energy Security Act or this Act may not be transferred to any other Federal department or agency.

(c) Notwithstanding such termination of the Corporation, the Advisory Committee established under section 123 of the Energy Security Act (42 U.S.C 8719) shall remain in effect to advise the Secretary of the Treasury regarding the administration of any contract or obligation of the Corporation pursuant to subtitle D of part B of title I of such Act.

(d) To the extent that the Secretary of the Treasury may be required to take an action under section 131(q) of the Energy Security Act in connection with an award or commitment of financial assistance under such Act, the Secretary shall complete such action within 30 days of the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 7405. SALARIES AND COMPENSATION RIGHTS.

(a) The Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall, before February 1, 1986, determine the amount of compensation or benefits which each Director, officer, or employee of the Corporation shall be legally entitled to under any contract as of the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) Effective on the date of enactment of this Act, no change in any Director, officer, or employee compensation or benefits shall be allowed or permitted, unless the Director of the Office of Personnel Management agrees that such change is reasonable.

(c) Effective on the date of enactment of this Act—

(1) no officer or employee of the Corporation shall receive a salary in excess of the rate of basic pay payable for level IV of the Executive Schedule under title 5 of the United States Code; and

(2) the Corporation shall not waive any requirements in its By-Laws which are necessary for a Director, officer, or employee to qualify for pension or termination benefits under the By-Laws and written personnel policies and procedures in effect on the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 7406. REPORT TO THE CONGRESS.

The Corporation shall, within 60 days of the date of enactment of this Act, transmit to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and to the Committee on Energy and Commerce and Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives a report—

(1) containing a review of implementation of its Phase I Business Plan dated February 19, 1985; and

(2) fulfilling the requirements of section 126(b)(3) of the Energy Security Act (42 U.S.C. 8722(b)(3)).

Subtitle F—Uranium Enrichment

SEC. 7501. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

In accordance with section 660 of the Department of Energy Organization Act (42 U.S.C. 7270), there is authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for each of the fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988 to carry out uranium enrichment service activities an amount equal to the difference between—

(1) the revenues to be received during each such fiscal year by the Department of Energy in providing uranium enrichment service activities, as estimated in the budget submitted by the President to the Congress for each such fiscal year; and

(2) the amount determined by the Secretary of Energy under section 7502(c)(1) for each such fiscal year.

SEC. 7502. REPAYMENTS TO UNITED STATES TREASURY.

(a) Partial Repayment of Unrecovered Costs.—

(1) In general.—The Secretary of Energy shall deposit in the general fund of the Treasury of the United States, in partial repayment of unrecovered Federal Government costs for uranium enrichment service activities, an amount determined by the Secretary under subsection (c) for each of the fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988.

(2) Revenues in excess of expenditures.—In addition to the payments required under paragraph (1), the Secretary of Energy shall deposit in the general fund of the Treasury of the United States, in partial repayment of amounts identified by the Secretary under subsection (c)(4)(B), any revenues in excess of expenditures received for the provision of such activities during the 3-year period referred to in paragraph (1).

(b) Repayment Schedule.—The Secretary of Energy may make the repayments required in subsection (a) for any fiscal year on a quarterly basis.

(c) Determination of Secretary.—

(1) In general.—The Secretary of Energy shall determine, in his or her discretion, the amount of partial repayment to be made under subsection (a)(1) for each of the fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988, consistent with the financial integrity of the uranium enrichment service activities program during a period of not less than 10 years. The amount of such repayment shall not adversely affect the reliability of the supply of uranium enrichment services at competitive prices for existing and potential customers. The determinations under this paragraph shall be made after notice and opportunity for public comment.

(2) Repayment goals.—The Secretary of Energy shall seek to achieve the following repayment amounts under subsection (a)(1):

(A) $110,000,000 for fiscal year 1986;

(B) $150,000,000 for fiscal year 1987; and

(C) $150,000,000 for fiscal year 1988.

(3) Schedule for determination.—The Secretary of Energy shall make the determination required in paragraph (1) for any fiscal year before the President submits to the Congress the budget for such fiscal year, except that the Secretary may make subsequent revisions in such determination.

(4) Submission to congress.—

(A) In general.—The Secretary of Energy shall submit to the Congress any determination made under paragraph (1), together with the reasons underlying such determination.

(B) Initial submission.—The Secretary shall include in the initial submission under this paragraph an estimate of the amount of prior investment in the uranium enrichment service activities program that remains unrecovered.

SEC. 7503. URANIUM ENRICHMENT REPORT.

Not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Energy shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committees on Energy and Commerce and on Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives a report regarding the effects of the September 19, 1985, decision of the United States District Court for the District of Colorado holding that the utility services uranium enrichment contracts of the Department of Energy are null and void (Western Nuclear Inc. v. F. Clark Huffman, Civil No. 84-C-2315). To the extent that it will not compromise the appeals process or the competitive position of the Department of Energy with regard to uranium enrichment, the report shall identify—

(1) the effects of the decision on—

(A) the operation of the uranium enrichment facilities of the Department of Energy; and

(B) the revenues of the uranium enrichment program; and

(2) how the response of the Department of Energy may mitigate such effects.

Subtitle G—Nuclear Regulatory Commission Annual Charges

SEC. 7601. NUCLEAR REGULATORY COMMISSION ANNUAL CHARGES.

(a) Submission of Report.—Within 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission shall submit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce and the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate a report evaluating the feasibility and necessity of establishing a system for the assessment and collection of annual charges from persons licensed by the Commission pursuant to the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2011 et seq.) to fund all or part of the activities conducted by the Commission pursuant to such Act. Such report shall include an analysis of—

(1) the extent to which the Commission's existing statutory or regulatory authority to assess and collect annual charges, including the authority of the Commission to assess and collect fees pursuant to title V of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act of 1952, is adequate to enable the Commission to assess and collect fees commensurate with the value of the benefit rendered to the licensee and the cost to the Commission of rendering such benefit;

(2) the amounts currently assessed and collected by the Commission pursuant to existing statutory or regulatory authority, and the purposes for which such fees are assessed and collected; and

(3) any recommendations of the Commission for expanding the existing statutory authority to assess and collect fees, including the Commission's justification for such expansion.

(b) Assessment and Collection.—

(1) In general.—Upon the expiration of a period of 45 calendar days (excluding any day in which either House of Congress is not in session because of an adjournment of more than 3 calendar days to a day certain or an adjournment sine die) following receipt by the Congress of the report required pursuant to subsection (a), the Nuclear Regulatory Commission shall assess and collect annual charges from its licensees on a fiscal year basis, except that—

(A) the maximum amount of the aggregate charges assessed pursuant to this paragraph in any fiscal year may not exceed an amount that, when added to other amounts collected by the Commission for such fiscal year under other provisions of law, is estimated to be equal to 33 percent of the costs incurred by the Commission with respect to such fiscal year; and

(B) any such charge assessed pursuant to this paragraph shall be reasonably related to the regulatory service provided by the Commission and shall fairly reflect the cost to the Commission of providing such service.

(2) Establishment of amount by rule.—The amount of the charges assessed pursuant to this paragraph shall be established by rule.

TITLE VIII—OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF AND RELATED PROGRAMS

SEC. 8001. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be referred to as the "Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1985".

SEC. 8002. NATIONAL POLICY FOR THE OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF.

The Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1331 et seq.) is amended in paragraph (4) of section 3 by deleting the word "and" at the end of subparagraph (A); deleting the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof a period; designating subparagraph (B) as subparagraph (C); and inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph (B):

"(B) the distribution of a portion of the receipts from the leasing of mineral resources of the outer Continental Shelf adjacent to State lands, as provided under section 8(g), will provide affected coastal States and localities with funds which may be used for the mitigation of adverse economic and environmental effects related to the development of such resources; and".

SEC. 8003. REVISION OF SECTION 8(g).

Section 8(g) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(g)) is amended to read as follows:

"(g)(1) At the time of soliciting nominations for the leasing of lands containing tracts wholly or partially within three nautical miles of the seaward boundary of any coastal State, and subsequently as new information is obtained or developed by the Secretary, the Secretary shall, in addition to the information required by section 26 of this Act, provide the Governor of such State—

"(A) an identification and schedule of the areas and regions proposed to be offered for leasing;

"(B) at the request of the Governor of such State, all information from all sources concerning the geographical, geological, and ecological characteristics of such tracts;

"(C) an estimate of the oil and gas reserves in the areas proposed for leasing; and

"(D) at the request of the Governor of such State, an identification of any field, geological structure, or trap located wholly or partially within three nautical miles of the seaward boundary of such coastal State, including all information relating to the entire field, geological structure, or trap.

The provisions of the first sentence of subsection (c) and the provisions of subsections (e)-(h) of section 26 of this Act shall be applicable to the release by the Secretary of any information to any coastal State under this paragraph. In addition, the provisions of subsections (c) and (e)-(h) of section 26 of this Act shall apply in their entirety to the release by the Secretary to any coastal State of any information relating to Federal lands beyond three nautical miles of the seaward boundary of such coastal State.

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Secretary shall deposit into a separate account in the Treasury of the United States all bonuses, rents, and royalties, and other revenues (derived from any bidding system authorized under subsection (a)(1)), excluding Federal income and windfall profits taxes, and derived from any lease issued after September 18, 1978 of any Federal tract which lies wholly (or, in the case of Alaska, partially until seven years from the date of settlement of any boundary dispute that is the subject of an agreement under section 7 of this Act entered into prior to January 1, 1986 or until April 15, 1993 with respect to any other tract) within three nautical miles of the seaward boundary of any coastal State, or, (except as provided above for Alaska) in the case where a Federal tract lies partially within three nautical miles of the seaward boundary, a percentage of bonuses, rents, royalties, and other revenues (derived from any bidding system authorized under subsection (a)(1)), excluding Federal income and windfall profits taxes, and derived from any lease issued after September 18, 1978 of such tract equal to the percentage of surface acreage of the tract that lies within such three nautical miles. Except as provided in paragraph (5) of this subsection, not later than the last business day of the month following the month in which those revenues are deposited in the Treasury, the Secretary shall transmit to such coastal State 27 percent of those revenues, together with all accrued interest thereon. The remaining balance of such revenues shall be transmitted simultaneously to the miscellaneous receipts account of the Treasury of the United States.

"(3) Whenever the Secretary or the Governor of a coastal State determines that a common potentially hydrocarbon-bearing area may underlie the Federal and State boundary, the Secretary or the Governor shall notify the other party in writing of his determination and the Secretary shall provide to the Governor notice of the current and projected status of the tract or tracts containing the common potentially hydrocarbon-bearing area. If the Secretary has leased or intends to lease such tract or tracts, the Secretary and the Governor of the coastal State may enter into an agreement to divide the revenues from production of any common potentially hydrocarbon-bearing area, by unitization or other royalty sharing agreement, pursuant to existing law. If the Secretary and the Governor do not enter into an agreement, the Secretary may nevertheless proceed with the leasing of the tract or tracts. Any revenues received by the United States under such an agreement shall be subject to the requirements of paragraph (2).

"(4) The deposits in the Treasury account described in this section shall be invested by the Secretary of the Treasury in securities backed by the full faith and credit of the United States having maturities suitable to the needs of the account and yielding the highest reasonably available interest rates as determined by the Secretary of the Treasury.

"(5)(A) When there is a boundary dispute between the United States and a State which is subject to an agreement under section 7 of this Act, the Secretary shall credit to the account established pursuant to such agreement all bonuses, rents, and royalties, and other revenues (derived from any bidding system authorized under subsection (a)(1)), excluding Federal income and windfall profits taxes, and derived from any lease issued after September 18, 1978 of any Federal tract which lies wholly or partially within three nautical miles of the seaward boundary asserted by the State, if that money has not otherwise been deposited in such account. Proceeds of such account shall be distributed as follows:

"Upon the settlement of any boundary dispute which is subject to a section 7 agreement between the United States and a State, the Secretary shall pay to such State all moneys due such State from amounts deposited in the escrow account. If there is insufficient money deposited in the escrow account, the Secretary shall transmit, from any revenues derived from any lease of Federal lands under this Act, the remaining balance due such State in accordance with the formula set forth in section 8004(b)(1)(B) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1985.

"(B) This paragraph applies to all Federal oil and gas lease sales, under this Act, including joint lease sales, occurring after September 18, 1978.

"(6) This section shall be deemed to take effect on October 1, 1985, for purposes of determining the amounts to be deposited in the separate account and the States' shares described in paragraph (2).

"(7) When the Secretary leases any tract which lies wholly or partially within three miles of the seaward boundary of two or more States, the revenues from such tract shall be distributed as otherwise provided by this section, except that the State's share of such revenues that would otherwise result under this section shall be divided equally among such States.".

SEC. 8004. DISTRIBUTION OF SECTION 8(g) ACCOUNT.

(a) Prior to April 15, 1986, the Secretary shall distribute to the designated coastal States the sum of—

(1) the amounts due and payable to each such State under paragraph (2) of section 8(g) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act, as amended by this title, for the period between October 1, 1985, and the date of such distribution, and

(2) the amounts due each such State under subsection (b)(1)(A) of this section for the period prior to October 1, 1985.

(b)(1) As a fair and equitable disposition of all revenues (including interest thereon) derived from any lease of Federal lands wholly or partially within 3 miles of the seaward boundary of a coastal State prior to October 1, 1985, the Secretary shall distribute:

(A) from the funds which were deposited in the separate account in the Treasury of the United States under section 8(g)(4) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(g)(4)) which was in effect prior to the date of enactment of section 8003 of this title the following sums:

	($ million)
Louisiana	572
Texas	382
California	338
Alabama	86
Alaska	51
Mississippi	14

as well as 27 percent of the royalties, derived from any lease of Federal lands, which have been deposited through September 30, 1985, in the separate account described in this paragraph and interest thereon accrued through September 30, 1985, and shall transmit any remaining amounts to the miscellaneous receipts account of the Treasury of the United States; and

(B) from revenues derived from any lease of Federal lands under the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act, as amended, prior to April 15 of each of the fifteen fiscal years following the fiscal year in which this title is enacted, 3 percent of the following sums in each of the five fiscal years following the date of enactment of this Act, 7 percent of such sums in each of the next five fiscal years, and 10 percent of such sums in each of the following five fiscal years:

	($ million)
Louisiana	84
Texas	134
California	289
Alabama	7
Alaska	134
Mississippi	2.

(2) The acceptance of any payment by a State under this section shall satisfy and release any and all claims of such State against the United States arising under, or related to, section 8(g) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act, as it was in effect prior to the date of enactment of this Act and shall vest in such State the right to receive payments as set forth in this section.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the amounts due and payable to the State of Louisiana prior to October 1, 1986, under subtitle A of title VIII (Outer Continental Shelf and Related Programs) of this Act shall remain in their separate accounts in the Treasury of the United States and continue to accrue interest until October 1, 1986, except that the $572,000,000 set forth in subsection 8004(b)(1)(A) of this section shall only accrue interest from April 15, 1986 to October 1, 1986, at which time the Secretary shall immediately distribute such sums with accrued interest to the State of Louisiana.

SEC. 8005. IMMOBILIZATION OF BOUNDARIES.

Section 2(b) of the Submerged Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1301(b)) is amended by inserting before the semicolon at the end a comma and the following: "except that any boundary between a State and the United States under this Act which has been or is hereafter fixed by coordinates under a final decree of the United States Supreme Court shall remain immobilized at the coordinates provided under such decree and shall not be ambulatory".

"(c) Extension Period Defined.—

"(1) Hospital payments.—For purposes of subsection (a), the term 'extension period' means the period beginning on October 1, 1985, and ending on April 30, 1986.".

(b) Applicable Percentage Increase.—Section 1886(b)(3)(B) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(b)(3)(B)) is amended to read as follows:

"(B)(i) For purposes of subparagraph (A) for 12-month cost reporting periods beginning during a fiscal year and for purposes of subsection (d) for discharges occurring during a fiscal year, the 'applicable percentage increase' shall be—

"(I) for fiscal year 1986, ½ percent,

"(II) for fiscal years 1987 and 1988, a percentage determined by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (e)(4), but not to exceed the market basket percentage increase (as defined in clause (ii)), and

"(III) for fiscal year 1989 and subsequent fiscal years, the percentage determined by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (e)(4).

"(ii) For purposes of clause (i), the term 'market basket percentage increase' means, with respect to cost reporting periods and discharges occurring in a fiscal year, the percentage, estimated by the Secretary before the beginning of the period or fiscal year, by which the cost of the mix of goods and services (including personnel costs but excluding nonoperating costs) comprising routine, ancillary, and special care unit inpatient hospital services, based on an index of appropriately weighted indicators of changes in wages and prices which are representative of the mix of goods and services included in such inpatient hospital services, for the period or fiscal year will exceed the cost of such mix of goods and services for the preceding 12-month cost reporting period or fiscal year.".

(c) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Section 1886(d)(3)(A) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(d)(3)(A)) is amended by striking out "for fiscal year 1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "for each of fiscal years 1985 and 1986".

(2) Section 1886(e)(3) of such Act is amended by striking out "(instead of the applicable percentage increase described in subsection (b)(3)(B))".

(3) Section 1886(e)(4) of such Act is amended by striking out "1986" and inserting in lieu thereof "1987".

(d) Effective Date of Freeze Extension.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on March 15, 1986, and the amendments made by subsection (c) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(e) Effective Date for Increase.—

(1) PPS hospitals, DRG portion of payment.—In the case of a subsection (d) hospital (as defined in paragraph (4))—

(A) the amendment made by subsection (b) shall apply to payments made under section 1886(d)(1)(A) of such Act made on the basis of discharges occurring on or after May 1, 1986; and

(B) for discharges occurring on or after October 1, 1986, the applicable percentage increase (described in section 1886(b)(3)(B)) for discharges occurring during fiscal year 1986 shall be deemed to have been ½ percent.

(2) PPS hospitals, hospital specific portion of payment.—In the case of a subsection (d) hospital—

(A) the amendment made by subsection (b) shall apply to payments under section 1886(d)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act made on the basis of discharges occurring during a cost reporting period of a hospital, for the hospital's cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985;

(B) notwithstanding subparagraph (A), for the cost reporting period beginning during fiscal year 1986, the applicable percentage increase (as defined in section 1886(b)(3)(B) of such Act) for the—

(i) first 7 months of the cost reporting period shall be 0 percent, and

(ii) for the remaining 5 months of the cost reporting period shall be ½ percent; and

(C) for cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1986, the applicable percentage increase (as so defined) with respect to the previous cost reporting period shall be deemed to have been ½ percent.

(3) PPS-exempt hospitals.—In the case of a hospital that is not a subsection (d) hospital—

(A) the amendment made by subsection (b) shall apply to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985;

(B) notwithstanding subparagraph (A), for the hospital's cost reporting period beginning during fiscal year 1986, payment under title XVIII of the Social Security Act shall be made as though the applicable percentage increase described in section 1886(b)(3)(B) were equal to 5/24 of 1 percent; and

(C) for cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1986, the applicable percentage increase (as so defined) with respect to the cost reporting period beginning during fiscal year 1986 shall be deemed to have been ½ percent.

(4) Definition.—In this subsection, the term "subsection (d) hospital" has the meaning given such term in section 1886(d)(1)(B) of the Social Security Act.

SEC. 9102. ONE-YEAR EXTENSION OF PPS TRANSITION.

(a) One-year Delay of Full Implementation of Prospective Payment System.—Section 1886(d)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(d)(1)(A)) is amended by striking out "1986" in clauses (ii) and (iii) and inserting in lieu thereof "1987".

(b) New Target and DRG Percentages for Remainder of Fiscal Year 1986.—Section 1886(d)(1)(C) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out ", or discharges occurring",

(2) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (ii),

(3) by striking out "(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before October 1, 1986" in clause (iii) and inserting in lieu thereof "(iv) on or after October 1, 1986, and before October 1, 1987", and

(4) by inserting after clause (ii) the following new clause:

"(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before October 1, 1986, the 'target percentage' is 45 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 55 percent; and".

(c) New Blended National-Regional DRG Rate for Remainder of Fiscal Year 1986.—Section 1886(d)(1)(D) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "cost reporting periods beginning, or", and

(2) by striking out "1985" and "1986" and inserting in lieu thereof "1986" and "1987", respectively, each place it appears.

(d) Effective Dates.—

(1) Delay in final transition.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) Change in hospital specific percentage.—The amendments made by subsection (b) shall apply—

(A) to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985, but

(B) notwithstanding subparagraph (A), for a hospital's cost reporting period beginning during fiscal year 1986, for purposes of section 1886(d)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act—

(i) during the first 7 months of the period the "target percentage" is 50 percent and the "DRG percentage" is 50 percent, and

(ii) during the remaining 5 months of the period the "target percentage" is 45 percent and the "DRG percentage" is 55 percent.

(3) Change in blended rate.—The amendments made by subsection (c) shall apply to discharges occurring on or after May 1, 1986.

(4) Exception.—

(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to payments with respect to the operating costs of inpatient hospital services (as defined in section 1886(a)(4) of the Social Security Act) of a subsection (d) hospital (as defined in section 1886(d)(1)(B) of such Act) located in the State of Oregon.

(B) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, for a cost reporting period beginning during fiscal year 1986 of a subsection (d) hospital to which the amendments made by this section do not apply, for purposes of section 1886(d)(1)(A) of of Social Security Act—

(i) during the first 7 months of the period the "target percentage" is 50 percent and the "DRG percentage" is 50 percent, and

(ii) during the remaining 5 months of the period the "target percentage" is 25 percent and the "DRG percentage" is 75 percent.

(C) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, for purposes of section 1886(d)(1)(D) of such Act, the applicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate for a subsection (d) hospital to which the amendments made by this section do not apply is, for discharges occurring on or after October 1, 1985, and before May 1, 1986, a combined rate consisting of 25 percent of the national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate and 75 percent of the regional adjusted DRG prospective payment rate for such discharges.

SEC. 9103. APPLICATION OF REVISED HOSPITAL WAGE INDEX.

(a) Application of Revised Index Prospectively.—(1) Section 2316(b) of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 1081) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) The Secretary shall adjust the payment amounts for hospitals for discharges occurring on or after May 1, 1986, to reflect the changes the Secretary has promulgated in final regulations (on September 3, 1985) relating to the hospital wage index under section 1886(d)(3)(E) of the Social Security Act. For discharges occurring after September 30, 1986, the Secretary shall provide for such periodic adjustments in the appropriate wage index used under that section as may be necessary, taking into account changes in the wage levels and relative proportions of full-time and part-time workers.".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall be effective as if it had been included in the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984.

(b) Study of Methodology for Area Wage Adjustment for Central Cities.—(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services, in consultation with the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission, shall collect information and shall develop one or more methodologies to permit the adjustment of the wage indices used for purposes of sections 1886(d)(2)(C)(ii), 1886(d)(2)(H), and 1886(d)(3)(E) of the Social Security Act, in order to more accurately reflect hospital labor markets, by taking into account variations in wages and wage-related costs between the central city portion of urban areas and other parts of urban areas.

(2) The Secretary shall report to Congress on the information collected and the methodologies developed under paragraph (1) not later than May 1, 1987. The report shall include a recommendation as to the feasibility and desirability of implementing such methodologies.

SEC. 9104. PAYMENTS TO HOSPITALS FOR INDIRECT COSTS OF MEDICAL EDUCATION.

(a) Payment for Indirect Costs of Medical Education.—Section 1886(d)(5)(B) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(d)(5)(B)) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) The Secretary shall provide for an additional payment amount for subsection (d) hospitals with indirect costs of medical education, in an amount computed in the same manner as the adjustment for such costs under regulations (in effect as of January 1, 1983) under subsection (a)(2), except as follows:

"(i) The amount of such additional payment shall be determined by multiplying (I) the sum of the amount determined under paragraph (1)(A)(ii)(II) (or, if applicable, the amount determined under paragraph (1)(A)(iii)) and the amount paid to the hospital under subparagraph (A), by (II) the indirect teaching adjustment factor described in clause (ii).

"(ii) For purposes of clause (i)(II), the indirect teaching adjustment factor for discharges occurring—

"(I) on or after May 1, 1986, and before October 1, 1988, is equal to $2\times((1+r)^{.405}-1)$, or

"(II) on or after October 1, 1988, is equal to $1.5\times((1+r)^{.5795}-1)$, where 'r' is the ratio of the hospital's full-time equivalent interns and residents to beds.

"(iii) In determining such adjustment the Secretary shall not distinguish between those interns and residents who are employees of a hospital and those interns and residents who furnish services to a hospital but are not employees of such hospital.

"(iv) In determining such adjustment, the Secretary shall continue to count interns and residents assigned to outpatient services of the hospital as part of the calculation of the full-time-equivalent number of interns and residents.".

(b) Adjustment of Payment Amounts.—

(1) Restandardizing DRG payment amounts to reflect change in formula.—Section 1886(d)(2)(C)(i) of such Act is amended by inserting "(taking into account, for discharges occurring after September 30, 1986, the amendments made by section 9104(a) of the Medicare and Medicaid Budget Reconciliation Amendments of 1985)" after "medical education costs".

(2) Providing for system savings from change in formula.—Subparagraph (C) of section 1886(d)(3) of such Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "(i)" after "(C)",

(B) by inserting "for fiscal year 1986" after "neutrality",

(C) by striking out "The Secretary" and inserting in lieu thereof "For discharges occurring in fiscal year 1985, the Secretary", and

(D) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(ii) Reducing for savings from amendment to indirect teaching adjustment for discharges after september 30, 1986.—For discharges occurring after September 30, 1986, the Secretary shall further reduce each of the average standardized amounts (in a proportion which takes into account the differing effects of the standardization effected under paragraph (2)(C)(i)) so as to provide for a reduction in the total of the payments (attributable to this paragraph) made for discharges occurring—

"(I) on or after October 1, 1986, and before October 1, 1988, of an amount equal to the estimated reduction in the payment amounts under paragraph (5)(B) that would have resulted from the enactment of the amendments made by section 9104 of the Medicare and Medicaid Budget Reconciliation Amendments of 1985 if the factor described in clause (ii)(II) of paragraph (5)(B) were applied for discharges occurring during such period instead of the factor described in clause (ii)(I) of that paragraph, and

"(II) on or after October 1, 1988, of an amount equal to the estimated reduction in the payment amounts under paragraph (5)(B) for those discharges that has resulted from the enactment of the amendments made by section 9104 of the Medicare and Medicaid Budget Reconciliation Amendments of 1985.".

(3) Conforming amendment.—Clauses (i)(I) and (ii)(I) of section 1886(d)(3)(D) of such Act are each amended by inserting "or reduced" after "(B), and adjusted".

(c) Effective Date.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to discharges occurring on or after May 1, 1986.

(2) The amendments made by this section shall not first be applied to discharges occurring as of a date unless, for discharges occurring on that date, the amendments made by section 9105 are also being applied.

SEC. 9105. PAYMENTS FOR HOSPITALS WHICH SERVE A DISPROPORTIONATE SHARE OF LOW-INCOME PATIENTS.

(a) Payment for Hospitals Which Serve a Disproportionate Share of Low-Income Patients.—Section 1886(d)(5) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(d)(5)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(F)(i) For discharges occurring on or after May 1, 1986, and before October 1, 1988, the Secretary shall provide, in accordance with this subparagraph, for an additional payment amount for each subsection (d) hospital which—

"(I) serves a significantly disproportionate number of low-income patients (as defined in clause (v)), or

"(II) is located in an urban area, has 100 or more beds, and can demonstrate that its net inpatient care revenues (excluding any of such revenues attributable to this title or State plans approved under title XIX), during the cost reporting period in which the discharges occur, for indigent care from State and local government sources exceed 30 percent of its total of such revenues during the period.

"(ii) The amount of such payment for each discharge shall be determined by multiplying (I) the sum of the amount determined under paragraph (1)(A)(ii)(II) (or, if applicable, the amount determined under paragraph (1)(A)(iii)) and the amount paid to the hospital under subparagraph (A) for that discharge, by (II) the disproportionate share adjustment percentage established under clause (iii) or (iv) for the cost reporting period in which the discharge occurs.

"(iii) The disproportionate share adjustment percentage for a cost reporting period for a hospital described in clause (i)(II) is equal to 15 percent.

"(iv) The disproportionate share adjustment percentage for a cost reporting period for a hospital that is not described in clause (i)(II) and that—

"(I) is located in an urban area and has 100 or more beds, is equal to the lesser of 15 percent, or the percent determined in accordance with the following formula: $(P-15)(.5) + 2.5$, where 'P' is the hospital's disproportionate patient percentage (as defined in clause (vi));

"(II) is located in an urban area and has less than 100 beds, is equal to 5 percent; or

"(III) is located in a rural area, is equal to 4 percent.

"(v) In this subparagraph, a hospital 'serves a significantly disproportionate number of low income patients' for a cost reporting period if the hospital has a disproportionate patient percentage (as defined in clause (vi)) for that period which equals, or exceeds—

"(I) 15 percent, if the hospital is located in an urban area and has 100 or more beds,

"(II) 40 percent, if the hospital is located in an urban area and has less than 100 beds, or

"(III) 45 percent, if the hospital is located in a rural area.

"(vi) In this subparagraph, the term 'disproportionate patient percentage' means, with respect to a cost reporting period of a hospital, the sum of—

"(I) the fraction (expressed as a percentage), the numerator of which is the number of such hospital's patient days for such period which were made up of patients who (for such days) were entitled to benefits under part A of this title and were entitled to supplementary security income benefits (excluding any State supplementation) under title XVI of this Act, and the denominator of which is the number of such hospital's patient days for such fiscal year which were made up of patients who (for such days) were entitled to benefits under part A of this title, and

"(II) the fraction (expressed as a percentage), the numerator of which is the number of the hospital's patient days for such period which consist of patients who (for such days) were eligible for medical assistance under a State plan approved under title XIX, but who were not entitled to benefits under part A of this title, and the denominator of which is the total number of the hospital's patient days for such period.".

(b) Restandardizing DRG Payment Amounts To Reflect Disproportionate

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

Share Payments.—Section 1886(d)(2)(C) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (ii),

(2) by striking out the period at the end of clause (iii) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and

(3) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iv) for discharges occurring on or after October 1, 1986, and before October 1, 1988, excluding an estimate of the additional payments to certain hospitals to be made under paragraph (5)(F).".

(c) Conforming Amendment.—Section 1886(d)(5)(C)(i) of such Act is amended by striking out ", and of public or other hospitals that serve a significantly disproportionate number of patients who have low income or are entitled to benefits under part A of this title".

(d) CBO Report.—The Congressional Budget Office shall study, and report to Congress not later than January 1, 1987, on the impact of the implementation of this section on hospitals, including the appropriateness of the factors used in determining which hospitals are eligible for additional payments under section 1886(d)(5)(F) of the Social Security Act and the amount of the additional payments made to those hospitals.

(e) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to discharges occurring on or after May 1, 1986.

SEC. 9106. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN RURAL OSTEOPATHIC HOSPITALS AS RURAL REFERRAL CENTERS.

(a) In General.—Section 1886(d)(5)(C)(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(d)(5)(C)(i)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the second sentence the following: "and which shall not require a rural osteopathic hospital to have more than 3,000 discharges in a year in order to be classified as a rural referral center".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to cost reporting periods beginning on or after January 1, 1986.

SEC. 9107. RETURN ON EQUITY CAPITAL FOR INPATIENT HOSPITAL SERVICES AND OTHER SERVICES.

(a) Inpatient Hospital Services.—

(1) Phase-down in payment for return on equity capital.—Section 1886(g)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(g)(2)) is amended—

(A) by inserting "the applicable percentage (described in subparagraph (B)) of" before "the average of the rates of interest",

(B) by inserting "(A)" after "(2)", and

(C) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(B) In this paragraph, the 'applicable percentage' is—

"(i) 75 percent, for cost reporting periods beginning during fiscal year 1987,

"(ii) 50 percent, for cost reporting periods beginning during fiscal year 1988,

"(iii) 25 percent, for cost reporting periods beginning during fiscal year 1989, and

"(iv) 0 percent, for cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1989.".

(2) Exclusion from prospective payment.—The second sentence of section 1886(a)(4) of such Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "a return on equity capital," after "anesthetist,", and

(B) by inserting "other" before "capital-related costs".

(b) Other Services.—

(1) Limitation on rate.—Section 1861(v)(1) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395x(v)(1)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(P) If such regulations provide for the payment for a return on equity capital (other than with respect to costs of inpatient hospital services), the rate of return to be recognized, for determining the reasonable cost of services furnished in a cost reporting period, shall be equal to the average of the rates of interest, for each of the months any part of which is included in the period, on obligations issued for purchase by the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund.".

(2) Conforming amendments.—Section 1861(v)(1)(B) of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "any fiscal period" and "such fiscal period" and inserting in lieu thereof "any cost reporting period" and "the period", respectively, and

(B) by striking out "not exceed one and one-half times" in the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "be equal to".

(c) Effective Dates.—(1) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1986.

(2) The amendments made by subsection (b) shall apply to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985.

SEC. 9108. CONTINUATION OF MEDICARE REIMBURSEMENT WAIVERS FOR CERTAIN HOSPITALS PARTICIPATING IN REGIONAL HOSPITAL REIMBURSEMENT DEMONSTRATIONS.

(a) Continuation of Waivers.—A hospital reimbursement control system which, on January 1, 1985, was carrying out a demonstration under a contract which had been approved by the Secretary of Health and Human Services pursuant to section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972, or under section 402 of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 (as amended by section 222(b) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972), shall be deemed to meet the requirements of section 1886(c)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act if such system applies—

(1) to substantially all non-Federal acute care hospitals (as defined by the Secretary) in the geographic area served by such system on January 1, 1985, and

(2) to the review of at least 75 percent of—

(A) all revenues or expenses in such geographic area for inpatient hospital services, and

(B) revenues or expenses in such geographic area for inpatient hospital services provided under the State's plan approved under title XIX.

(b) Approval.—In the case of a hospital cost control system described in subsection (a), the requirements of section 1886(c) of the Social Security Act which apply to States shall instead apply to such system and, for such purposes, any reference to a State is deemed a reference to such system.

(c) Effective Date.—This section shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9109. FOUR-YEAR TEST FOR STATE WAIVERS FOR CERTAIN STATES.

(a) In General.—Section 1886(c) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C 1395ww(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(7) In the case of a State which made a request under paragraph (5) before December 31, 1984, for the approval of a State hospital reimbursement control system and which request was approved—

"(A) in applying paragraphs (1)(C) and (6), a reference to a '36-month period' is deemed a reference to a '48-month period', and

"(B) in order to allow the State the opportunity to provide the assurances described in paragraph (1)(C) for a 48-month period, the Secretary may not discontinue payments under the system, under the authority of paragraph (3)(A) because the Secretary has reason to believe that such assurances are not being (or will not be) met, before July 1, 1986.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9110. ASSET VALUATION FOR DONATIONS OF STATE PROPERTY TO NONPROFIT CORPORATIONS.

(a) General Rule.—Section 1861(v)(1)(O) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395x(v)(1)(O)) is amended—

(1) by inserting ", except as provided in clause (iv)," in clause (i) after "such regulations shall provide", and

(2) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iv) In the case of the transfer of a hospital from ownership by a State to ownership by a nonprofit corporation without monetary consideration, the basis for capital allowances to the new owner shall be the book value of the hospital to the State at the time of the transfer.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall be applied as though they were originally included in the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984.

SEC. 9111. PAYMENTS TO SOLE COMMUNITY HOSPITALS.

(a) Adjustment to Payment Amount.—Section 1886(d)(5)(C)(ii) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(d)(5)(C)(ii)) is amended by inserting after the second sentence thereof the following: "In the case of a sole community hospital which experiences, in any cost reporting period after the cost reporting period which was used as the base for determining the target amount for payments to such hospital under paragraph (1)(A)(i)(I), a significant increase in operating costs attributable to the addition of new inpatient facilities or services at such hospital (including the opening of a special care unit), the Secretary shall provide for such adjustment to the payment amounts under this subsection for such cost reporting period and subsequent cost reporting periods as may be necessary to reasonably compensate such hospital for such increased costs.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to payments for cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1989.

(c) Study.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall conduct a study of the effects of the amendment made by subsection (a). The Secretary shall report the results of such study, including recommendations for a permanent mechanism to take into account needed expansions of services by sole community hospitals and the hospital-specific medicare payment rates thereof, to the Congress prior to January 1, 1987.

SEC. 9112. INDIRECT TEACHING ADJUSTMENT FOR CERTAIN CLINICS.

(a) In General.—Section 602(k) of the Social Security Amendments of 1983 (97 Stat. 165) is amended by inserting "(1)" after "(k)" and by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) In the case of a hospital which is receiving payments pursuant to a waiver under paragraph (1), payment of the adjustment for indirect costs of approved educational activities shall be made as if the hospital were receiving under part A of title XVIII of the Social Security Act all the payments which are made under part B of such title solely by reason of such waiver.

"(3) Any waiver granted under paragraph (1) shall provide that, with respect to those items and services billed under part B of title XVIII of the Social Security Act solely by reason of such waiver—

"(A) payment under such part shall be equal to 100 percent of the reasonable charge or other applicable payment base for the items and services; and

"(B) the entity furnishing the items and services must agree to accept the amount paid pursuant to subparagraph (A) as the full charge for the items and services.".

(b) Effective Dates.—(1) Section 602(k)(2) of the Social Security Amendments of 1983 (as added by subsection (a)) shall apply to cost reporting periods beginning on or after January 1, 1986.

(2) Section 602(k)(3) of the Social Security Amendments of 1983 (as added by subsection (a)) shall apply to items and services furnished after the end of the 10-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9113. REPORT ON IMPACT OF OUTLIER AND TRANSFER POLICY ON RURAL HOSPITALS.

(a) Review.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall review the impact of policies respecting outliers and patient transfers on payments under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act to rural hospitals (particularly on rural hospitals with less than 100 beds).

(b) Report.—The Secretary shall report to Congress on the findings of the review not later than January 1, 1987, and shall include in the report recommendations on changes in policies respecting outliers and patient transfers to the extent they adversely affect rural hospitals.

SEC. 9114. INFORMATION ON IMPACT OF PPS PAYMENTS ON HOSPITALS.

(a) Disclosure of Information.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall make available to the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission, the Congressional Budget Office, the Comptroller General, and the Congressional Research Service the most current information on the payments being made under section 1886 of the Social Security Act to individual hospitals. Such information shall be made available in a manner that permits examination of the impact of such section on hospitals.

(b) Confidentiality.—Information disclosed under subsection (a) shall be treated as confidential and shall not be subject to further disclosure in a manner that permits the identification of individual hospitals.

SEC. 9115. SPECIAL RULES FOR IMPLEMENTATION OF SUBPART.

(a) Waiver of Paperwork Reduction.—Chapter 35 of title 44, United States Code, shall not apply to information required for purposes of carrying out this subpart and implementing the amendments made by this subpart.

(b) Use of Interim Final Regulations.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall issue such regulations (on an interim or other basis) as may be necessary to implement this subpart and the amendments made by this subpart.

Subpart B—Miscellaneous Provisions

SEC. 9121. RESPONSIBILITIES OF MEDICARE HOSPITALS IN EMERGENCY CASES.

(a) Requirement of Medicare Hospital Provider Agreements.—Section 1866(a)(1) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395cc(a)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (G),

(2) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (H) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (H) the following new subparagraph:

"(I) in the case of a hospital, to comply with the requirements of section 1867 to the extent applicable.".

(b) Requirements.—Title XVIII of such Act is amended by inserting after section 1866 the following new section:

"EXAMINATION AND TREATMENT FOR EMERGENCY MEDICAL CONDITIONS AND WOMEN IN ACTIVE LABOR

"Sec. 1867. (a) Medical Screening Requirement.—In the case of a hospital that has a hospital emergency department, if any individual (whether or not eligible for benefits under this title) comes to the emergency department and a request is made on the individual's behalf for examination or treatment for a medical condition, the hospital must provide for an appropriate medical screening examination within the capability of the hospital's emergency department to determine whether or not an emergency medical condition (within the meaning of subsection (e)(1)) exists or to determine if the individual is in active labor (within the meaning of subsection (e)(2)).

"(b) Necessary Stabilizing Treatment for Emergency Medical Conditions and Active Labor.—

"(1) In general.—If any individual (whether or not eligible for benefits under this title) comes to a hospital and the hospital determines that the individual has an emergency medical condition or is in active labor, the hospital must provide either—

"(A) within the staff and facilities available at the hospital, for such further medical examination and such treatment as may be required to stabilize the medical condition or to provide for treatment of the labor, or

"(B) for transfer of the individual to another medical facility in accordance with subsection (c).

"(2) Refusal to consent to treatment.—A hospital is deemed to meet the requirement of paragraph (1)(A) with respect to an individual if the hospital offers the individual the further medical examination and treatment described in that paragraph but the individual (or a legally responsible person acting on the individual's behalf) refuses to consent to the examination or treatment.

"(3) Refusal to consent to transfer.—A hospital is deemed to meet the requirement of paragraph (1) with respect to an individual if the hospital offers to transfer the individual to another medical facility in accordance with subsection (c) but the individual (or a legally responsible person acting on the individual's behalf) refuses to consent to the transfer.

"(c) Restricting Transfers Until Patient Stabilized.—

"(1) Rule.—If a patient at a hospital has an emergency medical condition which has not been stabilized (within the meaning of subsection (e)(4)(B)) or is in active labor, the hospital may not transfer the patient unless—

"(A)(i) the patient (or a legally responsible person acting on the patient's behalf) requests that the transfer be effected, or

"(ii) a physician (within the meaning of section 1861(r)(1)), or other qualified medical personnel when a physician is not readily available in the emergency department, has signed a certification that, based upon the reasonable risks and benefits to the patient, and based upon the information available at the time, the medical benefits reasonably expected from the provision of appropriate medical treatment at another medical facility outweigh the increased risks to the individual's medical condition from effecting the transfer; and

"(B) the transfer is an appropriate transfer (within the meaning of paragraph (2)) to that facility.

"(2) Appropriate transfer.—An appropriate transfer to a medical facility is a transfer—

"(A) in which the receiving facility—

"(i) has available space and qualified personnel for the treatment of the patient, and

"(ii) has agreed to accept transfer of the patient and to provide appropriate medical treatment;

"(B) in which the transferring hospital provides the receiving facility with appropriate medical records (or copies thereof) of the examination and treatment effected at the transferring hospital;

"(C) in which the transfer is effected through qualified personnel and transportation equipment, as required including the use of necessary and medically appropriate life support measures during the transfer; and

"(D) which meets such other requirements as the Secretary may find necessary in the interest of the health and safety of patients transferred.

"(d) Enforcement.—

"(1) As requirement of medicare provider agreement.—If a hospital knowingly and willfully, or negligently, fails to meet the requirements of this section, such hospital is subject to—

"(A) termination of its provider agreement under this title in accordance with section 1866(b), or

"(B) at the option of the Secretary, suspension of such agreement for such period of time as the Secretary determines to be appropriate, upon reasonable notice to the hospital and to the public.

"(2) Civil monetary penalties.—In addition to the other grounds for imposition of a civil money penalty under section 1128A(a), a participating hospital that knowingly violates a requirement of this section and the responsible physician in the hospital with respect to such a violation are each subject, under that section, to a civil money penalty of not more than $25,000 for each such violation. As used in the previous sentence, the term 'responsible physician' means, with respect to a hospital's violation of a requirement of this section, a physician who—

"(A) is employed by, or under contract with, the participating hospital, and

"(B) acting as such an employee or under such a contract, has professional responsibility for the provision of examinations or treatments for the individual, or transfers of the individual, with respect to which the violation occurred.

"(3) Civil enforcement.—

"(A) Personal harm.—Any individual who suffers personal harm as a direct result of a participating hospital's violation of a requirement of this section may, in a civil action against the participating hospital, obtain those damages available for personal injury under the law of the State in which the hospital is located, and such equitable relief as is appropriate.

"(B) Financial loss to other medical facility.—Any medical facility that suffers a financial loss as a direct result of a participating hospital's violation of a requirement of this section may, in a civil action against the participating hospital, obtain those damages available for financial loss, under the law of the State in which the hospital is located, and such equitable relief as is appropriate.

"(C) Limitations on actions.—No action may be brought under this paragraph more than two years after the date of the violation with respect to which the action is brought.

"(e) Definitions.—In this section:

"(1) The term 'emergency medical condition' means a medical condition manifesting itself by acute symptoms of sufficient severity (including severe pain) such that the absence of immediate medical attention could reasonably be expected to result in—

"(A) placing the patient's health in serious jeopardy,

"(B) serious impairment to bodily functions, or

"(C) serious dysfunction of any bodily organ or part.

"(2) The term 'active labor' means labor at a time at which—

"(A) delivery is imminent,

"(B) there is inadequate time to effect safe transfer to another hospital prior to delivery, or

"(C) a transfer may pose a threat of the health and safety of the patient or the unborn child.

"(3) The term 'participating hospital' means hospital that has entered into a provider agreement under section 1866 and has, under the agreement, obligated itself to comply with the requirements of this section.

"(4)(A) The term 'to stabilize' means, with respect to an emergency medical condition, to provide such medical treatment of the condition as may be necessary to assure, within reasonable medical probability, that no material deterioration of the condition is likely to result from the transfer of the individual from a facility.

"(B) The term 'stabilized' means, with respect to an emergency medical condition, that no material deterioration of the condition is likely, within reasonable medical probability, to result from the transfer of the individual from a facility.

"(5) The term 'transfer' means the movement (including the discharge) of a patient outside a hospital's facilities at the direction of any person employed by (or affiliated or associated, directly or indirectly, with) the hospital, but does not include such a movement of a patient who (A) has been declared dead, or (B) leaves the facility without the permission of any such person.

"(f) Preemption.—The provisions of this section do not preempt any State or local law requirement, except to the extent that the requirement directly conflicts with a requirement of this section.".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the first day of the first month that begins at least 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) Report.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, not later than 6 months after the effective date described in subsection (c), report to Congress on the methods to be used for monitoring and enforcing compliance with section 1867 of the Social Security Act.

SEC. 9122. REQUIREMENT FOR MEDICARE HOSPITALS TO PARTICIPATE IN CHAMPUS AND CHAMPVA PROGRAMS.

(a) In General.—Section 1866(a)(1) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395cc(a)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (H),

(2) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (I) and inserting in lieu thereof ", and", and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (I) the following new subparagraph:

"(J) in the case of hospitals which provide inpatient hospital services for which payment may be made under this title, to be a participating provider of medical care under any health plan contracted for under section 1079 or 1086 of title 10, or under section 613 of title 38, United States Code, in accordance with admission practices, payment methodology, and amounts as prescribed under joint regulations issued by the Secretary and by the Secretaries of Defense and Transportation, in implementation of sections 1079 and 1086 of title 10, United States Code.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to agreements entered into or renewed on or after the date of the enactment of this Act, but shall apply only to inpatient hospital services provided pursuant to admissions to hospitals occurring on or after January 1, 1987.

(c) Reference to Study Required.—For a study of the use by CHAMPUS of the medicare prospective payment system, see section 634 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1985 (Public Law 98-525), the deadline for which is extended under section 2002 of this Act.

(d) Report.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall report to Congress periodically on the number of hospitals that have terminated or failed to renew an agreement under section 1866 of the Social Security Act as a result of the additional conditions imposed under the amendments made by subsection (a).

SEC. 9123. EXTENSION AND PAYMENT FOR HOSPICE CARE.

(a) Elimination of Sunset.—Section 122(h)(1) of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (P.L. 97-248, 96 Stat. 362), relating to the end of the effective date for hospice care, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A)—

(A) by striking out "(h)(1)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), the" and inserting in lieu thereof "(h)(1) The", and

(B) by striking out ", and before October 1, 1986", and

(2) by striking out subparagraph (B).

(b) Increase in Payment of Daily Rates for Hospice Care.—(1) Subparagraph (B) of section 1814(i)(1) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395f(i)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), for hospice care furnished on or after April 1, 1986, the daily rate of payment per day for routine home care shall be $63.17 and the daily rate of payment for other services included in hospice care shall be the daily rate of payment recognized under subparagraph (A) as of July 1, 1985, increased by $10.".

(2) Subparagraph (C) of such section is amended by striking out "1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "1986".

SEC. 9124. LIMITING THE PENALTY FOR LATE ENROLLMENT IN PART A.

(a) Limiting Penalty to 10 Percent and Twice the Period During Which Not Enrolled.—Section 1818(c) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395i-2(c)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (5),

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (6) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and", and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(7) any percent increase effected under section 1839(b) in an individual's monthly premium may not exceed 10 percent and shall only apply to premiums paid during a period equal to twice the number of months in the full 12-month periods described in that section.".

(b) Effective Date.—(1) The amendment made by subsection (a)(3) shall apply to premiums paid for months beginning with July 1986.

(2) In applying that amendment, months (before, during, or after April 1986) in which an individual was required to pay a premium increased under the section that was so amended shall be taken into account in determining the month in which the premium will no longer be subject to an increase under that section as so amended.

SEC. 9125. PROMULGATION OF INPATIENT HOSPITAL DEDUCTIBLE.

(a) Change in Deadline.—Section 1813(b)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395e(b)(2)) is amended by striking out "October 1" and inserting in lieu thereof "September 15".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to calendar years after 1985.

SEC. 9126. ACCESS TO SKILLED NURSING FACILITIES.

(a) Optional Prospective Rates for Certain Skilled Nursing Facilities.—Section 1888 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395yy) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(d)(1) Any skilled nursing facility may choose to be paid under this subsection on the basis of a prospective payment for all routine service costs (and capital-related costs) of extended care services provided in a fiscal year if such facility had, in the preceding fiscal year, fewer than 1,500 patient days with respect to which payments were made under this title. Such prospective payment shall be in lieu of payments which would otherwise be made for routine service costs pursuant to section 1861(v) and subsections (a) through (c) of this section and capital-related costs pursuant to section 1861(v). This subsection shall not apply to a facility for any fiscal year immediately following a fiscal year in which such facility had 1,500 or more patient days with respect to which payments were made under this title, without regard to whether payments were made under this subsection during such preceding fiscal year.

"(2)(A) The amount of the payment under this section shall be determined on a per diem basis.

"(B) Subject to the limitations of subparagraph (C), for skilled nursing facilities located—

"(i) in an urban area, the amount shall be equal to 105 percent of the mean of the per diem reasonable routine service and capital-related costs of extended care services for skilled nursing facilities in urban areas within the same region, determined without regard to the limitations of subsection (a) and adjusted for different area wage levels, and

"(ii) in a rural area the amount shall be equal to 105 percent of the mean of the per diem reasonable routine service and capital-related costs of extended care services for skilled nursing facilities in rural areas within the same region, determined without regard to the limitations of subsection (a) and adjusted for different area wage levels.

"(C) The per diem amounts determined under subparagraph (B) shall not exceed the limit on routine service costs determined under subsection (a) with respect to the facility, adjusted to take into account average capital-related costs with respect to the type and location of the facility.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, urban and rural areas shall be determined in the same manner as for purposes of subsection (a), and the term 'region' shall have the same meaning as under section 1886(d)(2)(D).

"(4) The Secretary shall establish the prospective payment amounts for each fiscal year at least 90 days prior to the beginning of such fiscal year, on the basis of the most recent data available for a 12-month period. A skilled nursing facility must notify the Secretary of its intention to be paid pursuant to this subsection for a fiscal year within 60 days after the Secretary establishes the final prospective payment amounts for such fiscal year.

"(5) The Secretary shall provide for a simplified cost report to be filed by facilities being paid pursuant to this subsection, which shall require only the cost information necessary for determining prospective payment amounts pursuant to paragraph (2) and reasonable costs of ancillary services.

"(6) In lieu of payment on a cost basis for ancillary services provided by a facility which is being paid pursuant to this subsection, the Secretary may pay for such ancillary services on a reasonable charge basis if the Secretary determines that such payment basis will provide an equitable level of reimbursement and will ease the reporting burden of the facility.".

(b) Publication of Data Relating to Adjustments to SNF Limits.—Section 1888(c) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "The Secretary shall publish the data and criteria to be used for purposes of this subsection on an annual basis.".

(c) Reinstatement of Waiver of Liability Presumption.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, for purposes of determining whether payments to a skilled nursing facility should be denied pursuant to section 1862(a)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act, apply the same presumption of compliance (5 percent) as in effect under regulations as of July 1, 1985. Such presumption shall apply for the 30-month period beginning with the first month beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) Effective Dates.—(1) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to fiscal years beginning on or after October 1, 1986.

(2) The amendment made by subsection (b) shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9127. ADDITIONAL MEMBERS OF PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT ASSESSMENT COMMISSION.

(a) Expansion of Membership.—Section 1886(e)(6)(A) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww(e)(6)(A)) is amended by striking out "15 individuals" and inserting in lieu thereof "17 individuals".

(b) Appointments.—The Director of the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment shall appoint the two additional members of the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission, as required by the amendment made by subsection (a), no later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, for terms of three years.

SEC. 9128. SENSE OF THE SENATE WITH RESPECT TO INPATIENT HOSPITAL DEDUCTIBLE.

In view of the $92 Medicare hospital deductible increase that went into effect January 1, 1986, it is the sense of the Senate that the Committee on Finance should report legislation which will reform calculation of the annual increase in such deductible so that it is more consistent with annual increases in Medicare payments to hospitals.

SEC. 9129. MEDICARE COVERAGE OF STATE AND LOCAL EMPLOYEES.

For provision providing for medicare coverage of certain State and local employees, see section 13205 of this Act.

PART 2—PROVISIONS RELATING TO PARTS A AND B OF MEDICARE

Subpart A—Payment-Related Provisions

SEC. 9201. EXTENSION OF WORKING AGED PROVISION.

(a) Extension of Secondary Payor Status Beyond Age 69.—Section 1862(b)(3)(A) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395y(b)(3)(A)) is amended—

(1) in clause (i), by striking out "who is under 70 years of age during any part of such month" and ", if the spouse is under 70 years of age during any part of such month", and

(2) in clause (iii), by striking out "and ending with the month before the month in which such individual attains the age of 70".

(b) Extension of Age Discrimination Provisions.—

(1) Section 4(g)(1) of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 (29 U.S.C. 623(g)(1)) is amended by striking out "through 69" and inserting in lieu thereof "or older" each place it appears.

(2) Section 12(a) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 631(a)) is amended by inserting "(except the provisions of section 4(g))" after "Act".

(3) Section 4 of such Act (29 U.S.C. 623) is amended by redesignating the second subsection (g), added by section 802 of the Older Americans Act Amendments of 1984, as subsection (h).

(c) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Special enrollment period.—Paragraph (3) of section 1837(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395p(i)(3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) The special enrollment period referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2) is the period beginning with the first day of the first month in which the individual is no longer enrolled in a group health plan described in section 1862(b)(3)(A)(iv) by reason of current employment and ending seven months later.".

(2) Effective date of enrollment.—Subsection (e) of section 1838 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395q) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) Notwithstanding subsection (a), in the case of an individual who enrolls during a special enrollment period pursuant to section 1837(i)(3)—

"(1) in the first month of the special enrollment period, the coverage period shall begin on the first day of that month, or

"(2) in a month after the first month of the special enrollment period, the coverage period shall begin on the first day of the month following the month in which the individual so enrolls."

(d) Effective Dates.—(1) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to items and services furnished on or after May 1, 1986.

(2) The amendments made by subsections (b) and (c) shall become effective on May 1, 1986.

SEC. 9202. PAYMENTS TO HOSPITALS FOR DIRECT COSTS OF MEDICAL EDUCATION.

(a) Medicare Payment Methodology.—Section 1886 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395ww) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(h) Payments for Direct Graduate Medical Education Costs.—

"(1) Substitution of special payment rules.—Notwithstanding section 1861(v), instead of any amounts that are otherwise payable under this title with respect to the reasonable costs of hospitals for direct graduate medical education costs, the Secretary shall provide for payments for such costs in accordance with paragraph (3) of this subsection. In providing for such payments, the Secretary shall provide for an allocation of such payments between part A and part B (and the trust funds established under the respective parts) as reasonably reflects the proportion of direct graduate medical education costs of hospitals associated with the provision of services under each respective part.

"(2) Determination of hospital-specific approved FTE resident amounts.—The Secretary shall determine, for each hospital with an approved medical residency training program, an approved FTE resident amount for each cost reporting period beginning on or after July 1, 1985, as follows:

"(A) Determining allowable average cost per FTE resident in a hospital's base period.—The Secretary shall determine, for the hospital's cost reporting period that began during fiscal year 1984, the average amount recognized as reasonable under this title for direct graduate medical education costs of the hospital for each full-time-equivalent resident.

"(B) Updating to the first cost reporting period.—

"(i) In general.—The Secretary shall update each average amount determined under subparagraph (A) by the percentage increase in the consumer price index during the 12-month cost reporting period described in such subparagraph.

"(ii) Exception.—The Secretary shall not perform an update under clause (i) in the case of a hospital if the hospital's reporting period, described in subparagraph (A), began on or after July 1, 1984, and before October 1, 1984.

"(C) Amount for first cost reporting period.—For the first cost reporting period of the hospital beginning on or after July 1, 1985, the approved FTE resident amount for the hospital is equal to the amount determined under paragraph (B) increased by 1 percent.

"(D) Amount for subsequent cost reporting periods.—For each subsequent cost reporting period, the approved FTE resident amount for the hospital is equal to the amount determined under this paragraph for the previous cost reporting period updated, through the midpoint of the period, by projecting the estimated percentage change in the consumer price index during the 12-month period ending at that midpoint, with appropriate adjustments to reflect previous under- or over-estimations under this subparagraph in the projected percentage change in the consumer price index.

"(E) Treatment of certain hospitals.—In the case of a hospital that did not have an approved medical residency training program or was not participating in the program under this title for a cost reporting period beginning during fiscal year 1984, the Secretary shall, for the first such period for which it has such a residency training program and is participating under this title, provide for such approved FTE resident amount as the Secretary determines to be appropriate, based on approved FTE resident amounts for comparable programs.

"(3) Hospital payment amount per resident.—

"(A) In general.—The payment amount, for a hospital cost reporting period beginning on or after July 1, 1985, is equal to the product of—

"(i) the aggregate approved amount (as defined in subparagraph (B)) for that period, and

"(ii) the hospital's medicare patient load (as defined in subparagraph (C)) for that period.

"(B) Aggregate approved amount.—As used in subparagraph (A), the term 'aggregate approved amount' means, for a hospital cost reporting period, the product of—

"(i) the hospital's approved FTE resident amount (determined under paragraph (2)) for that period, and

"(ii) the weighted average number of full-time-equivalent residents (as determined under paragraph (4)) in the hospital's approved medical residency training programs in that period.

"(C) Medicare patient load.—As used in subparagraph (A), the term 'medicare patient load' means, with respect to a hospital's cost reporting period, the fraction of the total number of inpatient-bed-days (as established by the Secretary) during the period which are attributable to patients with respect to whom payment may be made under part A.

"(4) Determination of full-time-equivalent residents.—

"(A) Rules.—The Secretary shall establish rules consistent with this paragraph for the computation of the number of full-time-equivalent residents in an approved medical residency training program.

"(B) Adjustment for part-year or part-time residents.—Such rules shall take into account individuals who serve as residents for only a portion of a period with a hospital or simultaneously with more than one hospital.

"(C) Weighting factors for certain residents.—Subject to subparagraph (E), such rules shall provide, in calculating the number of full-time-equivalent residents in an approved residency program—

"(i) before July 1, 1986, for each resident the weighting factor is 1.00,

"(ii) on or after July 1, 1986, for a resident who is in the resident's initial residency period (as defined in paragraph (5)(F)), the weighting factor is 1.00,

"(iii) on or after July 1, 1986, and before July 1, 1987, for a resident who is not in the resident's initial residency period (as defined in paragraph (5)(F)), the weighting factor is .75, and

"(iv) on or after July 1, 1987, for a resident who is not in the resident's initial residency period (as defined in paragraph (5)(F)), the weighting factor is .50.

"(E) Foreign medical graduates required to pass FMGEMS examination.—

"(i) In general.—Except as provided in clause (ii), such rules shall provide that, in the case of an individual who is a foreign medical graduate (as defined in paragraph (5)(D)), the individual shall not be counted as a resident on or after July 1, 1986, unless—

"(I) the individual has passed the FMGEMS examination (as defined in paragraph (5)(E)), or

"(II) the individual has previously received certification from, or has previously passed the examination of, the Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates.

"(ii) Transition for current FMGs.—On or after July 1, 1986, in the case of a foreign medical graduate who—

"(I) has served as a resident before July 1, 1986, and is serving as a resident after that date, but

"(II) has not passed the FMGEMS examination or a previous examination of the Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates before July 1, 1986, the individual shall be counted as a resident at a rate equal to one-half of the rate at which the individual would otherwise be counted.

"(5) Definitions and special rules.—As used in this subsection:

"(A) Approved medical residency training program.—The term 'approved medical residency training program' means a residency or other postgraduate medical training program participation in which may be counted toward certification in a specialty or subspecialty and includes formal postgraduate training programs in geriatric medicine approved by the Secretary.

"(B) Consumer price index.—As used in this paragraph, the term 'consumer price index' refers to the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers (United States city average), as published by the Secretary of Commerce.

"(C) Direct graduate medical education costs.—The term 'direct graduate medical education costs' means direct costs of approved educational activities for approved medical residency training programs.

"(D) Foreign medical graduate.—The term 'foreign medical graduate' means a resident who is not a graduate of—

"(i) a school of medicine accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education of the American Medical Association and the Association of American Medical Colleges (or approved by such Committee as meeting the standards necessary for such accreditation),

"(ii) a school of osteopathy accredited by the American Osteopathic Association, or approved by such Association as meeting the standards necessary for such accreditation, or

"(iii) a school of dentistry or podiatry which is accredited (or meets the standards for accreditation) by an organization recognized by the Secretary for such purpose.

"(E) FMGEMS examination.—The term 'FMGEMS examination' means parts I and II of the Foreign Medical Graduate Examination in the Medical Sciences recognized by the Secretary for this purpose.

"(F) Initial residency period.—The term 'initial residency period' means the period of board eligibility plus one year, except that—

"(i) except as provided in clause (ii), in no case shall the initial period of residency exceed an aggregate period of formal training of more than five years for any individual, and

"(ii) a period, of not more than two years, during which an individual is in a geriatric residency or fellowship program which meets such criteria as the Secretary may establish, shall be treated as part of the initial residency period, but shall not be counted against any limitation on the initial residency period.

The initial residency period shall be determined, with respect to a resident, as of the time the resident enters the residency training program.

"(G) Period of board eligibility.—

"(i) General rule.—Subject to clauses (ii) and (iii), the term 'period of board eligibility' means, for a resident, the minimum number of years of formal training necessary to satisfy the requirements for initial board eligibility in the particular specialty for which the resident is training.

"(ii) Application of 1985–1986 directory.—Except as provided in clause (iii), the period of board eligibility shall be such period specified in the 1985–1986 Directory of Residency Training Programs published by the Accreditation Council on Graduate Medical Education.

"(iii) Changes in period of board eligibility.—On or after July 1, 1989, if the Accreditation Council on Graduate Medical Education, in its Directory of Residency Training Programs—

"(I) increases the minimum number of years of formal training necessary to satisfy the requirements for a specialty, above the period specified in its 1985–1986 Directory, the Secretary may increase the period of board eligibility for that specialty, but not to exceed the period of board eligibility specified in that later Directory, or

"(II) decreases the minimum number of years of formal training necessary to satisfy the requirements for a specialty, below the period specified in its 1985–1986 Directory, the Secretary may decrease the period of board eligibility for that specialty, but not below the period of board eligibility specified in that later Directory.

"(H) Resident.—The term 'resident' includes an intern or other participant in an approved medical residency training program.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after July 1, 1985.

(c) Studies by Secretary.—(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall conduct a study with respect to approved educational activities relating to nursing and other health professions for which reimbursement is made to hospitals under title XVIII of the Social Security Act. The study shall address—

(A) the types and numbers of such programs, and number of students supported or trained under each program;

(B) the fiscal and administrative relationships between the hospitals involved and the schools with which the programs and students are affiliated; and

(C) the types and amounts of expenses of such programs for which reimbursement is made, and the financial and other contributions which accrue to the hospital as a consequence of having such programs.

The Secretary shall report the results of such study to the Committee on Finance of the Senate and the Committees on Ways and Means and Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives prior to December 31, 1987.

(2) The Secretary shall conduct a separate study of the advisability of continuing or terminating the exception under section 1886(h)(5)(F)(ii) of the Social Security Act for geriatric residencies and fellowships, and of expanding such exception to cover other educational activities, particularly those which are necessary to meet the projected health care needs of Medicare beneficiaries. Such study shall also examine the adequacy of the supply of faculty in the field of geriatrics. The Secretary shall report the results of such study to the committees described in paragraph (1) prior to July 1, 1990.

(d) GAO Study.—(1) The Comptroller General shall conduct a study of the variation in the amounts of payments made under title XVIII of the Social Security Act with respect to patients in different teaching hospital settings and in the amounts of such payments which are made with respect to patients who are treated in teaching and nonteaching hospital settings. Such study shall identify the components of such payments (including payments with respect to inpatient hospital services, physicians' services, and capital costs, and, in the case of teaching hospital patients, payments with respect to direct and indirect teaching costs) and shall account, to the extent feasible, for any variations in the amounts of the payment components between teaching and nonteaching settings and among different teaching settings.

(2) In carrying out such study, the Comptroller General may utilize a sample of hospital patients and any other data sources which he deems appropriate, and shall, to the extent feasible, control for differences in severity of illness levels, area wage levels, levels of physician reasonable charges for like services and procedures, and for other factors which could affect the comparability of patients and of payments between teaching and nonteaching settings and among teaching settings. The information obtained in the study shall be coordinated with the information obtained in conducting the study of teaching physicians' services under section 2307(c) of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984.

(3) The Comptroller General shall report the results of the study to the committees described in subsection (c)(1) prior to December 31, 1987.

(e) Report on Uniformity of Approved FTE Resident Amounts.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall report to the committees described in subsection (c)(1), not later than December 31, 1987, on whether section 1886(h) of the Social Security Act should be revised to provide for greater uniformity in the approved FTE resident amounts established under paragraph (2) of that section, and, if so, how such revisions should be implemented.

(f) Study on Foreign Medical Graduates.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall study, and report to the committees described in subsection (c)(1), not later than December 31, 1987, respecting the use of physicians who are foreign medical graduates (within the meaning of section 1886(h)(5)(D) of the Social Security Act) in the provision of health care services (particularly inpatient and outpatient hospital services) to medicare beneficiaries. Such study shall evaluate—

(1) the types of services provided;

(2) the cost of providing such services, relative to the cost of other physicians providing the services or other approaches to providing the services;

(3) any deficiencies in the quality of the services provided, and methods of assuring the quality of such services; and

(4) the impact on costs of and access to services if medicare payment for hospitals' costs of graduate medical education of foreign medical graduates were phased out.

(g) Establishing Physician Identifier System.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall establish a system, for implementation not later than July 1, 1987, which provides for a unique identifier for each physician who furnishes services for which payment may be made under title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

(h) Paperwork Reduction.—Chapter 35 of title 44, United States Code, shall not apply to information required for purposes of carrying out this section and the amendments made by this section.

(i) Prohibiting a Limit On Increases On Direct Medical Education Costs.—(1) Section 1861(v)(1) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395x(v)(1)), as amended by section 9107(b) of this title, is further amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(Q) Except as otherwise explicitly authorized, the Secretary is not authorized to limit the rate of increase on allowable costs of approved medical educational activities.".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply to cost reporting periods beginning on or after July 1, 1985.

(j) Special Treatment of States Formerly Under Waiver.—In the case of a hospital in a State that has had a waiver approved under section 1886(c) of the Social Security Act, for cost reporting periods beginning on or after January 1, 1986, if the waiver is terminated—

(1) the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall permit the hospital to change the method by which it allocates administrative and general costs to the direct medical education cost centers to the method specified in the medicare cost report;

(2) the Secretary may make appropriate adjustments in the regional adjusted DRG prospective payment rate (for the region in which the State is located), based on the assumption that all teaching hospitals in the State use the medicare cost report; and

(3) the Secretary shall adjust the hospital-specific portion of payment under section 1886(d) of such Act for any such hospital that actually chooses to use the medicare cost report.

The Secretary shall implement this subsection based on the best available data.

SEC. 9204. MORATORIUM ON LABORATORY PAYMENT DEMONSTRATION.

(a) Moratorium.—Prior to January 1, 1987, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall not conduct any demonstration projects relating to competitive bidding as a method of purchasing laboratory services under title XVIII of the Social Security Act. The Secretary may contract for the design of, and site selection for, such demonstration projects.

(b) Cooperation in Study.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Comptroller General shall assist representatives of clinical laboratories in the industry's conduct of a study to determine whether methods exist which are better than competitive bidding for purposes of utilizing competitive market forces in setting payment levels for laboratory services under title XVIII of the Social Security Act. If such a study is conducted by the clinical laboratory industry, the Secretary and the Comptroller General shall comment on such study and submit such comments and the study to the Senate Committee on Finance and the House Committees on Ways and Means and Energy and Commerce.

SEC. 9205. HOME HEALTH WAIVER OF LIABILITY.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, for purposes of determining whether payments to a home health agency should be denied pursuant to section 1862(a)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act, apply a presumption of compliance (2.5 percent) in the same manner as under the regulations in effect as of July 1, 1985. Such presumption shall apply until 12 months after the date on which ten regional intermediaries have commenced operations to service home health agencies, as required under section 1816(e)(4) of the Social Security Act.

SUBPART B—OTHER PROVISIONS

SEC. 9211. PROVISIONS RELATING TO HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATIONS AND COMPETITIVE MEDICAL PLANS.

(a) Financial Responsibility for Patients Hospitalized on the Effective Date of an Enrollment or Disenrollment.—(1) Subsection (c) of section 1876 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395mm) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(7) A risk-sharing contract under this section shall provide that in the case of an individual who is receiving inpatient hospital services from a subsection (d) hospital (as defined in section 1886(d)(1)(B)) as of the effective date of the individual's—

"(A) enrollment with an eligible organization under this section—

"(i) payment for such services until the date of the individual's discharge shall be made under this title as if the individual were not enrolled with the organization,

"(ii) the organization shall not be financially responsible for payment for such services until the date after the date of the individual's discharge, and

"(iii) the organization shall nonetheless be paid the full amount otherwise payable to the organization under this section; or

"(B) termination of enrollment with an eligible organization under this section—

"(i) the organization shall be financially responsible for payment for such services after such date and until the date of the individual's discharge,

"(ii) payment for such services during the stay shall not be made under section 1886(d), and

"(iii) the organization shall not receive any payment with respect to the individual under this section during the period the individual is not enrolled.".

(2) Subsection (a)(3) of such section is amended by striking out "Payments" and inserting in lieu thereof "Subject to subsection (c)(7), payments".

(3) Subsection (a)(6) of such section is amended by striking out "If" and inserting in lieu thereof "Subject to subsection (c)(7), if".

(b) Disenrollments.—

(1) Effective date.—Subsection (c)(3)(B) of such section is amended by striking out "a full calendar month after" and inserting in lieu thereof "the date on which".

(2) Information.—Such subsection is further amended by adding at the end the following: "In the case of an individual's termination of enrollment, the organization shall provide the individual with a copy of the written request for termination of enrollment and a written explanation of the period (ending on the effective date of the termination) during which the individual continues to be enrolled with the organization and may not receive benefits under this title other than through the organization.".

(c) Review of Marketing Material.—Subsection (c)(3)(C) of such section is amended by adding at the end the following: "No brochures, application forms, or other promotional or informational material may be distributed by an organization to (or for the use of) individuals eligible to enroll with the organization under this section unless (i) at least 45 days before its distribution, the organization has submitted the material to the Secretary for review and (ii) the Secretary has not disapproved the distribution of the material. The Secretary shall review all such material submitted and shall disapprove such material if the Secretary determines, in the Secretary's discretion, that the material is materially inaccurate or misleading or otherwise makes a material misrepresentation.".

(d) Prompt Publication of AAPCC.—Subsection (a)(1)(A) of such section is amended by inserting after "The Secretary shall annually determine" the following: ", and shall publish not later than September 7 before the calendar year concerned".

(e) Effective Dates.—

(1) Financial responsibility.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to enrollments and disenrollments that become effective on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) Disenrollments.—The amendments made by subsection (b) shall apply to requests for termination of enrollment submitted on or after May 1, 1986.

(3) Material review.—(A) The amendment made by subsection (c) shall not apply to material which has been distributed before July 1, 1986.

(B) Such amendment also shall not apply so as to require the submission of material which is distributed before July 1, 1986.

(C) Such amendment shall also not apply to material which the Secretary determines has been prepared before the date of the enactment of this Act and for which a commitment for distribution has been made, if the application of such amendment would constitute a hardship for the organization involved.

(4) Publication.—The amendment made by subsection (d) shall apply to determinations of per capita rates of payment for 1987 and subsequent years.

(5) Necessary modification of contracts.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall provide for such changes in the risk-sharing contracts which have been entered into under section 1876 of the Social Security Act as may be necessary to conform to the requirements imposed by the amendments made by this section on a timely basis.

SEC. 9213. REMOVAL OF PROHIBITION ON COMMENTS BY MEDICARE AND SOCIAL SECURITY ACTUARIES RELATING TO ECONOMIC ASSUMPTIONS.

(a) Federal Old-Age and Disability Insurance Trust Fund.—Section 201(c) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 401(c)) is amended by striking out ": Provided, That the certification shall not refer to economic assumptions underlying the Trustee's report, and shall" and inserting in lieu thereof ". Such report shall".

(b) Medicare Trust Funds.—Sections 1817(b) and 1841(b) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395i(b), 1395t(b)) are each amended by striking out ": Provided, That the certification shall not refer to economic assumptions underlying the Trustee's report".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9214. LIMITATION ON MERGER OF END STAGE RENAL DISEASE NETWORKS.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall maintain renal disease network organizations as authorized under section 1881(c) of the Social Security Act, and may not merge the network organizations into other organizations or entities. The Secretary may consolidate such network organizations, but only if such consolidation does not result in fewer than 14 such organizations being permitted to exist.

SEC. 9215. EXTENSION OF CERTAIN MEDICARE MUNICIPAL HEALTH SERVICES DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall extend, for a period of three additional years, approval of four municipal health services demonstration projects (located in Baltimore, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, and San Jose) authorized under section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967.

SEC. 9216. AUDIT AND MEDICAL CLAIMS REVIEW.

(a) Increase in Activities for Fiscal Years 1986, 1987, and 1988.—Section 118 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 355) is amended—

(1) by striking out "for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985",

(2) by striking out "such fiscal years" and inserting in lieu thereof "fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985, and $105,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988", and

(3) by striking out "the purpose of carrying out provider cost audits and reviews of medical necessity" and inserting in lieu thereof "purposes of carrying out provider cost audits, of reviewing medical necessity, and of recovering third-party liability payments".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1986.

SEC. 9217. LIVER TRANSPLANTS.

(a) The Senate finds that:

(1) There have been more than 600 liver transplants since 1963 and the one year survival rate at qualified institutions is now greater than 70 percent.

(2) There are 4,000 to 4,700 potential candidates in the United States each year who require a liver transplant, but only a small percentage would be eligible for Medicare coverage.

(3) There are currently individuals on waiting lists for liver transplants who will die without Medicare coverage.

(4) After extensive review and consideration of all the available data, an National Institutes of Health expert panel concluded liver transplantation is "a therapeutic modality for end-stage liver disease that deserves broader application" in a limited number of centers where they can be carried out under optimal conditions.

(5) National Institutes of Health further recommended that liver transplants be done in individuals under 18 years of age.

(6) The CHAMPUS program, after considering all relevant data, determined that there was no scientific basis for limiting liver transplants to children under 18 years of age.

(7) The Department of Health and Human Services has determined that liver transplantation is no longer an experimental procedure only for children under 18.

(b) Based upon the above findings, it is the sense of the Senate that:

(1) For the purposes of title XVIII of the Social Security Act, the Secretary immediately reconsider the Medicare liver transplant coverage decision and implement a policy under which a liver transplant shall not be considered to be an experimental procedure for Medicare beneficiaries solely because an individual is over 18 years of age.

(2) A liver transplant shall be covered under such title when reasonable and medically necessary.

(3) The Secretary shall place appropriate limiting criteria on coverage, including those relating to the patient's condition, the disease state, and the institution providing the care, so as to ensure the highest quality of medical care demonstrated to be consistent with successful outcomes.

SEC. 9218. STUDIES RELATING TO PHYSICAL THERAPISTS AND OTHER PROFESSIONALS.

(a) Supervision of Home Health Services.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall conduct a study of the advisability of changing the requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act to allow home health services to be provided under the supervision of a physical therapist or other health care professional, rather than requiring the supervision of a physician or registered nurse.

(b) Office Requirement.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall conduct a study on the advisability of deleting the requirement under such title that a physical therapist must have an office equipped with specified equipment, even if such therapist provides all such services in patients' homes.

(c) Reports.—The Secretary shall report the results of the studies to the Congress prior to October 1, 1986.

SEC. 9219. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS.

(a) Working Aged Technical Corrections.—

(1) Premium penalty.—The second sentence of section 1839(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395r(b)), as amended by section 2338(a) of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984, is amended by striking out "months in which" and all that follows through "clause (iv) of such section" and inserting in lieu thereof "months during which the individual has attained the age of 65 and for which the individual can demonstrate that the individual was enrolled in a group health plan described in section 1862(b)(3)(A)(iv)".

(2) Special enrollment periods.—Section 1837(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395p), as added by section 2338(b) of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984, is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1), by amending subparagraph (A) to read as follows:

"(A) has attained the age of 65,"; and

(B) in paragraph (2), by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (D) and by amending subparagraphs (A) and (B) to read as follows:

"(A) has attained the age of 65;

"(B)(i) has enrolled (or has been deemed to have enrolled) in the medical insurance program established under this part during the individual's initial enrollment period, or (ii) is an individual described in paragraph (1)(B);

"(C) has enrolled in such program during any subsequent special enrollment period under this subsection during which the individual was not enrolled in a group health plan described in section 1862(b)(3)(A)(iv) by reason of the individual's (or individual's spouse's) current employment; and".

(3) Effective dates.—

(A) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply to months beginning with January 1983 for premiums for months beginning with the first month that begins more than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(B)(i) The amendments made by paragraph (2) shall apply to enrollments in months beginning with the first effective month (as defined in clause (ii)), except that in the case of any individual who would have a special enrollment period under section 1837(i) of the Social Security Act that would have begun after November 1984 and before the first effective month, the period shall be deemed to begin with the first day of the first effective month.

(ii) For purposes of clause (i), the term "first effective month" means the first month that begins more than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) Miscellaneous Technical Corrections.—

(1)(A) Subclause (III) of section 1842(b)(7)(B)(ii) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(b)(7)(B)(ii)), as added by section 2307(a)(2)(G) of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984, is amended by indenting it two additional ems to the right so as to align its left margin with the left margins of subclauses (I) and (II) of that section.

(B) Section 1861(n) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395x(n)), as inserted by section 2321(e)(3) of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984, is amended by striking out "at his home" and inserting in lieu thereof "as his home".

(C) Section 1888(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395yy(b)), as added by section 2319(b) of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984, is amended by striking out "nothwithstanding" and inserting in lieu thereof "notwithstanding".

(D) The amendments made by this paragraph shall be effective as if they had been originally included in the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984.

(2)(A) Clause (iii) of section 1842(b)(7)(B) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(b)(7)(B)), as added by section 3(b)(6) of Public Law 98–617, is amended by moving its alignment two additional ems to the left so as to align its left margin with the left margins of clauses (i) and (ii) of that section.

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall be effective as if it had been originally included in Public Law 98–617.

(3)(A) Section 1861(v)(1)(G)(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395x(b)(1)(G)(i)), as amended by section 602(d)(1) of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, is amended by inserting, in the matter after subclause (III), "on the basis of" after "(during such period)".

(B) The amendment made by subparagraph (A) shall be effective as if it had been originally included in the Social Security Amendments of 1983.

SEC. 9220. EXTENSION OF ON LOK WAIVER.

(a) Continued Approval.—

(1) Medicare waivers.—Notwithstanding any limitations contained in section 222 of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 and section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall continue approval of the risk-sharing application (described in section 603(c)(1) of Public Law 98-21) for waivers of certain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act after the end of the period described in that section.

(2) Medicaid waivers.—Notwithstanding any limitations contained in section 1115 of the Social Security Act, the Secretary shall approve any application of the Department of Health Services, State of California, for a waiver of requirements of title XIX of such Act in order to continue carrying out the demonstration project referred to in section 603(c)(2) of Public Law 98–21 after the end of the period described in that section.

(b) Terms, Conditions, and Period of Approval.—The Secretary's approval of an application (or renewal of an application) under this section—

(1) shall be on the same terms and conditions as applied with respect to the corresponding application under section 603(c) of Public Law 98-21 as of July 1, 1985, except that requirements relating to collection and evaluation of information for demonstration purposes (and not for operational purposes) shall not apply; and

(2) shall remain in effect until such time as the Secretary finds that the applicant no longer complies with the terms and conditions described in paragraph (1).

SEC. 9221. CONTINUATION OF "ACCESS: MEDICARE" DEMONSTRATION PROJECT.

(a) Approval of Application.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall approve any application for a waiver of any requirement of titles XVIII and XIX of the Social Security Act necessary to provide for the continuation, through September 30, 1986, of the "Access: Medicare" demonstration project carried out pursuant to section 222 of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 and section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 by Monroe County Long Term Care Program, Inc.

(b) Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary's approval of an application (or renewal of an application) under subsection (a) shall be on the same terms and conditions as applied to the demonstration project as in effect on August 31, 1985.

PART 3—PROVISIONS RELATING TO PART B OF MEDICARE

Subpart A—Payment-Related Provisions

SEC. 9301. MEDICARE PHYSICIAN PAYMENT PROVISIONS.

(a) Extension of Current Freeze on Payment Rates through April 30, 1986.—Section 5(c) of the Emergency Extension Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-107), as amended by section 9101(a) of this title, is further amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) Physician payments.—For purposes of subsection (b), the term 'extension period' means the period beginning on October 1, 1985, and ending on April 30, 1986."

(b) Extension of Certain Provisions Through December 31, 1986.—

(1) Extension.—Section 1842(b)(4) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(b)(4)) is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A)—

(i) by inserting "(i)" after "(4)(A)", and

(ii) by adding at the end the following new clauses:

"(ii)(I) In determining the prevailing charge levels under the third and fourth sentences of paragraph (3) for physicians' services furnished during the 8-month period beginning May 1, 1986, by a physician who is not a participating physician (as defined in subsection (h)(1)) at the time of furnishing the services, the Secretary shall not set any level higher than the same level as was set for the 12-month period beginning July 1, 1983.

"(II) In determining the prevailing charge levels under the fourth sentence of paragraph (3) for physicians' services furnished during the 8-month period beginning May 1, 1986, by a physician who is a participating physician (as defined in subsection (h)(1)) at the time of furnishing the services, the Secretary shall permit an additional one percentage point increase in the increase otherwise permitted under that sentence.

"(iii) In determining the prevailing charge levels under the third and fourth sentences of paragraph (3) for physicians' services furnished during a 12-month period beginning on or after January 1, 1987, by a physician who is not a participating physician (as defined in subsection (h)(1)) at the time of furnishing the services, the Secretary shall not set any level higher than the same level as was set for services furnished during the previous calendar year (without regard to clause (ii)(II)) for physicians who were participating physicians during that year.";

(B) in subparagraph (B)—

(i) by inserting "(i)" after "(B)", and

(ii) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(ii) In determining the reasonable charge under paragraph (3) for physicians' services furnished during the 8-month period beginning May 1, 1986, by a physician who is not a participating physician (as defined in subsection (h)(1)) at the time of furnishing the services—

"(I) if the physician was not a participating physician at any time during the 12-month period beginning on October 1, 1984, the customary charges shall be the same customary charges as were recognized under this section for the 12-month period beginning July 1, 1983, and

"(II) if the physician was a participating physician at any time during the 12-month period beginning on October 1, 1984, the physician's customary charges shall be determined based upon the physician's actual charges billed during the 12-month period ending on March 31, 1985.";

(C) in subparagraph (C)—

(i) by inserting "(i)" after "(C)",

(ii) by striking out "(A)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(A)(i)" each place it appears, and

(iii) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(ii) In determining the prevailing charge levels under the third and fourth sentences of paragraph (3) for physicians' services furnished during the periods beginning after December 31, 1986, by a physician who was not a participating physician on that date, the Secretary shall treat the level as set under subparagraph (A)(ii) as having fully provided for the economic changes which would have been taken into account but for the limitations contained in subparagraph (A)(ii)."; and

(D) in subparagraph (D)—

(i) by striking out "In determining" and all that follows through "subsection (h)(1))" and insert in lieu thereof "(i) In determining the customary charges for physicians' services furnished during the 8-month period beginning May 1, 1986, or the 12-month period beginning January 1, 1987, by a physician who was not a participating physician (as defined in subsection (h)(1)) on September 30, 1985", and

(ii) by adding at the end the following new clauses:

"(ii) In determining the customary charges for physicians' services furnished during the 12-month period beginning January 1, 1987, by a physician who is not a participating physician (as defined in subsection (h)(1)) on April 30, 1986, the Secretary shall not recognize increases in actual charges for services furnished during the 7-month period beginning on October 1, 1985, above the level of the physician's actual charges billed during the 3-month period ending on June 30, 1984.

BEST COPY AVAILABLE

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

"(iii) In determining the customary charges for physicians' services furnished during the 12-month period beginning January 1, 1987, or January 1, 1988, by a physician who is not a participating physician (as defined in subsection (h)(1)) on December 31, 1986, the Secretary shall not recognize increases in actual charges for services furnished during the 8-month period beginning on May 1, 1986, above the level of the physician's actual charges billed during the 3-month period ending on June 30, 1984.".

(2) Continued enforcement.—The first sentence of section 1842(j)(1) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(j)(1)) is amended to read as follows: "In the case of a physician who is not a participating physician for items and services furnished during a portion of the 30-month period beginning July 1, 1984, the Secretary shall monitor the physician's actual charges to individuals enrolled under this part for physicians' services during that portion of that period.".

(3) Period for entering participation agreements.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall provide, during the month of April 1986, that physicians and suppliers may enter into an agreement under section 1842(h)(1) of the Social Security Act for the 8-month period beginning May 1, 1986, or terminate such an agreement previously entered into for fiscal year 1986. In the case of a physician or supplier who entered into such an agreement for fiscal year 1986, the physician or supplier shall be deemed to have entered into such agreement for such 8-month period and for each succeeding year unless the physician or supplier terminates such agreement before the beginning of the respective period. At the beginning of such 8-month period, the Secretary shall publish a new directory (described in section 1842(h)(4) of that Act, as redesignated by subsection (c)(3)(D) of this section) of participating physicians and suppliers.

(4) Effective date.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to services furnished on or after May 1, 1986.

(c) Incentives for Participating Physician Program.—

(1) 15-month extension of transfer of funds for carriers.—Section 2306(e) of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-369; 98 Stat. 1073) is amended—

(A) by striking out "and 1985" and inserting in lieu thereof ", 1985, and 1986",

(B) by striking out "the amendments made by this section" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsections (b)(4), (h), and (j) of section 1842 of the Social Security Act",

(C) by striking out "and" before "not less",

(D) by inserting before the period at the end the following: ", and not less than $18,000,000 for fiscal year 1986", and

(E) by adding at the end the following new sentences: "A significant proportion of such funds shall be used for the expansion of the participating physician and supplier program and for the development of professional relations staffs dedicated to addressing the billing and other problems of physicians and suppliers participating in that program. Such funds for fiscal year 1986 are available for obligation until December 31, 1986.".

(2) Improvement of participating physician directories.—Section 1842(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(i)) is amended—

(A) in the first sentence of paragraph (2)—

(i) by striking out "a directory" and inserting in lieu thereof "directories (for appropriate local geographic areas)", and

(ii) by inserting "for that area" before "for that fiscal year";

(B) in the second sentence of paragraph (2), by striking out "The directory" and inserting in lieu thereof "Each directory";

(C) in paragraph (3)—

(i) by striking out "directory" the first place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "the directories", and

(ii) by striking out "directory" the second place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "the appropriate area directory or directories"; and

(D) in paragraph (4)—

(i) by striking out "directory" and inserting in lieu thereof "the directories", and

(ii) by adding at the end the following: "The Secretary shall provide that each appropriate area directory is sent to each participating physician located in that area.".

(3) Elimination of physician assignment rate list.—Section 1842(i) of such Act is further amended—

(A) by striking out "(i)(1)" and all that follows through the end of paragraph (1),

(B) by striking out "subsection (h)(1)" in paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (1)",

(C) by striking out "list and" each place it appears in paragraphs (3) and (4), and

(D) by redesignating paragraphs (2) through (4) as paragraphs (4) through (6) of subsection (h), respectively.

(4) Information on the participating physician and supplier program in explanations of medicare benefits for unassigned claims.—Section 1842(h) of such Act, as previously amended by this subsection, is further amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(7) The Secretary shall provide that each explanation of benefits provided under this part for services furnished in the United States, in conjunction with the payment of claims under section 1833(a)(1) (made other than on an assignment-related basis, described in paragraph (8)), shall include—

"(A) a reminder of the participating physician and supplier program established under this subsection (including the limitation on charges that may be imposed by such physicians and suppliers), and

"(B) the toll-free telephone number or numbers, maintained under paragraph (2), at which an individual enrolled under this part may obtain information on participating physicians and suppliers.

"(8) For purposes of this title, a claim is considered to be paid on an 'assignment-related basis' if the claim is paid on the basis of an assignment described in subsection (b)(3)(B)(ii), in accordance with subsection (b)(6)(B), or under the procedure described in section 1870(f)(1).".

(5) Effective date.—Section 1842(b)(7) of the Social Security Act, as added by paragraph (4) of this subsection, shall apply to explanations of benefits provided on or after such date (not later than October 1, 1986) as the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall specify.

(d) Changing Customary and Prevailing Charge Updates for Physician Services and Other Part B Services From October to January.—

(1) Payment updates.—Section 1842(b)(3) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(b)(3)) is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (F), by striking out "(ending on September 30)";

(B) in the third sentence, by striking out "March 31" and all that follows through "of each year)" and inserting in lieu thereof "June 30 last preceding the start of the calendar year"; and

(C) in the eighth sentence, by striking out "the twelve-month period beginning on October 1 in".

(2) Participation agreements.—Section 1842(h)(1) of such Act is amended—

(A) in the second sentence—

(i) by striking out "before October 1" and inserting in lieu thereof "before the beginning",

(ii) by striking out "on the basis of an assignment" and all that follows through "1870(f)(1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "on an assignment-related basis", and

(iii) by striking out "the 12-month period beginning on October 1 of"; and

(B) in the third sentence—

(i) by striking out "after October 1" and inserting in lieu thereof "after the beginning", and

(ii) by striking out "12-month period beginning on such October 1" and inserting in lieu thereof "year".

(3) Directories.—The first sentence of section 1842(i)(2) of such Act (which is redesignated as section 1842(h)(4) by subsection (c)(3)(D)), is further amended by striking out "fiscal" each place it appears.

(4) Effective date.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to items and services furnished on or after October 1, 1986.

(5) Transition.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, for purposes of making payment under part B of title XVIII of the Social Security Act, customary and prevailing charges (and the lowest charges determined under the sixth sentence of section 1842(b)(3) of such Act) for items and services furnished during the period beginning on October 1, 1986, and ending on December 31, 1986, shall be determined on the same basis as for items and services furnished on September 30, 1986.

SEC. 9303. PAYMENT FOR CLINICAL LABORATORY SERVICES.

(a) Changing Month of Annual Update From July to January.—

(1) In general.—Section 1833(h) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395l(h)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "June 30, 1987" and "July 1, 1987" and inserting in lieu thereof "December 31, 1987" and "January 1, 1988", respectively, each place either appears, and

(B) in paragraph (2), by inserting "(to become effective on January 1 of each year)" after "adjusted annually".

(2) Effective date.—The amendments made by paragraph (1) shall apply to clinical laboratory diagnostic tests performed on or after July 1, 1986.

(3) Transition.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall provide that the annual adjustment under section 1833(h) of the Social Security Act for 1986—

(A) shall take effect on January 1, 1987,

(B) shall apply for the 12-month period beginning on that date, and

(C) shall take into account the percentage increase or decrease in the Consumer Price Index for all urban consumers (United States city average) occurring over an 18-month period, rather than over a 12-month period.

(b) Providing Ceiling on Rates.—

(1) Ceiling on payments.—Paragraphs (1)(D)(i) and (2)(D)(i) of section 1833(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395l(a)) are each amended by inserting after "lesser of the amount determined under such fee schedule" the following: ", the limitation amount for that test determined under subsection (h)(4)(B),".

(2) Establishment of limitation amount.—Section 1833(h)(4) of such Act is amended by inserting "(A)" after "(4)" and by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(B) For purposes of subsections (a)(1)(D)(i) and (a)(2)(D)(i), the limitation amount for a clinical diagnostic laboratory test performed—

"(i) on or after July 1, 1986, and before January 1, 1988, is equal to 115 percent of the median of all the fee schedules established for that test for that laboratory setting under paragraph (1), or

"(ii) after December 31, 1987, and so long as a fee schedule for the test has not been established on a nationwide basis, is equal to 110 percent of the median of all the fee schedules established for that test for that laboratory setting under paragraph (1).".

(3) Method of payment for non-independent laboratories.—Section 1833(h)(5)(C) of such Act is amended by striking out "which is independent of a physician's office or" and inserting in lieu thereof "other than".

(4) Extending medicare proficiency examination authority.—Section 1123(a) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1320a-2(a)) is amended by striking out "September 30, 1983" and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1987".

(5) Effective dates.—(A) The amendments made by paragraphs (1) and (2) shall apply to clinical diagnostic laboratory tests performed on or after July 1, 1986.

(B) The amendment made by paragraph (3) shall apply to clinical diagnostic laboratory tests performed on or after January 1, 1987.

(C) The amendment made by paragraph (4) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) Report on Minimum Standards for Clinical Laboratories That Are Part of, or Associated With, Physicians' Offices.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall report to Congress, not later than 12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, on the standards that might be established under the medicare program for clinical laboratories which are part of or associated with a physician's office to assure the health and safety of individuals with respect to whom the laboratories perform clinical diagnostic laboratory tests for which payment may be made under the program. In recommending standards, the Secretary shall consider the differences in the scope, type, and complexity of tests performed by such laboratories and such other factors as may indicate a need for different standards for laboratories with different characteristics.

SEC. 9304. DETERMINATIONS OF INHERENT REASONABLENESS OF CHARGES AND CUSTOMARY CHARGES FOR CERTAIN FORMER HOSPITAL-COMPENSATED PHYSICIANS.

(a) Regulations Relating to Inherent Reasonableness of Charges.—Section 1842(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(8) The Secretary by regulation shall—

"(A) describe the factors to be used in determining the cases (of particular items or services) in which the application of this subsection results in the determination of a reasonable charge that, by reason of its grossly excessive or grossly deficient amount, is not inherently reasonable, and

"(B) provide in those cases for the factors that will be considered in establishing a reasonable charge that is realistic and equitable.".

(b) Computation of Customary Charges for Certain Former Hospital-Compensated Physicians.—(1) In applying section 1842(b) of the Social Security Act to payment for physicians' services performed during the 8-month period beginning May 1, 1986, in the case of a physician who at anytime during the period beginning on October 31, 1982, and ending on January 31, 1985, was a hospital-compensated physician (as defined in paragraph (3)) but who, as of February 1, 1985, was no longer a hospital-compensated physician, the physician's customary charges shall—

(A) be based upon the physician's actual charges billed during the 12-month period ending on March 31, 1985, and

(B) in the case of a physician who was not a participating physician (as defined in section 1842(h)(1) of the Social Security Act) on September 30, 1985, and who is not such a physician on May 1, 1986, be deflated (to take into account the legislative freeze on actual charges for nonparticipating physicians' services) by multiplying the physician's customary charges by .85.

(2) In applying section 1842(b) of the Social Security Act to payment for physicians' services performed during the 8-month period beginning May 1, 1986, in the case of a physician who during the period beginning on February 1, 1985, and ending on December 31, 1986, changes from being a hospital-compensated physician to not being a hospital-compensated physician, the physician's customary charges shall be determined in the same manner as if the physician were considered to be a new physician.

(3) In this subsection, the term "hospital-compensated physician" means, with respect to services furnished to patients of a hospital, a physician who is compensated by the hospital for the furnishing of physicians' services for which payment may be made under this part.

SEC. 9305. PHYSICIAN PAYMENT REVIEW COMMISSION AND DEVELOPMENT OF RELATIVE VALUE SCALE.

(a) Establishment of Commission.—Part B of title XVIII of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"PHYSICIAN PAYMENT REVIEW COMMISSION

"Sec. 1845. (a)(1) The Director of the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Director' and the 'Office', respectively) shall provide for the appointment of a Physician Payment Review Commission (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Commission'), to be composed of individuals with expertise in the provision and financing of physicians' services appointed by the Director (without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service).

"(2) The Commission shall consist of 11 individuals. Members of the Commission shall first be appointed no later than May 1, 1986, for a term of three years, except that the Director may provide initially for such shorter terms as will insure that (on a continuing basis) the terms of no more than four members expire in any one year.

"(3) The membership of the Commission shall include physicians, other health professionals, individuals skilled in the conduct and interpretation of biomedical, health services, and health economics research, and representatives of consumers and the elderly. The Director shall seek nominations from a wide range of groups, including—

"(A) national organizations representing physicians, including medical specialty organizations,

"(B) organizations representing the elderly and consumers,

"(C) national organizations representing medical schools,

"(D) national organizations representing hospitals, including teaching hospitals, and

"(E) national organizations representing health benefits programs.

"(b)(1) The Commission shall make recommendations to the Congress, not later than March 1 of each year (beginning with 1987), regarding adjustments to the reasonable charge levels for physicians' services recognized under section 1842(b) and changes in the methodology for determining the rates of payment, and for making payment, for physicians' services under this title and other items and services under this part.

"(2) In making its recommendations, the Commission shall—

"(A) consider, and make recommendations on the feasibility and desirability of reducing, the differences in payment amounts for physicians' services under this part which are based on differences in geographic location or specialty;

"(B) review the input costs (including time, professional skills, and risks) associated with the provision of different physicians' services;

"(C) identify those charges recognized as reasonable under section 1842(b) which are significantly out-of-line, based on the considerations of subparagraphs (A) and (B);

"(D) assess the likely impact of different adjustments in payment rates, particularly their impact on physician participation in the participation program established under section 1842(h) and on beneficiary access to necessary physicians' services;

"(E) make recommendations on ways to increase physician participation in that participation program and the acceptance of payment under this part on an assignment-related basis;

"(F) make recommendations respecting the advisability and feasibility of making changes in the payment system for physicians' services under this part based on (i) the Secretary's study under section 603(b)(2) of the Social Security Amendments of 1983 (relating to payments for physicians' services furnished to hospital inpatients on the basis of diagnosis-related groups) and (ii) the Office's report under section 2309 of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (relating to physician reimbursement under this part);

"(G) identify those procedures, involving the use of assistants at surgery, for which payment for those assistants should not be made under this title without prior approval; and

"(H) identify those procedures for which an opinion of a second physician should be required before payment is made under this title.

"(3) The Commission also shall advise and make recommendations to the Secretary respecting the development of the relative value scale under subsection (e).

"(c)(1) The following provisions of section 1886(e)(6) shall apply to the Commission in the same manner as they apply to the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission:

"(A) Subparagraph (C) (relating to staffing and administration generally).

"(B) Subparagraph (D) (relating to compensation of members).

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

"(C) Subparagraph (F) (relating to access to information).

"(D) Subparagraph (G) (relating to reports and use of funds).

"(E) Subparagraph (H) (relating to periodic GAO audits).

"(F) Subparagraph (J) (relating to requests for appropriations).

"(2) In order to carry out its functions, the Commission shall collect and assess information on medical and surgical procedures and services, including information on regional variations of medical practice. In collecting and assessing information, the Commission shall—

"(A) utilize existing information, both published and unpublished, where possible, collected and assessed either by its own staff or under other arrangements made in accordance with this section,

"(B) carry out, or award grants or contracts for, original research and experimentation, where existing information is inadequate for the development of useful and valid guidelines by the Commission, and

"(C) adopt procedures allowing any interested party to submit information with respect to physicians' services (including new practices, such as the use of new technologies and treatment modalities), which information the Commission shall consider in making reports and recommendations to the Secretary and Congress.

"(d) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section. Such sums shall be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund.".

(b) Development of Relative Value Scale for Physicians' Services.—Section 1845 of the Social Security Act, as added by subsection (a), is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) The Secretary shall develop a relative value scale that establishes a numerical relationship among the various physicians' services for which payment may be made under this part or under State plans approved under title XIX.

"(2) In developing the scale, the Secretary shall consider among other items—

"(A) the report of the Office of Technology Assessment under section 2309 of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984,

"(B) the recommendations of the Physician Payment Review Commission under subsection (b)(3), and

"(C) factors with respect to the input costs for furnishing particular physicians' services, such as—

"(i) the differences in costs of furnishing services in different settings,

"(ii) the differences in skill levels and training required to perform the services, and

"(iii) the time required, and risk involved, in furnishing different services.

"(3) The Secretary shall complete the development of the relative value scale under this section, and report to Congress on the development, not later than July 1, 1987. The report shall include recommendations for the application of the scale to payment for physicians' services furnished under this part on or after January 1, 1988.".

SEC. 9306. LIMITATION ON MEDICARE PAYMENT FOR POST-CATARACT SURGERY PATIENTS.

(a) Determination of Separate Payment Amounts for Prosthetic Lenses and Professional Services.—Section 1842(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u(b)) is amended by adding after paragraph (8), added by section 9304(a) of this title, the following new paragraph:

"(9) In providing payment for cataract eyeglasses and cataract contact lenses, and professional services relating to them, under this part, each carrier shall—

"(A) provide for separate determinations of the payment amount for the eyeglasses and lenses and of the payment amount for the professional services of a physician (as defined in section 1861(r)), and

"(B) not recognize as reasonable for such eyeglasses and lenses more than such amount as the Secretary establishes in guidelines relating to the inherent reasonableness of charges for such eyeglasses and lenses.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to items and services furnished on or after April 1, 1986.

SEC. 9307. PAYMENT FOR ASSISTANTS AT SURGERY FOR CERTAIN CATARACT OPERATIONS AND OTHER OPERATIONS.

(a) Limitation on Payment.—Section 1862(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395y(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (13),

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (14) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or", and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(15) which are for services of an assistant at surgery in a cataract operation unless, before the surgery is performed, the appropriate utilization and quality control peer review organization (under part B of title XI) or a carrier under section 1842 has approved of the use of such an assistant in the surgical procedure based on the existence of a complicating medical condition.".

(b) Additional PRO Functions.—Section 1154(a)(8) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1320c-3(a)(8)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: "or as may be required to carry out section 1862(a)(15)".

(c) Prohibition for Submitting Bill for Which Payment May Not Be Made.—Section 1842 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395u) is amended—

(1) in subsection (j)(2), by inserting "or subsection (k)" after "paragraph (1)", and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k)(1) If a physician knowingly and willfully bills an individual enrolled under this part for charges for services as an assistant at surgery for which payment may not be made by reason of section 1862(a)(15), the Secretary may apply sanctions against such physician in accordance with subsection (j)(2).

"(2) If a physician knowingly and willfully bills an individual enrolled under this part for charges that includes a charge for an assistant at surgery for which payment may not be made by reason of section 1862(a)(15), the Secretary may apply sanctions against such physician in accordance with subsection (j)(2).".

(d) Extension of Prohibition to Other Procedures.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, after consultation with the Physician Payment Review Commission, shall develop recommendations and guidelines respecting other surgical procedures for which an assistant at surgery is generally not medically necessary and the circumstances under which the use of an assistant at surgery is generally appropriate but should be subject to prior approval of an appropriate entity. The Secretary shall report to Congress, not later than January 1, 1987, on these recommendations and guidelines.

(e) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to services performed on or after April 1, 1986.

Subpart B—Benefits and Other Provisions

SEC. 9313. PART B PREMIUM.

Section 1839 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395r) is amended—

(1) in subsection (e), by striking out "1988" and inserting in lieu thereof "1989" each place it appears;

(2) in subsection (f)(1), by striking out "or 1986" and inserting in lieu thereof ", 1986, or 1987"; and

(3) in subsection (f)(2), by striking out "or 1987" and inserting in lieu thereof ", 1987, or 1988".

SEC. 9314. DEMONSTRATION OF PREVENTIVE HEALTH SERVICES UNDER MEDICARE.

(a) Demonstration Program.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall establish a 4-year demonstration program designed to reduce disability and dependency through the provision of preventive health services to individuals entitled to benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act (hereinafter in this section referred to as "medicare beneficiaries").

(b) Preventive Health Services Under Demonstration Program.—The preventive health services to be made available under the demonstration program shall include—

(1) health screenings,

(2) health risk appraisals,

(3) immunizations, and

(4) counseling on and instruction in—

(A) diet and nutrition,

(B) reduction of stress,

(C) exercise and exercise programs,

(D) sleep regulation,

(E) injury prevention,

(F) prevention of alcohol and drug abuse,

(G) prevention of mental health disorders,

(H) self-care, including use of medication, and

(I) reduction or cessation of smoking.

(c) Conduct of Program.—The demonstration program shall—

(1) be conducted under the direction of accredited public or private nonprofit schools of public health or preventive medicine departments accredited by the Council on Education for Public Health;

(2) be conducted in no fewer than five sites, which sites shall be chosen so as to be geographically diverse and shall be readily accessible to a significant number of medicare beneficiaries;

(3) involve community outreach efforts at each site to enroll the maximum number of medicare beneficiaries in the program; and

(4) be designed—

(A) to test alternative methods of payment for preventive health services, including payment on a prepayment basis as well as payment on a fee-for-service basis,

(B) to permit a variety of appropriate health care providers to furnish preventive health services, including physicians, health educators, nurses, allied health personnel, dieticians, and clinical psychologists, and

(C) to facilitate evaluation under subsection (d).

(d) Evaluation.—The Secretary shall evaluate the demonstration project in order to determine—

(1) the short-term and long-term costs and benefits of providing preventive health services for medicare beneficiaries, including any reduction in inpatient services resulting from providing the services, and

(2) what practical mechanisms exist to finance preventive health services under title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

(e) Reports to Congress.—(1) Not later than three years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit a preliminary report to the Committees on Ways and Means and Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and to the Committee on Finance of the Senate on the progress made in the demonstration program, including a description of the sites at which the program is being conducted and the preventive health services being provided at the different sites.

(2) Not later than five years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit a final report to those Committees on the demonstration program and shall include in the report—

(A) the evaluation described in subsection (d), and

(B) recommendations for appropriate legislative changes to incorporate payment for cost-effective preventive health services into the medicare program.

(f) Funding.—Expenditures made for the demonstration program shall be made from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund (established by section 1841 of the Social Security Act). Grants and payments under contracts may be made either in advance or by way of reimbursement, as may be determined by the Secretary, and shall be made in such installments and on such conditions as the Secretary finds necessary to carry out the purpose of this section. Funding for the demonstration program shall not exceed $4,000,000 over the duration of the program.

(g) Waiver of Medicare Requirements.—The Secretary shall waive compliance with such requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act to the extent and for the period the Secretary finds necessary for the conduct of the demonstration program.

SEC. 9315. EXTENSION OF GAO REPORTING DATE.

(a) Extension.—Section 2326(e)(2) of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 1088) is amended by striking out "12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act" and inserting in lieu thereof "May 1, 1986".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this section shall apply as though it were included in the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 as originally enacted.

PART 4—PEER REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS

SEC. 9401. 100 PERCENT PEER REVIEW OF CERTAIN SURGICAL PROCEDURES.

(a) Requirement.—Section 1154(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395c-3(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) The organization shall perform the review, referral, and other functions required under section 1164.".

(b) Additional Peer Review Functions.—Part B of title XI of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"100 PERCENT PEER REVIEW FOR CERTAIN SURGICAL PROCEDURES

"Sec. 1164. (a) 100 Percent Review Function.—

"(1) In general.—Each utilization and quality control peer review organization shall perform the review described in section 1154(a)(1) for 100 percent of the surgical procedures specified pursuant to subsection (b).

"(2) Timing of review.—

"(A) In general.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the review required under paragraph (1) shall be performed—

"(i) before the performance of the procedure, in the case of an outpatient procedure, or

"(ii) before admission to the hospital for the provision of services in connection with the procedure, in the case of a procedure performed on an inpatient basis.

"(B) Exception.—The review with respect to a procedure need not be performed by the time specified in subparagraph (A) in cases of a medical emergency and under such other circumstances as the Secretary may specify.

"(b) Specification of Surgical Procedures and Qualified Reviewers.—

"(1) In contract.—The contract with each organization under this part shall specify at least 10 surgical procedures to be covered under this section.

"(2) Selection guidelines.—

"(A) In general.—The specification of procedures shall be consistent with selection guidelines established by the Secretary under paragraph (3). The procedures specified shall be included among the surgical procedures which the Secretary has identified as reasonably being able to meet such guidelines.

"(B) Exception.—The Secretary may permit an organization to include among the procedures specified under paragraph (1) procedures not identified by the Secretary under paragraph (2)(A) if to do so would be cost effective and consistent with the criteria described in paragraph (3).

"(3) Criteria.—The Secretary shall establish such guidelines and identify such surgical procedures consistent with the following criteria:

"(A) The procedure is one which generally can be postponed without undue risk to the patient.

"(B) The procedure is a high volume procedure among patients who are covered under the programs established under title XVIII or is a high cost procedure.

"(C) The procedure has a comparatively high rate of nonconfirmation upon examination by another qualified physician, there is substantial geographic variation in the rates of performance of the procedure, or there are other reasons why pre-procedure review for 100 percent of the procedures would be cost effective.

"(4) Qualifications for Physicians Providing Second Opinions.—

"(A) In general.—The Secretary shall specify, for each procedure identified under paragraphs (2) and (3), the type or types of board certified or board eligible specialists who may conduct a second opinion, required under subsection (c), based upon the nature of the procedure.

"(B) Freedom of choice of patient to choose physician.—Subject to paragraphs (C) and (D), the patient may choose any physician of the proper specialty under subparagraph (A) to provide the second opinion.

"(C) Physicians prohibited from providing second opinions.—For purposes of this section, a second opinion may not be provided by a physician who is affiliated with, or has a common financial interest with, the physician who rendered the first opinion that the procedure was necessary.

"(D) Restricted list.—In accordance with guidelines of the Secretary, an organization may disqualify a physician from providing a second opinion under this section because of the gross unreliability of the second opinions provided.

"(c) Requiring a Second Opinion in Certain Cases.—

"(1) Determinations by organization.—In the case of a review performed pursuant to subsection (a), the organization shall determine, based on such review, that the surgical procedure—

"(A) is reasonable and medically necessary,

"(B) is not reasonable and medically necessary, or

"(C) may be considered reasonable and necessary, but, because of questions as to the medical appropriateness of performing the procedure, it is appropriate to require the patient to seek a second opinion as to the necessity and appropriateness of performing the procedure before the performance of the procedure.

The Secretary shall develop appropriate measures to ensure that second opinions are only required in situations where a second opinion is needed to resolve outstanding uncertainties as to the medical necessity of the procedure. The organization shall notify, in accordance with section 1154(a)(3), the physician, patient, and hospital or other entity furnishing the service, in the event of a determination under subparagraph (B) or (C) of this paragraph.

"(2) Prohibition of payment if required second opinion not provided.—No payment may be made under part A or part B of title XVIII with respect to items or services furnished in connection with a surgical procedure for which there is a determination described in paragraph (1)(C), unless the individual undergoing the procedure obtains the second opinion required under that paragraph. The second opinion need not necessarily agree with the first opinion in order for payment to be made.

"(3) Exceptions for elective second opinions.—Paragraphs (1)(C) and (2) shall not apply to a surgical procedure if—

"(A) a delay in providing the procedure would result in a risk to the patient;

"(B) no physician is available (within such reasonable limits as the Secretary shall specify) who is (i) qualified to provide the second opinion, and (ii) a participating physician or a physician who has agreed to accept assignment for the second opinion; or

"(C) the procedure is to be performed on a patient who is a member of a health maintenance organization or competitive medical plan having a risk-sharing contract with the Secretary under section 1876.

"(d) Referral Mechanism for Second Opinions.—

"(1) Acting as referral center.—Each organization shall serve as a referral center for second opinions required under this section.

"(2) Referral of patient.—The organization shall maintain a list of physicians qualified to provide a second opinion and shall advise the patient as to which physicians are participating physicians (within the meaning of section 1842(h)) and which physicians have agreed to accept assignment to perform second opinions. SEC. 9503. THIRD-PARTY LIABILITY.

(a) Amendments to State Plan Requirements.—(1) Section 1902(a)(25) of the Social

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 986 UMI

Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(25)) is amended to read as follows:

"(25) provide—

"(A) that the State or local agency administering such plan will take all reasonable measures to ascertain the legal liability of third parties (including health insurers) to pay for care and services available under the plan, including—

"(i) the collection of sufficient information (as specified by the Secretary in regulations) to enable the State to pursue claims against such third parties, with such information being collected at the time of any determination or redetermination of eligibility for medical assistance, and

"(ii) the submission to the Secretary of a plan (subject to approval by the Secretary) for pursuing claims against such third parties, which plan shall—

"(I) be integrated with, and be monitored as a part of the Secretary's review of, the State's mechanized claims processing and information retrieval system under section 1903(r), and

"(II) be subject to the provisions of section 1903(r)(4) relating to reductions in Federal payments for failure to meet conditions of approval, but shall not be subject to any other financial penalty as a result of any other monitoring, quality control, or auditing requirements;

"(B) that in any case where such a legal liability is found to exist after medical assistance has been made available on behalf of the individual and where the amount of reimbursement the State can reasonably expect to recover exceeds the costs of such recovery, the State or local agency will seek reimbursement for such assistance to the extent of such legal liability;

"(C) that in the case of an individual who is entitled to medical assistance under the State plan with respect to a service for which a third party is liable for payment, the person furnishing the service may not seek to collect from the individual (or any financially responsible relative or representative of that individual) payment of an amount for that service (i) if the total of the amount of the liabilities of third parties for that service is at least equal to the amount payable for that service under the plan (disregarding section 1916), or (ii) in an amount which exceeds the lesser of (I) the amount which may be collected under section 1916, or (II) the amount by which the amount payable for that service under the plan (disregarding section 1916) exceeds the total of the amount of the liabilities of third parties for that service;

"(D) that a person who furnishes services and is participating under the plan may not refuse to furnish services to an individual (who is entitled to have payment made under the plan for the services the person furnishes) because of a third party's potential liability for payment for the service;

"(E) that in the case of prenatal or preventive pediatric care (including early and periodic screening and diagnosis services under section 1905(a)(4)(B)) covered under the State plan, the State shall—

"(i) make payment for such service in accordance with the usual payment schedule under such plan for such services without regard to the liability of a third party for payment for such services; and

"(ii) seek reimbursement from such third party in accordance with subparagraph (B); and

"(F) that in the case of any services covered under such plan which are provided to an individual on whose behalf child support enforcement is being carried out by the State agency under part D of title IV of this Act, the State shall—

"(i) make payment for such service in accordance with the usual payment schedule under such plan for such services without regard to any third-party liability for payment for such services, if such third-party liability is derived (through insurance or otherwise) from the parent whose obligation to pay support is being enforced by such agency, if payment has not been made by such third party within 30 days after such services are furnished; and

"(ii) seek reimbursement from such third party in accordance with subparagraph (B);".

(2) Section 1902 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a) is amended by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsection:

"(g) In addition to any other sanction available to a State, a State may provide for a reduction of any payment amount otherwise due with respect to a person who furnishes services under the plan in an amount equal to up to three times the amount of any payment sought to be collected by that person in violation of subsection (a)(25)(C).".

(b) PERFORMANCE STANDARDS AND REVIEW FOR MECHANIZED CLAIMS PROCESSING AND INFORMATION RETRIEVAL SYSTEMS.—(1) Section 1903(r)(6)(J) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(r)(6)(J)) is amended to read as follows:

"(J) develop and disseminate performance standards for assessing the State's third party collection efforts in accordance with section 1902(a)(25)(A)(ii).".

(2) Section 1903(r)(4)(A) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(r)(4)(A)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "once each fiscal year" and inserting in lieu thereof "once every three years"; and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following: "Reviews may, at the Secretary's discretion, constitute reviews of the entire system or of only those standards, systems requirements, and other conditions which have demonstrated weakness in previous reviews.".

(c) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall promulgate final regulations necessary to carry out sections 1902(a)(25) and 1903(r)(6)(J) of the Social Security Act within 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) ERISA AMENDMENT.—(1) Section 514(b) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1144) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) Subsection (a) of this section shall not apply to any State law mandating that an employee benefit plan not include any provision which has the effect of limiting or excluding coverage or payment for any health care for an individual who would otherwise be covered or entitled to benefits or services under the terms of the employee benefit plan, because that individual is provided, or is eligible for, benefits or services pursuant to a plan under title XIX of the Social Security Act, to the extent such law is necessary for the State to be eligible to receive reimbursement under title XIX of that Act.".

(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the amendment made by paragraph (1) shall become effective on October 1, 1986.

(B) In the case of a plan maintained pursuant to one or more collective bargaining agreements between employee representatives and one or more employers ratified on or before the date of the enactment of this Act, the amendment made by paragraph (1) shall become effective on the later of—

(i) October 1, 1986; or

(ii) the earlier of—

(I) the date on which the last of the collective bargaining agreements under which the plan is maintained, which were in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act, terminates (determined without regard to any extension thereof agreed to after the date of the enactment of this Act); or

(II) three years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(e) CONDITION OF ELIGIBILITY.—Section 1912(a)(1) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396k(a)(1)) is amended by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (A), and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) to cooperate with the State in identifying, and providing information to assist the State in pursuing, any third party who may be liable to pay for care and services available under the plan, unless such individual has good cause for refusing to cooperate as determined by the State agency in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary, which standards shall take into consideration the best interests of the individuals involved; and".

(f) DISREGARD FROM ERRONEOUS PAYMENTS.—Section 1903(u)(1)(D) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(u)(1)(D)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iv) In determining the amount of erroneous excess payments, there shall not be included any error resulting from a failure of an individual to cooperate or give correct information with respect to third-party liability as required under section 1912(a)(1)(C) or 402(a)(26)(C).".

(g) EFFECTIVE DATES.—(1) Except as otherwise provided, the amendments made by this section shall apply to calendar quarters beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) In the case of a State plan for medical assistance under title XIX of the Social Security Act which the Secretary of Health and Human Services determines requires State legislation (other than legislation appropriating funds) in order for the plan to meet the additional requirements imposed by the amendments made by this section, the State plan shall not be regarded as failing to comply with the requirements of such title solely on the basis of its failure to meet these additional requirements before the first day of the first calendar quarter beginning after the close of the first regular session of the State legislature that begins after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) No penalty may be applied against any State for a violation of section 1902(a)(25) of the Social Security Act occurring prior to the effective date of the amendments made by this section.

(4) The amendment made by subsection (c) shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9505. OPTIONAL HOSPICE BENEFITS.

(a) COVERAGE OF HOSPICE CARE AS AN OPTIONAL MEDICAID BENEFIT.—Section 1905 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396d) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (17);

(B) by redesignating paragraph (18) as paragraph (19); and

(C) by inserting after paragraph (17) the following new paragraph:

"(18) hospice care (as defined in subsection (o)); and"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(o)(1) The term 'hospice care' means the care described in section 1861(dd)(1) furnished by a hospice program (as defined in section 1861(dd)(2)) to a terminally ill individual who has voluntarily elected (in accordance with paragraph (2)) to have payment made for hospice care instead of having payment made for certain benefits described in section 1812(d)(2)(A) and intermediate care facility services under the plan. For purposes of such election, hospice care may be provided to an individual while such individual is a resident of a skilled nursing facility or intermediate care facility, but the only payment made under the State plan shall be for the hospice care.

"(2) An individual's voluntary election under this subsection—

"(A) shall be made in accordance with procedures that are established by the State and that are consistent with the procedures established under section 1812(d)(2);

"(B) shall be for such a period or periods (which need not be the same periods described in section 1812(d)(1)) as the State may establish; and

"(C) may be revoked at any time without a showing of cause and may be modified so as to change the hospice program with respect to which a previous election was made.".

(b) ELIGIBILITY.—

(1) LIMITATION TO TERMINALLY ILL INDIVIDUALS.—Section 1902(a)(10) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(10)), as amended by section 9501 of this Act, is further amended, in the matter following subparagraph (D), by striking out "and" before "(V)" and by inserting before the semicolon at the end thereof the following: ", and (VI) with respect to the making available of medical assistance for hospice care to terminally ill individuals who have made a voluntary election described in section 1905(o) to receive hospice care instead of medical assistance for certain other services, such assistance may not be made available in an amount, duration, or scope less than that provided under title XVIII, and the making available of such assistance shall not, by reason of this paragraph (10), require the making available of medical assistance for hospice care to other individuals or the making available of medical assistance for services waived by such terminally ill individuals".

(2) HIGHER INCOME STANDARD PERMITTED.—Section 1902(a)(10)(A)(ii) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(10)(A)(ii)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "or" at the end of subclause (V);

(B) by striking out the semicolon at the end of subclause (VI) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new subclause:

"(VII) who would be eligible under the State plan under this title if they were in a medical institution, who are terminally ill, and who will receive hospice care pursuant to a voluntary election described in section 1905(o);".

(c) PAYMENT FOR HOSPICE CARE.—

(1) USE OF MEDICARE RATES.—Section 1902(a)(13) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(13)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(B) by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (D); and

(C) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) for payment for hospice care in the same amounts, and using the same methodology, as used under part A of title XVIII; except that a separate rate may be paid for hospice care which is furnished to an individual who is a resident of a skilled nursing facility or intermediate care facility, and who would be eligible under the plan for skilled nursing facility services or intermediate care facility services if he had not elected to receive hospice care, to take into account the room and board furnished by such facility; and".

(2) LIMITATION ON COPAYMENTS.—Subsections (a)(2) and (b)(2) of section 1916 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396o) are each amended—

(A) by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (C);

(B) by striking out "; and" at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(E) services furnished to an individual who is receiving hospice care (as defined in section 1905(o)); and".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 1902(j) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(j)) is amended by striking out "(18)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(19)".

(2) Section 1902(a)(10)(C)(iv) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(10)(C)(iv)) is amended by striking out "through (17)" and inserting in lieu thereof "through (18)".

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to medical assistance provided for hospice care furnished on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9506. TREATMENT OF POTENTIAL PAYMENTS FROM MEDICAID QUALIFYING TRUSTS.

(a) AMOUNTS TREATED AS BEING AVAILABLE FROM GRANTOR TRUSTS.—Section 1902 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(k)(1) In the case of a medicaid qualifying trust (described in paragraph (2)), the amounts from the trust deemed available to a grantor, for purposes of subsection (a)(17), is the maximum amount of payments that may be permitted under the terms of the trust to be distributed to the grantor, assuming the full exercise of discretion by the trustee or trustees for the distribution of the maximum amount to the grantor. For purposes of the previous sentence, the term 'grantor' means the individual referred to in paragraph (2).

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, a 'medicaid qualifying trust' is a trust, or similar legal device, established (other than by will) by an individual (or an individual's spouse) under which the individual may be the beneficiary of all or part of the payments from the trust and the distribution of such payments is determined by one or more trustees who are permitted to exercise any discretion with respect to the distribution to the individual.

"(3) This subsection shall apply without regard to—

"(A) whether or not the medicaid qualifying trust is irrevocable or is established for purposes other than to enable a grantor to qualify for medical assistance under this title; or

"(B) whether or not the discretion described in paragraph (2) is actually exercised.

"(4) The State may waive the application of this subsection with respect to an individual where the State determines that such application would work an undue hardship.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to medical assistance furnished on or after the first day of the second month beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9507. WRITTEN STANDARDS FOR PROVISION OF ORGAN TRANSPLANTS.

(a) DENIAL OF FEDERAL PAYMENTS FOR ORGAN TRANSPLANTS UNLESS PROVIDED UNDER WRITTEN STANDARDS.—Section 1903(i) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(i)) is amended by inserting before paragraph (2) the following new paragraph:

"(1) for organ transplant procedures unless the State plan provides for written standards respecting the coverage of such procedures and unless such standards provide that—

"(A) similarly situated individuals are treated alike; and

"(B) any restriction, on the facilities or practitioners which may provide such procedures, is consistent with the accessibility of high quality care to individuals eligible for the procedures under the State plan.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to medical assistance furnished on or after January 1, 1987.

SEC. 9508. OPTIONAL TARGETED CASE MANAGEMENT SERVICES.

(a) EXEMPTION FROM CERTAIN REQUIREMENTS.—(1) Section 1915 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396n) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) A State may provide, as medical assistance, case management services under the plan without regard to the requirements of section 1902(a)(1) and section 1902(a)(10)(B). The provision of case management services under this subsection shall not restrict the choice of the individual to receive medical assistance in violation of section 1902(a)(23).

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'case management services' means services which will assist individuals eligible under the plan in gaining access to needed medical, social, educational, and other services.".

(2) Section 1915(b) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396n(b)) is amended by adding at the end thereof (after and below paragraph (4)) the following: "No waiver under this subsection may restrict the choice of the individual in receiving services under section 1905(a)(4)(C).".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to services furnished on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9509. REVALUATION OF ASSETS.

(a) REVALUATION OF ASSETS.—Section 1902(a)(13) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(13)), as amended by section 9505 of this Act, is further amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B), by striking out "hospitals, skilled nursing facilities, and intermediate care facilities" and inserting in lieu thereof "hospitals";

(2) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (C);

(3) by redesignating subparagraphs (C) and (D) as subparagraphs (D) and (E); and

(4) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) that the State shall provide assurances satisfactory to the Secretary that the valuation of capital assets, for purposes of determining payment rates for skilled nursing facilities and intermediate care facilities, will not be increased (as measured from the date of acquisition by the seller to the date of the change of ownership), solely as a result of a change of ownership, by more than the lesser of—

"(i) one-half of the percentage increase (as measured over the same period of time, or, if necessary, as extrapolated retrospectively by the Secretary) in the Dodge Construction Systems Costs for Nursing Homes, applied in the aggregate with respect to those facilities which have undergone a change of ownership during the fiscal year, or

"(ii) one-half of the percentage increase (as measured over the same period of time) in the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers (United States city average);".

(b) Effective Dates.—(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), the amendments made by this section shall apply to medical assistance furnished on or after October 1, 1985, but only with respect to changes of ownership occurring on or after such date.

(2) The amendments made by this section shall not apply with respect to a change of ownership pursuant to an enforceable agreement entered into prior to October 1, 1985.

(3) In the case of a State plan for medical assistance under title XIX of the Social Security Act which the Secretary of Health and Human Services determines requires State legislation (other than legislation appropriating funds) in order for the plan to meet the requirements imposed by the amendments made by this section, the State plan shall not be regarded as failing to comply with the requirements of such title solely on the basis of its failure to meet the requirements imposed by the amendments made by this section before the first day of the first calendar quarter beginning after the close of the first regular session of the State legislature that begins after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) GAO Study.—The Comptroller General shall conduct a study of the effects of the amendments made by this section, and shall report the results of such study to the Congress two years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9510. BEGINNING DATE OF OPTIONAL COVERAGE FOR INDIVIDUALS IN MEDICAL INSTITUTIONS.

(a) Coverage.—Section 1902(a)(10)(A)(ii)(V) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)(10)(A)(ii)(V)) is amended by inserting "for a period of not less than 30 consecutive days (with eligibility by reason of this subclause beginning on the first day of such period)" after "are in a medical institution".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this section shall apply with respect to payment for services furnished on or after October 1, 1985.

SEC. 9511. OPTIONAL COVERAGE OF CHILDREN.

(a) State Option.—Section 1905(n)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396d(h)(2)) is amended by inserting "(or such earlier date as the State may designate)" after "September 30, 1983".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to services furnished on or after April 1, 1986.

SEC. 9512. OVERPAYMENT RECOVERY RULES.

(a) Overpayment Recovery.—Section 1903(d)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(d)(2)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(A)" after "(2)";

(2) by designating the second sentence as subparagraph (B), properly indented and aligned below subparagraph (A); and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(C) For purposes of this subsection, when an overpayment is discovered, which was made by a State to a person or other entity, the State shall have a period of 60 days in which to recover or attempt to recover such overpayment before adjustment is made in the Federal payment to such State on account of such overpayment. Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (D), the adjustment in the Federal payment shall be made at the end of the 60 days, whether or not recovery was made.

"(D) In any case where the State is unable to recover a debt which represents an overpayment (or any portion thereof) made to a person or other entity on account of such debt having been discharged in bankruptcy or otherwise being uncollectable, no adjustment shall be made in the Federal payment to such State on account of such overpayment (or portion thereof).".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to overpayments identified for quarters beginning on or after October 1, 1985.

SEC. 9514. REGULATIONS FOR INTERMEDIATE CARE FACILITIES FOR THE MENTALLY RETARDED.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall promulgate proposed regulations revising standards for intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded under title XIX of the Social Security Act within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 9515. LIFE SAFETY CODE RECOGNITION.

For purposes of section 1905(c) of the Social Security Act, an intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded (as defined in section 1905(d) of such Act) which meets the requirements of the relevant sections of the 1985 edition of the Life Safety Code of the National Fire Protection Association shall be deemed to meet the fire safety requirements for intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded until such time as the Secretary specifies a later edition of the Life Safety Code for purposes of such section, or the Secretary determines that more stringent standards are necessary to protect the safety of residents of such facilities.

SEC. 9516. CORRECTION AND REDUCTION PLANS FOR INTERMEDIATE CARE FACILITIES FOR THE MENTALLY RETARDED.

(a) Correction and Reduction Plans.—Title XIX of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"CORRECTION AND REDUCTION PLANS FOR INTERMEDIATE CARE FACILITIES FOR THE MENTALLY RETARDED

"Sec. 1919. (a) If the Secretary finds that an intermediate care facility for the mentally retarded has substantial deficiencies which do not pose an immediate threat to the health and safety of residents, the State may elect, subject to the limitations in this section, to—

"(1) submit, within the number of days specified by the Secretary in regulations which apply to submission of compliance plans with respect to deficiencies of such type, a written plan of correction which details the extent of the facility's current compliance with the standards promulgated by the Secretary, including all deficiencies identified during a validation survey, and which provides for a timetable for completion of necessary steps to correct all staffing deficiencies within 6 months, and a timetable for rectifying all physical plant deficiencies within 6 months; or

"(2) submit, within a time period consisting of the number of days specified for submissions under paragraph (1) plus 35 days, a written plan for permanently reducing the number of certified beds, within a maximum of 36 months, in order to permit any noncomplying buildings (or distinct parts thereof) to be vacated and any staffing deficiencies to be corrected (hereinafter in this section referred to as a 'reduction plan').

"(b) As conditions of approval of any reduction plan submitted pursuant to subsection (a)(2), the State must—

"(1) provide for a hearing to be held at the affected facility at least 35 days prior to submission of the reduction plan, with reasonable notice thereof to the staff and residents of the facility, responsible members of the residents' families, and the general public;

"(2) demonstrate that the State has successfully provided home and community services similar to the services proposed to be provided under the reduction plan for similar individuals eligible for medical assistance; and

"(3) provide assurances that the requirements of subsection (c) shall be met with respect to the reduction plan.

"(c) The reduction plan must—

"(1) identify the number and service needs of existing facility residents to be provided home or community services and the timetable for providing such services, in 6 month intervals, within the 36-month period;

"(2) describe the methods to be used to select such residents for home and community services and to develop the alternative home and community services to meet their needs effectively;

"(3) describe the necessary safeguards that will be applied to protect the health and welfare of the former residents of the facility who are to receive home or community services, including adequate standards for consumer and provider participation and assurances that applicable State licensure and applicable State and Federal certification requirements will be met in providing such home or community services;

"(4) provide that residents of the affected facility who are eligible for medical assistance while in the facility shall, at their option, be placed in another setting (or another part of the affected facility) so as to retain their eligibility for medical assistance;

"(5) specify the actions which will be taken to protect the health and safety of the residents who remain in the affected facility while the reduction plan is in effect;

"(6) provide that the ratio of qualified staff to residents at the affected facility (or the part thereof) which is subject to the reduction plan will be the higher of—

"(A) the ratio which the Secretary determines is necessary in order to assure the health and safety of the residents of such facility (or part thereof); or

"(B) the ratio which was in effect at the time that the finding of substantial deficiencies (referred to in subsection (a)) was made; and

"(7) provide for the protection of the interests of employees affected by actions under the reduction plan, including—

"(A) arrangements to preserve employee rights and benefits;

"(B) training and retraining of such employees where necessary;

"(C) redeployment of such employees to community settings under the reduction plan; and

"(D) making maximum efforts to guarantee the employment of such employees (but this requirement shall not be construed to guarantee the employment of any employee).

"(d)(1) The Secretary must provide for a period of not less than 30 days after the submission of a reduction plan by a State, during which comments on such reduction plan may be submitted to the Secretary, before the Secretary approves or disapproves such reduction plan.

"(2) If the Secretary approves more than 15 reduction plans under this section in any fiscal year, any reduction plans approved in addition to the first 15 such plans approved, must be for a facility (or part thereof) for which the costs of correcting the substantial deficiencies (referred to in subsection (a)) are $2,000,000 or greater (as demonstrated by the State to the satisfaction of the Secretary).

"(e)(1) If the Secretary, at the conclusion of the 6-month plan of correction described in subsection (a)(1), determines that the State has substantially failed to correct the deficiencies described in subsection (a), the Secretary may terminate the facility's provider agreement in accordance with the provisions of section 1910(c).

"(2) In the case of a reduction plan described in subsection (a)(2), if the Secretary determines, at the conclusion of the initial 6-month period or any 6-month interval thereafter, that the State has substantially failed to meet the requirements of subsection (c), the Secretary shall—

"(A) terminate the facility's provider agreement in accordance with the provisions of section 1910(c); or

"(B) if the State has failed to meet such requirements despite good faith efforts, disallow, for purposes of Federal financial participation, an amount equal to 5 percent of the cost of care for all eligible individuals in the facility for each month for which the State fails to meet such requirements.

"(f) The provisions of this section shall apply only to plans of correction and reduction plans approved by the Secretary within 3 years after the effective date of final regulations implementing this section.".

(b) Effective Date.—(1) The amendment made by this section shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall issue a notice of proposed rulemaking with respect to section 1919 of the Social Security Act within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, and shall allow a period of 30 days for comment thereon prior to promulgating final regulations implementing such section.

(c) Report.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall submit a report to the Congress on the implementation and results of section 1919 of the Social Security Act. Such report shall be submitted not later than 30 months after the effective date of final regulations promulgated to implement such section.

SEC. 9517. MODIFYING APPLICATION OF MEDICAID HMO PROVISIONS FOR CERTAIN HEALTH CENTERS.

(a) Waiving Application of 75 Percent Rule and Certain Organizational Requirements.—Section 1903(m)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(m)(2)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking out "(B) and (C)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(B), (C), and (G)";

(2) in subparagraph (F)—

(A) by striking out "(F)(i) In the case of a contract with a health maintenance organization described in clause (ii)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(F) in the case of a contract with an entity described in subparagraph (G) or with a qualified health maintenance organization (as defined in section 1310(d) of the Public Health Service Act) which meets the requirement of subparagraph (A)(ii)";

(B) by striking out "such organization" and inserting in lieu thereof "such entity or organization"; and

(C) by striking out clause (ii); and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(G) In the case of an entity which is receiving (and has received during the previous two years) a grant of at least $100,000 under section 329(d)(1)(A) or 330(d)(1) of the Public Health Service Act or is receiving (and has received during the previous two years) at least $100,000 (by grant, subgrant, or subcontract) under the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965, clauses (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (A) shall not apply.".

(b) Permitting 6-Month Continuation of Benefits.—Section 1902(e)(2) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(e)(2)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A)—

(A) by inserting "or with an entity described in section 1903(m)(2)(G)" after "Public Health Service Act)"; and

(B) by inserting "or entity" before the period; and

(2) in subparagraph (B)—

(A) by striking out "a health maintenance organization" and inserting in lieu thereof "an organization or entity"; and

(B) by inserting "or entity" after "the organization".

(c) Health Insuring Organizations.—(1) Section 1903(m)(2)(A) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(m)(2)(A)) is amended, in the matter before clause (i)—

(1) by inserting "(including a health insuring organization)" after "any entity"; and

(2) by inserting "(directly or through arrangements with providers of services)" after "responsible for the provision".

(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the amendments made by paragraph (1) shall apply to expenditures incurred for health insuring organizations which first become operational on or after January 1, 1986.

(B) In the case of a health insuring organization—

(i) which first becomes operational on or after January 1, 1986, but

(ii) for which the Secretary of Health and Human Services has waived, under section 1915(b) of the Social Security Act and before such date, certain requirements of section 1902 of such Act, clauses (ii) and (iv) of section 1903(m)(2)(A) of such Act shall not apply during the period for which such waiver is effective.

SEC. 9518. EXTENSION OF MMIS DEADLINE.

(a) New Deadline.—Section 1903(r)(1)(B) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396b(r)(1)(B)) is amended by striking out "the earlier of" and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1985,".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to payment under section 1903(a) of the Social Security Act for calendar quarters beginning on or after October 1, 1982.

SEC. 9519. REPORT ON ADJUSTMENT IN MEDICAID PAYMENTS FOR HOSPITALS SERVING DISPROPORTIONATE NUMBERS OF LOW INCOME PATIENTS.

The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall transmit to Congress, not later than October 1, 1986, a report that—

(1) describes the methodology used by States under section 1902(a)(13)(A) of the Social Security Act, in their making payments to hospitals, in taking into account the situation of hospitals that serve a disproportionate number of low income patients with special needs;

(2) identifies each of those hospitals that have had the amount of their payments under that title adjusted under that section; and

(3) for each of those hospitals, describes the proportion of total inpatient-days attributable to low income patients and the proportion of total inpatient-days attributable to patients entitled to medical assistance under that title.

SEC. 9520. TASK FORCE ON TECHNOLOGY-DEPENDENT CHILDREN.

(a) Appointment of Task Force.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, within six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, shall establish a task force concerning alternatives to institutional care for technology-dependent children (as defined in subsection (e)).

(b) Membership.—The task force shall include representatives of Federal and State agencies with responsibilities relating to child health, health insurers, large employers (including those that self-insure for health care costs), providers of health care to technology-dependent children, and parents of technology-dependent children.

(c) Functions of Task Force.—The task force shall—

(1) identify barriers that prevent the provision of appropriate care in a home or community setting to meet the special needs of technology-dependent children; and

(2) recommend changes in the provision and financing of health care in private and public health care programs (including appropriate joint public-private initiatives) so as to provide home and community-based alternatives to the institutionalization of technology-dependent children.

(d) Report.—The task force shall make a final report to the Secretary and to the Congress on its activities not later than two years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(e) Definition.—In this section, the term "technology-dependent child" means a child who has a chronic illness which makes the child dependent upon the continuing use of medical care technology (such as a ventilator).

SEC. 9522. EXPANSION OF SERVICES UNDER DEMONSTRATION WAIVERS.

In the case of waivers granted to (or submitted during 1986 by) the State of Oregon under section 1915(b) of the Social Security Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services may waive the requirements of section 1903(m)(2)(A) of such Act with respect to any entity providing services under any such waiver if such entity does not provide more than 5 of the services listed in section 1903(m)(2)(A) of such Act, and does not provide inpatient hospital services.

(a) STATE OF RESIDENCE.—(1) Section 1902(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396a(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"For purposes of this title, any child who meets the requirements of paragraph (1) or (2) of section 473(b) shall be deemed to be a dependent child as defined in section 406 and shall be deemed to be a recipient of aid to families with dependent children under part A of title IV in the State where such child resides.".

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply to medical assistance furnished on or after the first calendar quarter that begins more than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) ELIGIBILITY OF CERTAIN ADOPTED CHILDREN.—(1) Section 1902(a)(10)(A)(ii) of the Social Security Act, as amended by section 9505 of this Act, is amended—

(A) by striking out "or" at the end of subclause (VI);

(B) by striking out the semicolon at the end of subclause (VII) and inserting in lieu thereof ", or"; and

(C) by adding after subclause (VII) the following new subclause:

"(VIII) who is a child described in section 1905(a)(i)—

"(aa) for whom there is in effect an adoption assistance agreement (other than an agreement under part E of title IV) between the State and an adoptive parent or parents,

"(bb) who the State agency responsible for adoption assistance has determined cannot be placed with adoptive parents without medical assistance because such child has special needs for medical or rehabilitative care, and

"(cc) who was eligible for medical assistance under the State plan prior to the adoption assistance agreement being entered into, or who would have been eligible for medical assistance at such time if the eligibility standards and methodologies of the State's foster care program under part E of title IV were applied rather than the eligibility standards and methodologies of the State's aid to families with dependent children program under part A of title IV;".

(2) In the case of an adoption assistance agreement (other than an agreement under part E of title IV of the Social Security Act) entered into before the date of the enactment of this Act—

(A) the requirements of subdivisions (aa) and (bb) of section 1902(a)(10)(A)(ii)(VIII) of the Social Security Act shall be deemed to be met if the State agency responsible for adoption assistance agreements determines that—

(i) at the time of adoptive placement the child had special needs for medical or rehabilitative care that made the child difficult to place; and

(ii) there is in effect with respect to such child an adoption assistance agreement between the State and an adoptive parent or parents; and

(B) the requirement of subdivision (cc) of such section shall be deemed to be met if the child was found by the State to be eligible for medical assistance prior to such agreement being entered into.

(3) This subsection, and the amendments made by this subsection, shall apply to adoption assistance agreements entered into before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SUBTITLE C—TASK FORCE ON LONG-TERM HEALTH CARE POLICIES

SEC. 9601. RECOMMENDATIONS FOR LONG-TERM HEALTH CARE POLICIES.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF TASK FORCE.—(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Secretary") shall establish a Task Force on Long-Term Health Care Policies (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Task Force"). The Task Force shall be established not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and in consultation with the National Association of Insurance Commissioners.

(b) COMPOSITION OF TASK FORCE.—The Task Force shall be composed of 18 members, which shall include—

(1) two members representing the National Association of Insurance Commissioners,

(2) three members representing Federal and State agencies with responsibilities relating to health or the elderly,

(3) three members representing private insurers,

(4) three members from organizations representing consumers or the elderly, and

(5) three members from organizations representing providers of long-term health care services.

The Secretary shall designate a member of the Task Force as chair.

(c) DEVELOPMENT OF RECOMMENDATIONS.—The Task Force shall develop recommendations for long-term health care policies, including recommendations designed—

(1) to limit marketing and agent abuse for those policies,

(2) to assure the dissemination of such information to consumers as is necessary to permit informed choice in purchasing the policies and to reduce the purchase of unnecessary or duplicative coverage,

(3) to assure that benefits provided under the policies are reasonable in relationship to premiums charged, and

(4) to promote the development and availability of long-term health care policies which meet these recommendations.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Task Force shall report to the Secretary, to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate respecting—

(1) the recommendations developed under subsection (c), including an explanation of the reasons for their selection, and

(2) such recommendations for additional activities respecting long-term health care policies as the Task Force finds appropriate.

The Secretary, in cooperation with the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, shall provide for the dissemination of the report to each of the States.

(e) TERMINATION OF TASK FORCE.—The Task Force shall terminate 90 days after the date of submission of the report required under subsection (d).

(f) REPORTS OF SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall transmit to the Committee on Energy and Commerce of the House of Representatives and to the Committee on Labor and Human Resources of the Senate two reports on—

(1) actions taken by the States to implement the recommendations developed under this section and to recommend additional action; and

(2) recommendations for legislative and administrative action, if any, needed to respond to issues raised by the Task Force or to improve consumer protection with respect to long-term health care policies.

The first report shall be transmitted 18 months after the date the report is made under subsection (d), and the second report shall be transmitted 18 months later.

(g) LONG-TERM HEALTH CARE POLICY DEFINED.—In this section, the term "long-term health care policy" means an insurance policy, or similar health benefits plan, which is designed for or marketed as providing (or making payments for) health care services (such as nursing home care and home health care) or related services (which may include home and community-based services), or both, over an extended period of time.

(h) ASSURANCE OF STATES' JURISDICTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed as recommending Federal preemption of the States in overseeing the operation and regulation of insurance carriers in their respective jurisdictions.

TITLE X—PRIVATE HEALTH INSURANCE COVERAGE

SEC. 10001. EMPLOYERS REQUIRED TO PROVIDE CERTAIN EMPLOYEES AND FAMILY MEMBERS WITH CONTINUED HEALTH INSURANCE COVERAGE AT GROUP RATES (INTERNAL REVENUE CODE AMENDMENTS).

(a) DENIAL OF DEDUCTION FOR EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTION TO PLAN.—Subsection (i) of section 162 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to deduction for trade or business expenses with respect to group health plans) is amended by redesignating paragraph (2) as paragraph (3) and by inserting after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph:

"(2) PLANS MUST PROVIDE CONTINUATION COVERAGE TO CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—No deduction shall be allowed under this section for expenses paid or incurred by an employer for any group health plan maintained by such employer unless all such plans maintained by such employer meet the continuing coverage requirements of subsection (k).

"(B) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN SMALL EMPLOYERS, ETC.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any plan described in section 106(b)(2).".

(b) DENIAL OF EXCLUSION FOR HIGHLY COMPENSATED INDIVIDUALS.—Section 106 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to contributions by employer to accident and health plans) is amended by inserting "(a) IN GENERAL.—" before "Gross" and by inserting at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) EXCEPTION FOR HIGHLY COMPENSATED INDIVIDUALS WHERE PLAN FAILS TO PROVIDE CERTAIN CONTINUATION COVERAGE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any amount contributed by an employer on behalf of a highly compensated individual (within the meaning of section 105(h)(5)) to a group health plan maintained by such employer unless all such plans maintained by such employer meet the continuing coverage requirements of section 162(k).

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN PLANS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any—

"(A) group health plan for any calendar year if all employers maintaining such plan normally employed fewer than 20 employees on a typical business day during the preceding calendar year,

"(B) governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)), or

"(C) church plan (within the meaning of section 414(e)).

Under regulations, rules similar to the rules of subsections (a) and (b) of section 52 (relating to employers under common control) shall apply for purposes of subparagraph (A).

"(3) GROUP HEALTH PLAN.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'group health plan' has the meaning given such term by section 162(i)(3).".

(c) CONTINUATION COVERAGE REQUIREMENTS.—Section 162 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by redesignating subsection (k) as subsection (l) and by inserting after subsection (j) the following new subsection:

"(k) CONTINUATION COVERAGE REQUIREMENTS OF GROUP HEALTH PLANS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subsection (i)(2) and section 106(b)(1), a group health plan meets the requirements of this subsection only if each qualified beneficiary who would lose coverage under the plan as a result of a qualifying event is entitled to elect, within the election period, continuation coverage under the plan.

"(2) CONTINUATION COVERAGE.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'continuation coverage' means coverage under the plan which meets the following requirements:

"(A) TYPE OF BENEFIT COVERAGE.—The coverage must consist of coverage which, as of the time the coverage is being provided, is identical to the coverage provided under the plan to similarly situated beneficiaries under the plan with respect to whom a qualifying event has not occurred.

"(B) PERIOD OF COVERAGE.—The coverage must extend for at least the period beginning on the date of the qualifying event and ending not earlier than the earliest of the following:

"(i) MAXIMUM PERIOD.—In the case of—

"(I) a qualifying event described in paragraph (3)(B) (relating to terminations and reduced hours), the date which is 18 months after the date of the qualifying event, and

"(II) any qualifying event not described in subclause (I), the date which is 36 months after the date of the qualifying event.

"(ii) END OF PLAN.—The date on which the employer ceases to provide any group health plan to any employee.

"(iii) FAILURE TO PAY PREMIUM.—The date on which coverage ceases under the plan by reason of a failure to make timely payment of any premium required under the plan with respect to the qualified beneficiary.

"(iv) REEMPLOYMENT OR MEDICARE ELIGIBILITY.—The date on which the qualified beneficiary first becomes, after the date of the election—

"(I) a covered employee under any other group health plan, or

"(II) entitled to benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

"(v) REMARRIAGE OF SPOUSE.—In the case of an individual who is a qualified beneficiary by reason of being the spouse of a covered employee, the date on which the beneficiary remarries and becomes covered under a group health plan.

"(C) PREMIUM REQUIREMENTS.—The plan may require payment of a premium for any period of continuation coverage, except that such premium—

OL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 986 MI

"(i) shall not exceed 102 percent of the applicable premium for such period, and

"(ii) may, at the election of the payor, be made in monthly installments.

If an election is made after the qualifying event, the plan shall permit payment for continuation coverage during the period preceding the election to be made within 45 days of the date of the election.

"(D) No requirement of insurability.—The coverage may not be conditioned upon, or discriminate on the basis of lack of, evidence of insurability.

"(E) Conversion option.—In the case of a qualified beneficiary whose period of continuation coverage expires under subparagraph (B)(i), the plan must, during the 180-day period ending on such expiration date, provide to the qualified beneficiary the option of enrollment under a conversion health plan otherwise generally available under the plan.

"(3) Qualifying event.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'qualifying event' means, with respect to any covered employee, any of the following events which, but for the continuation coverage required under this subsection, would result in the loss of coverage of a qualified beneficiary:

"(A) The death of the covered employee.

"(B) The termination (other than by reason of such employee's gross misconduct), or reduction of hours, of the covered employee's employment.

"(C) The divorce or legal separation of the covered employee from the employee's spouse.

"(D) The covered employee becoming entitled to benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

"(E) A dependent child ceasing to be a dependent child under the generally applicable requirements of the plan.

"(4) Applicable premium.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) In general.—The term 'applicable premium' means, with respect to any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries, the cost to the plan for such period of the coverage for similarly situated beneficiaries with respect to whom a qualifying event has not occurred (without regard to whether such cost is paid by the employer or employee).

"(B) Special rule for self-insured plans.—To the extent that a plan is a self-insured plan—

"(i) In general.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the applicable premium for any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries shall be equal to a reasonable estimate of the cost of providing coverage for such period for similarly situated beneficiaries which—

"(I) is determined on an actuarial basis, and

"(II) takes into account such factors as the Secretary may prescribe in regulations.

"(ii) Determination on basis of past cost.—If a plan administrator elects to have this clause apply, the applicable premium for any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries shall be equal to—

"(I) the cost to the plan for similarly situated beneficiaries for the same period occurring during the preceding determination period under subparagraph (C), adjusted by

"(II) the percentage increase or decrease in the implicit price deflator of the gross national product (calculated by the Department of Commerce and published in the Survey of Current Business) for the 12-month period ending on the last day of the sixth month of such preceding determination period.

"(iii) Clause (ii) not to apply where significant change.—A plan administrator may not elect to have clause (ii) apply in any case in which there is any significant difference, between the determination period and the preceding determination period, in coverage under, or in employees covered by, the plan. The determination under the preceding sentence for any determination period shall be made at the same time as the determination under subparagraph (C).

"(C) Determination period.—The determination of any applicable premium shall be made for a period of 12 months and shall be made before the beginning of such period.

"(5) Election.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) Election period.—The term 'election period' means the period which—

"(i) begins not later than the date on which coverage terminates under the plan by reason of a qualifying event,

"(ii) is of at least 60 days' duration, and

"(iii) ends not earlier than 60 days after the later of—

"(I) the date described in clause (i), or

"(II) in the case of any qualified beneficiary who receives notice under paragraph (6)(D), the date of such notice.

"(B) Effect of election on other beneficiaries.—Except as otherwise specified in an election, any election by a qualified beneficiary described in clause (i)(I) or (ii) of paragraph (7)(B) shall be deemed to include an election of continuation coverage on behalf of any other qualified beneficiary who would lose coverage under the plan by reason of the qualifying event.

"(6) Notice requirements.—In accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary—

"(A) the group health plan shall provide, at the time of commencement of coverage under the plan, written notice to each covered employee and spouse of the employee (if any) of the rights provided under this subsection,

"(B) the employer of an employee under a plan must notify the plan administrator of a qualifying event described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (D) of paragraph (3) with respect to such employee within 30 days of the date of the qualifying event,

"(C) each covered employee or qualified beneficiary is responsible for notifying the plan administrator of the occurrence of any qualifying event described in subparagraph (C) or (E) of paragraph (3), and

"(D) the plan administrator shall notify—

"(i) in the case of a qualifying event described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (D) of paragraph (3), any qualified beneficiary with respect to such event, and

"(ii) in the case of a qualifying event described in subparagraph (C) or (E) of paragraph (3) where the covered employee notifies the plan administrator under subparagraph (C), any qualified beneficiary with respect to such event, of such beneficiary's rights under this subsection.

For purposes of subparagraph (D), any notification shall be made within 14 days of the date on which the plan administrator is notified under subparagraph (B) or (C), whichever is applicable, and any such notification to an individual who is a qualified beneficiary as the spouse of the covered employee shall be treated as notification to all other qualified beneficiaries residing with such spouse at the time such notification is made.

"(7) Definitions.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) Covered employee.—The term 'covered employee' means an individual who is (or was) provided coverage under a group health plan by virtue of the individual's employment or previous employment with an employer.

"(B) Qualified beneficiary.—

"(i) In general.—The term 'qualified beneficiary' means, with respect to a covered employee under a group health plan, any other individual who, on the day before the qualifying event for that employee, is a beneficiary under the plan—

"(I) as the spouse of the covered employee, or

"(II) as the dependent child of the employee.

"(ii) Special rule for terminations and reduced employment.—In the case of a qualifying event described in paragraph (3)(B), the term 'qualified beneficiary' includes the covered employee.

"(C) Plan administrator.—The term 'plan administrator' has the meaning given the term 'administrator' by section 3(16)(A) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.".

(d) Conforming Amendment.—Paragraph (1) of section 162(i) is amended by striking out "General rule" in the heading thereof and inserting in lieu thereof "Coverage relating to end stage renal disease".

(e) Effective Dates.—

(1) General rule.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to plan years beginning on or after July 1, 1986.

(2) Special rule for collective bargaining agreements.—In the case of a group health plan maintained pursuant to one or more collective bargaining agreements between employee representatives and one or more employers ratified before the date of the enactment of this Act, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to plan years beginning before the later of—

(A) the date on which the last of the collective bargaining agreements relating to the plan terminates (determined without regard to any extension thereof agreed to after the date of the enactment of this Act), or

(B) January 1, 1987.

For purposes of subparagraph (A), any plan amendment made pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement relating to the plan which amends the plan solely to conform to any requirement added by this section shall not be treated as a termination of such collective bargaining agreement.

SEC. 10002. TEMPORARY EXTENSION OF COVERAGE AT GROUP RATES FOR CERTAIN EMPLOYEES AND FAMILY MEMBERS (ERISA AMENDMENTS).

(a) In General.—Subtitle B of title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new part:

"Part 6—Continuation Coverage Under Group Health Plans

"SEC. 601. PLANS MUST PROVIDE CONTINUATION COVERAGE TO CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS.

"(a) In General.—The plan sponsor of each group health plan shall provide, in accordance with this part, that each qualified beneficiary who would lose coverage under the plan as a result of a qualifying event is entitled, under the plan, to elect, within the election period, continuation coverage under the plan.

"(b) Exception for Certain Plans.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any group health plan for any calendar year if all employers maintaining such plan normally employed fewer than 20 employees on a typical business day during the preceding calendar year. Under regulations, rules similar to the rules of subsections (a) and (b) of section 52 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to employers under common control) shall apply for purposes of this subsection.

"SEC. 602. CONTINUATION COVERAGE.

"For purposes of section 601, the term 'continuation coverage' means coverage under the plan which meets the following requirements:

"(1) Type of benefit coverage.—The coverage must consist of coverage which, as of the time the coverage is being provided, is identical to the coverage provided under the plan to similarly situated beneficiaries under the plan with respect to whom a qualifying event has not occurred.

"(2) Period of coverage.—The coverage must extend for at least the period beginning on the date of the qualifying event and ending not earlier than the earliest of the following:

"(A) Maximum period.—In the case of—

"(i) a qualifying event described in section 603(2) (relating to terminations and reduced hours), the date which is 18 months after the date of the qualifying event, and

"(ii) any qualifying event not described in clause (i), the date which is 36 months after the date of the qualifying event.

"(B) End of plan.—The date on which the employer ceases to provide any group health plan to any employee.

"(C) Failure to pay premium.—The date on which coverage ceases under the plan by reason of a failure to make timely payment of any premium required under the plan with respect to the qualified beneficiary.

"(D) Reemployment or medicare eligibility.—The date on which the qualified beneficiary first becomes, after the date of the election—

"(i) a covered employee under any other group health plan, or

"(ii) entitled to benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

"(E) Remarriage of spouse.—In the case of an individual who is a qualified beneficiary by reason of being the spouse of a covered employee, the date on which the beneficiary remarries and becomes covered under a group health plan.

"(3) Premium requirements.—The plan may require payment of a premium for any period of continuation coverage, except that such premium—

"(A) shall not exceed 102 percent of the applicable premium for such period, and

"(B) may, at the election of the payor, be made in monthly installments.

If an election is made after the qualifying event, the plan shall permit payment for continuation coverage during the period preceding the election to be made within 45 days of the date of the election.

"(4) No requirement of insurability.—The coverage may not be conditioned upon, or discriminate on the basis of lack of, evidence of insurability.

"(5) Conversion option.—In the case of a qualified beneficiary whose period of continuation coverage expires under paragraph (2)(A), the plan must, during the 180-day period ending on such expiration date, provide to the qualified beneficiary the option of enrollment under a conversion health plan otherwise generally available under the plan.

"SEC. 603. QUALIFYING EVENT.

"For purposes of this part, the term 'qualifying event' means, with respect to any covered employee, any of the following events which, but for the continuation coverage required under this part, would result in the loss of coverage of a qualified beneficiary:

"(1) The death of the covered employee.

"(2) The termination (other than by reason of such employee's gross misconduct), or reduction of hours, of the covered employee's employment.

"(3) The divorce or legal separation of the covered employee from the employee's spouse.

"(4) The covered employee becoming entitled to benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

"(5) A dependent child ceasing to be a dependent child under the generally applicable requirements of the plan.

"SEC. 604. APPLICABLE PREMIUM.

"For purposes of this part—

"(1) In general.—The term 'applicable premium' means, with respect to any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries, the cost to the plan for such period of the coverage for similarly situated beneficiaries with respect to whom a qualifying event has not occurred (without regard to whether such cost is paid by the employer or employee).

"(2) Special rule for self-insured plans.—To the extent that a plan is a self-insured plan—

"(A) In general.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the applicable premium for any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries shall be equal to a reasonable estimate of the cost of providing coverage for such period for similarly situated beneficiaries which—

"(i) is determined on an actuarial basis, and

"(ii) takes into account such factors as the Secretary may prescribe in regulations.

"(B) Determination on basis of past cost.—If an administrator elects to have this subparagraph apply, the applicable premium for any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries shall be equal to—

"(i) the cost to the plan for similarly situated beneficiaries for the same period occurring during the preceding determination period under paragraph (3), adjusted by

"(ii) the percentage increase or decrease in the implicit price deflator of the gross national product (calculated by the Department of Commerce and published in the Survey of Current Business) for the 12-month period ending on the last day of the sixth month of such preceding determination period.

"(C) Subparagraph (B) not to apply where significant change.—An administrator may not elect to have subparagraph (B) apply in any case in which there is any significant difference, between the determination period and the preceding determination period, in coverage under, or in employees covered by, the plan. The determination under the preceding sentence for any determination period shall be made at the same time as the determination under paragraph (3).

"(3) Determination period.—The determination of any applicable premium shall be made for a period of 12 months and shall be made before the beginning of such period.

"SEC. 605. ELECTION.

"For purposes of this part—

"(1) Election period.—The term 'election period' means the period which—

"(A) begins not later than the date on which coverage terminates under the plan by reason of a qualifying event,

"(B) is of at least 60 days' duration, and

"(C) ends not earlier than 60 days after the later of—

"(i) the date described in subparagraph (A), or

"(ii) in the case of any qualified beneficiary who receives notice under section 606(4), the date of such notice.

"(2) Effect of election on other beneficiaries.—Except as otherwise specified in an election, any election by a qualified beneficiary described in subparagraph (A)(i) or (B) of section 607(3) shall be deemed to include an election of continuation coverage on behalf of any other qualified beneficiary who would lose coverage under the plan by reason of the qualifying event.

"SEC. 606. NOTICE REQUIREMENTS.

"In accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary—

"(1) the group health plan shall provide, at the time of commencement of coverage under the plan, written notice to each covered employee and spouse of the employee (if any) of the rights provided under this subsection,

"(2) the employer of an employee under a plan must notify the administrator of a qualifying event described in paragraph (1), (2), or (4) of section 603 within 30 days of the date of the qualifying event,

"(3) each covered employee or qualified beneficiary is responsible for notifying the administrator of the occurrence of any qualifying event described in paragraph (3) or (5) of section 603, and

"(4) the administrator shall notify—

"(A) in the case of a qualifying event described in paragraph (1), (2), or (4) of section 603, any qualified beneficiary with respect to such event, and

"(B) in the case of a qualifying event described in paragraph (3) or (5) of section 603 where the covered employee notifies the administrator under paragraph (3), any qualified beneficiary with respect to such event,

of such beneficiary's rights under this subsection.

For purposes of paragraph (4), any notification shall be made within 14 days of the date on which the administrator is notified under paragraph (2) or (3), whichever is applicable, and any such notification to an individual who is a qualified beneficiary as the spouse of the covered employee shall be treated as notification to all other qualified beneficiaries residing with such spouse at the time such notification is made.

"SEC. 607. DEFINITIONS.

"For purposes of this part—

"(1) Group health plan.—The term 'group health plan' means an employee welfare benefit plan that is a group health plan (within the meaning of section 162(i)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954).

"(2) Covered employee.—The term 'covered employee' means an individual who is (or was) provided coverage under a group health plan by virtue of the individual's employment or previous employment with an employer.

"(3) Qualified beneficiary.—

"(A) In general.—The term 'qualified beneficiary' means, with respect to a covered employee under a group health plan, any other individual who, on the day before the qualifying event for that employee, is a beneficiary under the plan—

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

"(i) as the spouse of the covered employee, or

"(ii) as the dependent child of the employee.

"(B) SPECIAL RULE FOR TERMINATIONS AND REDUCED EMPLOYMENT.—In the case of a qualifying event described in section 603(2), the term 'qualified beneficiary' includes the covered employee.

"SEC. 608. REGULATIONS.

"The Secretary may prescribe regulations to carry out the provisions of this part.".

(b) PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO PROVIDE NOTICE.—Section 502(c) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1132(c)) is amended by inserting after "Any administrator" the following: "(1) who fails to meet the requirements of paragraph (1) or (4) of section 606 with respect to a participant or beneficiary, or (2)".

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—The table of contents in section 1 of such Act is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 514 the following new items:

"PART 6—CONTINUATION COVERAGE UNDER GROUP HEALTH PLANS

"Sec. 601. Plans must provide continuation coverage to certain individuals.
"Sec. 602. Continuation coverage.
"Sec. 603. Qualifying event.
"Sec. 604. Applicable premium.
"Sec. 605. Election.
"Sec. 606. Notice requirements.
"Sec. 607. Definitions.
"Sec. 608. Regulations.".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to plan years beginning on or after July 1, 1986.

(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AGREEMENTS.—In the case of a group health plan maintained pursuant to one or more collective bargaining agreements between employee representatives and one or more employers ratified before the date of the enactment of this Act, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to plan years beginning before the later of—

(A) the date on which the last of the collective bargaining agreements relating to the plan terminates (determined without regard to any extension thereof agreed to after the date of the enactment of this Act), or

(B) January 1, 1987.

For purposes of subparagraph (A), any plan amendment made pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement relating to the plan which amends the plan solely to conform to any requirement added by this section shall not be treated as a termination of such collective bargaining agreement.

(e) NOTIFICATION TO COVERED EMPLOYEES.—At the time that the amendments made by this section apply to a group health plan (within the meaning of section 607(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974), the plan shall notify each covered employee, and spouse of the employee (if any), who is covered under the plan at that time of the continuation coverage required under part 6 of subtitle B of title I of such Act. The notice furnished under this subsection is in lieu of notice that may otherwise be required under section 606(1) of such Act with respect to such individuals.

SEC. 10003. CONTINUATION OF HEALTH INSURANCE FOR STATE AND LOCAL EMPLOYEES WHO LOST EMPLOYMENT-RELATED COVERAGE (PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT AMENDMENTS).

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Public Health Service Act is amended by adding at the end the following new title:

"TITLE XXII—REQUIREMENTS FOR CERTAIN GROUP HEALTH PLANS FOR CERTAIN STATE AND LOCAL EMPLOYEES

"SEC. 2201. STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTAL GROUP HEALTH PLANS MUST PROVIDE CONTINUATION COVERAGE TO CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In accordance with regulations which the Secretary shall prescribe, each group health plan that is maintained by any State that receives funds under this Act, by any political subdivision of such a State, or by any agency or instrumentality of such a State or political subdivision, shall provide, in accordance with this title, that each qualified beneficiary who would lose coverage under the plan as a result of a qualifying event is entitled, under the plan, to elect, within the election period, continuation coverage under the plan.

"(b) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN PLANS.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to—

"(1) any group health plan for any calendar year if all employers maintaining such plan normally employed fewer than 20 employees on a typical business day during the preceding calendar year, or

"(2) any group health plan maintained for employees by the government of the District of Columbia or any territory or possession of the United States or any agency or instrumentality.

Under regulations, rules similar to the rules of subsections (a) and (b) of section 52 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to employers under common control) shall apply for purposes of paragraph (1).

"SEC. 2202. CONTINUATION COVERAGE.

"For purposes of section 2201, the term 'continuation coverage' means coverage under the plan which meets the following requirements:

"(1) TYPE OF BENEFIT COVERAGE.—The coverage must consist of coverage which, as of the time the coverage is being provided, is identical to the coverage provided under the plan to similarly situated beneficiaries under the plan with respect to whom a qualifying event has not occurred.

"(2) PERIOD OF COVERAGE.—The coverage must extend for at least the period beginning on the date of the qualifying event and ending not earlier than the earliest of the following:

"(A) MAXIMUM PERIOD.—In the case of—

"(i) a qualifying event described in section 2203(2) (relating to terminations and reduced hours), the date which is 18 months after the date of the qualifying event, and

"(ii) any qualifying event not described in clause (i), the date which is 36 months after the date of the qualifying event.

"(B) END OF PLAN.—The date on which the employer ceases to provide any group health plan to any employee.

"(C) FAILURE TO PAY PREMIUM.—The date on which coverage ceases under the plan by reason of a failure to make timely payment of any premium required under the plan with respect to the qualified beneficiary.

"(D) REEMPLOYMENT OR MEDICARE ELIGIBILITY.—The date on which the qualified beneficiary first becomes, after the date of the election—

"(i) a covered employee under any other group health plan, or

"(ii) entitled to benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

"(E) REMARRIAGE OF SPOUSE.—In the case of an individual who is a qualified beneficiary by reason of being the spouse of a covered employee, the date on which the beneficiary remarries and becomes covered under a group health plan.

"(3) PREMIUM REQUIREMENTS.—The plan may require payment of a premium for any period of continuation coverage, except that such premium—

"(A) shall not exceed 102 percent of the applicable premium for such period, and

"(B) may, at the election of the payor, be made in monthly installments.

If an election is made after the qualifying event, the plan shall permit payment for continuation coverage during the period preceding the election to be made within 45 days of the date of the election.

"(4) NO REQUIREMENT OF INSURABILITY.—The coverage may not be conditioned upon, or discriminate on the basis of lack of, evidence of insurability.

"(5) CONVERSION OPTION.—In the case of a qualified beneficiary whose period of continuation coverage expires under paragraph (2)(A), the plan must, during the 180-day period ending on such expiration date, provide to the qualified beneficiary the option of enrollment under a conversion health plan otherwise generally available under the plan.

"SEC. 2203. QUALIFYING EVENT.

"For purposes of this title, the term 'qualifying event' means, with respect to any covered employee, any of the following events which, but for the continuation coverage required under this title, would result in the loss of coverage of a qualified beneficiary:

"(1) The death of the covered employee.

"(2) The termination (other than by reason of such employee's gross misconduct), or reduction of hours, of the covered employee's employment.

"(3) The divorce or legal separation of the covered employee from the employee's spouse.

"(4) The covered employee becoming entitled to benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act.

"(5) A dependent child ceasing to be a dependent child under the generally applicable requirements of the plan.

"SEC. 2204. APPLICABLE PREMIUM.

"For purposes of this title—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'applicable premium' means, with respect to any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries, the cost to the plan for such period of the coverage for similarly situated beneficiaries with respect to whom a qualifying event has not occurred (without regard to whether such cost is paid by the employer or employee).

"(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR SELF-INSURED PLANS.—To the extent that a plan is a self-insured plan—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the applicable premium for any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries shall be equal to a reasonable estimate of the cost of providing coverage for such period for similarly situated beneficiaries which—

"(i) is determined on an actuarial basis, and

"(ii) takes into account such factors as the Secretary may prescribe in regulations.

"(B) DETERMINATION ON BASIS OF PAST COST.—If a plan administrator elects to have this subparagraph apply, the applicable premium for any period of continuation coverage of qualified beneficiaries shall be equal to—

"(i) the cost to the plan for similarly situated beneficiaries for the same period occurring during the preceding determination period under paragraph (3), adjusted by

"(ii) the percentage increase or decrease in the implicit price deflator of the gross national product (calculated by the Department of Commerce and published in the Survey of Current Business) for the 12-month period ending on the last day of the sixth month of such preceding determination period.

"(C) SUBPARAGRAPH (B) NOT TO APPLY WHERE SIGNIFICANT CHANGE.—A plan administrator may not elect to have subparagraph (B) apply in any case in which there is any significant difference, between the determination period and the preceding determination period, in coverage under, or in employees covered by, the plan. The determination under the preceding sentence for any determination period shall be made at the same time as the determination under paragraph (3).

"(3) DETERMINATION PERIOD.—The determination of any applicable premium shall be made for a period of 12 months and shall be made before the beginning of such period.

"SEC. 2205. ELECTION.

"For purposes of this title—

"(1) ELECTION PERIOD.—The term 'election period' means the period which—

"(A) begins not later than the date on which coverage terminates under the plan by reason of a qualifying event,

"(B) is of at least 60 days' duration, and

"(C) ends not earlier than 60 days after the later of—

"(i) the date described in subparagraph (A), or

"(ii) in the case of any qualified beneficiary who receives notice under section 2206(4), the date of such notice.

"(2) EFFECT OF ELECTION ON OTHER BENEFICIARIES.—Except as otherwise specified in an election, any election by a qualified beneficiary described in subparagraph (A)(i) or (B) of section 2208(3) shall be deemed to include an election of continuation coverage on behalf of any other qualified beneficiary who would lose coverage under the plan by reason of the qualifying event.

"SEC. 2206. NOTICE REQUIREMENTS.

"In accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary—

"(1) the group health plan shall provide, at the time of commencement of coverage under the plan, written notice to each covered employee and spouse of the employee (if any) of the rights provided under this subsection,

"(2) the employer of an employee under a plan must notify the plan administrator of a qualifying event described in paragraph (1), (2), or (4) of section 2203 within 30 days of the date of the qualifying event,

"(3) each covered employee or qualified beneficiary is responsible for notifying the plan administrator of the occurrence of any qualifying event described in paragraph (3) or (5) of section 2203, and

"(4) the plan administrator shall notify—

"(A) in the case of a qualifying event described in paragraph (1), (2), or (4) of section 2203, any qualified beneficiary with respect to such event, and

"(B) in the case of a qualifying event described in paragraph (3) or (5) of section 2203 where the covered employee notifies the plan administrator under paragraph (3), any qualified beneficiary with respect to such event,

of such beneficiary's rights under this subsection.

For purposes of paragraph (4), any notification shall be made within 14 days of the date on which the plan administrator is notified under paragraph (2) or (3), whichever is applicable, and any such notification to an individual who is a qualified beneficiary as the spouse of the covered employee shall be treated as notification to all other qualified beneficiaries residing with such spouse at the time such notification is made.

"SEC. 2207. ENFORCEMENT.

"Any individual who is aggrieved by the failure of a State, political subdivision, or agency or instrumentality thereof, to comply with the requirements of this title may bring an action for appropriate equitable relief.

"SEC. 2208. DEFINITIONS.

"For purposes of this title—

"(1) GROUP HEALTH PLAN.—The term 'group health plan' has the meaning given such term in section 162(i)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

"(2) COVERED EMPLOYEE.—The term 'covered employee' means an individual who is (or was) provided coverage under a group health plan by virtue of the individual's employment or previous employment with an employer.

"(3) QUALIFIED BENEFICIARY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified beneficiary' means, with respect to a covered employee under a group health plan, any other individual who, on the day before the qualifying event for that employee, is a beneficiary under the plan—

"(i) as the spouse of the covered employee, or

"(ii) as the dependent child of the employee.

"(B) SPECIAL RULE FOR TERMINATIONS AND REDUCED EMPLOYMENT.—In the case of a qualifying event described in section 2203(2), the term 'qualified beneficiary' includes the covered employee.

"(4) PLAN ADMINISTRATOR.—The term 'plan administrator' has the meaning given the term 'administrator' by section 3(16)(A) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to plan years beginning on or after July 1, 1986.

(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AGREEMENTS.—In the case of a group health plan maintained pursuant to one or more collective bargaining agreements between employee representatives and one or more employers ratified before the date of the enactment of this Act, the amendments made by this section shall not apply to plan years beginning before the later of—

(A) the date on which the last of the collective bargaining agreements relating to the plan terminates (determined without regard to any extension thereof agreed to after the date of the enactment of this Act), or

(B) January 1, 1987.

For purposes of subparagraph (A), any plan amendment made pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement relating to the plan which amends the plan solely to conform to any requirement added by this section shall not be treated as a termination of such collective bargaining agreement.

(c) NOTIFICATION TO COVERED EMPLOYEES.—At the time that the amendments made by this section apply to a group health plan (covered under section 2201 of the Public Health Service Act), the plan shall notify each covered employee, and spouse of the employee (if any), who is covered under the plan at that time of the continuation coverage required under title XXII of such Act. The notice furnished under this subsection is in lieu of notice that may otherwise be required under section 2206(1) of such Act with respect to such individuals.

SEC. 11002. FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF POLICY.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) single-employer defined benefit pension plans have a substantial impact on interstate commerce and are affected with a national interest;

(2) the continued well-being and retirement income security of millions of workers, retirees, and their dependents are directly affected by such plans;

(3) the existence of a sound termination insurance system is fundamental to the retirement income security of participants and beneficiaries of such plans; and

(4) the current termination insurance system in some instances encourages employers to terminate pension plans, evade their obligations to pay benefits, and shift unfunded pension liabilities onto the termination insurance system and the other premium-payers.

(b) ADDITIONAL FINDINGS.—The Congress further finds that modification of the current termination insurance system and an increase in the insurance premium for single-employer defined benefit pension plans—

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

(1) is desirable to increase the likelihood that full benefits will be paid to participants and beneficiaries of such plans;

(2) is desirable to provide for the transfer of liabilities to the termination insurance system only in cases of severe hardship;

(3) is necessary to maintain the premium costs of such system at a reasonable level; and

(4) is necessary to finance properly current funding deficiencies and future obligations of the single-employer pension plan termination insurance system.

(c) DECLARATION OF POLICY.—It is hereby declared to be the policy of this title—

(1) to foster and facilitate interstate commerce;

(2) to encourage the maintenance and growth of single-employer defined benefit pension plans;

(3) to increase the likelihood that participants and beneficiaries under single-employer defined benefit pension plans will receive their full benefits;

(4) to provide for the transfer of unfunded pension liabilities onto the single-employer pension plan termination insurance system only in cases of severe hardship;

(5) to maintain the premium costs of such system at a reasonable level; and

(6) to assure the prudent financing of current funding deficiencies and future obligations of the single-employer pension plan termination insurance system by increasing termination insurance premiums.

SEC. 11003. AMENDMENT OF THE EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT OF 1974.

Whenever in this title an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to or repeal of a section or other provision, the reference is to a section or other provision of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, unless otherwise specified.

SEC. 11004. DEFINITIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 4001(a) (29 U.S.C. 1301(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking out paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) 'substantial employer', for any plan year of a single-employer plan, means one or more persons—

"(A) who are contributing sponsors of the plan in such plan year,

"(B) who, at any time during such plan year, are members of the same controlled group, and

"(C) whose required contributions to the plan for each plan year constituting one of—

"(i) the two immediately preceding plan years, or

"(ii) the first two of the three immediately preceding plan years, total an amount greater than or equal to 10 percent of all contributions required to be paid to or under the plan for such plan year;";

(2) in paragraph (11), by striking out "and";

(3) in paragraph (12), by striking out "corporation." and inserting in lieu thereof "corporation;"; and

(4) by adding after paragraph (12) the following new paragraphs:

"(13) 'contributing sponsor', of a single-employer plan, means a person—

"(A) who is responsible, in connection with such plan, for meeting the funding requirements under section 302 of this Act or section 412 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, or

"(B) who is a member of the controlled group of a person described in subparagraph (A), has been responsible for meeting such funding requirements, and has employed a significant number (as may be defined in regulations of the corporation) of participants under such plan while such person was so responsible;

"(14) in the case of a single-employer plan—

"(A) 'controlled group' means, in connection with any person, a group consisting of such person and all other persons under common control with such person; and

"(B) the determination of whether two or more persons are under 'common control' shall be made under regulations of the corporation which are consistent and coextensive with regulations prescribed for similar purposes by the Secretary of the Treasury under subsections (b) and (c) of section 414 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954;

"(15) 'single-employer plan' means any defined benefit plan (as defined in section 3(35)) which is not a multiemployer plan;

"(16) 'benefit commitments', to a participant or beneficiary as of any date under a single-employer plan, means all benefits provided by the plan with respect to the participant or beneficiary which—

"(A) are guaranteed under section 4022,

"(B) would be guaranteed under section 4022, but for the operation of subsection 4022(b), or

"(C) constitute—

"(i) early retirement supplements or subsidies, or

"(ii) plant closing benefits, irrespective of whether any such supplements, subsidies, or benefits are benefits guaranteed under section 4022, if the participant or beneficiary has satisfied, as of such date, all of the conditions required of him or her under the provisions of the plan to establish entitlement to the benefits, except for the submission of a formal application, retirement, completion of a required waiting period subsequent to application for benefits, or designation of a beneficiary;

"(17) 'amount of unfunded guaranteed benefits', of a participant or beneficiary as of any date under a single-employer plan, means an amount equal to the excess of—

"(A) the actuarial present value (determined as of such date on the basis of assumptions prescribed by the corporation for purposes of section 4044) of the benefits of the participant or beneficiary under the plan which are guaranteed under section 4022, over

"(B) the current value (as of such date) of the assets of the plan which are required to be allocated to those benefits under section 4044;

"(18) 'amount of unfunded benefit commitments', of a participant or beneficiary as of any date under a single-employer plan, means an amount equal to the excess of—

"(A) the actuarial present value (determined as of such date on the basis of assumptions prescribed by the corporation for purposes of section 4044) of the benefit commitments to the participant or beneficiary under the plan, over

"(B) the current value (as of such date) of the assets of the plan which are required to be allocated to those benefit commitments under section 4044;

"(19) 'outstanding amount of benefit commitments', of a participant or beneficiary under a terminated single-employer plan, means the excess of—

"(A) the actuarial present value (determined as of the termination date on the basis of assumptions prescribed by the corporation for purposes of section 4044) of the benefit commitments to such participant or beneficiary under the plan, over

"(B) the actuarial present value (determined as of such date on the basis of assumptions prescribed by the corporation for purposes of section 4044) of the benefits of such participant or beneficiary which are guaranteed under section 4022 or to which assets of the plan are required to be allocated under section 4044;

"(20) 'person' has the meaning set forth in section 3(9);

"(21) 'affected party' means, with respect to a plan—

"(A) each participant in the plan,

"(B) each beneficiary under the plan who is a beneficiary of a deceased participant or who is an alternate payee (within the meaning of section 206(d)(3)(K)) under an applicable qualified domestic relations order (within the meaning of section 206(d)(3)(B)(i)),

"(C) each employee organization representing participants in the plan, and

"(D) the corporation, except that, in connection with any notice required to be provided to the affected party, if an affected party has designated, in writing, a person to receive such notice on behalf of the affected party, any reference to the affected party shall be construed to refer to such person.".

(b) TECHNICAL CORRECTION OF ERROR IN MULTIEMPLOYER PENSION PLAN AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1980.—Section 4001 is further amended by striking out the amendments made by section 402(a)(1)(F) of the Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980 (94 Stat. 1297) (adding new paragraphs after a subsection (c)(1)), and, in lieu thereof, in subsection (b), by inserting "(1)" after "(b)" and by adding at the end of such subsection the following new paragraph:

"(2) For purposes of subtitle E—

"(A) except as otherwise provided in subtitle E, contributions or other payments shall be considered made under a plan for a plan year if they are made within the period prescribed under section 412(c)(10) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (determined, in the case of a terminated plan, as if the plan had continued beyond the termination date), and

"(B) the term 'Secretary of the Treasury' means the Secretary of the Treasury or such Secretary's delegate.".

SEC. 11005. SINGLE-EMPLOYER PLAN TERMINATION INSURANCE PREMIUMS.

(a) PREMIUM INCREASE.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—Section 4006(a)(3)(A)(i) (29 U.S.C. 1306(a)(3)(A)(i)) is amended by striking out "for plan years beginning after December 31, 1977, an amount equal to $2.60" and inserting in lieu thereof "for plan years beginning after December 31, 1985, an amount equal to $8.50".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT WITH RESPECT TO PLAN YEARS AFTER 1977.—Section 4006(c)(1) (29 U.S.C. 1306(c)(1)) is amended by striking out subparagraph (A) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(A) in the case of each plan which was not a multiemployer plan in a plan year—

"(i) with respect to each plan year beginning before January 1, 1978, an amount equal to $1 for each individual who was a participant in such plan during the plan year, and

"(ii) with respect to each plan year beginning after December 31, 1977, an amount equal to $2.60 for each individual who was a participant in such plan during the plan year, and".

(b) INCORPORATION OF CERTAIN FORMER PROVISIONS IN LIEU OF CROSS REFERENCE THERETO.—Section 4006(a) (29 U.S.C. 1306(a)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking out the last sentence; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6)(A) In carrying out its authority under paragraph (1) to establish premium rates and bases for basic benefits guaranteed under section 4022 with respect to single-employer plans, the corporation shall establish such rates and bases in coverage schedules in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph.

"(B) The corporation may establish annual premiums for single-employer plans composed of the sum of—

"(i) a charge based on a rate applicable to the excess, if any, of the present value of the basic benefits of the plan which are guaranteed over the value of the assets of the plan, not in excess of 0.1 percent, and

"(ii) an additional charge based on a rate applicable to the present value of the basic benefits of the plan which are guaranteed.

The rate for the additional charge referred to in clause (ii) shall be set by the corporation for every year at a level which the corporation estimates will yield total revenue approximately equal to the total revenue to be derived by the corporation from the charges referred to in clause (i) of this subparagraph.

"(C) The corporation may establish annual premiums for single-employer plans based on—

"(i) the number of participants in a plan, but such premium rates shall not exceed the rates described in paragraph (3),

"(ii) unfunded basic benefits guaranteed under this title, but such premium rates shall not exceed the limitations applicable to charges referred to in subparagraph (B)(i), or

"(iii) total guaranteed basic benefits, but such premium rates shall not exceed the rates for additional charges referred to in subparagraph (B)(ii).

If the corporation uses two or more of the rate bases described in this subparagraph, the premium rates shall be designed to produce approximately equal amounts of aggregate premium revenue from each of the rate bases used.

"(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the corporation shall by regulation define the terms 'value of assets' and 'present value of the benefits of the plan which are guaranteed' in a manner consistent with the purposes of this title and the provisions of this section.".

(c) APPROVAL BY JOINT RESOLUTION OF RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE PENSION BENEFIT GUARANTY CORPORATION.—Title IV is amended as follows:

(1) The last sentence of subsection (a)(2) of section 4006 (29 U.S.C. 1306(a)(2)) is amended by striking out "the Congress approves such revised schedule by a concurrent resolution" and inserting in lieu thereof "a joint resolution approving such revised schedule is enacted".

(2) Subsection (a)(4) of section 4006 (29 U.S.C. 1306(a)(4)) is amended by striking out "approval by the Congress" and inserting in lieu thereof "the enactment of a joint resolution".

(3) Subsection (b)(3) of section 4006 (29 U.S.C. 1306(b)(3)) is amended by striking out "concurrent" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint", by striking out "That the Congress favors the" and inserting in lieu thereof "The", and by inserting "is hereby approved" before the period preceding the quotation marks.

(4) Subsection (f)(2)(B) of section 4022A (29 U.S.C. 1322a(f)(2)(B)) is amended by striking out "Congress by concurrent resolution" and inserting in lieu thereof "the enactment of a joint resolution".

(5) Subsection (f)(2)(C) of section 4022A (29 U.S.C. 1322a(f)(2)(C)) is amended by striking out "approved" and inserting in lieu thereof "so enacted".

(6) Subsection (f)(3)(B) of section 4022A (29 U.S.C. 1322a(f)(3)(A)) is amended by striking out "Congress by a concurrent resolution" and inserting in lieu thereof "enactment of a joint resolution".

(7) Subsection (f)(4)(A) of section 4022A (29 U.S.C. 1322a(f)(4)(A)) is amended by striking out "concurrent" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint".

(8) Subsection (f)(4)(B) of section 4022A (29 U.S.C. 1322a(f)(4)(B)) is amended by striking out "concurrent" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "joint", by striking out "That the Congress favors the" and inserting in lieu thereof "The", and by inserting "is hereby approved" immediately before the period preceding the quotation marks.

(9) Subsection (f)(4)(C) of section 4022A (29 U.S.C. 1322a(f)(4)(C)) is amended by striking out "concurrent" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint".

(10) Subsection (g)(4)(A)(ii) of section 4022A (29 U.S.C. 1322a(g)(4)(A)(ii)) is amended by striking out "concurrent" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint", and by striking out "adopted" and inserting in lieu thereof "enacted".

(11) Subsection (g)(4)(B) of section 4022A (29 U.S.C. 1322a(g)(4)(B)) is amended by striking out "concurrent" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "joint", by striking out "That the Congress disapproves the" and inserting in lieu thereof "The", and by inserting "is hereby disapproved" immediately before the period preceding the quotation marks.

(12) Subsection (g)(4)(D) of section 4022A (29 U.S.C. 1322a(g)(4)(D)) is amended by striking out "concurrent" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall be effective for plan years commencing after December 31, 1985.

(2) SPECIAL RULE.—The amendments made by subsection (b) shall be effective as of the date of the enactment of the Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980.

(e) TRANSITIONAL RULE.—

(1) NOTICE OF PREMIUM INCREASE.—Not later than 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation shall send a notice to the plan administrator of each single-employer plan affected by the premium increase established by the amendment made by subsection (a)(1). Such notice shall describe such increase and the requirements of this subsection.

(2) DUE DATE FOR UNPAID PREMIUMS.—With respect to any plan year beginning during the period beginning on January 1, 1986, and ending 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, any unpaid amount of such premium increase shall be due and payable no later than the earlier of 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act or 30 days after the date on which the notice required by paragraph (1) is sent, except that in no event shall the amount of the premium increase established under the amendment made by subsection (a)(1) be due and payable for a plan year earlier than the date on which premiums for the plan would have been due for such plan year had this Act not been enacted.

(3) ENFORCEMENT.—For purposes of enforcement, the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) shall be considered to be requirements of sections 4006 and 4007 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1306 and 1307).

SEC. 11006. NOTICE OF SIGNIFICANT REDUCTION IN BENEFIT ACCRUALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 204 (29 U.S.C. 1054) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (h) as subsection (i); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (g) the following new subsection:

"(h) A single-employer plan may not be amended so as to provide for a significant reduction in the rate of future benefit accrual, unless, after adoption of the plan amendment and not less than 15 days before the effective date of the plan amendment, the plan administrator provides a written notice, setting forth the plan amendment and its effective date, to—

"(1) each participant in the plan,

"(2) each beneficiary who is an alternate payee (within the meaning of section 206(d)(3)(K)) under an applicable qualified domestic relations order (within the meaning of section 206(d)(3)(B)(i)), and

"(3) each employee organization representing participants in the plan, except that such notice shall instead be provided to a person designated, in writing, to receive such notice on behalf of any person referred to in paragraph (1), (2), or (3).".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to plan amendments adopted on or after January 1, 1986, except that, in the case of plan amendments adopted on or after January 1, 1986, and on or before the date of the enactment of this Act, the requirements of section 204(h) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as added by this section) shall be treated as met if the written notice required under such section 204(h) is provided before 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act..

SEC. 11007. GENERAL REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO TERMINATION OF SINGLE-EMPLOYER PLANS BY PLAN ADMINISTRATORS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 4041 (29 U.S.C. 1341) is amended by striking out subsections (a) through (c) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 4041. (a) GENERAL RULES GOVERNING SINGLE-EMPLOYER PLAN TERMINATIONS.—

"(1) EXCLUSIVE MEANS OF PLAN TERMINATION.—Except in the case of a termination for which proceedings are otherwise instituted by the corporation as provided in section 4042, a single-employer plan may be terminated only in a standard termination under subsection (b) or a distress termination under subsection (c).

"(2) 60-day notice of intent to terminate.—Not less than 60 days before the proposed termination date of a standard termination under subsection (b) or a distress termination under subsection (c), the plan administrator shall provide to each affected party (other than the corporation in the case of a standard termination) a written notice of intent to terminate stating that such termination is intended and the proposed termination date. The written notice shall include any related additional information required in regulations of the corporation.

"(3) Adherence to collective bargaining agreements.—The corporation shall not proceed with a termination of a plan under this section if the termination would violate the terms and conditions of an existing collective bargaining agreement. Nothing in the preceding sentence shall be construed as limiting the authority of the corporation to institute proceedings to involuntarily terminate a plan under section 4042.".

(b) Definitions Relating to Sufficiency.—Section 4041(d) (29 U.S.C. 1341(d)) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) Sufficiency.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) Sufficiency for benefit commitments.—A single-employer plan is sufficient for benefit commitments if there is no amount of unfunded benefit commitments under the plan.

"(2) Sufficiency for guaranteed benefits.—A single-employer plan is sufficient for guaranteed benefits if there is no amount of unfunded guaranteed benefits under the plan.".

SEC. 11008. STANDARD TERMINATION OF SINGLE-EMPLOYER PLANS.

(a) In General.—Section 4041 (as amended by section 11007 of this Act) is further amended by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection:

"(b) Standard Termination of Single-Employer Plans.—

"(1) General requirements.—A single-employer plan may terminate under a standard termination only if—

"(A) the plan administrator provides the 60-day advance notice of intent to terminate to affected parties required under subsection (a)(2),

"(B) the requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (2) are met,

"(C) the corporation does not issue a notice of noncompliance under subparagraph (C) of paragraph (2), and

"(D) when the final distribution of assets occurs, the plan is sufficient for benefit commitments (determined as of the termination date).

"(2) Termination procedure.—

"(A) Notice to the corporation.—As soon as practicable after the date on which the notice of intent to terminate is provided pursuant to subsection (a)(2), the plan administrator shall send a notice to the corporation setting forth—

"(i) certification by an enrolled actuary—

"(I) of the projected amount of the assets of the plan (as of a proposed date of final distribution of assets),

"(II) of the actuarial present value (as of such date) of the benefit commitments (determined as of the proposed termination date) under the plan, and

"(III) that the plan is projected to be sufficient (as of such proposed date of final distribution) for such benefit commitments,

"(ii) such information as the corporation may prescribe in regulations as necessary to enable the corporation to make determinations under subparagraph (C), and

"(iii) certification by the plan administrator that the information on which the enrolled actuary based the certification under clause (i) and the information provided to the corporation under clause (ii) are accurate and complete.

"(B) Notice to participants and beneficiaries of benefit commitments.—No later than the date on which a notice is sent by the plan administrator under subparagraph (A), the plan administrator shall send a notice to each person who is a participant or beneficiary under the plan—

"(i) specifying the amount of such person's benefit commitments (if any) as of the proposed termination date and the benefit form on the basis of which such amount is determined, and

"(ii) including the following information used in determining such benefit commitments:

"(I) the length of service,

"(II) the age of the participant or beneficiary,

"(III) wages,

"(IV) the assumptions, including the interest rate, and

"(V) such other information as the corporation may require.

Such notice shall be written in such manner as is likely to be understood by the participant or beneficiary and as may be prescribed in regulations of the corporation.

"(C) Notice from the corporation of noncompliance.—

"(i) In general.—Within 60 days after receipt of the notice under subparagraph (A), the corporation shall issue a notice of noncompliance to the plan administrator if—

"(I) it has reason to believe that any requirement of subsection (a)(2) or subparagraph (A) or (B) has not been met, or

"(II) it otherwise determines, on the basis of information provided by affected parties or otherwise obtained by the corporation, that there is reason to believe that the plan is not sufficient for benefit commitments.

"(ii) Extension.—The corporation and the plan administrator may agree to extend the 60-day period referred to in clause (i) by a written agreement signed by the corporation and the plan administrator before the expiration of the 60-day period. The 60-day period shall be extended as provided in the agreement and may be further extended by subsequent written agreements signed by the corporation and the plan administrator made before the expiration of a previously agreed upon extension of the 60-day period. Any extension may be made upon such terms and conditions (including the payment of benefits) as are agreed upon by the corporation and the plan administrator.

"(D) Final distribution of assets in absence of notice of noncompliance.—The plan administrator shall commence the final distribution of assets pursuant to the standard termination of the plan as soon as practicable after the expiration of the 60-day (or extended) period referred to in subparagraph (C), but such final distribution may occur only if—

"(i) the plan administrator has not received during such period a notice of noncompliance from the corporation under subparagraph (C), and

"(ii) when such final distribution occurs, the plan is sufficient for benefit commitments (determined as of the termination date).

"(3) Methods of final distribution of assets.—

"(A) In general.—In connection with any final distribution of assets pursuant to the standard termination of the plan under this subsection, the plan administrator shall distribute the assets in accordance with section 4044. In distributing such assets, the plan administrator shall—

"(i) purchase irrevocable commitments from an insurer to provide the benefit commitments under the plan and all other benefits (if any) under the plan to which assets are required to be allocated under section 4044, or

"(ii) in accordance with the provisions of the plan and any applicable regulations of the corporation, otherwise fully provide the benefit commitments under the plan and all other benefits (if any) under the plan to which assets are required to be allocated under section 4044.

"(B) Certification to the corporation of final distribution of assets.—Within 30 days after the final distribution of assets is completed pursuant to the standard termination of the plan under this subsection, the plan administrator shall send a notice to the corporation certifying that the assets of the plan have been distributed in accordance with the provisions of subparagraph (A) so as to pay the benefit commitments under the plan and all other benefits under the plan to which assets are required to be allocated under section 4044.

"(4) Continuing authority.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to preclude the continued exercise by the corporation, after the termination date of a plan terminated in a standard termination under this subsection, of its authority under section 4003 with respect to matters relating to the termination. A certification under paragraph (3)(B) shall not affect the corporation's obligations under section 4022.".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Section 4041(f) (29 U.S.C. 1341(f)) is amended to read as follows:

"(f) Limitation on the Conversion of a Defined Benefit Plan to a Defined Contribution Plan.—The adoption of an amendment to a plan which causes the plan to become a plan described in section 4021(b)(1) constitutes a termination of the plan. Such an amendment may take effect only after the plan satisfies the requirements for standard termination under subsection (b) or distress termination under subsection (c).".

(c) Authority for 60-Day Extension.—In the case of a standard termination of a plan under section 4041(b) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as amended by this section) with respect to which a notice of intent to terminate is filed before 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation may, without the consent of the plan administrator, extend the 60-day period under section 4041(b)(2)(C)(i) of such Act (as so amended) for a period not to exceed 60 days.

(d) Special Temporary Rule.—

(1) Requirements to be met before final distribution of assets.—In the case of the termination of a single-employer plan described in paragraph (2) with respect to which the amount payable to the employer pursuant to section 4044(d) exceeds $1,000,000 (determined as of the proposed date of final distribution of assets), the final distribution of assets pursuant to such termination may not occur unless the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation—

(A) determines that the assets of the plan are sufficient for benefit commitments

(within the meaning of section 4041(d)(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as amended by section 11007)) under the plan, and

(B) issues to the plan administrator a written notice setting forth the determination described in subparagraph (A).

(2) Plans to which subsection applies.—A single-employer plan is described in this paragraph if—

(A) the plan administrator has filed a notice of intent to terminate with the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, and—

(i) the filing was made before January 1, 1986, and the Corporation has not issued a notice of sufficiency for such plan before the date of the enactment of this Act, or

(ii) the filing is made on or after January 1, 1986, and before 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act and the Corporation has not issued a notice of sufficiency for such plan before the date of the enactment of this Act, and

(B) of the persons who are (as of the termination date) participants in the plan, the lesser of 10 percent or 200 have filed complaints with the Corporation regarding such termination—

(i) in the case of plans described in subparagraph (A)(i), before 15 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, or

(ii) in any other case, before the later of 15 days after the date of the enactment of this Act or 45 days after the date of the filing of such notice.

(3) Consideration of complaints.—The Corporation shall consider and respond to such complaints not later than 90 days after the date on which the Corporation makes the determination described in paragraph (1)(A). The Corporation may hold informal hearings to expedite consideration of such complaints. Any such hearing shall be exempt from the requirements of chapter 5 of title 5, United States Code.

(4) Delay on issuance of notice.—

(A) General rule.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the Corporation shall not issue any notice described in paragraph (1)(B) until 90 days after the date on which the Corporation makes the determination described in paragraph (1)(A).

(B) Exception in cases of substantial business hardship.—Except in the case of an acquisition, takeover, or leveraged buyout, the preceding provisions of this subsection shall not apply if the contributing sponsor demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Corporation that the contributing sponsor is experiencing substantial business hardship. For purposes of this subparagraph, a contributing sponsor shall be considered as experiencing substantial business hardship if the contributing sponsor has been operating, and can demonstrate that the contributing sponsor will continue to operate, at an economic loss.

SEC. 11009. DISTRESS TERMINATION OF SINGLE-EMPLOYER PLANS.

(a) In General.—Section 4041 (as amended by sections 11007 and 11008 of this Act) is further amended by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) Distress Termination of Single-Employer Plans.—

"(1) In general.—A single-employer plan may terminate under a distress termination only if—

"(A) the plan administrator provides the 60-day advance notice of intent to terminate to affected parties required under subsection (a)(2),

"(B) the requirements of subparagraph (A) of paragraph (2) are met, and

"(C) the corporation determines that the requirements of subparagraph (B) of paragraph (2) are met.

"(2) Termination requirements.—

"(A) Information submitted to the corporation.—As soon as practicable after the date on which the notice of intent to terminate is provided pursuant to subsection (a)(2), the plan administrator shall provide the corporation, in such form as may be prescribed by the corporation in regulations, the following information:

"(i) such information as the corporation may prescribe by regulation as necessary to make determinations under subparagraph (B) and paragraph (3);

"(ii) certification by an enrolled actuary of—

"(I) the amount (as of the proposed termination date) of the current value of the assets of the plan,

"(II) the actuarial present value (as of such date) of the benefit commitments under the plan,

"(III) whether the plan is sufficient for benefit commitments as of such date,

"(IV) the actuarial present value (as of such date) of benefits under the plan guaranteed under section 4022, and

"(V) whether the plan is sufficient for guaranteed benefits as of such date;

"(iii) in any case in which the plan is not sufficient for benefit commitments as of such date—

"(I) the name and address of each participant and beneficiary under the plan as of such date, and

"(II) such other information as shall be prescribed by the corporation by regulation as necessary to enable the corporation (or its designee under section 4049(b)) to be able to make payments to participants and beneficiaries as required under section 4049; and

"(iv) certification by the plan administrator that the information on which the enrolled actuary based the certifications under clause (ii) and the information provided to the corporation under clauses (i) and (iii) are accurate and complete.

"(B) Determination by the corporation of necessary distress criteria.—Upon receipt of the notice of intent to terminate required under subsection (a)(2) and the information required under subparagraph (A), the corporation shall determine whether the requirements of this subparagraph are met as provided in clause (i), (ii), or (iii). The requirements of this subparagraph are met if each person who is (as of the termination date) a contributing sponsor of such plan or a substantial member of such sponsor's controlled group meets the requirements of any of the following clauses:

"(i) Liquidation in bankruptcy or insolvency proceedings.—The requirements of this clause are met by a person if—

"(I) such person has filed or has had filed against such person, as of the termination date, a petition seeking liquidation in a case under title 11, United States Code, or under any similar law of a State or political subdivision of a State, and

"(II) such case has not, as of the termination date, been dismissed.

"(ii) Reorganization in bankruptcy or insolvency proceedings.—The requirements of this clause are met by a person if—

"(I) such person has filed, or has had filed against such person, as of the termination date, a petition seeking reorganization in a case under title 11, United States Code, or under any similar law of a State or political subdivision of a State (or a case described in clause (i) filed by or against such person has been converted, as of such date, to such a case in which reorganization is sought),

"(II) such case has not, as of the termination date, been dismissed, and

"(III) the bankruptcy court (or other appropriate court in a case under such similar law of a State or political subdivision) approves the termination.

"(iii) Termination required to enable payment of debts while staying in business or to avoid unreasonably burdensome pension costs caused by declining workforce.—The requirements of this clause are met by a person if such person demonstrates to the satisfaction of the corporation that—

"(I) unless a distress termination occurs, such person will be unable to pay such person's debts when due and will be unable to continue in business, or

"(II) the costs of providing pension coverage have become unreasonably burdensome to such person, solely as a result of a decline of such person's workforce covered as participants under all single-employer plans of which such person is a contributing sponsor.

"(C) Substantial member.—For purposes of subparagraph (B), the term 'substantial member' of a controlled group means a person whose assets comprise 5 percent or more of the total assets of the controlled group as a whole.

"(D) Notification of determinations by the corporation.—The corporation shall notify the plan administrator as soon as practicable of its determinations made pursuant to subparagraph (B).

"(3) Termination procedure.—

"(A) Determinations by the corporation relating to plan sufficiency for guaranteed benefits and for benefit commitments.—If the corporation determines that the requirements for a distress termination set forth in paragraphs (1) and (2) are met, the corporation shall—

"(i) determine that the plan is sufficient for guaranteed benefits (as of the termination date) or that the corporation is unable to make such determination on the basis of information made available to the corporation,

"(ii) determine that the plan is sufficient for benefit commitments (as of the termination date) or that the corporation is unable to make such determination on the basis of information made available to the corporation, and

"(iii) notify the plan administrator of the determinations made pursuant to this subparagraph as soon as practicable.

"(B) Implementation of termination.—After the corporation notifies the plan administrator of its determinations under subparagraph (A), the termination of the plan shall be carried out as soon as practicable, as provided in clause (i), (ii), or (iii).

"(i) Cases of sufficiency for benefit commitments.—In any case in which the corporation determines that the plan is sufficient for benefit commitments, the plan administrator shall proceed to distribute the plan's assets, and make certification to the corporation with respect to such distribution, in the manner described in subsection (b)(3), and shall take such other actions as may be appropriate to carry out the termination of the plan.

"(ii) Cases of sufficiency for guaranteed benefits without a finding of sufficiency for benefit commitments.—In any case in which the corporation determines that the plan is sufficient for guaranteed benefits, but further determines that it is unable to determine that the plan is sufficient for benefit commitments on the basis of the information made available to it—

"(I) the plan administrator shall proceed to distribute the plan's assets in the manner described in subsection (b)(3), make certification to the corporation that the distribution has occurred, and take such actions as may be appropriate to carry out the termination of the plan, and

"(II) the corporation shall establish a separate trust in connection with the plan for purposes of section 4049.

"(iii) Cases without any finding of sufficiency.—In any case in which the corporation determines that it is unable to determine that the plan is sufficient for guaranteed benefits on the basis of the information made available to it—

"(I) the corporation shall commence proceedings in accordance with section 4042, and

"(II) the corporation shall establish a separate trust in connection with the plan for purposes of section 4049 unless the corporation determines that all benefit commitments under the plan are benefits guaranteed by the corporation under section 4022.

"(C) Finding after authorized commencement of termination that plan is unable to pay benefits.—

"(i) Finding with respect to benefit commitments which are not guaranteed benefits.—If, after the plan administrator has begun to terminate the plan as authorized under subparagraph (B)(i), the plan administrator finds that the plan is unable, or will be unable, to pay benefit commitments which are not benefits guaranteed by the corporation under section 4022, the plan administrator shall notify the corporation of such finding as soon as practicable thereafter. If the corporation concurs in the finding of the plan administrator (or the corporation itself makes such a finding) the corporation shall take the actions set forth in subparagraph (B)(ii)(II) relating to the trust established for purposes of section 4049.

"(ii) Finding with respect to guaranteed benefits.—If, after the plan administrator has begun to terminate the plan as authorized by subparagraph (B) (i) or (ii), the plan administrator finds that the plan is unable, or will be unable, to pay all benefits under the plan which are guaranteed by the corporation under section 4022, the plan administrator shall notify the corporation of such finding as soon as practicable thereafter. If the corporation concurs in the finding of the plan administrator (or the corporation itself makes such a finding), the corporation shall institute appropriate proceedings under section 4042.

"(D) Administration of the plan during interim period.—

"(i) In general.—The plan administrator shall—

"(I) meet the requirements of clause (ii) for the period commencing on the date on which the plan administrator provides a notice of distress termination to the corporation under subsection (a)(2) and ending on the date on which the plan administrator receives notification from the corporation of its determinations under subparagraph (A), and

"(II) meet the requirements of clause (ii) commencing on the date on which the plan administrator or the corporation makes a finding under subparagraph (C)(ii).

"(ii) Requirements.—The requirements of this clause are met by the plan administrator if the plan administrator—

"(I) refrains from distributing assets or taking any other actions to carry out the proposed termination of this subsection,

"(II) pays benefits attributable to employer contributions, other than death benefits, only in the form of an annuity,

"(III) does not use plan assets to purchase irrevocable commitments to provide benefits from an insurer, and

"(IV) continues to pay all benefit commitments under the plan, but, commencing on the proposed termination date, limits the payment of benefits under the plan to those benefits which are guaranteed by the corporation under section 4022 or to which assets are required to be allocated under section 4044.

In the event the plan administrator is later determined not to have met the requirements for distress termination, any benefits which are not paid solely by reason of compliance with subclause (IV) shall be due and payable immediately (together with interest, at a reasonable rate, in accordance with regulations of the corporation).".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—Section 4041 (as amended by the preceding provisions of this title) is further amended—

(1) by striking out subsection (e); and

(2) by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (e).

SEC. 11010. TERMINATION PROCEEDINGS; DUTIES OF THE CORPORATION.

(a) Mandatory Commencement of Proceedings Upon Inability of Single-Employer Plan To Pay Benefits That Are Currently Due.—

(1) In general.—Section 4042(a) (29 U.S.C. 1342(a)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (2), by striking out "is" and inserting in lieu thereof "will be"; and

(B) by inserting at the beginning of the matter following paragraph (4) the following new sentence: "The corporation shall as soon as practicable institute proceedings under this section to terminate a single-employer plan whenever the corporation determines that the plan does not have assets available to pay benefits which are currently due under the terms of the plan".

(2) Conforming amendments.—

(A) Section 4042(b)(1) (29 U.S.C. 1342(b)(1)) is amended, in the first sentence, by inserting "or is required under subsection (a) to institute proceedings under this section," after "to a plan".

(B) Section 4042(c) (29 U.S.C. 1342(c)) is amended in the first sentence by striking out "If the corporation" and all that follows down through "has determined" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "If the corporation is required under subsection (a) of this section to commence proceedings under this section with respect to a plan or, after issuing a notice under this section to a plan administrator, has determined".

(b) Establishment of Section 4049 Trust.—Section 4042 is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(i) In any case in which a plan is terminated under this section in a termination proceeding initiated by the corporation pursuant to subsection (a), the corporation shall establish a separate trust in connection with the plan for purposes of section 4049, unless the corporation determines that all benefit commitments under the plan are benefits guaranteed by the corporation under section 4022 or that there is no amount of unfunded benefit commitments under the plan.".

(c) Conforming Amendment.—The heading for section 4042 is amended to read as follows:

"INSTITUTION OF TERMINATION PROCEEDINGS BY THE CORPORATION".

SEC. 11011. AMENDMENTS TO LIABILITY PROVISIONS; LIABILITIES RELATING TO BENEFIT COMMITMENTS IN EXCESS OF BENEFITS GUARANTEED BY THE CORPORATION.

(a) Liability for Distress Terminations and Terminations by the Corporation.—Section 4062 (29 U.S.C. 1362) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f); and

(2) by striking out so much as precedes subsection (f) (as redesignated) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"LIABILITY FOR TERMINATION OF SINGLE-EMPLOYER PLANS UNDER A DISTRESS TERMINATION OR A TERMINATION BY THE CORPORATION

"Sec. 4062. (a) In General.—In any case in which a single-employer plan is terminated in a distress termination under section 4041(c) or a termination otherwise instituted by the corporation under section 4042, any person who is, on the termination date, a contributing sponsor of the plan or a member of such a contributing sponsor's controlled group shall incur liability under this section. The liability under this section of all such persons shall be joint and several. The liability under this section consists of—

"(1) liability to the corporation, to the extent provided in subsection (b),

"(2) liability to the trust established pursuant to section 4041(c)(3)(B) (ii) or (iii) or section 4042(i), to the extent provided in subsection (c), and

"(3) liability to the trustee appointed under subsection (b) or (c) of section 4042, to the extent provided in subsection (d).

"(b) Liability to the Corporation.—

"(1) Amount of liability.—

"(A) In general.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the liability to the corporation of a person described in subsection (a) shall consist of the sum of—

"(i) the lesser of—

"(I) the total amount of unfunded guaranteed benefits (as of the termination date) of all participants and beneficiaries under the plan, or

"(II) 30 percent of the collective net worth of all persons described in subsection (a), and

"(ii) the excess (if any) of—

"(I) 75 percent of the amount described in clause (i)(I), over

"(II) the amount described in clause (i)(II), together with interest (at a reasonable rate) calculated from the termination date in accordance with regulations prescribed by the corporation.

"(B) Special rule in case of subsequent insufficiency.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), in any case described in section 4041(c)(3)(C)(ii), actuarial present values shall be determined as of the date of the notice to the corporation (or the finding by the corporation) described in such section.

"(2) Payment of liability.—

"(A) In general.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the liability to the corporation under this subsection shall be due and payable to the corporation as of the termination date, in cash or securities acceptable to the corporation.

"(B) Special rule.—Payment of the liability under paragraph (1)(A)(ii) shall be made under commercially reasonable terms prescribed by the corporation. The parties involved shall make a reasonable effort to reach agreement on such commercially reasonable terms. Any such terms prescribed by the corporation shall provide for deferral of 50 percent of any amount of liability otherwise payable for any year under this subparagraph if a person subject to such liability demonstrates to the satisfaction of the corporation that no person subject to such liability has any individual pre-tax profits for such person's fiscal year ending during such year.

"(3) Alternative arrangements.—The corporation and any person liable under this section may agree to alternative arrangements for the satisfaction of liability to the corporation under this subsection.

"(c) Liability to Section 4049 Trust.—

"(1) Amount of liability.—

"(A) In general.—In any case in which there is an outstanding amount of benefit commitments under a plan terminated under section 4041(c) or 4042, a person described in subsection (a) shall be subject to liability under this subsection to the trust established under section 4041(c)(3)(B) (ii) or (iii) or section 4042(i) in connection with the terminated plan. Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the liability of such person under this subsection shall consist of the lesser of—

"(i) 75 percent of the total outstanding amount of benefit commitments under the plan, or

"(ii) 15 percent of the actuarial present value (determined as of the termination date on the basis of assumptions prescribed by the corporation for purposes of section 4044) of all benefit commitments under the plan.

"(B) Special rule in case of subsequent insufficiency.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)—

"(i) Plans insufficient for guaranteed benefits.—In any case described in section 4041(c)(3)(C)(ii), actuarial present values shall be determined as of the date of the notice to the corporation (or the finding by the corporation) described in such section.

"(ii) Plans sufficient for guaranteed benefits but insufficient for benefit entitlements.—In any case described in section 4041(c)(3)(C)(i) but not described in section 4041(c)(3)(C)(ii), actuarial present values shall be determined as of the date on which the final distribution of assets is completed.

"(2) Payment of Liability.—

"(A) General rule.—Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, payment of a person's liability under this subsection shall be made for liability payment years under commercially reasonable terms prescribed by the fiduciary designated by the corporation pursuant to section 4049(b)(1)(A). Such fiduciary and the liable persons assessed liability under this subsection shall make a reasonable effort to reach agreement on such commercially reasonable terms.

"(B) Special rule for plans with low amounts of liability.—In any case in which the amount described in paragraph (1)(A) is less than $100,000, the requirements of subparagraph (A) may be satisfied by payment of such liability over 10 liability payment years in equal annual installments (with interest at the rate determined under section 6621(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954). The corporation may, by regulation, increase the dollar amount referred to in this subparagraph as it determines appropriate, taking into account reasonable administrative costs of trusts established under section 4041(c)(3)(B) (ii) or (iii) or section 4042(i).

"(C) Deferral of payments.—The terms for payment provided for under subparagraph (A) or (B) shall also provide for deferral of 75 percent of any amount of liability otherwise payable for any liability payment year if a person subject to such liability demonstrates to the satisfaction of the corporation that no person subject to such liability has any individual pre-tax profits for such person's fiscal year ending during such year. The amount of liability so deferred is payable only after payment in full of any amount of liability under subsection (b) in connection with the termination of the same plan which has been deferred pursuant to terms provided for under subsection (b)(2)(B).

"(d) Liability to Section 4042 Trustee.—A person described in subsection (a) shall be subject to liability under this subsection to the trustee appointed under subsection (b) or (c) of section 4042. The liability of such person under this subsection shall consist of—

"(1) the outstanding balance of the accumulated funding deficiencies (within the meaning of section 302(a)(2) of this Act and section 412(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) of the plan (if any) (which, for purposes of this subparagraph, shall include the amount of any increase in such accumulated funding deficiencies of the plan which would result if all pending applications for waivers of the minimum funding standard under section 303 of this Act or section 412(d) of such Code and for extensions of the amortization period under section 304 of this Act or section 412(e) of such Code with respect to such plan were denied and if no additional contributions (other than those already made by the termination date) were made for the plan year in which the termination date occurs or for any previous plan year),

"(2) the outstanding balance of the amount of waived funding deficiencies of the plan waived before such date under section 303 of this Act or section 412(d) of such Code (if any), and

"(3) the outstanding balance of the amount of decreases in the minimum funding standard allowed before such date under section 304 of this Act or section 412(e) of such Code (if any),

together with interest (at a reasonable rate) calculated from the termination date in accordance with regulations prescribed by the corporation. The liability under this subsection shall be due and payable to such trustee as of the termination date, in cash or securities acceptable to such trustee.

"(e) Definitions.—

"(1) Collective net worth of persons subject to liability.—

"(A) In general.—The collective net worth of persons subject to liability in connection with a plan termination consists of the sum of the individual net worths of all persons who—

"(i) have individual net worths which are greater than zero, and

"(ii) are (as of the termination date) contributing sponsors of the terminated plan or members of their controlled groups.

"(B) Determination of net worth.—For purposes of this paragraph, the net worth of a person is—

"(i) determined on whatever basis best reflects, in the determination of the corporation, the current status of the person's operations and prospects at the time chosen for determining the net worth of the person, and

"(ii) increased by the amount of any transfers of assets made by the person which are determined by the corporation to be improper under the circumstances, including any such transfers which would be inappropriate under title 11, United States Code, if the person were a debtor in a case under chapter 7 of such title.

"(C) Timing of determination.—For purposes of this paragraph, determinations of net worth shall be made as of a day chosen by the corporation (during the 120-day period ending with the termination date) and shall be computed without regard to any liability under this section.

"(2) Pre-tax profits.—The term 'pre-tax profits' means—

"(A) except as provided in subparagraph (B), for any fiscal year of any person, such person's consolidated net income (excluding any extraordinary charges to income and including any extraordinary credits to income) for such fiscal year, as shown on audited financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, or

"(B) for any fiscal year of an organization described in section 501(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, the excess of income over expenses (as such terms are defined for such organizations under generally accepted accounting principles), before provision for or deduction of Federal or other income tax, any contribution to any single-employer plan of which such person is a contributing sponsor at any time during the period beginning on the termination date and ending with the end of such fiscal year, and any amounts required to be paid for such fiscal year under this section. The corporation may by regulation require such information to be filed on such forms as may be necessary to determine the existence and amount of such pre-tax profits.

"(3) Liability payment years.—The liability payment years in connection with a terminated plan consist of the consecutive one-year periods following the last plan year preceding the termination date, excluding the first such year in any case in which the first such year ends less than 180 days after the termination date.".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—Subsection (f) of section 4062 (as redesignated by subsection (a)(1)) is amended by inserting "Treatment of Substantial Cessation of Operations.—" after "(f)".

(c) Amendments to the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.—

(1) Time for deduction of certain employer liability payments.—Paragraph (3) of section 404(g) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to certain employer liability payments considered as contributions) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) Timing of deduction of contributions.—

"(A) In general.—Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, any payment described in paragraph (1) shall (subject to the last sentence of subsection (a)(1)(A)) be deductible under this section when paid.

"(B) Contributions under standard terminations.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply (and subsection (a)(1)(A) shall apply) to any payments described in paragraph (1) which are paid to terminate a plan under section 4041(b) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 to the extent such payments result in the assets of the plan being in excess of the total amount of benefits under such plan which are guaranteed by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation under section 4022 of such Act.

"(C) Contributions to certain trusts.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any payment described in paragraph (1) which is made under section 4062(c) of such Act and such payment shall be deductible at such time as may be prescribed in regulations which are based on principles similar to the principles of subsection (a)(1)(A).".

(2) References to erisa.—Subsection (g) of section 404 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) References to employee retirement income security act of 1974.—For purposes of this subsection, any reference to a section of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 shall be treated as a reference to such section as in effect on the date of the enactment of the Single-Employer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1986.".

(3) Effective date.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to payments made after January 1, 1986, in taxable years ending after such date.

SEC. 11012. DISTRIBUTION TO PARTICIPANTS AND BENEFICIARIES OF LIABILITY PAYMENTS TO SECTION 4049 TRUST.

(a) In General.—Subtitle C of title IV is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"DISTRIBUTION TO PARTICIPANTS AND BENEFICIARIES OF LIABILITY PAYMENTS TO SECTION 4049 TRUST

"Sec. 4049. (a) Trust Requirements.—The requirements of this section apply to a trust established by the corporation in connection with a terminated plan pursuant to section 4041(c)(3)(B) (ii) or (iii). The trust shall be used exclusively for—

"(1) receiving liability payments under section 4062(c) from the persons who were (as of the termination date) contributing sponsors of the terminated plan and members of their controlled groups,

"(2) making distributions as provided in this section to the persons who were (as of the termination date) participants and beneficiaries under the terminated plan, and

"(3) defraying the reasonable administrative expenses incurred in carrying out responsibilities under this section.

The trust shall be maintained for such period of time as is necessary to receive all liability payments required to be made to the trust under section 4062(c) with respect to the terminated plan and to make all distributions required to be made to participants and beneficiaries under this section with respect to the terminated plan.

"(b) Designation of Fiduciary by the Corporation.—

"(1) Purposes for designation of fiduciary.—

"(A) Collection of liability.—The corporation shall designate a fiduciary (within the meaning of section 3(21)) to serve as trustee of the trust for purposes of conducting negotiations and assessing and collecting liability pursuant to section 4062(c).

"(B) Administration of trust.—

"(i) Corporation's functions.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the corporation shall serve as trustee of the trust for purposes of administering the trust, including making distributions from the trust to participants and beneficiaries.

"(ii) Designation of fiduciary if cost-effective.—If the corporation determines that it would be cost-effective to do so, it may designate a fiduciary (within the meaning of section 3(21)), including the fiduciary designated under subparagraph (A), to perform the functions described in clause (i).

"(2) Fiduciary requirements.—A fiduciary designated under paragraph (1) shall be—

"(A) independent of each contributing sponsor of the plan and the members of such sponsor's controlled group, and

"(B) subject to the requirements of part 4 of subtitle B of title I (other than section 406(a)) as if such trust were a plan subject to such part.

"(c) Distributions From Trust.—

"(1) In general.—Not later than 30 days after the end of each liability payment year (described in section 4062(e)(3)) with respect to a terminated single-employer plan, the corporation, or its designee under subsection (b), shall distribute from the trust maintained pursuant to subsection (a) to each person who was (as of the termination date) a participant or beneficiary under the plan—

"(A) in any case not described in subparagraph (B), an amount equal to the outstanding amount of benefit commitments to such person under the plan (including interest calculated from the termination date), to the extent not previously paid under this paragraph, or

"(B) in any case in which the balance in the trust at the end of such year which is in cash or may be prudently converted to cash (after taking into account liability payments received under subsection (a)(1) and administrative expenses paid under subsection (a)(3)) is less than the total of all amounts described in subparagraph (A) in connection with all persons who were (as of the termination date) participants and beneficiaries under the terminated plan, the product derived by multiplying—

"(i) the amount described in subparagraph (A) in connection with each such person, by

"(ii) a fraction—

"(I) the numerator of which is such balance in the trust, and

"(II) the denominator of which is equal to the total of all amounts described in subparagraph (A) in connection with all persons who were (as of the termination date) participants and beneficiaries under the terminated plan.

"(2) Carry-over of minimal payment amounts.—The corporation, or its designee under subsection (b), may withhold a payment to any person under this subsection in connection with any liability payment year (other than the last liability payment year with respect to which payments under paragraph (1) are payable) if such payment does not exceed $100. In any case in which such a payment is so withheld, the payment to such person in connection with the next following liability payment year shall be increased by the amount of such withheld payment.

"(d) Regulations.—The corporation may issue such regulations as it considers necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.".

(b) Tax-Exempt Status for Trusts Described in Section 4049 of ERISA.—Subsection (c) of section 501 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to list of tax-exempt organizations) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(24) A trust described in section 4049 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as in effect on the date of the enactment of the Single-Employer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1986).".

(c) Rollovers of Payments From Trust Allowed.—Paragraph (6) of section 402(a) of such Code (relating to special rollover rules) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(G) Payments from certain pension plan termination trusts.—If—

"(i) any amount is paid or distributed to a recipient from a trust described in section 501(c)(24),

"(ii) the recipient transfers any portion of the property received in such distribution to an eligible retirement plan described in subclause (I) or (II) of paragraph (5)(E)(iv), and

"(iii) in the case of a distribution of property other than money, the amount so transferred consists of the property distributed, then the portion of the distribution so transferred shall be treated as a distribution described in paragraph (5)(A).".

(d) Special Delayed Payment Rule.—In the case of a distress termination under section 4041(c) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as amended by section 11009) pursuant to a notice of intent to terminate filed before January 1, 1987, no payment of liability otherwise payable as provided in section 4062(c)(2)(B) of such Act (as amended by this section) shall be required to be made before January 1, 1989.

SEC. 11013. TREATMENT OF TRANSACTIONS TO EVADE LIABILITY; EFFECT OF CORPORATE REORGANIZATION.

(a) In General.—Subtitle D of title IV is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"TREATMENT OF TRANSACTIONS TO EVADE LIABILITY; EFFECT OF CORPORATE REORGANIZATION

"Sec. 4069. (a) Treatment of Transactions to Evade Liability.—If a principal purpose of any person in entering into any transaction is to evade liability to which such person would be subject under this subtitle and the transaction becomes effective within five years before the termination date of the termination on which such liability would be based, then such person and the members of such person's controlled group (determined as of the termination date) shall be subject to liability under this subtitle in connection with such termination as if such person were a contributing sponsor of the terminated plan as of the termination date. This subsection shall not cause any person to be liable under this subtitle in connection with such plan termination for any increases or improvements in the benefits provided under the plan which are adopted after the date on which the transaction referred to in the preceding sentence becomes effective.

"(b) Effect of Corporate Reorganization.—For purposes of this subtitle, the following rules apply in the case of certain corporate reorganizations:

"(1) Change of identity, form, etc.—If a person ceases to exist by reason of a reorganization which involves a mere change in identity, form, or place of organization, however effected, a successor corporation resulting from such reorganization shall be treated as the person to whom this subtitle applies.

"(2) Liquidation into parent corporation.—If a person ceases to exist by reason of liquidation into a parent corporation, the parent corporation shall be treated as the person to whom this subtitle applies.

"(3) Merger, consolidation, or division.—If a person ceases to exist by reason of a merger, consolidation, or division, the successor corporation or corporations shall be treated as the person to whom this subtitle applies.".

(b) Effective Date.—Section 4069(a) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as added by subsection (a)) shall apply with respect to transactions becoming effective on or after January 1, 1986.

SEC. 11014. ENFORCEMENT AUTHORITY RELATING TO TERMINATIONS OF SINGLE-EMPLOYER PLANS.

(a) Private Rights of Action.—Subtitle D of title IV (as amended by section 11013) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"ENFORCEMENT AUTHORITY RELATING TO TERMINATIONS OF SINGLE-EMPLOYER PLANS

"Sec. 4070. (a) In General.—Any person who is with respect to a single-employer plan a fiduciary, contributing sponsor, member of a contributing sponsor's controlled group, participant, or beneficiary, and is adversely affected by an act or practice of any party (other than the corporation) in violation of any provision of section 4041, 4042, 4049, 4062, 4063, 4064, or 4069, or who is an employee organization representing such a participant or beneficiary so adversely affected for purposes of collective bargaining with respect to such plan, may bring an action—

"(1) to enjoin such act or practice, or

"(2) to obtain other appropriate equitable relief (A) to redress such violation or (B) to enforce such provision.

"(b) Status of Plan as Party to Action and With Respect to Legal Process.—A single-employer plan may be sued under this section as an entity. Service of summons, subpoena, or other legal process of a court upon a trustee or an administrator of a single-employer plan in such trustee's or administrator's capacity as such shall constitute service upon the plan. If a plan has not designated in the summary plan description of the plan an individual as agent for the service of legal process, service upon any contributing sponsor of the plan shall constitute such service. Any money judgment under this section against a single-employer plan shall be enforceable only against the plan as an entity and shall not be enforceable against any other person unless liability against such person is established in such person's individual capacity.

"(c) Jurisdiction and Venue.—The district courts of the United States shall have exclusive jurisdiction of civil actions under this section. Such actions may be brought in the district where the plan is administered, where the violation took place, or where a defendant resides or may be found, and process may be served in any other district where a defendant resides or may be found. The district courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction, without regard to the amount in controversy or the citizenship of the parties, to grant the relief provided for in subsection (a) in any action.

"(d) Right of Corporation to Intervene.—A copy of the complaint or notice of appeal in any action under this section shall be served upon the corporation by certified mail. The corporation shall have the right in its discretion to intervene in any action.

"(e) Awards of Costs and Expenses.—

"(1) General rule.—In any action brought under this section, the court in its discretion may award all or a portion of the costs and expenses incurred in connection with such action, including reasonable attorney's fees, to any party who prevails or substantially prevails in such action.

"(2) Exemption for plans.—Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this subsection, no plan shall be required in any action to pay any costs and expenses (including attorney's fees).

"(f) Limitation on Actions.—

"(1) In general.—Except as provided in paragraph (3), an action under this section may not be brought after the later of—

"(A) 6 years after the date on which the cause of action arose, or

"(B) 3 years after the applicable date specified in paragraph (2).

"(2) Applicable date.—

"(A) General rule.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the applicable date specified in this paragraph is the earliest date on which the plaintiff acquired or should have acquired actual knowledge of the existence of such cause of action.

"(B) Special rule for plaintiffs who are fiduciaries.—In the case of a plaintiff who is a fiduciary bringing the action in the exercise of fiduciary duties, the applicable date specified in this paragraph is the date on which the plaintiff became a fiduciary with respect to the plan if such date is later than the date described in subparagraph (A).

"(3) Cases of fraud or concealment.—In the case of fraud or concealment, the period described in paragraph (1)(B) shall be extended to 6 years after the applicable date specified in paragraph (2).".

(b) Civil Actions Involving the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation.—

(1) Actions against the corporation.—Section 4003(f) (29 U.S.C. 1303(f)) is amended to read as follows:

"(f)(1) Except with respect to withdrawal liability disputes under part 1 of subtitle E, any person who is a fiduciary, employer, contributing sponsor, member of a contributing sponsor's controlled group, participant, or beneficiary, and is adversely affected by any action of the corporation with respect to a plan in which such person has an interest, or who is an employee organization representing such a participant or beneficiary so adversely affected for purposes of collective bargaining with respect to such plan, may bring an action against the corporation for appropriate equitable relief in the appropriate court.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'appropriate court' means—

"(A) the United States district court before which proceedings under section 4041 or 4042 are being conducted,

"(B) if no such proceedings are being conducted, the United States district court for the judicial district in which the plan has its principal office, or

"(C) the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

"(3) In any action brought under this subsection, the court may award all or a portion of the costs and expenses incurred in connection with such action to any party who prevails or substantially prevails in such action.

"(4) This subsection shall be the exclusive means for bringing actions against the corporation under this title, including actions against the corporation in its capacity as a trustee under section 4042 or 4049.

"(5)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), an action under this subsection may not be brought after the later of—

"(i) 6 years after the date on which the cause of action arose, or

"(ii) 3 years after the applicable date specified in subparagraph (B).

"(B)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the applicable date specified in this subparagraph is the earliest date on which the plaintiff acquired or should have acquired actual knowledge of the existence of such cause of action.

"(ii) In the case of a plaintiff who is a fiduciary bringing the action in the exercise of fiduciary duties, the applicable date specified in this subparagraph is the date on which the plaintiff became a fiduciary with respect to the plan if such date is later than the date specified in clause (i).

"(C) In the case of fraud or concealment, the period described in subparagraph (A)(ii) shall be extended to 6 years after the applicable date specified in subparagraph (B).

"(6) The district courts of the United States have jurisdiction of actions brought under this subsection without regard to the amount in controversy.

"(7) In any suit, action, or proceeding in which the corporation is a party, or intervenes under section 4301, in any State court, the corporation may, without bond or security, remove such suit, action, or proceeding from the State court to the United States district court for the district or division in which such suit, action, or proceeding is pending by following any procedure for removal now or hereafter in effect.".

(2) Limitation on actions by the corporation.—Section 4003(e) (29 U.S.C. 1303(e)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), an action under this subsection may not be brought after the later of—

"(i) 6 years after the date on which the cause of action arose, or

"(ii) 3 years after the applicable date specified in subparagraph (B).

"(B)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), the applicable date specified in this subparagraph is the earliest date on which the corporation acquired or should have acquired actual knowledge of the existence of such cause of action.

"(ii) If the corporation brings the action as a trustee, the applicable date specified in this subparagraph is the date on which the corporation became a trustee with respect to the plan if such date is later than the date described in clause (i).

"(C) In the case of fraud or concealment, the period described in subparagraph (A)(ii) shall be extended to 6 years after the applicable date specified in subparagraph (B).".

(3) Effective date.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply with respect to actions filed after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 11015. PROVISIONS RELATING TO WAIVERS OF MINIMUM FUNDING STANDARD AND EXTENSIONS OF AMORTIZATION PERIOD.

(a) Security For Waivers.—

(1) ERISA amendment.—

(A) In general.—Part 3 of subtitle B of title I is amended—

(i) by redesignating section 306 (29 U.S.C. 1086) as section 307; and

(ii) by inserting after section 305 (29 U.S.C. 1085) the following new section:

"SECURITY FOR WAIVERS OF MINIMUM FUNDING STANDARD AND EXTENSIONS OF AMORTIZATION PERIOD

"Sec. 306. (a) Security May Be Required.—

"(1) In general.—Except as provided in subsection (c), the Secretary of the Treasury may require an employer maintaining a defined benefit plan which is a single-employer plan (within the meaning of section 4001(a)(15)) to provide security to such plan as a condition for granting or modifying a waiver under section 303 or an extension under section 304.

"(2) Special rules.—Any security provided under paragraph (1) may be perfected and enforced only by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation or, at the direction of the Corporation, by a contributing sponsor (within the meaning of section 4001(a)(13)) or a member of such sponsor's controlled group (within the meaning of section 4001(a)(14)).

"(b) Consultation With the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation.—Except as provided in subsection (c), the Secretary of the Treasury shall, before granting or modifying a waiver under section 303 or an extension under section 304 with respect to a plan described in subsection (a)(1)—

"(1) provide the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation with—

"(A) notice of the completed application for any waiver, extension, or modification, and

"(B) an opportunity to comment on such application within 30 days after receipt of such notice, and

"(2) consider—

"(A) any comments of the Corporation under paragraph (1)(B), and

"(B) any views of any employee organization representing participants in the plan which are submitted in writing to the Secretary of the Treasury in connection with such application.

Information provided to the corporation under this subsection shall be considered tax return information and subject to the safeguarding and reporting requirements of section 6103(p) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

"(c) Exception for Certain Waivers and Extensions.—

"(1) In general.—The preceding provisions of this section shall not apply to any plan with respect to which the sum of—

"(A) the outstanding balance of the accumulated funding deficiencies (within the meaning of section 302(a)(2) of this Act and section 412(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) of the plan,

"(B) the outstanding balance of the amount of waived funding deficiencies of the plan waived under section 303 of this Act or section 412(d) of such Code, and

"(C) the outstanding balance of the amount of decreases in the minimum funding standard allowed under section 304 of this Act or section 412(e) of such Code, is less than $2,000,000.

"(2) Accumulated funding deficiencies.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(A), accumulated funding deficiencies shall include any increase in such amount which would result if all applications for waivers of the minimum funding standard under section 303 of this Act or section 412(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and for extensions of the amortization period under section 304 of this Act or section 412(e) of such Code which are pending with respect to such plan were denied.".

(B) Conforming amendment.—Section 211(c)(1) is amended by striking out "306(c)" and inserting in lieu thereof "307(c)".

(C) Clerical amendment.—The table of sections in section 1 is amended by striking out the item relating to section 306 and inserting in lieu thereof the following new items:

"Sec. 306. Security for waivers of minimum funding standard and extensions of amortization period.

"Sec. 307. Effective dates.".

(2) Amendments to the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.—

(A) In general.—Subsection (f) of section 412 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to requirement that benefits may not be increased during waiver or extension period) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) Security for waivers and extensions; consultations.—

"(A) Security may be required.—

"(i) In general.—Except as provided in subparagraph (C), the Secretary may require an employer maintaining a defined benefit plan which is a single-employer plan (within the meaning of section 4001(a)(15) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974) to provide security to such plan as a condition for granting or modifying a waiver under subsection (d) or an extension under subsection (e).

"(ii) Special rules.—Any security provided under clause (i) may be perfected and enforced only by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, or at the direction of the Corporation, by a contributing sponsor (within the meaning of section 4001(a)(13) of such Act), or a member of such sponsor's controlled group (within the meaning of section 4001(a)(14) of such Act).

"(B) Consultation with the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation.—Except as provided in subparagraph (C), the Secretary shall, before granting or modifying a waiver under subsection (d) or an extension under subsection (e) with respect to a plan described in subparagraph (A)(i)—

"(i) provide the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation with—

"(I) notice of the completed application for any waiver, extension, or modification, and

"(II) an opportunity to comment on such application within 30 days after receipt of such notice, and

"(ii) consider—

"(I) any comments of the Corporation under clause (i)(II), and

"(II) any views of any employee organization (within the meaning of section 3(4) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974) representing participants in the plan which are submitted in writing to the Secretary in connection with such application.

Information provided to the corporation under this subparagraph shall be considered tax return information and subject to the safeguarding and reporting requirements of section 6103(p).

"(C) Exception for certain waivers and extensions.—

"(i) In general.—The preceding provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to any plan with respect to which the sum of—

"(I) the outstanding balance of the accumulated funding deficiencies (within the meaning of subsection (a) and section 302(a) of such Act) of the plan,

"(II) the outstanding balance of the amount of waived funding deficiencies of the plan waived under subsection (d) or section 303 of such Act, and

"(III) the outstanding balance of the amount of decreases in the minimum funding standard allowed under subsection (e) or section 304 of such Act, is less than $2,000,000.

"(ii) Accumulated funding deficiencies.—For purposes of clause (i)(I), accumulated funding deficiencies shall include any increase in such amount which would result if all applications for waivers of the minimum funding standard under subsection (d) or section 303 of such Act and for extensions of the amortization period under subsection (e) or section 304 of such Act which are pending with respect to such plan were denied.".

(B) Conforming amendments.—Section 412(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended—

(i) by striking out the heading thereof and inserting in lieu thereof:

"(f) Requirements Relating to Waivers and Extensions.—", and

(ii) by striking out the heading of paragraph (1) thereof and inserting in lieu thereof:

"(1) Benefits may not be increased during waiver or extension period.—".

(3) Effective dates.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply with respect to applications for waivers, extensions, and modifications filed on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) Applicable Interest Rate Under Arrangements Providing for Waivers and Extensions.—

(1) Amendments to ERISA.—

(A) Variances from the minimum funding standard.—Section 303(a) (29 U.S.C. 1083(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The interest rate used for purposes of computing the amortization charge described in section 302(b)(2)(C) for a variance granted under this subsection shall be the rate determined under section 6621(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.".

(B) Extensions of the amortization period.—Section 304(a) (29 U.S.C. 1084(a)) is amended by adding after and below paragraph (2) the following new sentence:

"The interest rate applicable under any arrangement entered into by the Secretary in connection with an extension granted under this subsection shall be the rate determined under section 6621(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.".

(2) Amendments to Internal Revenue Code.—

(A) Variances from the minimum funding standard.—Paragraph (1) of section 412(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to waivers in case of substantial business hardship) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The interest rate used for purposes of computing the amortization charge described in section 412(b)(2)(C) for a variance granted under this subsection shall be the rate determined under section 6621(b).".

(B) Extensions of the amortization period.—Subsection (e) of section 412 of such Code (relating to extension of amortization period) is amended by adding after and below paragraph (2) the following new sentence:

"The interest rate applicable under any arrangement entered into by the Secretary in connection with an extension granted under this subsection shall be the rate determined under section 6621(b).".

(I) by striking out "an employer" and all that follows down through "shall be liable" and inserting in lieu thereof "any one or more contributing sponsors who withdraw, during a plan year for which they constitute a substantial employer, from a single-employer plan which has two or more contributing sponsors at least two of whom are not under common control, shall, upon notification of such contributing sponsors by the corporation as provided by subsection (a), be liable, together with the members of their controlled groups,";

(II) by striking out "such employer's";

(III) by striking out "the employer's withdrawal" and inserting in lieu thereof "the withdrawal referred to in subsection (a)(1)";

(IV) in paragraph (1), by striking out "such employer" and inserting in lieu thereof "such contributing sponsors";

(V) in paragraph (2), by striking out "all employers" and inserting in lieu thereof "all contributing sponsors"; and

(VI) by striking out "the liability of each such employer" and inserting in lieu thereof "such liability".

(iii) Section 4063(c) (29 U.S.C. 1363(c)) is amended—

(I) in paragraph (1), by striking out "In lieu of payment of his liability under this section the employer" and inserting in lieu thereof "In lieu of payment of a contributing sponsor's liability under this section, the contributing sponsor";

(II) in paragraph (2), by inserting "under section 4041(c) or 4042" after "terminated", by striking out "of such employer", and by striking out "to the employer (or his bond cancelled)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(or the bond cancelled)"; and

(III) in paragraph (3), by inserting "under section 4041(c) or 4042" after "terminates" and by striking out "employer" in subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof "contributing sponsor".

(iv) Section 4063(d) (29 U.S.C. 1363(d)) is amended—

(I) by striking out "Upon a showing by the plan administrator of a plan (other than a multiemployer plan) that the withdrawal from the plan by any employer or employers has resulted" and inserting in lieu thereof "Upon a showing by the plan administrator of the plan that the withdrawal from the plan by one or more contributing sponsors has resulted";

(II) by striking out "by employers";

(III) in paragraph (1), by striking out "their employer's" and inserting in lieu thereof "the"; and

(IV) in paragraph (2), by striking out "termination" and inserting in lieu thereof "plan terminated under section 4042".

(v) Section 4063(e) (29 U.S.C. 1363(e)) is amended—

(I) by striking out "to any employer or plan administrator"; and

(II) by striking out "all other employers" and inserting in lieu thereof "contributing sponsors".

(vi) The heading for section 4063 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following "from single-employer plans under multiple controlled groups.".

(B) Allocation of liability upon termination of certain single-employer plans.—

(i) Section 4064(a) (29 U.S.C. 1364(a)) is amended—

(I) by striking out "all employers who maintain a plan under which more than one employer makes contributions (other than a multiemployer plan)" and inserting in lieu thereof "all contributing sponsors of a single-employer plan which has two or more contributing sponsors at least two of whom are not under common control"; and

(II) by inserting "under section 4041(c) or 4042" after "terminated".

(ii) Section 4064(b) (29 U.S.C. 1364(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) The corporation shall determine the liability with respect to each contributing sponsor and each member of its controlled group in a manner consistent with section 4062, except that—

"(1) the amount of the liability determined under section 4062(b)(1) with respect to the entire plan—

"(A) shall be determined without regard to clauses (i)(II) and (ii) of section 4062(b)(1)(A), and

"(B) shall be allocated to each controlled group by multiplying such amount by a fraction—

"(i) the numerator of which is the amount required to be contributed to the plan for the last 5 plan years ending prior to the termination date by persons in such controlled group as contributing sponsors, and

"(ii) the denominator of which is the total amount required to be contributed to the plan for such last 5 plan years by all persons as contributing sponsors, and clauses (i)(II) and (ii) of section 4062(b)(1)(A) shall be applied separately with respect to each such controlled group, and

"(2) the amount of the liability determined under section 4062(c)(1) with respect to the entire plan shall be allocated to each controlled group by multiplying such amount by the fraction described in paragraph (1)(B) in connection with such controlled group.

The corporation may also determine the liability of each such contributing sponsor and member of its controlled group on any other equitable basis prescribed by the corporation in regulations.".

(iii) The heading for section 4064 is amended to read as follows:

"Liability on termination of single-employer plans under multiple controlled groups".

(C) Annual notification to substantial employers.—Section 4066 (29 U.S.C. 1366) is amended—

(i) by striking out "each plan under which contributions are made by more than one employer (other than a multiemployer plan)" and inserting in lieu thereof "each single-employer plan which has at least two contributing sponsors at least two of whom are not under common control";

(ii) by striking out "any employer making contributions under that plan" and inserting in lieu thereof "contributing sponsor of the plan"; and

(iii) by striking out "that he is a substantial employer" and inserting in lieu thereof "that such contributing sponsor (alone or together with members of such contributing sponsor's controlled group) constitutes a substantial employer".

(6) Additional amendments relating to recovery of amounts of liability.—

(iii) in subsection (d)(1), by striking out "employer" and inserting in lieu thereof "liable person";

(iv) in subsection (d)(2), by striking out "employer" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "liable person";

(v) in subsection (e), by striking out "employer or employers" and inserting in lieu thereof "liable person"; and

(vi) by striking out subsection (c)(1) (29 U.S.C. 1368(c)(1)) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(c)(1) Except as otherwise provided under this section, the priority of a lien imposed under subsection (a) shall be determined in the same manner as under section 6323 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as in effect on the date of the enactment of the Single-Employer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1986). Such section 6323 shall be applied for purposes of this section by disregarding subsection (g)(4) and by substituting—

"(A) 'lien imposed by section 4068 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974' for 'lien imposed by section 6321' each place it appears in subsections (a), (b), (c)(1), (c)(4)(B), (d), (e), and (h)(5);

"(B) 'the corporation' for 'the Secretary' in subsections (a) and (b)(9)(C);

"(C) 'the payment of the amount on which the section 4068(a) lien is based' for 'the collection of any tax under this title' in subsection (b)(3);

"(D) 'a person whose property is subject to the lien' for 'the taxpayer' in subsections (b)(8), (c)(2)(A)(i) (the first place it appears), (c)(2)(A)(ii), (c)(2)(B), (c)(4)(B), and (c)(4)(C) (in the matter preceding clause (i));

"(E) 'such person' for 'the taxpayer' in subsections (c)(2)(A)(i) (the second place it appears) and (c)(4)(C)(ii);

"(F) 'payment of the loan value of the amount on which the lien is based is made to the corporation' for 'satisfaction of a levy pursuant to section 6332(b)' in subsection (b)(9)(C);

"(G) 'section 4068(a) lien' for 'tax lien' each place it appears in subsections (c)(1), (c)(2)(A), (c)(2)(B), (c)(3)(B)(iii), (c)(4)(B), (d), and (h)(5); and

"(H) 'the date on which the lien is first filed' for 'the date of the assessment of the tax' in subsection (g)(3)(A).".

(b) Clarification of Description of Certain Information Required To Be Filed in Annual Report.—

(1) In general.—Section 103(d)(6) (29 U.S.C. 1023(d)(6)) is amended to read as follows:

"(6) Information required in regulations of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation with respect to:

"(A) the current value of the assets of the plan,

"(B) the present value of all nonforfeitable benefits for participants and beneficiaries receiving payments under the plan,

"(C) the present value of all nonforfeitable benefits for all other participants and beneficiaries,

"(D) the present value of all accrued benefits which are not nonforfeitable (including a separate accounting of such benefits which are benefit commitments, as defined in section 4001(a)(16)), and

"(E) the actuarial assumptions and techniques used in determining the values described in subparagraphs (A) through (D).".

(2) Conforming amendment.—Section 104(a)(2)(A) (29 U.S.C. 1024(a)(2)(A)) is amended by striking out the second sentence.

(3) Transition rules.—Any regulations, modifications, or waivers which have been issued by the Secretary of Labor with respect to section 103(d)(6) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as in effect immediately before the date of the enactment of this Act) shall remain in full force and effect until modified by any regulations with respect to such section 103(d)(6) prescribed by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation.

(c) Additional Amendments.—

(1) Definition for title I.—Section 3(37)(A) (29 U.S.C. 1002(37)(A)) is amended by inserting "pension" before "plan".

(2) Notice of request for waivers of minimum funding standards and right to submit relevant information.—Section 303 (29 U.S.C. 1083) is amended by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury shall, before granting a waiver under this section, require each applicant to provide evidence satisfactory to such Secretary that the applicant has provided notice of the filing of the application for such waiver to each employee organization representing employees covered by the affected plan.

"(2) The Secretary of the Treasury shall consider any relevant information provided by a person to whom notice was given under paragraph (1).".

(3) Notice of request for extensions of amortization period and right to submit relevant information.—Section 304 (29 U.S.C. 1084) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury shall, before granting an extension under this section, require each applicant to provide evidence satisfactory to such Secretary that the applicant has provided notice of the filing of the application for such extension to each employee organization representing employees covered by the affected plan.

"(2) The Secretary of the Treasury shall consider any relevant information provided by a person to whom notice was given under paragraph (1).".

(4) Amendment to the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.—Subsection (f) of section 412 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to benefits may not be increased during waiver or extension period), as amended by the preceding provisions of this title, is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) Additional requirements.—

"(A) Advance notice.—The Secretary shall, before granting a waiver under subsection (d) or an extension under subsection (e), require each applicant to provide evidence satisfactory to the Secretary that the applicant has provided notice of the filing of the application for such waiver or extension to each employee organization representing employees covered by the affected plan.

"(B) Consideration of relevant information.—The Secretary shall consider any relevant information provided by a person to whom notice was given under subparagraph (A).".

(5) Audit of plans terminated in standard termination.—Section 4003(a) (29 U.S.C. 1303(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The corporation shall annually audit a statistically significant number of plans terminating under section 4041(b) to determine whether participants and beneficiaries have received their benefit commitments. Each audit shall include a statistically significant number of participants and beneficiaries.".

(6) Repeal of expired authority.—Section 4004 (29 U.S.C. 1304) is repealed.

(7) Voting by corporation of stock paid as liability.—Section 4005 (29 U.S.C. 1305) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) Any stock in a person liable to the corporation under this title which is paid to the corporation by such person or a member of such person's controlled group in satisfaction of such person's liability under this title may be voted only by the custodial trustees or outside money managers of the corporation or fiduciaries with respect to trusts to which the requirements of section 4049 apply.".

(8) Effective years.—Section 4022(b)(7) (29 U.S.C. 1322(b)(7)) is amended by striking out "following" and inserting in lieu thereof "beginning with".

(9) Treatment of qualified preretirement survivor annuities.—Section 4022 (29 U.S.C. 1322) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) For purposes of subsection (a), a qualified preretirement survivor annuity (as defined in section 205(e)(1)) with respect to a participant under a terminated single-employer plan shall not be treated as forfeitable solely because the participant has not died as of the termination date.".

(10) Clarification of power to collect amounts due the corporation.—Section 4042(d)(1)(B)(ii) (29 U.S.C. 1342(d)(1)(B)(ii)) is amended by inserting after "amounts due the plan" the following: ", including but not limited to the power to collect from the persons obligated to meet the requirements of section 302 or the terms of the plan".

(11) Conforming amendment.—Section 4042(d)(3) (29 U.S.C. 1342(d)(3)) is amended by striking out "same duties as a trustee appointed under section 47 of the Bankruptcy Act" and inserting in lieu thereof "same duties as those of a trustee under section 704 of title 11, United States Code".

(12) Conforming amendment.—Section 4044(a) (29 U.S.C. 1344(a)) is amended by striking out "defined benefit".

(13) Clerical corrections.—Section 4044(a)(4) (29 U.S.C. 1344(a)(4)(A)) is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by striking out "section 4022(b)(5)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4022B(a)"; and

(B) in subparagraph (B), by striking out "section 4022(b)(6)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 4022(b)(5)".

(14) Release of lien.—Section 4068(e) (29 U.S.C. 1368(e)) is amended by striking out ", with the consent of the board of directors,".

(d) Studies by Comptroller General.—

(1) In general.—The Comptroller General of the United States may, pursuant to the request of any Member of Congress, study employee benefit plans, including the effects of such plans on employees, participants, and their beneficiaries.

(2) Access to books, documents, etc.—For the purpose of conducting studies under this subsection, the Comptroller General, or any of his duly authorized representatives, shall have access to and the right to examine and copy any books, documents, papers, records, or other recorded information—

(A) within the possession or control of the administrator, sponsor, or employer of and persons providing services to any employee benefit plan, and

(B) which the Comptroller General or his representative finds, in his own judgment, pertinent to such study.

The Comptroller General shall not disclose the identity of any individual or employer in making any information obtained under this subsection available to the public.

(3) Definitions.—For purposes of this subsection, the terms "employee benefit plan", "participant", "administrator", "beneficiary", "plan sponsor", "employee", and "employer" are defined in section 3 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

(4) Effective date.—The preceding provisions of this subsection shall be effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(e) Amendments to the Table of Contents of ERISA.—The table of contents in section 1 is amended—

(1) by striking out the item relating to section 4004;

(2) by striking out the item relating to section 4042 and inserting in lieu thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 4042. Institution of termination proceedings by the corporation.";

"Sec. 4068. Lien for liability.
"Sec. 4069. Treatment of transactions to evade liability; effect of corporate reorganization.
"Sec. 4070. Enforcement authority relating to terminations of single-employer plans.".

SEC. 11017. STUDIES.

(a) Single-Employer Pension Plan Termination Insurance Premium Study.—

(1) In general.—As soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation shall conduct a study of the premiums established under the single-employer pension plan termination insurance program under title IV of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

(2) Matters to be studied.—The Corporation shall specifically consider in its study the following matters:

(A) the effect of the amendments made by this title on the long-term stability of the single-employer pension plan termination insurance program under title IV of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974,

(B) alternatives to the current statutory mechanism with respect to proposals for changes in the premium levels under such program,

(C) the methods currently used by the Corporation in projecting future program costs of the single-employer pension plan termination insurance program,

(D) alternative methods of projecting such future program costs and an evaluation of each such alternative method,

(E) the methods currently used by the Corporation in determining premiums needed to allocate and adequately fund such future program costs,

(F) alternative methods of making such premium determinations and an evaluation of each such alternative method, and

(G) alternative premium bases upon which some or all of such projected future program costs would be allocated on an exposure-related or risk-related computation, which may take into account the different exposures or risks imposed on the Corporation by plan sponsors with different histories and under different circumstances.

(3) Submission of corporation's report.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Corporation shall report the results of its study, together with any recommendations for statutory changes, to an advisory council, to be appointed by the chairmen of the Committee on Education and Labor and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources and the Committee on Finance of the Senate. The advisory council shall be composed of representatives of single-employer plan sponsors, employee organizations representing single-employer plan participants, and members of the general public who are experts in the matters to be considered in the study. The members of the advisory council shall serve without compensation.

(4) Submission of council's report to congress.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the submission of the Corporation's report to the advisory council under paragraph (3), the advisory council shall submit the results of the Corporation's study and the Corporation's recommendations, together with the recommendations of the council, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate.

(5) Cooperation by the pension benefit guaranty corporation and other federal agencies.—The Corporation shall cooperate with the advisory council in reviewing the results of the Corporation's study and recommendations. In order to avoid unnecessary expense and duplication, to the extent not otherwise prohibited by law, the Corporation and any other Federal agency shall provide to the advisory council any data, analyses, or other relevant information related to the matters under review.

(b) Overfunded Pension Plan Study.—

(1) In general.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Labor shall conduct a study of terminations resulting in residual assets under section 4044(d) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

(2) Report.—No later than May 1, 1986, the Secretary of Labor shall submit a report on the study conducted under paragraph (1), together with any recommendations for statutory changes, to the chairmen of the Committee on Education and Labor and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Labor and Human Resources and the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

SEC. 11018. LIMITATION ON REGULATIONS.

(a) Regulatory Treatment of Assets of Real Estate Entities.—

(1) In general.—Except as a defense, no rule or regulation adopted pursuant to the Secretary's proposed regulation defining "plan assets" for purposes of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (50 Fed. Reg. 961, January 8, 1985, as modified by 50 Fed. Reg. 6361, February 15, 1985), or any reproposal thereof prior to the adoption of the regulations required to be issued in accordance with subsection (d), shall apply to any asset of a real estate entity in which a plan, account, or arrangement subject to such Act invests if—

(A) any interest in the entity is first offered to a plan, account, or arrangement subject to such Act investing in the entity (hereinafter in this section referred to as a "plan investor") on or before the date which is 120 days after the date of publication of such rule or regulation as a final rule or regulation;

(B) no plan investor acquires an interest in the entity from an issuer or underwriter at any time on or after the date which is 270 days after the date of publication of such rule or regulation as a final rule or regulation (except pursuant to a contract or subscription binding on the plan investor and entered into, or tendered, before the expiration of such 270-day period, or pursuant to the exercise, on or before December 31, 1990, of a warrant which was the subject of an effective registration under the Securities Act of 1933 (15 U.S.C. 77q et seq.) prior to the date of the enactment of this section); and

(C) every interest in the entity acquired by a plan investor (or contracted for or subscribed to by a plan investor) before the expiration of such 270-day period is a security—

(i) which is part of an issue or class of securities which upon such acquisition or at any time during the offering period is held by 100 or more persons;

(ii) the economic rights of ownership in respect of which are freely transferable;

(iii) which is registered under the Securities Act of 1933; and

(iv) which is part of an issue or class of securities which is registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.) (or is so registered within three years of the effective date of the registration statement of such securities for purposes of the Securities Act of 1933: Provided, That the issuer provides plan investors with such reports with respect to the offering period as are required with respect to such period by the Securities and Exchange Commission under such Acts and the rules and regulations promulgated thereunder).

In the case of partnerships organized prior to enactment of this section, the requirements of subparagraphs (iii) and (iv) shall not apply to initial limited partnership interests in an entity otherwise described above: Provided, That such entity was the subject of an effective registration under the Securities Act of 1933 prior to the date of the enactment of this section, such interests were issued solely for partnership organizational purposes in compliance with State limited partnership laws, and such interest has a value as of the date of issue of less than $20,000 and represents less than one percent of the total interests outstanding as of the completion of the offering period.

(2) Maintenance of current regulatory treatment.—No asset of any real estate entity described in paragraph (1) shall be treated as an asset of any plan investor for any purpose of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 if the assets of such entity would not have been assets of such plan investor under the provisions of—

(A) Interpretive Bulletin 75-2 (29 CFR 2509.750-2); or

(B) the regulations proposed by the Secretary of Labor and published—

(i) on August 28, 1979, at 44 Fed. Reg. 50363;

(ii) on June 6, 1980, at 45 Fed. Reg. 38084;

(iii) on January 8, 1985, at 50 Fed. Reg. 961; or

(iv) on February 15, 1985, at 50 Fed. Reg. 6361, without regard to any limitation of any effective date proposed therein.

(b) Definitions and Special Rules.—For purposes of this section—

(1) The term "real estate entity" means an entity which, at any time within two years after the closing of its offering period has invested or has contracted to invest at least 75 percent of the value of its net assets available for investment in direct or indirect ownership of "real estate assets" or "interests in real property".

(2) The term "real estate asset" means real property (including an interest in real property) and any share of stock or beneficial interest, partnership interest, depository receipt, or any other interest in any other real estate entity.

(3) The term "interest in real property" includes, directly or indirectly, the following:

(A) the ownership or co-ownership of land or improvements thereon;

(B) any mortgage (including an interest in or co-ownership of any mortgage, leasehold mortgage, pool of mortgages, deed of trust, or similar instrument) on land or improvements thereon;

(C) any leasehold of land or improvements thereon; and

(D) any option to acquire any of the foregoing, but does not include any mineral, oil, or gas royalty interest.

(4) Whether the economic rights of ownership with respect to a security are "freely transferable" shall be determined based upon all the facts and circumstances, but ordinarily none of the following, alone or in any combination, shall cause the economic rights of ownership to be considered not freely transferable—

(A) any requirement that not less than a minimum number of shares or units of such security be transferred or assigned by any investor: Provided, That such requirement does not prevent transfer of all of the then remaining shares or units held by an investor;

(B) any prohibition against transfer or assignment of such security or rights in respect thereof to an ineligible or unsuitable investor;

(C) any restriction on or prohibition against any transfer or assignment which would either result in a termination or reclassification of the entity for Federal or State tax purposes or which would violate any State or Federal statute, regulation, court order, judicial decree, or rule of law;

(D) any requirement that reasonable transfer or administrative fees be paid in connection with a transfer or assignment;

(E) any requirement that advance notice of a transfer or assignment be given to the entity and any requirement regarding execution of documentation evidencing such transfer or assignment (including documentation setting forth representations from either or both of the transferor or transferee as to compliance with any restriction or requirement described in this section or requiring compliance with the entity's governing instruments);

(F) any restriction on substitution of an assignee as a limited partner of a partnership, including a general partner consent requirement: Provided, That the economic benefits of ownership of the assignor may be transferred or assigned without regard to such restriction or consent (other than compliance with any other restriction described in this section);

(G) any administrative procedure which establishes an effective date, or an event such as the completion of the offering, prior to which a transfer or assignment will not be effective; and

(H) any limitation or restriction on transfer or assignment which is not created or imposed by the issuer or any person acting for or on behalf of such issuer.

(c) No Effect on Secretary's Authority Other Than As Provided.—Except as provided in subsection (a), nothing in this section shall limit the authority of the Secretary of Labor to issue regulations or otherwise interpret section 3(21) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

(d) Time Limit for Final Regulations.—The Secretary of Labor shall adopt final regulations defining "plan assets" by December 31, 1986.

(e) Effective Date.—The preceding provisions of this section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 11019. EFFECTIVE DATE OF TITLE; TEMPORARY PROCEDURES.

(a) In General.—Except as otherwise provided in this title, the amendments made by this title shall be effective as of January 1, 1986, except that such amendments shall not apply with respect to terminations for which—

(1) notices of intent to terminate were filed with the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation under section 4041 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 before such date, or

(2) proceedings were commenced under section 4042 of such Act before such date.

(b) Transitional Rules.—

(1) In general.—In the case of a single-employer plan termination for which a notice of intent to terminate was filed with the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation under section 4041 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as in effect before the amendments made by this title) on or after January 1, 1986, but before the date of the enactment of this Act, the amendments made by this title shall apply with respect to such termination, as modified by paragraphs (2) and (3).

(2) Deemed compliance with notice requirements.—The requirements of subsections (a)(2), (b)(1)(A), and (c)(1)(A) of section 4041 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as amended by this title) shall be considered to have been met with respect to a termination described in paragraph (1) if—

(A) the plan administrator provided notice to the participants in the plan regarding the termination in compliance with applicable regulations of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation as in effect on the date of the notice, and

(B) the notice of intent to terminate provided to the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation in connection with the termination was filed with the Corporation not less than 10 days before the proposed date of termination specified in the notice.

For purposes of section 4041 of such Act (as amended by this title), the proposed date of termination specified in the notice of intent to terminate referred to in subparagraph (B) shall be considered the proposed termination date.

(3) Special termination procedures.—

(A) In general.—This paragraph shall apply with respect to any termination described in paragraph (1) if, within 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the plan administrator notifies the Corporation in writing—

(i) that the plan administrator wishes the termination to proceed as a standard termination under section 4041(b) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as amended by this title) in accordance with subparagraph (B),

(ii) that the plan administrator wishes the termination to proceed as a distress termination under section 4041(c) of such Act (as amended by this title) in accordance with subparagraph (C), or

(iii) that the plan administrator wishes to stop the termination proceedings in accordance with subparagraph (D).

(B) Terminations proceeding as standard termination.—

(i) Terminations for which sufficiency notices have not been issued.—

(I) In general.—In the case of a plan termination described in paragraph (1) with respect to which the Corporation has been provided the notification described in subparagraph (A)(i) and with respect to which a notice of sufficiency has not been issued by the Corporation before the date of the enactment of this Act, if, during the 90-day period commencing on the date of the notice required in subclause (II), all benefit commitments under the plan have been satisfied, the termination shall be treated as a standard termination under section 4041(b) of such Act (as amended by this title).

(II) Special notice regarding sufficiency for terminations for which notices of sufficiency have not been issued as of date of enactment.—In the case of a plan termination described in paragraph (1) with respect to which the Corporation has been provided the notification described in subparagraph (A)(i) and with respect to which a notice of sufficiency has not been issued by the Corporation before the date of the enactment of this Act, the Corporation shall make the determinations described in sections 4041(c)(3)(A) (i) and (ii) (as amended by this title) and notify the plan administrator of such determinations as provided in section 4041(c)(3)(A)(iii) (as amended by this title).

(ii) Terminations for which notices of sufficiency have been issued.—In the case of a plan termination described in paragraph (1) with respect to which the Corporation has been provided the notification described in subparagraph (A)(i) and with respect to which a notice of sufficiency has been issued by the Corporation before the date of the enactment of this Act, clause (i)(I) shall apply, except that the 90-day period referred to in clause (i)(I) shall begin on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(C) Terminations proceeding as distress termination.—In the case of a plan termination described in paragraph (1) with respect to which the Corporation has been provided the notification described in subparagraph (A)(ii), if the requirements of section 4041(c)(2)(B) of such Act (as amended by this title) are met, the termination shall be treated as a distress termination under section 4041(c) of such Act (as amended by this title).

(D) Termination of proceedings by plan administrator.—

(i) In general.—Except as provided in clause (ii), in the case of a plan termination described in paragraph (1) with respect to which the Corporation has been provided the notification described in subparagraph (A)(iii), the termination shall not take effect.

(ii) Terminations with respect to which final distribution of assets has commenced.—Clause (i) shall not apply with respect to a termination with respect to which the final distribution of assets has commenced before the date of the enactment of this Act unless, within 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the plan has been restored in accordance with procedures issued by the Corporation pursuant to subsection (c).

(E) Authority of corporation to extend 90-day periods to permit standard termination.—The Corporation may, on a case-by-case basis in accordance with subsection (c), provide for extensions of the applicable 90-day period referred to in clause (i) or (ii) of subparagraph (B) if it is demonstrated to the satisfaction of the Corporation that—

(i) the plan could not otherwise, pursuant to the preceding provisions of this paragraph, terminate in a termination treated as a standard termination under section 4041(b) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as amended by this title), and

(ii) the extension would result in a greater likelihood that benefit commitments under the plan would be paid in full, except that any such period may not be so extended beyond one year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) Authority To Prescribe Temporary Procedures.—The Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation may prescribe temporary procedures for purposes of carrying out the amendments made by this title during the 180-day period beginning on the date described in subsection (a).

TITLE XII—INCOME SECURITY AND RELATED PROGRAMS

Subtitle A—Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Program

SEC. 12101. DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS INVOLVING THE DISABILITY INSURANCE PROGRAM.

(a) Extension of Waiver Authority.—Section 505(a)(3) of the Social Security Disability Amendments of 1980 is amended by inserting "which is initiated before June 10, 1990" after "demonstration project under paragraph (1)".

(b) Interim Reports.—Section 505(a)(4) of such Amendments is amended to read as follows:

"(4) On or before June 9 in each of the years 1986, 1987, 1988, and 1989, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress an interim report on the progress of the experiments and demonstration projects carried out under this subsection together with any related data and materials which the Secretary may consider appropriate.".

(c) Final Report.—Section 505(c) of such Amendments is amended by striking out "under this section no later than five years after the date of the enactment of this Act" and inserting in lieu thereof "under subsection (a) no later than June 9, 1990".

(d) Incorporation of Certain Reports Into Secretary's Annual Report to Congress.—Section 1110(b) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) All reports of the Secretary with respect to projects carried out under this subsection shall be incorporated into the Secretary's annual report to the Congress required by section 704.".

SEC. 12102. DISABILITY ADVISORY COUNCIL.

(a) Appointment of Council.—Within ninety days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall appoint a special Disability Advisory Council.

(b) Membership of Council.—The Disability Advisory Council shall consist of a Chairman and not more than twelve other persons, appointed by the Secretary without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service. The appointed members shall, to the extent possible, represent organizations of employers and employees in equal numbers, medical and vocational experts from the public or private sector (or from both such sectors), organizations representing disabled people, and the public. The Council shall meet as often as may be necessary for the performance of its duties under this section, but not less often than quarterly.

(c) Duties of Council.—(1) The Advisory Council shall conduct studies and make recommendations with respect to the medical and vocational aspects of disability under both title II and title XVI of the Social Security Act, including studies and recommendations relating to—

(A) the effectiveness of vocational rehabilitation programs for recipients of disability insurance benefits or supplemental security income benefits;

(B) the question of using specialists for completing medical and vocational evaluations at the State agency level in the disability determination process, including the question of requiring, in cases involving impairments other than mental impairments, that the medical portion of each case review (as well as any applicable assessment of residual functional capacity) be completed by an appropriate medical specialist employed by the appropriate State agency before any determination can be made with respect to the impairment involved;

(C) alternative approaches to work evaluation in the case of applicants for benefits based on disability and recipients of such benefits undergoing reviews of their cases, including immediate referral of any such applicant or recipient to a vocational rehabilitation agency for services at the same time he or she is referred to the appropriate State agency for a disability determination;

(D) the feasibility and appropriateness of providing work evaluation stipends for applicants for and recipients of benefits based on disability in cases where extended work evaluation is needed prior to the final determination of their eligibility for such benefits or for further rehabilitation and related services;

(E) the standards, policies, and procedures which are applied or used by the Secretary of Health and Human Services with respect to work evaluations in order to determine whether such standards, policies, and procedures will provide appropriate screening criteria for work evaluation referrals in the case of applicants for and recipients of benefits based on disability; and

(F) possible criteria for assessing the probability that an applicant for or recipient of benefits based on disability will benefit from rehabilitation services, taking into consideration not only whether the individual involved will be able after rehabilitation to engage in substantial gainful activity but also whether rehabilitation services can reasonably be expected to improve the individual's functioning so that he or she will be able to live independently or work in a sheltered environment.

(2) For purposes of this subsection, "work evaluation" includes (with respect to any individual) a determination of—

(A) such individual's skills,

(B) the work activities or types of work activity for which such individual's skills are insufficient or inadequate,

(C) the work activities or types of work activity for which such individual might potentially be trained or rehabilitated,

(D) the length of time for which such individual is capable of sustaining work (including, in the case of the mentally impaired, the ability to cope with the stress of competitive work), and

(E) any modifications which may be necessary, in work activities for which such individual might be trained or rehabilitated, in order to enable him or her to perform such activities.

(d) Provision of Assistance to Council; Compensation of Members.—(1) The Disability Advisory Council is authorized to engage such technical assistance, including actuarial services, as may be required to carry out its functions, and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, in addition, make available to the Council such secretarial, clerical, and other assistance and such actuarial and other pertinent data prepared by the Department of Health and Human Services as the Council may require to carry out such functions.

(2) Appointed members of the Council, while serving on business of the Council (inclusive of traveltime), shall receive compensation at rates fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding $100 per day, and, while so serving away from their homes or regular places of business, they may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons in the Government employed intermittently.

(e) Reports.—The Disability Advisory Council shall submit a report (including any interim reports the Council may have issued) of its findings and recommendations to the Secretary of Health and Human Services not later than December 31, 1986; and such report and recommendations shall thereupon be transmitted to the Congress and to the Board of Trustees of the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund.

(f) Termination.—After the date of the transmittal to the Congress of the report required by subsection (e), the Disability Advisory Council shall cease to exist.

(g) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Section 706 of the Social Security Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "except as provided in subsection (e)," immediately before "the Secretary shall appoint" in subsection (a); and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) No Advisory Council on Social Security shall be appointed under subsection (a) in 1985 (or in any subsequent year prior to 1989).".

(2) Section 12 of the Social Security Disability Benefits Reform Act of 1984 is repealed.

SEC. 12103. TAXATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS RECEIVED BY CERTAIN CITIZENS OF POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

(a) General Rule.—Section 932 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to citizens of possessions of the United States) is amended by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d) and by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) Taxation of Social Security Benefits.—If, for purposes of an income tax imposed in the possession, any social security benefit (as defined in section 86(d)) received by an individual described in subsection (a) is treated in a manner equivalent to that provided by section 86, then—

"(1) such benefit shall be exempt from the tax imposed by section 871, and

"(2) no amount shall be deducted and withheld from such benefit under section 1441.

Any income tax imposed in a possession which treats social security benefits (as defined in section 86(d)) in a manner equivalent to section 86, and which first becomes effective within 15 months after the date of the enactment of this subsection, shall, for purposes of this section, be deemed to have been in effect as of January 1, 1984.".

(b) Cross Reference.—Paragraph (3) of section 871(a) of such Code is amended by adding at the end thereof (after and below subparagraph (B)) the following new sentence:

"For treatment of certain citizens of possessions of the United States, see section 932(c)."

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, in taxable years ending after such date.

SEC. 12104. APPLICATION OF DEPENDENCY TEST TO ADOPTED GREAT-GRANDCHILDREN FOR PURPOSES OF CHILD'S INSURANCE BENEFITS.

(a) Treatment of Grandchildren and Great-Grandchildren Alike.—Section 202(d)(8)(D)(ii)(III) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting "or great-grandchild" after "grandchild".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to benefits for which application is filed after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 12105. ELIMINATION OF REQUIREMENT FOR PUBLICATION OF REVISIONS IN PRE-1979 BENEFIT TABLE.

Section 215(i)(4) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "the Secretary shall publish" and all that follows in the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "the Secretary shall revise the table of benefits contained in subsection (a), as in effect in December 1978, in accordance with the requirements of paragraph (2)(D) of this subsection as then in effect, except that the requirement in such paragraph (2)(D) that the Secretary publish such revision of the table of benefits in the Federal Register shall not apply.".

SEC. 12106. FORMULA CLARIFICATION.

Section 709(b)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(1) the balance in such Trust Fund as of the beginning of such year, including the taxes transferred under section 201(a) on the first day of such year and reduced by the outstanding amount of any loan (including interest thereon) theretofore made to such Trust Fund under section 201(l) or 1817(j), to".

SEC. 12107. EXTENSION OF 15-MONTH REENTITLEMENT PERIOD TO CHILDHOOD DISABILITY BENEFICIARIES SUBSEQUENTLY ENTITLED.

(a) In General.—Section 202(d)(6)(E) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "the third month following the month in which he ceases to be under such disability" and inserting in lieu thereof "the termination month (as defined in paragraph (1)(G)(i)), subject to section 223(e),".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—Section 223(e) of such Act is amended by inserting "(d)(6)(A)(ii), (d)(6)(B)," after "(d)(1)(B)(ii),".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section are effective December 1, 1980, and shall apply with respect to any individual who is under a disability (as defined in section 223(d) of the Social Security Act) on or after that date.

(a) OASDI Payments.—Section 204(a) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "204(a)";

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B); and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, when any payment of more than the correct amount is made to or on behalf of an individual who has died, and such payment—

"(A) is made by direct deposit to a financial institution;

"(B) is credited by the financial institution to a joint account of the deceased individual and another person; and

"(C) such other person was entitled to a monthly benefit on the basis of the same wages and self-employment income as the deceased individual for the month preceding the month in which the deceased individual died, the amount of such payment in excess of the correct amount shall be treated as a payment of more than the correct amount to such other person.".

(b) SSI Payments.—Section 1631(b) of the Social Security Act is amended by redesignating paragraphs (2) through (4) as paragraphs (3) through (5), and by inserting after paragraph (1) the following new paragraph:

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, when any payment of more than the correct amount is made to or on behalf of an individual who has died, and such payment—

"(A) is made by direct deposit to a financial institution;

"(B) is credited by the financial institution to a joint account of the deceased individual and another person; and

"(C) such other person is the surviving spouse of the deceased individual, and was eligible for a payment under this title (including any State supplementation payment paid by the Secretary) as an eligible spouse (or as either member of an eligible couple) for the month in which the deceased individual died, the amount of such payment in excess of the correct amount shall be treated as a payment of more than the correct amount to such other person.".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply only in the case of deaths of which the Secretary is first notified on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 12114. COVERAGE OF CONNECTICUT STATE POLICE.

Notwithstanding any provision of section 218 of the Social Security Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, upon the request of the Governor of Connecticut, modify the agreement under such section between the Secretary and the State of Connecticut to provide that service performed after the date of the enactment of this Act by members of the Division of the State Police within the Connecticut Department of Public Safety, who are hired on or after May 8, 1984, and who are members of the tier II plan of the Connecticut State Employees Retirement System, shall be covered under such agreement.

SEC. 12115. GENERAL EFFECTIVE DATE OF SUBTITLE.

Except as otherwise specifically provided, the preceding provisions of this subtitle, including the amendments made thereby, shall take effect on the first day of the month following the month in which this Act is enacted.

Subtitle B—Supplemental Security Income Program

SEC. 12201. AMENDMENTS RELATING TO STATE SUPPLEMENTATION UNDER SSI.

(a) Passthrough Relating to Optional State Supplementation.—Section 1618 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) The Secretary shall not find that a State has failed to meet the requirements imposed by subsection (a) with respect to the levels of its supplementary payments for the period January 1, 1984, through December 31, 1985, if in the period January 1, 1986, through December 31, 1986, its supplementary payment levels (other than to recipients of benefits determined under section 1611(e)(1)(B)) are not less than those in effect in December 1976, increased by a percentage equal to the percentage by which payments under section 1611(b) of this Act and section 211(a)(1)(A) of Public Law 93-66 have been increased as a result of all adjustments under sections 1617 (a) and (c) which have occurred after December 1976 and before February 1986.".

(b) Federal Administration of State Supplementation.—Section 1616(b) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof (after and below paragraph (2)) the following new sentence:

"At the option of the State (but subject to paragraph (2) of this subsection), the agreement between the Secretary and such State entered into under subsection (a) shall be modified to provide that the Secretary will make supplementary payments, on and after an effective date to be specified in the agreement as so modified, to individuals receiving benefits determined under section 1611(e)(1)(B).".

SEC. 12202. PRESERVATION OF BENEFIT STATUS FOR DISABLED WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS WHO LOST SSI BENEFITS BECAUSE OF 1983 CHANGES IN ACTUARIAL REDUCTION FORMULA.

(a) In General.—Section 1634 of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a)" after "Sec. 1634.", and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(b)(1) An eligible disabled widow or widower (described in paragraph (2)) who is entitled to a widow's or widower's insurance benefit based on a disability for any month under section 202 (e) or (f) but is not eligible for benefits under this title in that month, and who applies for the protection of this subsection under paragraph (3), shall be deemed for purposes of title XIX to be an individual with respect to whom benefits under this title are paid in that month if he or she—

"(A) has been continuously entitled to such widow's or widower's insurance benefits from the first month for which the increase described in paragraph (2)(C) was reflected in such benefits through the month involved, and

"(B) would be eligible for benefits under this title in the month involved if the amount of the increase described in paragraph (2)(C) in his or her widow's or widower's insurance benefits, and any subsequent cost-of-living adjustments in such benefits under section 215(i), were disregarded.

"(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'eligible disabled widow or widower' means an individual who—

"(A) was entitled to a monthly insurance benefit under title II for December 1983,

"(B) was entitled to a widow's or widower's insurance benefit based on a disability under section 202 (e) or (f) for January 1984 and with respect to whom a benefit under this title was paid in that month, and

"(C) because of the increase in the amount of his or her widow's or widower's insurance benefits which resulted from the amendments made by section 134 of the Social Security Amendments of 1983 (Public Law 98-21) (eliminating the additional reduction factor for disabled widows and widowers under age 60), was ineligible for benefits under this title in the first month in which such increase was paid to him or her (and in which a retroactive payment of such increase for prior months was not made).

"(3) This subsection shall only apply to an individual who files a written application for protection under this subsection, in such manner and form as the Secretary may prescribe, during the 15-month period beginning with the month in which this subsection is enacted.

"(4) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'benefits under this title' includes payments of the type described in section 1616(a) or of the type described in section 212(a) of Public Law 93-66.".

(b) Identification of Beneficiaries.—(1) As soon as possible after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall provide each State with the names of all individuals receiving widow's or widower's insurance benefits under subsection (e) or (f) of section 202 of the Social Security Act based on a disability who might qualify for medical assistance under the plan of that State approved under title XIX of such Act by reason of the application of section 1634(b) of the Social Security Act.

(2) Each State shall—

(A) using the information so provided and any other information it may have, promptly notify all individuals who may qualify for medical assistance under its plan by reason of such section 1634(b) of their right to make application for such assistance,

(B) solicit their applications for such assistance, and

(C) make the necessary determination of such individuals' eligibility for such assistance under such section and under such title XIX.

(c) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a)(2) shall not have the effect of deeming an individual eligible for medical assistance for any month which begins less than two months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle C—AFDC, Adoption Assistance, and Foster Care Programs

SEC. 12301. AFDC QUALITY CONTROL STUDIES AND PENALTY MORATORIUM.

(a) Studies.—(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter referred to in this section as the "Secretary") shall conduct a study of quality control systems for the Aid to Families with Dependent Children Program under title IV-A of the Social Security Act and for the Medicaid Program under title XIX of such Act. The study shall examine how best to operate such systems in order to obtain information which will allow program managers to improve the quality of administration, and provide reasonable data on the basis of which Federal funding may be withheld for States with excessive levels of erroneous payments.

(2) The Secretary shall also contract with the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a concurrent independent study for the purpose described in paragraph (1). For purposes of such study, the Secretary shall provide to the National Academy of Sciences any relevant data available to the Secretary at the onset of the study and on an ongoing basis.

(3) The Secretary and the National Academy of Sciences shall report the results of their respective studies to the Congress within one year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) Moratorium on Penalties.—(1) During the 24-month period beginning with the first calendar quarter which begins after the date of the enactment of this Act (hereafter in this section referred to as the "moratorium period"), the Secretary shall not impose any reductions in payments to States pursuant to section 403(i) of the Social Security Act (or prior regulations), or pursuant to any comparable provision of law relating to the programs under title IV-A of such Act in Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, or the Northern Mariana Islands.

(2) During the moratorium period, the Secretary and the States shall continue to operate the quality control systems in effect under title IV-A of the Social Security Act, and to calculate the error rates under the provisions referred to in paragraph (1).

(c) Restructured Quality Control Systems.—(1) Not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall publish regulations which shall—

(A) restructure the quality control systems under titles IV-A and XIX of the Social Security Act to the extent the Secretary determines to be appropriate, taking into account the studies conducted under subsection (a); and

(B) establish, taking into account the studies conducted under subsection (a), criteria for adjusting the reductions which shall be made for quarters prior to the implementation of the restructured quality control systems so as to eliminate reductions for those quarters which would not be required if the restructured quality control systems had been in effect during those quarters.

(2) Beginning with the first calendar quarter after the moratorium period, the Secretary shall implement the revised quality control systems, and shall reduce payments to States—

(A) for quarters after the moratorium period in accordance with the restructured quality control systems; and

(B) for quarters in and before the moratorium period, as provided under the regulations described in paragraph (1)(B).

(d) Effective Date.—This section shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 12302. AFDC AUTOMATION REQUIREMENTS.

(a) In General.—Section 402(e)(2) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) If the Secretary determines that such a system has not been implemented by the State by the date specified for implementation in the State's advance automatic data processing planning document, then the Secretary shall reduce payments to such State, in accordance with section 403(b), in an amount equal to 40 percent of the expenditures referred to in section 403(a)(3)(B) with respect to which payments were made to the State under section 403(a)(3)(B). The Secretary may extend the deadline for implementation if the State demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the State cannot implement such system by the date specified in such planning document due to circumstances beyond the State's control.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act, but shall apply only with respect to sums expended by the States for the purposes described in section 403(a)(3)(B) of the Social Security Act on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 12304. THIRD-PARTY LIABILITY.

(a) In General.—Section 402(a)(26) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking out the comma at the end of subparagraph (A) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon;

(2) by adding "and" after the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (B); and

(3) by adding after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) to cooperate with the State in identifying, and providing information to assist the State in pursuing, any third party who may be liable to pay for care and services available under the State's plan for medical assistance under title XIX, unless such individual has good cause for refusing to cooperate as determined by the State agency in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary, which standards shall take into consideration the best interests of the individuals involved; but the State shall not be subject to any financial penalty in the administration or enforcement of this subparagraph as a result of any monitoring, quality control, or auditing requirements;".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to calendar quarters beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 12305. PROVISIONS RELATING TO MEDICAID COVERAGE UNDER THE ADOPTION ASSISTANCE AND FOSTER CARE PROGRAMS.

(a) In General.—Section 473(b) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) For purposes of titles XIX and XX, any child—

"(1)(A) who is a child described in subsection (a)(1), and

"(B) with respect to whom an adoption assistance agreement is in effect under this section (whether or not adoption assistance payments are provided under the agreement or are being made under this section), including any such child who has been placed for adoption in accordance with applicable State and local law (whether or not an interlocutory or other judicial decree of adoption has been issued), or

"(2) with respect to whom foster care maintenance payments are being made under section 472, shall be deemed to be a dependent child as defined in section 406 and shall be deemed to be a recipient of aid to families with dependent children under part A of this title in the State where such child resides.".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Section 473(c)(2) of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "without providing adoption assistance" in clause (A) and inserting in lieu thereof "without providing adoption assistance under this section or medical assistance under title XIX"; and

(B) by inserting "or medical assistance under title XIX" before the period at the end thereof.

(2) Section 475(3) of such Act is amended by striking out "the adoption assistance payments and any additional services and assistance" in clause (A) of the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "any adoption assistance payments and any other services and assistance".

(3) Section 1902(a)(10)(A)(i)(I) of such Act is amended by striking out "or 406(h)" and inserting in lieu thereof ", 406(h), or 473(b)".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to medical assistance furnished in or after the first calendar quarter beginning more than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 12306. EXTENSION OF VOLUNTARY PLACEMENT, AND CEILING AND TRIGGER PROVISIONS, RELATING TO FOSTER CARE.

(a) Section 474(b) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) in paragraphs (1), (2)(B), and (4)(B), by striking out "1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "1987";

(2) in paragraph (2)(A)—

(A) by inserting "and" at the end of clause (ii), and

(B) by striking out clauses (iii), (iv), and (v) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(iii) with respect to each of the fiscal years 1983 through 1987, only if the amount appropriated under section 420 for such fiscal year is equal to $266,000,000."; and

(3) in paragraph (5)(A)—

(A) by striking out "October 1, 1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "October 1, 1987", and

(B) in clause (ii), by striking out "1984 and 1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "1984 through 1987".

(b) Paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 474(c) of such Act are each amended by striking out "1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "1987".

(c)(1) Section 102(a)(1) of the Adoption Assistance and Child Welfare Act of 1980 (Public Law 96-272) is amended by striking out "1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "1987".

(2) Section 102(c) of such Act is amended by striking out "1985" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "1987".

SEC. 12307. INDEPENDENT LIVING INITIATIVES.

(a) Independent Living Initiatives.—Part E of title IV of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"Independent Living Initiatives

"Sec. 477. (a) Payments shall be made in accordance with this section for the purpose of assisting States and localities in establishing and carrying out programs designed to assist children, with respect to whom foster care maintenance payments are being made by the State under this part and who have attained age 16, in making the transition from foster care to independent living. Any State which provides for the establishment and carrying out of one or more such programs in accordance with this section for a fiscal year shall be entitled to receive payments under this section for such fiscal year, in an amount determined under subsection (e). Such payments shall be made only for the fiscal years 1987 and 1988.

"(b) The State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State's programs under this part shall be responsible for administering or supervising the administration of the State's programs described in subsection (a). Payment under this section shall be made to the State, and shall be used for the purpose of conducting and providing in accordance with this section (directly or under contracts with local governmental entities or private nonprofit organizations) the activities and services required to carry out the program or programs involved.

"(c) In order for a State to receive payments under this section for any fiscal year, the State agency must submit to the Secretary, in such manner and form as the Secretary may prescribe, a description of the program together with satisfactory assurances that the program will be operated in an effective and efficient manner and will otherwise meet the requirements of this section. In the case of payments for fiscal year 1987, such description and assurances must be submitted within 90 days after the Secretary promulgates regulations as required under subsection (i), and in the case of payments for fiscal year 1988, such description and assurances must be submitted prior to January 1, 1988.

"(d) In carrying out the purpose described in subsection (a), it shall be the objective of each program established under this section to help the individuals participating in such program to prepare to live independently upon leaving foster care. Such programs may include (subject to the availability of funds) programs to—

"(1) enable participants to seek a high school diploma or its equivalent or to take part in appropriate vocational training;

"(2) provide training in daily living skills, budgeting, locating and maintaining housing, and career planning;

"(3) provide for individual and group counseling;

"(4) integrate and coordinate services otherwise available to participants;

"(5) provide for the establishment of outreach programs designed to attract individuals who are eligible to participate in the program;

"(6) provide each participant a written transitional independent living plan which shall be based on an assessment of his needs, and which shall be incorporated into his case plan, as described in section 475(1); and

"(7) provide participants with other services and assistance designed to improve their transition to independent living.

"(e)(1) The amount to which a State shall be entitled under section 474(a)(4) for each of the fiscal years 1987 and 1988 shall be an amount which bears the same ratio to $45,000,000 as such State's average number of children receiving foster care maintenance payments under this part in fiscal year 1984 bears to the total of the average number of children receiving such payments under this part for all States for fiscal year 1984.

"(2) If any State does not apply for funds under this section for any fiscal year within the time provided in subsection (c), the funds to which such State would have been entitled for such fiscal year shall be reallocated to one or more other States on the basis of their relative need for additional payments under this section (as determined by the Secretary).

"(3) Any amounts payable to States under this section shall be in addition to amounts payable to States under subsections (a)(1), (a)(2), and (a)(3) of section 474, and shall supplement and not replace any other funds which may be available for the same general purposes in the localities involved.

"(f) Payments made to a State under this section for any fiscal year—

"(1) shall be used only for the specific purposes described in this section;

"(2) may be made on an estimated basis in advance of the determination of the exact amount, with appropriate subsequent adjustments to take account of any error in the estimates; and

"(3) shall be expended by such State in such fiscal year or in the succeeding fiscal year.

"(g)(1) Not later than March 1, 1988, each State shall submit to the Secretary a report on the programs carried out with the amounts received under this section. Such report—

"(A) shall be in such form and contain such information as may be necessary to provide an accurate description of such activities, to provide a complete record of the purposes for which the funds were spent, and to indicate the extent to which the expenditure of such funds succeeded in accomplishing the purpose described in subsection (a); and

"(B) shall specifically contain such information as the Secretary may require in order to carry out the evaluation under paragraph (2).

"(2) Not later than July 1, 1988, the Secretary, on the basis of the reports submitted by States under paragraph (1) for the fiscal year 1987, and on the basis of such additional information as the Secretary may obtain or develop, shall evaluate the use by States of the payments made available under this section for such fiscal year with respect to the purpose of this section, with the objective of appraising the achievements of the programs for which such payments were made available, and developing comprehensive information and data on the basis of which decisions can be made with respect to the improvement of such programs and the necessity for providing further payments in subsequent years. The Secretary shall report such evaluation to the Congress. As a part of such evaluation, the Secretary shall include, at a minimum, a detailed overall description of the number and characteristics of the individuals served by the programs, the various kinds of activities conducted and services provided and the results achieved, and shall set forth in detail findings and comments with respect to the various State programs and a statement of plans and recommendations for the future.

"(h) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, payments made and services provided to participants in a program under this section, as a direct consequence of their participation in such program, shall not be considered as income or resources for purposes of determining eligibility (or the eligibility of any other persons) for aid under the State's plan approved under section 402 or 471, or for purposes of determining the level of such aid.

"(i) The Secretary shall promulgate final regulations for implementing this section within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this section.".

(b) Case Plans.—Section 475(1) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "Where appropriate, for a child age 16 or over, the case plan must also include a written description of the programs and services which will help such child prepare for the transition from foster care to independent living.".

(c) Payments to States.—Section 474(a) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "; plus"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) an amount for transitional independent living programs as provided in section 477.".

(d) Conforming Amendment.—Section 470 of such Act is amended by striking out "foster care and adoption assistance" and inserting in lieu thereof "foster care, adoption assistance, and transitional independent living programs".

Subtitle D—Provisions Relating to Unemployment Compensation

SEC. 12401. RECOVERY OF UNEMPLOYMENT BENEFIT OVERPAYMENTS.

(a) In General.—(1) Section 303(a)(5) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting before "; and" at the end thereof the following: ": Provided further, That amounts may be deducted from unemployment benefits and used to repay overpayments as provided in subsection (g)".

(2) Section 303 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) A State may deduct from unemployment benefits otherwise payable to an individual an amount equal to any overpayment made to such individual under an unemployment benefit program of the United States or of any other State, and not previously recovered. The amount so deducted shall be paid to the jurisdiction under whose program such overpayment was made. Any such deduction shall be made only in accordance with the same procedures relating to notice and opportunity for a hearing as apply to the recovery of overpayments of regular unemployment compensation paid by such State.

"(2) Any State may enter into an agreement with the Secretary of Labor under which—

"(A) the State agrees to recover from unemployment benefits otherwise payable to an individual by such State any overpayments made under an unemployment benefit program of the United States to such individual and not previously recovered, in accordance with paragraph (1), and to pay such amounts recovered to the United States for credit to the appropriate account, and

"(B) the United States agrees to allow the State to recover from unemployment benefits otherwise payable to an individual under an unemployment benefit program of the United States any overpayments made

VOL 132
PT 5
MR 21 — AP 11
1986
UMI

by such State to such individual under a State unemployment benefit program and not previously recovered, in accordance with the same procedures as apply under paragraph (1).

"(3) For purposes of this subsection, 'unemployment benefits' means unemployment compensation, trade adjustment allowances, and other unemployment assistance.".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Section 3304(a)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(B) by adding "and" at the end of subparagraph (C); and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) amounts may be deducted from unemployment benefits and used to repay overpayments as provided in section 303(g) of the Social Security Act;".

(2) Section 3306(f) of such Code is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (1);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) amounts may be deducted from unemployment benefits and used to repay overpayments as provided in section 303(g) of the Social Security Act.".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to recoveries made on or after the date of the enactment of this Act and shall apply with respect to overpayments made before, on, or after such date.

SEC. 12402. SUPPLEMENTAL UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION FOR CERTAIN INDIVIDUALS.

(a) In General.—If—

(1) an individual was receiving Federal supplemental compensation for the week which includes March 31, 1985, or a series of consecutive weeks which began with such week, and weeks in such period shall be disregarded for purposes of the consecutive-week requirement of section 602(f)(2)(B) of such Act, and, notwithstanding the requirements of State law relating to the availability for work, the active search for work, or the refusal to accept work, such individual shall be entitled to payment of Federal supplemental compensation for each week of unemployment which is described in subsection (b) and for which a certification of unemployment is made by such individual in accordance with subsection (c).

(b) Weeks for Which Payment Shall Be Made.—A week of unemployment for which payment shall be made under subsection (a) is a week which occurred during the period which commences with the first week beginning after the close of the period described in subsection (a)(2) and ends with the beginning of the first week in which the individual was employed after the close of such period.

(c) Certification.—The certification of unemployment referred to in subsection (a) shall be a certification—

(1) that is made on a form provided by the State agency concerned and signed by the individual; and

(2) that identifies the weeks of unemployment for which the individual is making the certification.

(d) Limitation on Amount of Payment.—In no case may the total amount paid to an individual under subsection (a) exceed the amount remaining in the account established for such individual under section 602(e) of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 after payments were made from such account for weeks of unemployment beginning before the period described in subsection (a)(2).

(e) Definition.—For purposes of subsection (a), the term "temporary disaster services" means services performed as a member of the National Guard after being called up by the Governor of a State to perform services related to a major disaster that was declared on June 3, 1985, by the President of the United States under the Disaster Relief Act of 1974.

(f) Modification of Agreement.—(1) The Secretary of Labor shall, at the earliest possible date after the date of the enactment of this Act, propose to any State concerned a modification of the agreement that the Secretary has with such State under section 602 of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 in order to carry out this section.

(2) Pending modification of the agreement, the State may make payment in accordance with the provisions of this section and shall be reimbursed in accordance with the provisions of section 604(a) of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982. For purposes of carrying out this paragraph, the term "this subtitle" in such section 604(a) shall include this section.

(g) Effective Date.—The provisions of this section shall apply to weeks beginning after March 31, 1985.

Subtitle E—Restoration of Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund

SEC. 12501. APPROPRIATION TO CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT AND DISABILITY FUND OF INTEREST LOST FROM NONINVESTMENT IN SEPTEMBER 1984.

On December 31, 1985, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, from amounts in the general fund of the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, an amount determined by the Secretary to be equal to the sum of—

(1) the excess of (A) the amount of interest which would have been earned by such fund, during the period beginning with September 28, 1984, and ending with December 31, 1984, on all monies transferred to such fund on September 28, 1984, if all such monies had been invested on September 28, 1984, over (B) the amount of interest actually earned by such fund on such monies during such period;

(2) interest that would have been earned on the amount described in paragraph (1) during the period beginning with January 1, 1985, and ending with June 30, 1985;

(3) the excess of (A) the amount of interest which would have been earned by such fund, during the period beginning on January 1, 1985, and ending on June 30, 1985, on all monies transferred to such fund on September 28, 1984, if all such monies had been invested on September 28, 1984, over (B) the amount of interest actually earned by such fund on such monies during such period; and

(4) the interest that would have been earned on the amounts described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) during the period beginning with July 1, 1985, and ending with December 31, 1985.

TITLE XIII—REVENUES, TRADE, AND RELATED PROGRAMS

Subtitle A—Trade and Customs Provisions

SEC. 13003. CASH ASSISTANCE FOR WORKERS.

(a) Participation in Job Search Program Required.—

(1) Subsection (a) of section 231 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2291(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) Such worker, unless the Secretary has determined that no acceptable job search program is reasonably available—

"(A) is enrolled in a job search program approved by the Secretary under section 237(c), or

"(B) has, after the date on which the worker became totally separated, or partially separated, from the adversely affected employment, completed a job search program approved by the Secretary under section 237(c).".

(2) Section 231 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2291) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) If the Secretary determines that—

"(1) the adversely affected worker—

"(A) has failed to begin participation in the job search program the enrollment in which meets the requirement of subsection (a)(5), or

"(B) has ceased to participate in such job search program before completing such job search program, and

"(2) there is no justifiable cause for such failure or cessation, no trade readjustment allowance may be paid to the adversely affected worker under this part on or after the date of such determination until the adversely affected worker begins or resumes participation in a job search program approved under section 237(c).".

(3) Subsection (a) of section 239 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2311(a)) is amended—

(A) by striking out "training," in clause (2) and inserting in lieu thereof "training and job search programs,"; and

(B) by striking out "and (3)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(3) will make determinations and approvals regarding job search programs under sections 231(c) and 237(c), and (4)".

(b) Qualifying Weeks of Employment.—The last sentence of section 231(a)(2) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2291(a)(2)) is amended by striking out all that follows after subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof "shall be treated as a week of employment at wages of $30 or more, but not more than 7 weeks, in case of weeks described in paragraph (A) or (C), or both, may be treated as weeks of employment under this sentence.".

(c) Weekly Amounts of Readjustment Allowances.—Section 232 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2292) is amended—

(1) by striking out "under any Federal law," in subsection (c) and inserting in lieu thereof "under any Federal law other than this Act",

(2) by striking out "under section 236(c)" in subsection (c) and inserting in lieu thereof "under section 231(c) or 236(c)", and

(3) by striking out "If the training allowance" in subsection (c) and inserting in lieu thereof "If such training allowance".

(d) Limitations.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 233(a) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2293(a)(2)) is amended by striking out "52-week period" and inserting in lieu thereof "104-week period".

(2) Section 233 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2293) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) No trade readjustment allowance shall be paid to a worker under this part for any week during which the worker is receiving on-the-job training.".

SEC. 13004. JOB TRAINING FOR WORKERS.

(a) In General.—Section 236 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2296) is amended—

(1) by striking out "for a worker" in subsection (a)(1)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof "for an adversely affected worker",

(2) by striking out "may approve" in the first sentence of subsection (a)(1) and inserting in lieu thereof "shall (to the extent appropriated funds are available) approve",

(3) by striking out "under paragraph (1)" in subsection (a)(2) and inserting in lieu thereof "under subsection (a)",

(4) by striking out "this subsection" in subsection (a)(3) and inserting in lieu thereof "this section",

(5) by redesignating paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (a) as subsections (e) and (f), respectively,

(6) by inserting at the end of subsection (a) the following new paragraphs:

"(2) For purposes of applying paragraph (1)(C), a reasonable expectation of employment does not require that employment opportunities for a worker be available, or offered, immediately upon the completion of training approved under this paragraph (1).

"(3)(A) If the costs of training an adversely affected worker are paid by the Secretary under paragraph (1), no other payment for such costs may be made under any other provision of Federal law.

"(B) No payment may be made under paragraph (1) of the costs of training an adversely affected worker if such costs—

"(i) have already been paid under any other provision of Federal law, or

"(ii) are reimbursable under any other provision of Federal law and a portion of such costs have already been paid under such other provision of Federal law.

"(C) The provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to, or take into account, any funds provided under any other provision of Federal law which are used for any purpose other than the direct payment of the costs incurred in training a particular adversely affected worker, even if such use has the effect of indirectly paying or reducing any portion of the costs involved in training the adversely affected worker.

"(4) The training programs that may be approved under paragraph (1) include, but are not limited to—

"(A) on-the-job training,

"(B) any training program provided by a State pursuant to section 303 of the Job Training Partnership Act,

"(C) any training program approved by a private industry council established under section 102 of such Act, and

"(D) any other training program approved by the Secretary.", and

(7) by inserting after subsection (c) the following new subsection:

"(d) Notwithstanding any provision of subsection (a)(1), the Secretary may pay the costs of on-the-job training of an adversely affected worker under subsection (a)(1) only if—

"(1) no currently employed worker is displaced by such adversely affected worker (including partial displacement such as a reduction in the hours of nonovertime work, wages, or employment benefits),

"(2) such training does not impair existing contracts for services or collective bargaining agreements,

"(3) in the case of training which would be inconsistent with the terms of a collective bargaining agreement, the written concurrence of the labor organization concerned has been obtained,

"(4) no other individual is on layoff from the same, or any substantially equivalent, job for which such adversely affected worker is being trained,

"(5) the employer has not terminated the employment of any regular employee or otherwise reduced the workforce of the employer with the intention of filling the vacancy so created by hiring such adversely affected worker,

"(6) the job for which such adversely affected worker is being trained is not being created in a promotional line that will infringe in any way upon the promotional opportunities of currently employed individuals,

"(7) such training is not for the same occupation from which the worker was separated and with respect to which such worker's group was certified pursuant to section 222,

"(8) the employer certifies to the Secretary that the employer will continue to employ such worker for at least 26 weeks after completion of such training if the worker desires to continue such employment and the employer does not have due cause to terminate such employment,

"(9) the employer has not received payment under subsection (a)(1) with respect to any other on-the-job training provided by such employer which failed to meet the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), and (6), and

"(10) the employer has not taken, at any time, any action which violated the terms of any certification described in paragraph (8) made by such employer with respect to any other on-the-job training provided by such employer for which the Secretary has made a payment under subsection (a)(1).".

(b) On-the-Job Training Defined.—Section 247 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2319) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(16) The term "on-the-job training" means training provided by an employer to an individual who is employed by the employer.".

(c) Agreements With the States.—Section 239 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2311) is amended—

(1) by amending subsection (a)(2) by inserting "but in accordance with subsection (f)," after "where appropriate,"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(e) Agreements entered into under this section may be made with one or more State or local agencies including—

"(1) the employment service agency of such State,

"(2) any State agency carrying out title III of the Job Training Partnership Act, or

"(3) any other State or local agency administering job training or related programs.

"(f) Each cooperating State agency shall, in carrying out subsection (a)(2)—

"(1) advise each adversely affected worker to apply for training under section 236(a) at the time the worker makes application for trade readjustment allowances (but failure of the worker to do so may not be treated as cause for denial of those allowances), and

"(2) within 60 days after application for training is made by the worker, interview the adversely affected worker regarding suitable training opportunities available to the worker under section 236 and review such opportunities with the worker.".

SEC. 13005. JOB SEARCH ALLOWANCES.

(a) In General.—Section 237 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2297) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) The Secretary shall reimburse any adversely affected worker for necessary expenses incurred by such worker in participating in a job search program approved by the Secretary.".

(b) Definitions.—Section 247 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2319), as amended by section 13004(b) of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(17)(A) The term 'job search program' means a job search workshop or job finding club.

"(B) The term 'job search workshop' means a short (1 to 3 days) seminar designed to provide participants with knowledge that will enable the participants to find jobs. Subjects are not limited to, but should include, labor market information, resume writing, interviewing techniques, and techniques for finding job openings.

"(C) The term 'job finding club' means a job search workshop which includes a period (1 to 2 weeks) of structured, supervised activity in which participants attempt to obtain jobs.".

SEC. 13006. ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE FOR FIRMS.

(a) Technical Assistance.—

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 252(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2342(b)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) Adjustment assistance under this chapter consists of technical assistance. The Secretary shall approve a firm's application for adjustment assistance only if the Secretary determines that the firm's adjustment proposal—

"(A) is reasonably calculated to materially contribute to the economic adjustment of the firm,

"(B) gives adequate consideration to the interests of the workers of such firm, and

"(C) demonstrates that the firm will make all reasonable efforts to use its own resources for economic development.".

(2) Section 252 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2342) is amended by striking out subsection (c) and redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (c).

(3) Paragraph (2) of section 253(b) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2343(b)(2)) is amended by striking out "such cost" and inserting in lieu thereof "such cost for assistance described in paragraph (2) or (3) of subsection (a)".

(b) No New Loans or Guarantees.—Section 254 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2344) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter, no direct loans or guarantees of loans may be made under this chapter after the date of enactment of the Trade Adjustment Assistance Reform and Extension Act of 1986.".

SEC. 13007. EXTENSION AND TERMINATION OF TRADE ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE.

(a) In General.—Section 285 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2271, preceding note) is amended—

(1) by striking out the first sentence thereof and inserting in lieu thereof "(a)",

(2) by striking out the section heading and inserting in lieu thereof "SEC. 285. TERMINATION.", and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) No assistance, allowances, or other payments may be provided under chapter 2, and no technical assistance may be provided under chapter 3, after September 30, 1991.".

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The table of contents of the Trade Act of 1974 is amended by striking out the item relating to section 285 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 285. Termination.

SEC. 13008. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) Workers.—Section 245 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2317) is amended by striking out "1982 through 1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, and 1991".

(b) Firms.—Subsection (b) of section 256 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2346(b)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "for fiscal years 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, and 1991" after "to the Secretary",

(2) by striking out "from time to time", and

(3) by striking out the last sentence thereof.

SEC. 13009. EFFECTIVE DATES; APPLICATION OF GRAMM-RUDMAN.

(a) In General.—Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), the amendments made by this part shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) Job Search Program Requirements.—The amendments made by section 13003(a) apply with respect to workers covered by petitions filed under section 221 of the Trade Act of 1974 on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) Extension and Authorization.—Chapters 2 and 3 of title II of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2271, et seq.) shall be applied as if the amendments made by sections 13007 and 13008 had taken effect on December 18, 1985.

(d) Application of Gramm-Rudman.—Trade readjustment allowances payable under part I of chapter 2 of title II of the Trade Act of 1974 for the period from March 1, 1986, and until October 1, 1986, shall be reduced by a percentage equal to the non-defense sequester percentage applied in the Sequestration Report (submitted under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 and dated January 21, 1986) of the Comptroller General of the United States for fiscal year 1986.

PART 2—AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR TRADE AND CUSTOMS AGENCIES

SEC. 13021. UNITED STATES INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION.

The first sentence of paragraph (2) of section 330(e) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1330(e)(2)) is amended to read as follows: "There are authorized to be appropriated to the Commission for necessary expenses (including the rental of conference rooms in the District of Columbia and elsewhere) for fiscal year 1986 not to exceed $28,901,000; of which not to exceed $2,500 may be used, subject to approval by the Chairman of the Commission, for reception and entertainment expenses.".

SEC. 13022. UNITED STATES CUSTOMS SERVICE.

(a) Authorization of Appropriations.—Section 301 of the Customs Procedural Reform and Simplification Act of 1978 (19 U.S.C. 2075) is amended as follows:

(1) Subsection (b) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of the Treasury not to exceed $772,141,000 for the salaries and expenses of the United States Customs Service for fiscal year 1986; of which—

"(A) $27,900,000 is for the addition of 500 inspectors, 150 import specialists, 100 customs patrol officers, and 50 special agents;

"(B) $53,500,000 is for the operation and maintenance of the air interdiction program of the Service; and

"(C) not to exceed $14,000,000 is for the implementation of the 'Operation EXODUS' program and any related program designed to enforce or monitor export controls under the Export Administration Act of 1979.

"(2) No part of any sum that is appropriated under the authority of paragraph (1) may be used to close any port of entry at which, during fiscal year 1985—

"(A) not less than 2,500 merchandise entries (including informal entries) were made; and

"(B) not less than $1,500,000 in customs revenues were assessed.

"(3)(A) No part of any sum that is appropriated under the authority of paragraph (1) may be used for further research and development or acquisition of F-15 avionics for the P-3 aircraft and related equipment until 60 days after the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Finance have received from the Secretary of the Treasury a written comparative assessment of the suitability of the P-3, E-2, or other appropriate aircraft for use by the Customs Service in its air drug interdiction program. Such assessment, which the Secretary may not submit to the Committees until the General Accounting Office study required under paragraph (7) is completed, shall include life cycle costs.

"(B) Acquisition of additional aircraft for use by the Customs Service for its air drug interdiction program after completion of the assessment required under subparagraph (A) shall be subject to competitive bidding through the use of the normal 'request for proposal' process.

"(4) No part of any sum that is appropriated under the authority of paragraph (1) may be used to consolidate the drawback liquidation centers within the Customs Service to less than 4 such centers. If a consolidation is undertaken, the Commissioner of Customs shall select the location of the centers after taking into account the drawback volume at, and the geographic dispersion of, the respective centers being considered for consolidation.

"(5) In addition to any sum authorized to be appropriated under paragraph (1), there are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of the Treasury for fiscal year 1986 not to exceed $8,000,000 from the Customs Forfeiture Fund for the making of payments under section 613A of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1613b), of which not to exceed $5,000,000 may be used for the modification of aircraft (whether or not aircraft described in subsection (a)(5) of that section) for drug interdiction.

"(6) In addition to any other amounts authorized to be appropriated for the Customs Service for fiscal years 1987 and 1988, there are authorized to be appropriated $27,900,000 for each of such fiscal years to fund the additional personnel referred to in paragraph (1)(A).

"(7) As soon as possible after the date of the enactment of this paragraph, but not later than 12 months after that date, the General Accounting Office shall complete, and submit to the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Finance, a study that evaluates the air detection and interdiction capability of the Customs Service, including assets, geographic dispersal, costs of operation, procurement practices, and the services and equipment provided by other Federal agencies. Within 6 months after commencing the study, the General Accounting Office shall consult with the Committees on the progress of the study."; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(f) Use of Savings Resulting From Administrative Consolidations.—If savings in salaries and expenses result from the consolidation of administrative functions within the Customs Service, the Commissioner of Customs shall apply those savings, to the extent they are not needed to meet emergency requirements of the Service, to strengthening the commercial operations of the Service by increasing the number of inspector, import specialist, patrol officer, and other line operational positions.

"(g) Allocation of Resources.—The Commissioner of Customs shall ensure that existing levels of commercial services, including inspection and control, classification, and value, shall continue to be provided by Customs personnel assigned to the headquarters office of any Customs district designated by statute before the date of enactment of this subsection. The number of such personnel assigned to any such district headquarters shall not be reduced through attrition or otherwise, and such personnel shall be afforded the opportunity to maintain their proficiency through training and workshops to the same extent provided to Customs personnel in any other district. Automation and other modernization equipment shall be made available, as needed on a timely basis, to such headquarters to the same extent as such equipment is made available to any other district headquarters.".

(b) Elimination of Sureties on Customs Bonds.—(1) The Commissioner of Customs may not publish, nor take any other action to give force and effect to, any final rule that would revise any provision in 19 CFR part 113 or section 142.4 (as in effect on March 1, 1984) relating to the requirement for sureties on customs bonds—

(A) unless the Commissioner submits to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate, on the same day, a report containing—

(i) the text of the draft final rule;

(ii) an analysis of the revenue impact of the rule;

(iii) a regulatory impact analysis;

(iv) the estimated cost benefit of the rule to the Customs Service and to the importing community, and an explanation in support of those estimates; and

(v) a justification for each revision to be effected by the rule; and

(B) until the close of the first period of 90 calendar days of continuous session of Congress occurring after the date on which the report is submitted under subparagraph (A).

SEC. 13023. UNITED STATES TRADE REPRESENTATIVE.

Section 141 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2171) is amended—

(1) by inserting before the semicolon at the end of subsection (d)(1) the following: ", except that not more than 20 individuals may be employed without regard to any provision of law regulating the employment or compensation at rates not to exceed the rate of pay for level IV of the Executive Schedule in section 5314 of title 5, United States Code"; and

(2) by amending subsection (f)(1) by striking out "$14,179,000 for fiscal year 1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "$13,582,000 for fiscal year 1986".

SEC. 13024. NOTIFICATION OF CERTAIN ACTIONS.

Section 237 of the Trade and Tariff Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 2993) is amended—

(1) by striking out "1985" in subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof "1986";

(2) by striking out subsection (c);

(3) by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c); and

(4) by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection:

"(b) The notice required under subsection (a) shall include—

"(1) a statement which sets forth in detail the factors taken into account in making the decision to take the action described in subsection (a) and the reasons for such action; and

"(2) an analysis of the impact such action will have on the commerce and community served by each office affected by such action.".

PART 3—CUSTOMS FEES

SEC. 13031. FEES FOR CERTAIN CUSTOMS SERVICES.

(a) Schedule of Fees.—In addition to any other fee authorized by law, the Secretary of the Treasury shall charge and collect the following fees for the provision of customs services in connection with the following:

(1) For the arrival of a commercial vessel of 100 net tons or more, $397.

(2) Subject to the limitation in subsection (b)(2), for the arrival of a commercial truck, $5.

(3) Subject to the limitations in subsection (b)(1)(B) and (3), for the arrival of each railroad car, whether passenger or freight, $5.

(4) For all arrivals made during a calendar year by a private vessel or private aircraft, $25.

(5) For the arrival of each passenger aboard a commercial vessel or commercial aircraft from a place outside the United States (other than a place referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A)), $5.

(6) For each item of dutiable mail for which a document is prepared by a customs officer, $5.

(7) For each customs broker permit held by an individual, partnership, association, or corporate customs broker, $125 per year.

(b) Limitations on Fees.—(1) No fee may be charged under subsection (a) for customs services provided in connection with—

(A) the arrival of any passenger whose journey originated in—

(i) Canada,

(ii) Mexico,

(iii) a territory or possession of the United States, or

(iv) any adjacent island (within the meaning of section 101(b)(5) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(b)(5)); or

(B) the arrival of any railroad car that is part of a train which originates and terminates in the same country, but only if—

(i) such car is part of such train when such train departs from the United States, and

(ii) no passengers board or disembark from such train, and no cargo is loaded or unloaded from such train, while such train is within any country other than the country in which such train originates and terminates.

(2) No fee may be charged under subsection (a)(2) for the arrival of a commercial truck during any calendar year after a total of $100 in fees has been paid to the Secretary of the Treasury for the provision of customs services for all arrivals of such commercial truck during such calendar year.

(3) No fee may be charged under subsection (a)(3) for the arrival of a railroad car whether passenger or freight during any calendar year after a total of $100 in fees has been paid to the Secretary of the Treasury for the provision of customs services for all arrivals of such passenger or freight rail car during such calendar year.

(c) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

(1) The term "vessel" does not include any ferry.

(2) The term "arrival" means arrival at a port of entry in the customs territory of the United States.

(3) The term "customs territory of the United States" has the meaning given to such term by headnote 2 of the General Headnotes and Rules of Interpretation of the Tariff Schedules of the United States.

(4) The term "customs broker permit" means a permit issued under section 641(c) of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1641(c)).

(d) Collection.—(1) Each person that issues a document or ticket to an individual for transportation by a commercial vessel or commercial aircraft into the customs territory of the United States shall—

(A) collect from that individual the fee charged under subsection (a)(5) at the time the document or ticket is issued; and

(B) separately identify on that document or ticket the fee charged under subsection (a)(5) as a Federal inspection fee.

(2) If—

(A) a document or ticket for transportation of a passenger into the customs territory of the United States is issued in a foreign country; and

(B) the fee charged under subsection (a)(5) is not collected at the time such document or ticket is issued;

the person providing transportation to such passenger shall collect such fee at the time such passenger departs from the customs territory of the United States and shall provide such passenger a receipt for the payment of such fee.

(3) The person who collects fees under paragraph (1) or (2) shall remit those fees to the Secretary of the Treasury at any time before the date that is 31 days after the close of the calendar quarter in which the fees are collected.

(e) Provision of Customs Services.—(1) Notwithstanding section 451 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1451) or any other provision of law (other than paragraph (2)), the customs services required to be provided to passengers upon arrival in the United States on scheduled airline flights at customs serviced airports shall be adequately provided when needed and at no cost (other than the fees imposed under subsection (a)) to airlines and airline passengers.

(2) This subsection shall not apply with respect to any airport to which section 236 of the Trade and Tariff Act of 1984 (19 U.S.C. 58b) applies.

(f) Disposition of Fees.—(1) Notwithstanding section 524 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1524), all of the fees collected under subsection (a) shall be deposited in a separate account within the general fund of the Treasury of the United States. Such account shall be known as the "Customs User Fee Account".

(2)(A) The Secretary of the Treasury shall refund out of the Customs User Fee Account to any appropriation the amount paid out of such appropriation for expenses incurred by the Secretary of the Treasury in providing overtime customs inspectional services for which the recipient of such services is not required to reimburse the Secretary of the Treasury.

(B) The amounts which are required to be refunded under subparagraph (A) shall be refunded at least quarterly on the basis of estimates made by the Secretary of the Treasury of the expenses referred to in subparagraph (A). Proper adjustments shall be made in the amounts subsequently refunded under subparagraph (A) to the extent prior estimates were in excess of, or less than, the amounts required to be refunded under subparagraph (A).

(g) Regulations.—The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(h) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Subsection (i) of section 305 of the Rail Passenger Service Act (45 U.S.C. 545(i)) is amended by striking out the last sentence thereof.

(2) Subsection (e) of section 53 of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970 (49 U.S.C. 1741(e)) is repealed.

(i) Effect on Other Authority.—Except with respect to customs services for which fees are imposed under subsection (a), nothing in this section shall be construed as affecting the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to charge fees under section 214(b) of the Customs Procedural Reform and Simplification Act of 1978 (19 U.S.C. 58a).

(j) Effective Dates.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the provisions of this section, and the amendments and repeals made by this section, shall apply with respect to customs services rendered after the date that is 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) Fees may be charged under subsection (a)(5) only with respect to customs services rendered in regard to arriving passengers using transportation for which documents or tickets were issued after the date that is 90 days after such date of enactment.

SEC. 13032. USER FEES FOR CUSTOMS SERVICES AT CERTAIN SMALL AIRPORTS.

Section 236 of the Trade and Tariff Act of 1984 (19 U.S.C. 58b) is amended—

(1) by striking out "4 airports" in subsection (c) and inserting in lieu thereof "20 airports"; and

(2) by striking out the last sentence in subsection (e) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new sentences: "The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay out of any funds available in such account any expenses incurred by the Federal Government in providing customs services at such airport (including expenses incurred for the salaries and expenses of individuals employed to provide such services). None of the funds deposited into such account shall be available for any purpose other than making payments authorized under the preceding sentence.".

SEC. 13033. ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

In accordance with the provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall establish an advisory committee, whose membership shall consist of representatives from the airline, shipping, and other transportation industries, the general public, and others who may be subject to any fee or charge (1) authorized by law, or (2) proposed by the United States Customs Service for the purpose of covering expenses incurred by the Customs Service. The advisory committee shall meet on a periodic basis and shall advise the Secretary on issues related to the performance of the customs services. This advice shall include, but not be limited to, such issues as the time periods during which such services should be performed, the proper number and deployment of inspection officers, the level of fees, and the appropriateness of any proposed fee. The Secretary shall give substantial consideration to the views of the advisory committee in the exercise of his duties.

Subtitle B—General Revenue Provisions

SEC. 13200. AMENDMENT OF 1954 CODE.

Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this subtitle an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

SEC. 13201. INCREASE IN TAX ON CIGARETTES MADE PERMANENT.

(a) Subsection (c) of section 283 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (relating to increase in tax on cigarettes) is amended by striking out all that follows "December 31, 1982" and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

(b) For purposes of all Federal and State laws, the amendment made by subsection (a) shall be treated as having taken effect on March 14, 1986.

SEC. 13202. TAX ON SMOKELESS TOBACCO.

(a) In General.—Section 5701 (relating to rate of tax) is amended by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f) and by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) Smokeless Tobacco.—On smokeless tobacco, manufacturered in or imported into the United States, there shall be imposed the following taxes:

"(1) Snuff.—On snuff, 24 cents per pound and a proportionate tax at the like rate on all fractional parts of a pound.

"(2) Chewing tobacco.—On chewing tobacco, 8 cents per pound and a proportionate tax at the like rate on all fractional parts of a pound.".

(b) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) The heading of chapter 52 is amended by inserting "SMOKELESS TOBACCO," after "CIGARETTES,".

(2) Section 5702(c) (defining tobacco products) is amended by striking out "and cigarettes" and inserting in lieu thereof ", cigarettes, and smokeless tobacco".

(3) Section 5702(d) (defining manufacturers of tobacco products) is amended by striking out "cigars or cigarettes" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "cigars, cigarettes, or smokeless tobacco".

(4) Section 5702 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(n) Definitions Relating to Smokeless Tobacco.—

"(1) Smokeless tobacco.—The term 'smokeless tobacco' means any snuff or chewing tobacco.

"(2) Snuff.—The term 'snuff' means any finely cut, ground, or powdered tobacco that is not intended to be smoked.

"(3) Chewing tobacco.—The term 'chewing tobacco' means any leaf tobacco that is not intended to be smoked.".

(c) Effective Date.—

(1) In general.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to smokeless tobacco removed after June 30, 1986.

(2) Transitional rule.—Any person who—

(A) on the date of the enactment of this Act, is engaged in business as a manufacturer of smokeless tobacco, and

(B) before July 1, 1986, submits an application under subchapter B of chapter 52 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to engage in such business, may, notwithstanding such subchapter B, continue to engage in such business pending final action on such application. Pending such final action, all provisions of chapter 52 of such Code shall apply to such applicant in the same manner and to the same extent as if such applicant were a holder of a permit to manufacture smokless tobacco under such chapter 52.

SEC. 13203. INCREASE IN EXCISE TAX ON COAL.

(a) Increase in Tax.—Subsections (a) and (b) of section 4121 (relating to imposition of tax on coal) are amended to read as follows:

"(a) Tax Imposed.—

"(1) In general.—There is hereby imposed on coal from mines located in the United States sold by the producer, a tax equal to the rate per ton determined under subsection (b).

"(2) Limitation on tax.—The amount of the tax imposed by paragraph (1) with respect to a ton of coal shall not exceed the applicable percentage (determined under subsection (b)) of the price at which such ton of coal is sold by the producer.

"(b) Determination of Rates and Limitation on Tax.—For purposes of subsection (a), in the case of sales during any calendar year beginning after December 31, 1985—

"(1) the rate of tax on coal from underground mines shall be $1.10,

"(2) the rate of tax on coal from surface mines shall be $.55, and

"(3) the applicable percentage shall be 4.4 percent.".

(b) 5-Year Moratorium on Interest Accruals With Respect to the Indebtedness of the Black Lung Disability Trust Fund.—No interest shall accrue for the period beginning on October 1, 1985, and ending on September 30, 1990, with respect to any repayable advance to the Black Lung Disability Trust Fund.

(c) Existing Reduction in Rates for Period After Temporary Increase Retained.—So much of subsection (e) of section 4121 (relating to temporary increase in amount of tax) as precedes paragraph (2) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) Reduction in Amount of Tax.—

"(1) In general.—Effective with respect to sales after the temporary increase termination date, subsection (b) shall be applied—

"(A) by substituting '$.50' for '$1.10',

"(B) by substituting '$.25' for '$.55', and

"(C) by substituting '2 percent' for '4.4 percent'.".

(d) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to sales after March 31, 1986.

SEC. 13204. ONLY RAILROAD RETIREMENT BENEFITS EQUIVALENT TO SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS TREATED AS TIER 1 BENEFITS.

(a) In General.—Paragraph (4) of section 86(d) (defining Social Security benefits) is amended to read as follows:

"(4) Tier 1 railroad retirement benefit.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'tier 1 railroad retirement benefit' means—

"(A) the amount of the annuity under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 equal to the amount of the benefit to which the taxpayer would have been entitled under the Social Security Act if all of the service after December 31, 1936, of the employee (on whose employment record the annuity is being paid) had been included in the term 'employment' as defined in the Social Security Act, and

"(B) a monthly annuity amount under section 3(f)(3) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to any monthly benefit for which the generally applicable payment date is after December 31, 1985.

SEC. 13205. MEDICARE COVERAGE OF, AND APPLICATION OF HOSPITAL INSURANCE TAX TO, NEWLY HIRED STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

(a) Application of Hospital Insurance Tax to Newly Hired Employees of State and Local Governments.—

(1) In general.—Subsection (u) of section 3121 (relating to application of hospital insurance tax to Federal employment) is amended to read as follows:

"(u) Application of Hospital Insurance Tax to Federal, State, and Local Employment.—

"(1) Federal employment.—For purposes of the taxes imposed by sections 3101(b) and 3111(b), subsection (b) shall be applied without regard to paragraph (5) thereof.

"(2) State and local employment.—For purposes of the taxes imposed by sections 3101(b) and 3111(b)—

"(A) In general.—Except as provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), subsection (b) shall be applied without regard to paragraph (7) thereof.

"(B) Exception for certain services.—Service shall not be treated as employment by reason of subparagraph (A) if—

"(i) the service is included under an agreement under section 218 of the Social Security Act, or

"(ii) the service is performed—

"(I) by an individual who is employed by a State or political subdivision thereof to relieve him from unemployment,

"(II) in a hospital, home, or other institution by a patient or inmate thereof as an employee of a State or political subdivision thereof or of the District of Columbia,

"(III) by an individual, as an employee of a State or political subdivision thereof or of the District of Columbia, serving on a temporary basis in case of fire, storm, snow, earthquake, flood or other similar emergency, or

"(IV) by any individual as an employee included under section 5351(2) of title 5, United States Code (relating to certain interns, student nurses, and other student employees of hospitals of the District of Columbia Government), other than as a medical or dental intern or a medical or dental resident in training.

As used in this subparagraph, the terms 'State' and 'political subdivision' have the meanings given those terms in section 218(b) of the Social Security Act.

"(C) Exception for current employment which continues.—Service performed for an employer shall not be treated as employment by reason of subparagraph (A) if—

"(i) such service would be excluded from the term 'employment' for purposes of this chapter if subparagraph (A) did not apply;

"(ii) such service is performed by an individual—

"(I) who was performing substantial and regular service for remuneration for that employer before April 1, 1986,

"(II) who is a bona fide employee of that employer on March 31, 1986, and

"(III) whose employment relationship with that employer was not entered into for purposes of meeting the requirements of this subparagraph; and

"(iii) the employment relationship with that employer has not been terminated after March 31, 1986.

"(D) Treatment of agencies and instrumentalities.—For purposes of subparagraph (C), under regulations—

"(i) All agencies and instrumentalities of a State (as defined in section 218(b) of the Social Security Act) or of the District of Columbia shall be treated as a single employer.

"(ii) All agencies and instrumentalities of a political subdivision of a State (as so defined) shall be treated as a single employer and shall not be treated as described in clause (i).

"(3) Medicare qualified government employment.—For purposes of this chapter, the term 'medicare qualified government employment' means service which—

"(A) is employment (as defined in subsection (b)) with the application of paragraphs (1) and (2), but

"(B) would not be employment (as so defined) without the application of such paragraphs."

(2) Conforming amendments.—

(A)(i) Section 3125 (relating to returns in the case of governmental employees in Guam, American Samoa, and the District of Columbia) is amended by redesignating subsections (a), (b), and (c) as subsections (b), (c), and (d), respectively, and by inserting before subsection (b) (as so redesignated) the following new subsection:

"(a) States.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, in the case of the taxes imposed by sections 3101(b) and 3111(b) with respect to service performed in the employ of a State or any political subdivision thereof (or any instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby), the return and payment of such taxes may be made by the head of the agency or instrumentality having the control of such service, or by such agents as such head may designate. The person making such return may, for convenience of administration, make payments of the tax imposed under section 3111 with respect to the service of such individuals without regard to the contribution and benefit base limitation in section 3121(a)(1)."

(ii) The section heading for such section 3125 is amended by inserting "STATES," before "GUAM".

(iii) The item relating to section 3125 in the table of sections for subchapter C of chaper 21 is amended by inserting "States," before "Guam".

(B) Subsection (b) of section 1402 is amended by striking out "medicare qualified Federal employment (as defined in section 3121(u)(2))" and inserting in lieu thereof "medicare qualified government employment (as defined in section 3121(u)(3))".

(C) Section 3122 (relating to Federal service) is amended by striking out "including service which is medicare qualified Federal employment (as defined in section 3121(u)(2))" and inserting in lieu thereof "including such service which is medicare qualified government employment (as defined in section 3121(u)(3))".

(D) Subsection (a) of section 6205 (relating to special rules applicable to certain employment taxes) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) States and political subdivisions as employer.—For purposes of this subsection, in the case of remuneration received from a State or any political subdivision thereof (or any instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby) during any calendar year, each head of an agency or instrumentality, and each agent designated by either, who makes a return pursuant to section 3125 shall be deemed a separate employer."

(E)(i) Section 6413(a) (relating to adjustment of certain employment taxes) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) States and political subdivisions as employer.—For purposes of this subsection, in the case of remuneration received from a State or any political subdivision thereof (or any instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby) during any calendar year, each head of an agency or instrumentality, and each agent designated by either, who makes a return pursuant to section 3125 shall be deemed a separate employer."

(ii) Section 6413(c)(2) (relating to special refunds of certain employment taxes) is amended—

(I) by striking out "3125(a)", "3125(b)", and "3125(c)" in subparagraphs (D), (E), and (F), respectively, and inserting in lieu thereof "3125(b)", "3125(c)", and "3125(d)", respectively, and

(II) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(G) Employees of states and political subdivisions.—In the case of remuneration received from a State or any political subdivision thereof (or any instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing which is wholly owned thereby) during any calendar year, each head of an agency or instrumentality, and each agent designated by either, who makes a return pursuant to section 3125(a) shall, for purposes of this subsection, be deemed a separate employer."

(b) Entitlement to Hospital Insurance Benefits.—

(1) Revision of definition of medicare qualified government employment.—Section 210(p)) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 410(p)) is amended to read as follows:

"Medicare Qualified Government Employment

"(p)(1) For purposes of sections 226 and 226A, the term 'medicare qualified government employment' means any service which would constitute 'employment' as defined in subsection (a) of this section but for the application of the provisions of—

"(A) subsection (a)(5), or

"(B) subsection (a)(7), except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3).

"(2) Service shall not be treated as employment by reason of paragraph (1)(B) if the service is performed—

"(A) by an individual who is employed by a State or political subdivision thereof to relieve him from unemployment,

"(B) in a hospital, home, or other institution by a patient or inmate thereof as an employee of a State or political subdivision thereof or of the District of Columbia,

"(C) by an individual, as an employee of a State or political subdivision thereof or of the District of Columbia, serving on a temporary basis in case of fire, storm, snow, earthquake, flood or other similar emergency, or

"(D) by any individual as an employee included under section 5351(2) of title 5, United States Code (relating to certain interns, student nurses, and other student employees of hospitals of the District of Columbia Government), other than as a medical or dental intern or a medical or dental resident in training.

As used in this paragraph, the terms 'State' and 'political subdivision' have the meanings given those terms in section 218(b).

"(3) Service performed for an employer shall not be treated as employment by reason of paragraph (1)(B) if—

"(A) such service would be excluded from the term 'employment' for purposes of this section if paragraph (1)(B) did not apply;

"(B) such service is performed by an individual—

"(i) who was performing substantial and regular service for remuneration for that employer before April 1, 1986,

"(ii) who is a bona fide employee of that employer on March 31, 1986, and

"(iii) whose employment relationship with that employer was not entered into for purposes of meeting the requirements of this subparagraph; and

"(C) the employment relationship with that employer has not been terminated after March 31, 1986.

"(4) For purposes of paragraph (3), under regulations (consistent with regulations established under section 3121(u)(2)(D) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954)—

"(A) all agencies and instrumentalities of a State (as defined in section 218(b)) or of the District of Columbia shall be treated as a single employer, and

"(B) all agencies and instrumentalities of a political subdivision of a State (as so defined) shall be treated as a single employer and shall not be treated as described in subparagraph "(A)."

(2) Entitlement to hospital insurance benefits.—

(A) For individuals age 65 or older and for disabled individuals.—Section 226 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 426) is amended by striking out "medicare qualified Federal employment" in subsections (a)(2)(C)(i) and (b)(2)(C)(ii)(I) and inserting in lieu thereof "medicare qualified government employment".

(B) For individuals with end-stage renal disease.—Section 226A(a) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 426-1(a)) is amended by striking out "medicare qualified Federal employment" in paragraphs (1)(A)(ii) and (1)(B)(iii) and inserting in lieu thereof "medicare qualified government employment".

(C) Conforming amendments.—

(i) Section 1811 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395c) is amended by striking out "Federal employment" in clauses (1) and (2) and inserting in lieu thereof "government employment".

(ii) Section 226(g) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 426(g)) is amended by striking out "medicare qualified Federal employment" and inserting in lieu thereof "medicare qualified government employment by virtue of service described in section 210(a)(5)".

(c) Optional Medicare Coverage of Current Employees.—Section 218 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 418) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(v)(1) The Secretary shall, at the request of any State, enter into or modify an agreement with such State under this section for the purpose of extending the provisions of title XVIII, and sections 226 and 226A, to services performed by employees of such State or any political subdivision thereof who are described in paragraph (2).

"(2) This subsection shall apply only with respect to employees—

"(A) whose services are not treated as employment as that term applies under section 210(p) by reason of paragraph (3) of such section; and

"(B) who are not otherwise covered under the State's agreement under this section.

"(3) Payments by the State required under subsection (e) with respect to employees covered under this subsection shall be limited to amounts equivalent to the sum of the taxes which would be imposed by sections 3101(b) and 3111(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 if such services for which wages were paid to such employees constituted 'employment' as defined in section 3121 of such Code.

"(4) For purposes of sections 226 and 226A of this Act, services covered under an agreement pursuant to this subsection shall be treated as 'medicare qualified government employment'.

"(5) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the provisions of this section shall apply with respect to services covered under the agreement pursuant to this subsection.

"(w) Notwithstanding sections 3125(a), 6205(a)(5), 6413(a)(5), and 6413(c)(2)(G) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, any State shall make payments of the taxes imposed with respect to services of employees of such State and of a political subdivision thereof under sections 3101(b) and 3111(b) of such Code, and reports of such services, under the same procedures as apply to payments and reports under subsection (e) of this section, but only if any employees of such State or of such political subdivision thereof respectively are covered under an agreement pursuant to this section.".

(d) Effective Dates.—

(1) Hospital insurance taxes.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to services performed after March 31, 1986.

(2) Medicare coverage.—

(A) In general.—The amendments made by subsection (b) shall be effective after March 31, 1986, and the amendments made by paragraph (3) of that subsection shall apply to services performed (for medicare qualified government employment) after that date.

(B) Treatment of certain disabilities.—For purposes of establishing entitlement to hospital insurance benefits under part A of title XVIII of the Social Security Act pursuant to the amendments made by subsection (b), no individual may be considered to be under a disability for any period beginning before April 1, 1986.

(3) Optional coverage of current employees.—The amendment made by subsection (c) shall apply to services performed after March 31, 1986.

SEC. 13206. FULL-TIME STUDENTS NOT ELIGIBLE FOR INCOME AVERAGING.

(a) In General.—Subsection (d) of section 1303 (defining eligible individuals for income averaging) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) Eligible Individuals Not To Include Full-Time Students.—

"(1) In general.—For purposes of this part, an individual shall not be an eligible individual for the computation year if, at any time during any base period year, such individual was a student.

"(2) Exception for married students providing 25 percent or less of joint income.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any individual for any computation year if—

"(A) the individual makes a joint return for the computation year, and

"(B) not more than 25 percent of the aggregate adjusted gross income of such individual and the spouse of such individual for such computation year is attributable to such individual. In applying subparagraph (B), amounts which constitute earned income (within the meaning of section 911(d)(2)) and are community income under commuity property laws applicable to such income shall be taken into account as if such amounts did not constitute community income.

"(3) Student defined.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'student' means, with respect to a taxable year, an individual who during each of 5 calendar months during such taxable year—

"(A) was a full-time student at an educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii); or

"(B) was pursuing a full-time course of institutional on-farm training under the supervision of an accredited agent of an educational organization described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) or of a State or political subdivision of a State.".

(b) Repeal of Non-Full-Time Student Support Exception.—Paragraph (2) of section 1303(c) (relating to individuals receiving support from others) is amended—

(1) by striking out subparagraph (A),

(2) by redesignating subparagraphs (B) and (C) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), and

(3) by striking out "subparagraph (C)" in the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraph (B)".

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1985.

SEC. 13207. APPLICATION OF FRINGE BENEFIT RULES TO AIRLINES AND THEIR AFFILIATES.

(a) Parents of Airline Employees Treated as Employees in Applying Fringe Benefit Rules.—

(1) In general.—Section 132(f) (relating to certain individuals treated as employees with respect to certain fringe benefits) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) Special rule for parents in the case of air transportation.—Any use of air transportation by a parent of an employee (determined without regard to paragraph (1)(B)) shall be treated as use by the employee.".

(2) Effective date.—The amendment made by this subsection shall take effect on January 1, 1985.

(b) Line of Business Test for Affiliates Providing Airline-Related Services.—

(1) In general.—Section 132(h) (relating to special rules) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) Special rule for affiliates of airlines.—

"(A) In general.—If—

"(i) a qualified affiliate is a member of an affiliated group another member of which operates an airline, and

"(ii) employees of the qualified affiliate who are directly engaged in providing airline-related services are entitled to no-additional-cost service with respect to air transportation provided by such other member, then, for purposes of applying paragraph (1) of subsection (a) to such no-additional-cost service provided to such employees, such qualified affiliate shall be treated as engaged in the same line of business as such other member.

"(B) Qualified affiliate.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified affiliate' means any corporation which is predominantly engaged in airline-related services.

"(C) Airline-related services.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'airline-related services' means any of the following services provided in connection with air transportation:

"(i) Catering.

"(ii) Baggage handling.

"(iii) Ticketing and reservations.

"(iv) Flight planning and weather analysis.

"(v) Restaurants and gift shops located at an airport.

"(vi) Such other similar services provided to the airline as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(D) Affiliated group.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'affiliated group' has the meaning given such term by section 1504(a).".

(2) Effective date.—The amendment made by this subsection shall take effect on January 1, 1985.

(c) Transitional Rule for Determination of Line of Business in Case of Affiliated Group Operating Airline.—If, as of September 12, 1984—

(1) an individual—

(A) was an employee (within the meaning of section 132 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, including subsection (f) thereof) of one member of an affiliated group (as defined in section 1504 of such Code), hereinafter referred to as the "first corporation", and

(B) was eligible for no-additional-cost service in the form of air transportation provided by another member of such affiliated group, hereinafter referred to as the "second corporation",

(2) at least 50 percent of the individuals performing service for the first corporation were or had been employees of, or had previously performed services for, the second corporation, and

(3) the primary business of the affiliated group was air transportation of passengers, then, for purposes of applying paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 132(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, with respect to no-additional-cost services and qualified employee discounts provided after December 31, 1984, for such individual by the second corporation, the first corporation shall be treated as engaged in the same air transportation line of business as the second corporation. For purposes of the preceding sentence, an employee of the second corporation who is performing services for the first corporation shall also be treated as an employee of the first corporation.

(d) Special Rule for Services Related to Providing Air Transportation.—Section 531 of the Tax Reform Act of 1984 is amended by redesignating subsections (g) and (h) as subsections (h) and (i), respectively, and by inserting after subsection (f) the following new subsection:

"(g) Special Rule for Certain Services Related to Air Transportation.—

"(1) In general.—If—

"(A) an individual performs services for a qualified air transportation organization, and

"(B) such services are performed primarily for persons engaged in providing air transportation and are of the kind which (if performed on September 12, 1984) would qualify such individual for no-additional-cost services in the form of air transportation, then, with respect to such individual, such qualified air transportation organization shall be treated as engaged in the line of business of providing air transportation.

"(2) Qualified air transportation organization.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'qualified air transportation organization' means any organization—

"(A) if such organization (or a predecessor) was in existence on September 12, 1984,

"(B) if—

"(i) such organization is described in section 501(c)(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and the membership of such organization is limited to entities engaged in the transportation by air of individuals or property for compensation or hire, or

"(ii) such organization is a corporation all the stock of which is owned entirely by entities referred to in clause (i), and

"(C) if such organization is operated in furtherance of the activities of its members or owners.".

SEC. 13208. CERTAIN INSOLVENT TAXPAYERS ALLOWED TO REDUCE CAPITAL GAINS PREFERENCE ITEM FOR PURPOSES OF THE INDIVIDUAL MINIMUM TAX.

(a) In General.—Paragraph (9) of section 57(a) (relating to capital gains as items of tax preference) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) Special rule for certain insolvent taxpayers.—

"(i) In general.—The amount of the tax preference under subparagraph (A) shall be reduced (but not below zero) by the excess (if any) of—

"(I) the applicable percentage of gain from any farm insolvency transaction, over

"(II) the applicable percentage of any loss from any farm insolvency transaction which offsets such gain.

"(ii) Reduction limited to amount of insolvency.—The amount of the reduction determined under clause (i) shall not exceed the amount by which the taxpayer is insolvent immediately before the transaction (reduced by any portion of such amount previously taken into account under this clause).

"(iii) Farm insolvency transaction.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'farm insolvency transaction' means—

"(I) the transfer by a farmer of farmland to a creditor in cancellation of indebtedness, or

"(II) the sale or exchange by the farmer of property described in subclause (I) under the threat of foreclosure, but only if the farmer is insolvent immediately before such transaction.

"(iv) Insolvent.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'insolvent' means the excess of liabilities over the fair market value of assets.

"(v) Applicable percentage.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'applicable percentage' means that percentage of net capital gain with respect to which a deduction is allowed under section 1202(a).

"(vi) Farmland.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'farmland' means any land used or held for use in the trade or business of farming (within the meaning of section 2032A(e)(5)).

"(vii) Farmer.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'farmer' means any taxpayer if 50 percent or more of the average annual gross income of the taxpayer for the 3 preceding taxable years is attributable to the trade or business of farming (within the meaning of section 2032A(e)(5))."

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to transfers or sales or exchanges made after December 31, 1981, in taxable years ending after such date.

SEC. 13209. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN POLLUTION CONTROL BONDS.

(a) General Rule.—For purposes of subparagraph (F) of section 103(b)(4) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to pollution control facilities), any obligation issued after December 31, 1985, shall be treated as described in such subparagraph if it is part of an issue substantially all of the proceeds of which are used by a qualified regional pollution control authority to acquire existing air or water pollution control facilities which the authority itself will operate in order to maintain or improve control of pollutants. The provisions of section 103(b)(17) of such Code (relating to prohibition on acquisition of existing property not permitted) shall not apply to any obligation described in the preceding sentence.

(b) $200,000,000 Limitation.—The aggregate amount of obligations to which subsection (a) applies shall not exceed $200,000,000, except that the amount of such obligations issued during calendar year 1986 to which subsection (a) applies shall not exceed $100,000,000.

(c) Restrictions.—Subsection (a) shall apply only if—

(1) the amount paid (directly or indirectly) for the facilities does not exceed their fair market value,

(2) the fees or charges imposed (directly or indirectly) on any seller for the use of any facilities after the sale are not less than the amounts charged for the use of such facilities to persons other than the seller,

(3) the original use of the facilities acquired with the proceeds of such obligations commenced before September 3, 1982, and

(4) no person other than the qualified regional pollution control authority is considered after the sale as the owner of the facilities for purposes of Federal income taxes.

(d) Qualified Regional Pollution Control Authority Defined.—For purposes of this section, the term "qualified regional pollution control authority" means an authority which—

(1) is a political subdivision created by State law to control air or water pollution,

(2) has within its jurisdictional boundaries all or part of at least 2 counties (or equivalent political subdivision),

(3) operates air or water pollution control facilities, and

(4) was created on September 1, 1969.

(e) Repeal of Section 103(b)(11).—Paragraph (11) of section 103(b) is hereby repealed.

SEC. 13210. TREATMENT OF THE NETTING OF GAINS AND LOSSES BY COOPERATIVES.

(a) In General.—Section 1388 (relating to definitions and special rules applicable to cooperatives) is amended by redesignating subsection (j) as subsection (k) and by inserting after subsection (i) the following new subsection:

"(j) Special Rules for the Netting of Gains and Losses by Cooperatives.—For purposes of this subchapter, in the case of any organization to which part I of this subchapter applies—

"(1) Optional netting of patronage gains and losses permitted.—The net earnings of such organization may, at its option, be determined by offsetting patronage losses (including any patronage loss carried to such year) which are attributable to 1 or more allocation units (whether such units are functional, divisional, departmental, geographic, or otherwise) against patronage earnings of 1 or more other such allocation units.

"(2) Certain netting permitted after section 381 transactions.—If such an organization acquires the assets of another such organization in a transaction described in section 381(a), the acquiring organization may, in computing its net earnings for taxable years ending after the date of acquisition, offset losses of 1 or more allocation units of the acquiring or acquired organization against earnings of the acquired or acquiring organization, respectively, but only to the extent—

"(A) such earnings are properly allocable to periods after the date of acquisition, and

"(B) such earnings could have been offset by such losses if such earnings and losses had been derived from allocation units of the same organization.

"(3) Notice requirements.—

"(A) In general.—In the case of any organization which exercises its option under paragraph (1) for any taxable year, such organization shall, on or before the 15th day of the 9th month following the close of such taxable year, provide to its patrons a written notice which—

"(i) states that the organization has offset earnings and losses from 1 or more of its allocation units and that such offset may have affected the amount which is being distributed to its patrons,

"(ii) states generally the identity of the offsetting allocation units, and

"(iii) states briefly what rights, if any, its patrons may have to additional financial information of such organization under terms of its charter, articles of incorporation, or bylaws, or under any provision of law.

"(B) Certain information need not be provided.—An organization may exclude from the information required to be provided under clause (ii) of subparagraph (A) any detailed or specific data regarding earnings or losses of such units which such organization determines would disclose commercially sensitive information which—

"(i) could result in a competitive disadvantage to such organization, or

"(ii) could create a competitive advantage to the benefit of a competitor of such organization.

"(C) Failure to provide sufficient notice.—If the Secretary determines that an organization failed to provide sufficient notice under this paragraph—

"(i) the Secretary shall notify such organization, and

"(ii) such organization shall, upon receipt of such notification, provide to its patrons a revised notice meeting the requirements of this paragraph.

Any such failure shall not affect the treatment of the organization under any provision of this subchapter or section 521.

"(4) Patronage earnings or losses defined.—For purposes of this subsection, the terms 'patronage earnings' and 'patronage losses' means earnings and losses, respectively, which are derived from business done with or for patrons of the organization."

(b) Tax-Exempt Status Not Affected by Netting.—Section 521(b) (relating to applicable rules) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) Netting of losses.—Exemption shall not be denied any such association because such association computes its net earnings for purposes of determining any amount available for distribution to patrons in the manner described in paragraph (1) of section 1388(j)."

(c) Effective Date.—

(1) In general.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1962.

(2) Notification requirement.—The provisions of section 1388(j)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as added by subsection (a)) shall apply to taxable years beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) No inference.—Nothing in the amendments made by this section shall be construed to infer that a change in law is intended as to whether any patronage earnings may or not be offset by nonpatronage losses, and any determination of such issue shall be made as if such amendments had not been enacted.

SEC. 13211. ALLOCATION UNDER SECTION 861 OF RESEARCH AND EXPERIMENTAL EXPENDITURES.

Subsection (c) of section 126 of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 is amended—

(1) by striking out "1985" and inserting in lieu thereof "1986"; and

(2) by striking out "3rd" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "4th".

SEC. 13212. LIMITATION ON ISSUANCE OF UNITED STATES BONDS.

Subsection (a) of section 3102 of title 31, United States Code, is amended by striking out "$200,000,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$250,000,000,000".

SEC. 13213. AUTHORIZATION OF ADDITIONAL FUNDS TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE FOR REVENUE ENFORCEMENT AND RELATED PURPOSES, ETC.

(a) Authorization.—There is authorized to be appropriated $46,500,000 for each of the fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988 for the use of the Internal Revenue Service to employ 1,550 additional agents and examination employees.

(b) Restoration of Proposed Cuts.—It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) the restoration of the cuts in the budget for the Internal Revenue Service for fiscal year 1986, and

(2) the further increase in such budget total, recommended by the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives are necessary for the efficient operation of the Government and to carry out the purposes of this Act.

Subtitle C—Provisions Relating to Unemployment Taxes

SEC. 13301. RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT REPAYMENT TAX.

(a) Rate of Tax.—Subsection (c) of section 3321 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to rate of railroad unemployment repayment tax) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Rate of Tax.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) In general.—The applicable percentage for any taxable period shall be the sum of—

"(A) the basic rate for such period, and

"(B) the surtax rate (if any) for such period.

"(2) Basic rate.—For purposes of paragraph (1)—

"(A) For periods before 1989.—The basic rate shall be—

"(i) 4.3 percent for the taxable period beginning on July 1, 1986, and ending on December 31, 1986,

"(ii) 4.7 percent for the 1987 taxable period, and

"(iii) 6 percent for the 1988 taxable period.

"(B) For periods after 1988.—For any taxable period beginning after December 31, 1988, the basic rate shall be the sum of—

"(i) 2.9 percent, plus

"(ii) 0.3 percent for each preceding taxable period after 1988.

In no event shall the basic rate under this subparagraph exceed 5 percent.

"(3) Surtax rate.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the surtax rate shall be—

"(A) 3.5 percent for any taxable period if, as of September 30 of the preceding calendar year, there was a balance of transfers (or unpaid interest thereon) made after September 30, 1985, to the railroad unemployment insurance account under section 10(d) of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, and

"(B) zero for any other taxable period.

"(4) Basic rate not to apply to rail wages paid after September 30, 1990.—The basic rate under paragraph (1)(A) shall not apply to rail wages paid after September 30, 1990."

(b) Base of Tax To Be Compensation Used for Railroad Retirement Tax Purposes.—Subsection (b) of section 3323 of such Code (defining rail wages) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) Rail Wages.—

"(1) In general.—For purposes of this chapter, the term 'rail wages' means compensation (as defined in section 3231(e) for purposes of the tax imposed by section 3201(a)) with the modifications specified in paragraph (2).

"(2) Modifications.—In applying subsection (e) of section 3231 for purposes of paragraph (1)—

"(A) Only employment covered by railroad unemployment insurance act taken into account.—Such subsection (e) shall be applied—

"(i) by substituting 'rail employment' for 'services' each place it appears,

"(ii) by substituting 'rail employer' for 'employer' each place it appears, and

"(iii) by substituting 'rail employee' for 'employee' each place it appears.

"(B) $7,000 wage base.—Such subsection (e) shall be applied by substituting for 'the applicable base' in paragraph (2)(A)(i) thereof—

"(i) except as provided in clauses (ii) and (iii), '$7,000',

"(ii) '$3,500' for the taxable period beginning on July 1, 1986, and ending on December 31, 1986, and

"(iii) for purposes of applying the basic rate under section 3321(c)(1)(A), '$5,250' for the taxable period beginning on January 1, 1990.

"(C) Successor employers.—For purposes of this subsection, rules similar to the rules applicable under section 3231(e)(2)(C) shall apply."

(c) Use of Taxes.—

(1) In general.—Paragraph (2) of section 232(a) of the Railroad Retirement Revenue Act of 1983 (relating to tax used to repay loans made to railroad unemployment insurance account) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Taxes credited against loans to railroad unemployment insurance account.—

"(A) Taxes attributable to basic rate to reduce railroad unemployment loans made before October 1, 1985.—So much of the amount transferred under paragraph (1) as is attributable to the basic rate under section 3321(c)(1)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 shall be credited against, and operate to reduce, the outstanding balance of railroad unemployment loans made before October 1, 1985.

"(B) Taxes attributable to surtax rate to reduce railroad unemployment loans made after September 30, 1985.—So much of the amount transferred under paragraph (1) as is attributable to the surtax rate under section 3321(c)(1)(B) of such Code shall be credited against, and operate to reduce, the outstanding balance of railroad unemployment loans made after September 30, 1985."

(2) Transfers to railroad unemployment fund after loan repaid.—Subsection (c) of section 232 of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "the amount" in paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "the amount described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (a)(2)", and

(B) by inserting before the comma at the end of paragraph (2) "against which the amount described in such subparagraph may be credited under such subparagraph".

(d) Technical Amendments.—

(1) Subsection (a) of section 3322 of such Code (relating to taxable period) is amended—

(A) by adding "and" at the end of paragraph (1), and

(B) by striking out paragraphs (2) and (3) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(2) each calendar year after 1986."

(2) Subsection (b) of section 3322 of such Code (relating to earlier termination if loans to rail unemployment fund repaid) is amended—

(A) by striking out "The tax imposed by this chapter shall not apply" and inserting in lieu thereof "The basic rate under section 3321(c)(1)(A) of the tax imposed by section 3321 shall not apply", and

(B) by inserting "made before October 1, 1985," after "no balance of transfers" in paragraph (1) thereof.

TITLE XIV—REVENUE SHARING

SEC. 14001. TERMINATION OF GENERAL REVENUE SHARING.

(a) In General.—(1) Except as otherwise provided in this section, chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code, is hereby repealed.

(2) The Secretary of the Treasury shall continue to be the trustee of the Trust Fund, which shall remain in existence until all entitlement payments which are required to be made under the Revenue Sharing Act are made in accordance with the terms of such Act. Any funds remaining in the Trust Fund after all of such entitlement payments are completely made shall revert to the General Fund of the Treasury of the United States.

(3) The Secretary is authorized to take such necessary or appropriate actions, to carry out the requirements of this Act with respect to funds appropriated to the Trust Fund, as were authorized under the terms of the Revenue Sharing Act, including but not limited to enforcement of the regulatory provisions concerning nondiscrimination, audits, accounting procedures, public hearings, expenditures in accordance with State and local law, and cooperation with reasonable requests for information.

(4) The Secretary may increase or decrease a payment to a unit of general local government under the Revenue Sharing Act for the entitlement period ending September 30, 1986, to account for a prior underpayment or overpayment only if the increase or decrease is demanded by the Secretary of such unit of general local government before June 2, 1986.

(5) Amounts paid to units of general local government from the Trust Fund shall be used, obligated, or appropriated by the units of general local government before October 1, 1987, and shall continue to be subject to the terms of the Revenue Sharing Act.

(6) Subsection (a)(1) of this section shall not have the effect of releasing or extinguishing any fiscal sanction, finding, determination, compliance agreement, or other duly authorized action for the purpose of sustaining any proper action or prosecution for enforcement authorized under the terms of the Revenue Sharing Act.

(7) The Attorney General, and persons adversely affected by a practice of a local government, may bring a civil action in an appropriate district court of the United States against the applicable unit of general local government as authorized under the Revenue Sharing Act. The court is authorized to grant such relief as was authorized under the terms of the Revenue Sharing Act.

(8) The Secretary shall report to Congress on the operation and status of the Trust Fund and the implementation of this section not later than December 1 of each year the Trust Fund remains on the books of the Department of the Treasury.

(b) Conforming Amendments.—(1) The table of chapters for subtitle V of title 31, United States Code, is amended by striking out the item relating to chapter 67.

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 1115(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1315(b)(2)) is amended—

(A) by adding "and" at the end of subparagraph (A),

(B) by striking out "; and" at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof a period, and

(C) by striking out subparagraph (C).

(3) Section 501(b)(6) of the Housing Act of 1949 (42 U.S.C. 1471(b)(6)) and section 102(a)(17) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5302(a)(17)) are each amended by striking out "or under chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code" and inserting in lieu thereof "or was considered an eligible recipient under chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code, prior to the repeal of such chapter".

(4) Section 302 of the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 (42 U.S.C. 6101) is amended by striking out ", including programs or activities receiving funds under the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972 (31 U.S.C. 1221 et seq.)".

(5) Paragraph (3) of section 3 of the Coastal Barrier Resources Act (16 U.S.C. 3502(3)) is amended by striking out subparagraph (A) and redesignating subparagraphs (B), (C), (D), and (E) as subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D), respectively.

(6) Subparagraph (B) of section 119(n)(2) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5318(n)(2)(B)) is amended by striking out "is an eligible recipient under chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code" and inserting in lieu thereof "was an eligible recipient under chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code, prior to the repeal of such chapter".

(7) Paragraph (1) of section 248(h) of the National Housing Act (12 U.S.C. 1715z-13(h)(1)) is amended by striking out "is an eligible recipient under chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code" and inserting in lieu thereof "was an eligible recipient under chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code, prior to the repeal of such chapter".

(c) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

(1) The term "Trust Fund" means the State and Local Government Fiscal Assistance Trust Fund established under the Revenue Sharing Act.

(2) The term "Revenue Sharing Act" means the provisions of chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code, as in effect on the day before the date of enactment of this Act and subject to the terms of any appropriation Act of fiscal year 1986.

(3) The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Treasury.

(d) Authorization of Appropriations.—There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1987 such sums as may be necessary to administer the provisions of this section.

(e) Effective Dates.—(1) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the repeal and amendments made by this section, and the provisions of this section, shall take effect on the earlier of—

(A) the date of the adjournment sine die of the 99th Congress, or

(B) December 31, 1986,

unless the provisions of chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code, are amended before the earlier of such dates to apply to any entitlement period beginning after September 30, 1986.

(2) The provisions of subsections (a)(4), (c), and (d) shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the payment of any allocation for the entitlement period ending September 30, 1986.

TITLE XV—CIVIL SERVICE, POSTAL SERVICE, AND GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS GENERALLY

Subtitle A—Postal Service Programs

SEC. 15101. REVENUE FORGONE.

Notwithstanding subsection (c) of section 2401 of title 39, United States Code, the amount authorized to be appropriated pursuant to such subsection for fiscal year 1986 shall be $749,000,000.

SEC. 15102. DELAY OF STEP 16 RATES; ELIMINATION OF PHASING SCHEDULE; TERMINATION OF REDUCTION IN RATES OF POSTAGE FOR CERTAIN MAILERS.

(a) Delay of Step 16 Rates.—The increase in rates of postage for non-profit and certain other mailers announced by the Board of Governors of the United States Postal Service in Resolution No. 85-7 (adopted September 6, 1985) shall not take effect before January 1, 1986.

(b) Elimination of Phasing Schedule.—(1) Section 3626(a) of title 39, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(a)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, rates of postage for a class of mail or kind of mailer under former section 4358, 4452(b), 4452(c), 4554(b), or 4554(c) of this title shall be established in accordance with applicable provisions of this chapter.

"(2) Rates of postage for a class of mail or kind of mailer referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be established in accordance with the requirement that the direct and indirect postal costs attributable to such class of mail or kind of mailer (excluding any other costs of the Postal Service) shall be borne by such class of mail or kind of mailer, as the case may be.".

(2) The amendment made by this subsection shall apply with respect to rates of postage taking effect after December 31, 1985.

(c) Termination of Reduction in Rates of Postage for Certain Mailers.—Section 3626 of title 39, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

"(f) In the administration of this chapter, the rates for mail under former section 4358(g) of this title shall be established without regard to either the provisions of such former section 4358(g) or the provisions of this section.".

SEC. 15103. STUDY AND REPORT.

(a) Period of Study.—The Postal Rate Commission shall study and, within 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, transmit to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate a written report on the matters described in subsection (b).

(b) Purpose of Study.—The purpose of the study under this section is—

(1) to develop recommendations for legislation which would reduce the amount of revenue forgone with respect to former sections 4355(a), 4355(b), 4358(d), 4452(b), 4452(c), 4554(b) and 4554(c) of title 39, United States Code, by changing the eligibility requirements under which the reduced rates of postage under those sections would apply to mail which advertises or promotes the sale of, recommends the purchase of, or announces the availability of any article, product, service, insurance, or travel arrangements;

(2)(A) to identify the kinds of mailers which are the most frequent users of, or which otherwise significantly benefit from, rates for mail under subsections (a), (b), and (c) of former section 4358 of title 39, United States Code; and

(B) to examine the arguments for and against making the eligibility requirements for the rates referred to in subparagraph (A) more stringent, taking into consideration—

(i) the findings under subparagraph (A);

(ii) costs and benefits to the public; and

(iii) any other factor which may be appropriate; and

(3) to develop one or more alternatives for the method currently used by the United States Postal Service in computing revenue forgone (as determined with respect to the provisions of law referred to in section 2401(c) of title 39, United States Code) and to determine the advantages and disadvantages of each such alternative.

(c) In preparing its report under this section, the Postal Rate Commission shall invite and consider the views of interested parties.

(d) The United States Postal Service shall, upon request of the Postal Rate Commission, cooperate in the conduct of the study and the preparation of the report under this section.

SEC. 15104. RESTRICTION RELATING TO ELIGIBILITY FOR IN-COUNTY SECOND-CLASS RATES OF POSTAGE.

Section 3626 of title 39, United States Code, as amended by section 15102(c) of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(g)(1) In the administration of this section, the rates for mail under subsections (a), (b), and (c) of former section 4358 of this title shall not apply to an issue of a publication if the number of copies of such issue distributed within the county of publication is less than the number equal to the sum of 50 percent of the total paid circulation of such issue plus one.

"(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not apply to an issue of a publication if the total paid circulation of such issue is less than 10,000 copies.".

SEC. 15105. CURBING OF SUBSIDIES FOR ADVERTISING-ORIENTED "PLUS ISSUES" MAILED TO SUBSCRIBERS AT IN-COUNTY RATES.

Section 3626 of title 39, United States Code, as amended by sections 15102(c) and 15104 of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(h) In the administration of this section, the number of copies of a subscription publication mailed to nonsubscribers during a calendar year at rates under subsections (a), (b), and (c) of former section 4358 of this title may not exceed 10 percent of the number of copies of such publication mailed at such rates to subscribers.".

Subtitle B—Civil Service Programs

SEC. 15201. PAY ADJUSTMENTS.

(a) Limitation on Pay Adjustments for Statutory Pay Systems.—(1) The rates of pay under the General Schedule and the rates of pay under the other statutory pay systems referred to in section 5301(c) of title 5, United States Code, shall not be adjusted under section 5305 of such title during fiscal year 1986.

(2)(A)(i) For fiscal years 1987 and 1988, the President shall provide for the adjustment of rates of pay under section 5305 of title 5, United States Code, as appropriate to reduce outlays, relating to pay of officers and employees of the Federal Government, by at least $746,000,000 in fiscal year 1987 and $1,264,000,000 in fiscal year 1988 (without regard to reductions in outlays which result by reason of subparagraph (B)(ii) of this paragraph, paragraph (1) of this subsection, subsection (b) of this section, and the application of section 1009 of title 37, United States Code), computed using the baseline used for the First Concurrent Resolution on the Budget for Fiscal Year 1986 (S. Con. Res. 32, 99th Congress), agreed to on August 1, 1985.

(ii) Clause (i) of this subparagraph shall not be construed to suspend the requirements of section 5305 of title 5, United States Code, with respect to fiscal years 1987 and 1988.

(B) Each adjustment in a pay rate or schedule which takes effect pursuant to subparagraph (A) of this paragraph—

(i) shall, to the maximum extent practicable, be of the same percentage; and

(ii) shall be effective with respect to pay periods beginning on or after January 1 of the fiscal year involved.

(b) Limitation on Pay Adjustments for Prevailing Rate Employees.—(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as otherwise provided in this subsection, in the case of a prevailing rate employee described in section 5342(a)(2) of title 5, United States Code, or an employee covered by section 5348 of such title, the total adjustment to any wage schedule or rate applicable to such employee which is to become effective (determined without regard to paragraph (2)) during—

(A) fiscal year 1986, shall (except to the extent permitted by section 616(a)(2) of H.R. 5798, incorporated by reference in section 101(j) of Public Law 98-473 (98 Stat. 1963)) be equal to zero;

(B) fiscal year 1987, shall not exceed an increase equal to the overall percentage of the adjustment (under section 5305 of title 5, United States Code) in the rates of pay under the General Schedule for such fiscal year; and

(C) fiscal year 1988, shall not exceed an increase equal to the overall percentage of the adjustment (under section 5305 of title 5, United States Code) in the rates of pay under the General Schedule for such fiscal year.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any increase permitted by paragraph (1) which is scheduled to take effect during fiscal year 1987 or 1988 (determined without regard to this paragraph) shall take effect as of the beginning of the first applicable pay period beginning at least 90 days after the date on which such increase is so scheduled to take effect.

(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 9(b) of Public Law 92-392 or section 704(b) of Public Law 95-454, the provisions of paragraphs (1) and (2) shall apply (in such manner as the Office of Personnel Management shall prescribe) to prevailing rate employees to whom such section 9(b) applies, except that the provisions of paragraph (1) shall not apply to any increase in a wage schedule or rate which is required by the terms of a contract entered into before October 1, 1985.

(4) Nothing in this subsection or any provision of law governing the use of appropriated funds for the payment of employees covered by this subsection during the period covered by paragraph (1) (or any part of such period) shall be construed to permit or require the payment to any such employee at a rate in excess of the rate that would be payable were this subsection, or such provision of law governing the use of appropriated funds, not in effect.

(5) The Office may make exceptions from the limitations imposed by paragraph (1) if the Office determines that such exceptions are necessary to ensure the recruitment or retention of well-qualified employees.

SEC. 15202. PROVISIONS RELATING TO FEDERAL EMPLOYEES HEALTH BENEFITS PROGRAM.

(a) Amounts To Be Refunded From Carriers' Special Reserves.—(1) The Office of Personnel Management—

(A) shall determine the minimum level of financial reserves necessary to be held by a carrier for each health benefits plan under chapter 89 of such title for the purpose of ensuring the stable and efficient operation of such plan; and

(B) shall require the carrier to refund to the Employees Health Benefits Fund (described in section 8909(a) of title 5, United States Code) any such reserves in excess of such minimum level in such amounts and at such times during fiscal years 1986 and 1987 as the Office determines appropriate.

(2) In carrying out its responsibilities under this subsection, the Office shall ensure that the aggregate amount to be refunded to the Employees Health Benefits Fund under this subsection—

(A) during fiscal year 1986 shall be not less than $800,000,000; and

(B) during fiscal year 1987 shall be not less than $300,000,000.

(3) No amount in the Employees Health Benefits Fund may be transferred to the general fund of the Treasury of the United States as a result of a refund made under this subsection.

(4)(A) Subject to subparagraphs (B) and (C), any amounts refunded to the Employees Health Benefits Fund under this subsection may be used solely for the purpose of paying the Government contribution under chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code, for health benefits for annuitants, as defined by section 8901(3) of title 5, United States Code, (including the Government contribution for former employees of the United States Postal Service) enrolled in health benefits plans under such chapter.

(B) This paragraph applies to a refund to the extent that such refund represents amounts attributable to Government contributions which were made under section 8906(b) of title 5, United States Code, (including contributions made by the United States Postal Service) as determined under regulations which the Office of Personnel Management shall prescribe.

(C) Any part of the amount in the Employees Health Benefits Fund as a result of a refund made under this subsection may be transferred—

(i) to the government of the District of Columbia, except that the amount of any such part so transferred shall not exceed the amount attributable to the contributions made by the government of the District of Columbia to subscription charges under this chapter (as determined by the Office of Personnel Management); and

(ii) to the United States Postal Service, except that the amount of any such part so transferred shall not exceed the amount attributable to the contributions made by the United States Postal Service to subscription charges under this chapter (as determined by the Office).

(5) The provisions of this subsection shall apply notwithstanding any provision of the Federal Employees Benefits Improvement Act of 1985.

(b) Government Contributions for Retired Former Employees of the United States Postal Service.—Section 8906(g) of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking out "(g) The" and inserting in lieu thereof "(g)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(2) The Government contributions authorized by this section for health benefits for an individual who first becomes an annuitant by reason of retirement from employment with the United States Postal Service on or after October 1, 1986, shall be paid by the United States Postal Service.".

SEC. 15203. COMPUTATION OF HOURLY RATES OF PAY.

(a) Method of Computation.—Section 5504(b) of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking out the first sentence;

(2) in the second sentence, by striking out "When" and inserting in lieu thereof "When, in the case of an employee,";

(3) in paragraph (1), by striking out "2,080" and inserting in lieu thereof "2,087"; and

(4) in the last sentence, by striking out "title." and inserting in lieu thereof "title other than an employee or individual excluded by section 5541(2)(xvi) of this title.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall be effective with respect to pay periods commencing on or after March 1, 1986.

SEC. 15204. COMPUTATION OF RETIREMENT ANNUITY FOR PART-TIME EMPLOYMENT.

(a) In General.—(1) Section 8339 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(o)(1) In computing an annuity under this subchapter for an employee whose service includes service that was performed on a part-time basis—

"(A) the average pay of the employee, to the extent that it includes pay for service performed in any position on a part-time basis, shall be determined by using the annual rate of basic pay that would be payable for full-time service in the position; and

"(B) the benefit so computed shall then be multiplied by a fraction equal to the ratio which the employee's actual service, as determined by prorating an employee's total service to reflect the service that was performed on a part-time basis, bears to the total service that would be creditable for the employee if all of the service had been performed on a full-time basis.

"(2) For the purpose of this subsection, employment on a part-time basis shall not be considered to include employment on a temporary or intermittent basis.".

(2) Section 8341 of such title is amended—

(A) by striking out "and (n)" in subsection (b)(1) and inserting in lieu thereof ", (n), and (o)"; and

(B) by striking out "and (n)" in subsection (d) and inserting in lieu thereof "(n), and (o)".

(b) Section 4109(b) of title 38, United States Code, is repealed.

(c) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to service performed on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 15205. EFFECT OF WAGE AREA SURVEY REGARDING CERTAIN FEDERAL EMPLOYEES IN TUCSON, ARIZONA.

(a) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law limiting the amounts payable to prevailing wage rate employees during the fiscal year 1986, wage schedules or rates applicable to the Tucson, Arizona, wage area shall not be reduced as a result of a wage survey conducted during fiscal year 1985.

(b) Effective Date.—This section shall be effective as of October 1, 1985.

Subtitle C—Federal Motor Vehicle Expenditure Control

SEC. 15301. MONITORING SYSTEM.

The head of each executive agency, including the Department of Defense, shall designate one office, officer, or employee of the agency to establish and operate a central monitoring system for, and provide oversight of, the motor vehicle operations of the agency, related activities, and related reporting requirements.

SEC. 15302. DATA COLLECTION.

(a) Cost Identification and Analysis.—The head of each executive agency, including the Department of Defense, shall develop a system to identify, collect, and analyze data with respect to all costs, including obligations and outlays, incurred by the agency in the operation, maintenance, acquisition, and disposition of motor vehicles, including Government-owned vehicles, leased vehicles, and privately owned vehicles used for official purposes.

(b) Requirements for Data Systems.—The Administrator, in cooperation with the Comptroller General and the Director, shall promulgate requirements governing the establishment and operation by executive agencies of the systems required by subsection (a), including requirements with respect to data concerning the costs and uses of motor vehicles and with respect to the uniform collection and submission of such data. Requirements promulgated under this section shall be in conformance with accounting principles and standards issued by the Comptroller General. Each executive agency, including the Department of Defense, shall comply with such requirements.

SEC. 15303. AGENCY STATEMENTS WITH RESPECT TO MOTOR VEHICLE USE.

(a) Contents of Statement.—The head of each executive agency, including the Department of Defense, shall include with the appropriation request of such agency submitted under section 1108 of title 31, United States Code, for fiscal year 1988 and each succeeding fiscal year, a statement—

(1) specifying—

(A) the total motor vehicle acquisition, maintenance, leasing, operation, and disposal costs, including obligations and outlays, incurred by such agency in the most recently completed fiscal year; and

(B) an estimate of such costs for the fiscal year in which such request is submitted and for the succeeding fiscal year; and

(2) justifying why the existing and any new motor vehicle acquisition, maintenance, leasing, operation, and disposal requirements of the agency cannot be met through the Interagency Fleet Management System operated by the Administrator, a qualified private fleet management firm, or any other method which is less costly to the Government.

(b) Compliance With Requirements.—The head of each executive agency shall comply with the requirements promulgated under section 15302(b) in preparing each statement required under subsection (a).

SEC. 15304. PRESIDENTIAL REPORT.

(a) Summary and Analysis of Agency Statements.—The President shall include with the budget transmitted pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, for fiscal year 1988 and each succeeding fiscal year, or in a separate written report to the Congress for each such fiscal year, a summary and analysis of the statements most recently submitted by the heads of executive agencies pursuant to section 15303(a). Each such summary and analysis shall include a review, for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year in which the budget is submitted, the current fiscal year, and the fiscal year for which the budget is submitted, of the cost savings that have been achieved, that are estimated will be achieved, and that could be achieved, in the acquisition, maintenance, leasing, operation, and disposal of motor vehicles by executive agencies through—

(1) the use of a qualified private fleet management firm or another private contractor;

(2) increased reliance by executive agencies on the Interagency Fleet Management System operated by the Administrator; or

(3) other existing motor vehicle management systems.

(b) Applicability to Fiscal Year 1986.—The summary and analysis submitted under subsection (a) during fiscal year 1987 is not required to include a review, under the second sentence of such subsection, of the cost savings achieved for fiscal year 1986.

SEC. 15305. STUDY REQUIRED.

(a) Study of Costs, Benefits, and Feasibility.—(1) The head of each executive agency, including the Department of Defense, shall conduct a comprehensive and detailed study of the costs, benefits, and feasibility of—

(A) relying on the Interagency Management Fleet System operated by the Administrator;

(B) entering into a contract with a qualified fleet management firm or another private contractor; or

(C) using any other means less costly to the Government, to meet its motor vehicle operation, maintenance, leasing, acquisition, and disposal requirements.

(2) Each study conducted under paragraph (1) shall compare the costs, benefits, and feasibility of the alternatives described in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of such paragraph to the costs and benefits of the agency's current motor vehicle operations and, in the case of the alternatives described in subparagraphs (B) and (C) of such paragraph, to the costs, benefits, and feasibility of the use of the Interagency Fleet Management System operated by the Administrator.

(b) Submission to Director and Comptroller General.—Within 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the head of each executive agency shall submit a report concerning the study required under subsection (a) to the Administrator.

SEC. 15306. INTERAGENCY CONSOLIDATION.

(a) Identification of Opportunities for Consolidation.—The Administrator shall review and identify interagency opportunities for the consolidation of motor vehicles, related equipment, and facilities, and of functions relating to the administration and management of such vehicles, equipment, and facilities, in order to reduce the size and cost of the Federal Government's motor vehicle fleet.

(b) Report and Action on Findings.—Within one year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall—

(1) submit a report to the Congress specifying the findings and recommendations of the Administrator from the review conducted under subsection (a); and

(2) take such action as the Administrator considers appropriate based on such findings and recommendations and in accordance with section 211 of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act.

SEC. 15307. REDUCTION OF STORAGE AND DISPOSAL COSTS.

The Administrator shall take such actions as may be necessary to reduce motor vehicle storage and disposal costs and to improve the rate of return on motor vehicle sales through a program of vehicle reconditioning prior to sale.

SEC. 15308. SAVINGS.

(a) Actions by President Required.—The President shall establish, for each executive agency, including the Department of Defense, goals to reduce outlays for the operation, maintenance, leasing, acquisition, and disposal of motor vehicles in order to reduce, by fiscal year 1988, the total amount of outlays by all executive agencies for such operation, maintenance, leasing, acquisition, and disposal to an amount which is $150,000,000 less than the amount for such operation, maintenance, leasing, acquisition, and disposal requested by the President in the budget submitted under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, for fiscal year 1986.

(b) Monitoring of Compliance and Compliance Report.—The Director shall monitor compliance by executive agencies with the goals established by the President under subsection (a) and shall include, in each summary and analysis required under section 15304, a statement specifying the reductions in expenditures by executive agencies, including the Department of Defense, achieved under such goals.

SEC. 15309. COMPLIANCE.

(a) Administrator of General Services.—The Administrator shall comply with and be subject to the provisions of this part with regard to all motor vehicles that are used within the General Services Administration for official purposes.

(b) Managers of Other Motor Pools.—The provisions of this part with respect to motor vehicles from the Interagency Fleet Management System shall be complied with by the executive agencies to which such motor vehicles are assigned.

SEC. 15310. APPLICABILITY.

(a) Priority in Reducing Headquarters Use.—The heads of executive agencies shall give first priority to meeting the goals established by the President under section 15308(a) by reducing the costs of administrative motor vehicles used at the headquarters and regional headquarters of executive agencies, rather than by reducing the costs of motor vehicles used by line agency personnel working in agency field operations or activities.

(b) Regulations, Standards, and Definitions.—The President shall require the Administrator, in cooperation with the Director, to promulgate appropriate regulations, standards, and definitions to assure that executive agencies meet the goals established under section 15308(a) in the manner prescribed by subsection (a).

SEC. 15311. COOPERATION.

The Director and the Administrator shall closely cooperate in the implementation of the provisions of this part.

SEC. 15312. REPORTS.

The Comptroller General shall evaluate the extent to which the Director, the Administrator, and executive agencies have complied with this part. By January 31, 1988, the Comptroller General shall submit a report to the Congress describing the results of such evaluation.

SEC. 15313. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title—

(1) the term "executive agency" means an Executive agency (as such term is defined in section 105 of title 5, United States Code), which operates at least three hundred motor vehicles, except that such term does not include the Tennessee Valley Authority;

(2) the term "Director" means the Director of the Office of Management and Budget;

(3) the term "Administrator" means the Administrator of General Services;

(4) the term "Comptroller General" means the Comptroller General of the United States; and

(5) the term "motor vehicle" means any vehicle self-propelled or drawn by mechanical power, except that such term does not include any vehicle designed or used for military field training, combat, or tactical purposes, or any other special purpose vehicle exempted from the requirements of this part by the Administrator.

TITLE XVI—HIGHER EDUCATION PROGRAMS

SEC. 16001. SHORT TITLE; REFERENCE.

(a) Short Title.—This title may be cited as the "Student Financial Assistance Amendments of 1985".

(b) Reference.—References in this title to "the Act" are to the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.).

Subtitle A—Savings in Student Loan Program Operations

SEC. 16011. RECOVERY OF OUTSTANDING ADVANCES TO GUARANTY AGENCIES.

Section 422 of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, advances made by the Secretary under this section shall be repaid in accordance with this paragraph and shall be deposited in the fund established by section 431. The Secretary shall, in accordance with the requirements of paragraph (2), recover (and so deposit) an amount equal to $75,000,000 during fiscal year 1988.

"(2) In determining the amount of advances which shall be repaid by a State or nonprofit private institution or organization under paragraph (1), the Secretary—

"(A) shall consider the solvency and maturity, as determined by the Comptroller General, of the reserve and insurance funds of the State or nonprofit private institution or organization assisted by such advances;

"(B) shall not seek repayment of such advances from any State described in subsection (c)(5)(B) during any year of its eligibility under such subsection; and

"(C) shall not seek repayment of such advances from any State if such repayment encumbers the reserve fund requirement mandated by the statutes of such State.".

SEC. 16012. DISBURSEMENT OF STUDENT LOANS TO INSTITUTIONS REQUIRED.

(a) FISL Loans Requirement.—Section 427(a)(2) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking out clause (ii) of subparagraph (B) and by redesignating clauses (iii) and (iv) of subparagraph (B) as clauses (ii) and (iii), respectively;

(2) by striking out "or the fifteen-year period" in the matter following clause (viii) of subparagraph (C); and

(3) by amending subparagraph (I) to read as follows:

"(I) the funds borrowed by a student are disbursed to the institution by check or other means that is payable to and requires the endorsement or other certification by such student, except nothing in this subparagraph shall be interpreted to allow the Secretary to require checks to be made co-payable to the institution and the borrower or to prohibit the disbursement of loan proceeds by means other than by check; and".

(b) GSL Loans Requirement.—Section 428(b)(1)(O) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(O) provides that funds borrowed by a student are disbursed to the institution by check or other means that is payable to and requires the endorsement or other certification by such student, except nothing in this subparagraph shall be interpreted to allow the Secretary to require checks to be made co-payable to the institution and the borrower or to prohibit the disbursement of loan proceeds by means other than by check;".

(c) Conforming Amendment.—Section 433A(a) of the Act is amended by striking out "to a borrower" in the first sentence.

SEC. 16013. MULTIPLE DISBURSEMENTS OF STUDENT LOANS REQUIRED.

(a) Repeal of Incentives to Lenders to Make Multiple Disbursements.—Section 428(a) of the Act is amended by striking out paragraph (8).

(b) Multiple Disbursement Required in FISL Program.—Section 427(a) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (1);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(3) in the case of a loan made for any period of enrollment of more than six months, one semester, two quarters, or 600 clock hours and for an amount of $1,000 or more, the proceeds of the loan will be disbursed directly by the lender in two or more installments, none of which exceeds one-half of the loan, with the interval between the first and second installment being not less than one-third of such period.

For purposes of paragraph (3), all loans issued for the same period of enrollment shall be considered as a single loan.".

(c) Multiple Disbursements Required in GSL Program.—Section 428(b)(1) of such Act is amended—

(1) by redesignating subparagraph (P) as subparagraph (Q); and

(2) by inserting after subparagraph (O) the following new subparagraph:

"(P) provides that the proceeds of any loan made for any period of enrollment of more than six months, one semester, two quarters, or 600 clock hours and for an amount of $1,000 or more—

"(i) will be disbursed directly by the lender in two or more installments, none of which exceeds one-half of the loan, with the interval between the first and second installment being not less than one-third of such period, or

"(ii) will be disbursed in such installments pursuant to the escrow provisions of subsection (i) of this section, but all loans issued for the same period of enrollment shall be considered as a single loan for purposes of this subparagraph; and".

(d) Origination Fee To Be Deducted Proportionately From Each Installment.—Section 438(c)(2) of the Act is amended by striking out "which may be deducted from the proceeds of the loan prior to payment to the borrower" and inserting in lieu thereof "which shall be deducted proportionately from each installment payment of the proceeds of the loan to the borrower".

(e) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Section 425(a)(1) of the Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "and" at the end of subparagraph (A), by striking out subparagraph (B), and by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (B); and

(B) by striking out the last sentence.

(2) Section 428(a)(3)(A) of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "Except as provided in paragraph (8) and subject" and inserting in lieu thereof "Subject"; and

(B) by striking out "but, except as provided in paragraph (8) of this subsection, such portion" and inserting in lieu thereof "but such portion".

(3) Section 428(b)(1)(A) of such Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "and" at the end of division (i);

(B) by striking out division (ii) and by redesignating division (iii) as division (ii); and

(C) in the matter following such division, by striking out "annual limit," and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof "annual limit;".

SEC. 16014. PRECLAIM COLLECTION ACTIVITIES.

(a) Delay Required Before Submission of Claims by Guaranty Agencies.—(1) Section 428(c)(1)(A) of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "In no case shall a State or nonprofit private institution or organization with which the Secretary has an agreement pursuant to subsection (b) file a claim for such reimbursement with respect to such losses prior to 270 days after the loan becomes delinquent with respect to any loan installment.".

(2) Section 430(e)(2) of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "one hundred and twenty days" and inserting in lieu thereof "180 days"; and

(B) by striking out "one hundred and eighty days" and inserting in lieu thereof "240 days".

(b) Supplemental Preclaims Assistance.—(1) Section 428(c)(6)(A) of the Act is amended—

(A) by inserting after "assistance for default prevention," the following: "the administrative costs of supplemental preclaim assistance for default prevention,"; and

(B) by striking out "as such terms are defined in subparagraph (B)" and inserting in lieu thereof "as such terms are defined in subparagraph (B) or (C)".

(2) Section 428(c)(6) of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C)(i) For purposes of this paragraph, 'administrative costs of supplemental preclaim assistance for default prevention' means (subject to divisions (ii) through (iv)) any administrative costs—

"(I) incurred by a guaranty agency in connection with a loan on which the guarantor has exercised preclaims assistance required or permitted under sections 428(c)(2)(A) and 428(f)(2), and which has been in delinquent status for at least 120 days; and

"(II) which are directly related to providing collection assistance to the lender on a delinquent loan, prior to a claim being filed by the guaranty agency, including the attributable compensation of appropriate personnel (and in the case of personnel who perform several functions, only the portion of compensation attributable to the collection assistance), fees paid to locate a missing borrower, postage, equipment, supplies, telephone, and similar charges, but does not include overhead costs.

"(ii) The administrative costs for which reimbursement is authorized under this subparagraph must be clearly supplemental to the preclaim assistance for default prevention which the guaranty agency is required to provide pursuant to section 428(c)(2)(A) and section 428(f)(2) of this Act.

"(iii) The services associated with carrying out this subparagraph may be provided by the guaranty agency directly or under contract, except that such services may not be carried out by an organization or entity (other than the guaranty agency)—

"(I) that is the holder or servicer of the loan or an organization or entity that owns or controls the holder or servicer of the loan; or

"(II) that is owned or controlled by the same corporation, partnership, association, or individual that owns or controls the holder or servicer of the loan.

"(iv) The costs associated with carrying out this subparagraph may not exceed 2 percent of the outstanding principal balance of each delinquent loan subject to the supplemental preclaim assistance authorized by this subparagraph or $100, whichever is less.".

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall be effective in accordance with section 16041(a) of this title without regard to whether such amendments are reflected in the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Education.

SEC. 16015. PROMPT PAYMENT OF SUPPLEMENTAL GUARANTY ADMINISTRATIVE COST AGREEMENT.

(a) Purpose.—It is the purpose of the amendments made by this section to assure the prompt payment of the amount due under the supplemental guaranty administrative cost agreement made under section 428(f)(2) in order to encourage improved collection of student loans and preclaims assistance to prevent default on student loans.

(b) Prompt Payment Required.—(1) Section 428(f)(1) of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "is authorized to" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall";

(B) by striking out "shall not exceed" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall be equal to"; and

(C) by striking out the third and fourth sentences of such section.

(2) Section 428(f)(2) of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "is authorized to" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall";

(B) by striking out "shall not exceed" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall be equal to"; and

(C) by striking out the third and fourth sentences of such section.

SEC. 16016. GUARANTY AGENCY; LENDER OF LAST RESORT.

Section 428 of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j) In each State, the guaranty agency or an eligible lender in the State described in section 435(d)(1)(D) of this Act shall make loans directly, or through an agreement with an eligible lender or lenders, to students who are eligible to have interest benefits paid on their behalf (under subsection (a) of this section) but who are otherwise unable to obtain loans under this part. Loans made under this subsection shall neither exceed the amount of the need of the borrower, as determined under subsection (a)(2)(B), nor be less than $200.".

SEC. 16017. STUDENT LOAN CONSOLIDATION.

(a) Loan Consolidation Authorized.—Part B of title IV of the Act is amended by inserting after section 428B the following new section:

"Sec. 428C. (a)(1) For the purpose of providing loans to eligible borrowers for consolidation of their obligations with respect to student loans made, insured, or guaranteed under this part or made under part E of this title, the Secretary or a guaranty agency shall enter into agreements in accordance with subsection (b) with the following eligible lenders:

"(A) the Student Loan Marketing Association;

"(B) agencies described in subparagraphs (D) and (F) of section 435(g)(1); and

"(C) eligible lenders described in subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (E) of such section.

"(2) Except as provided in section 429(e), no contract of insurance under this part shall apply to a consolidation loan unless such loan is made under an agreement pursuant to this section and is covered by a certificate issued in accordance with subsection (b)(2). Loans covered by such a certificate that is issued by a guaranty agency shall be considered to be insured loans for the purposes of reimbursements under section 428(c), but no payment shall be made with respect to such loans under section 428(f) to any such guaranty agency.

"(3) For the purpose of this section, the term 'eligible borrower' means a borrower who—

"(A) has an outstanding indebtedness, at the time of application for a consolidation loan, to one or more lenders or programs under this title of not less than $5,000;

"(B) has not during the previous 4 months carried at an eligible institution at least one-half the normal full-time academic workload;

"(C) if in repayment status, is not delinquent with respect to any required payment on such indebtedness by more than 90 days; and

"(D) is not a parent borrower under section 428B(a)(1).

"(4) An individual's status as an eligible borrower under this section terminates upon receipt of a consolidation loan under this section except with respect to loans received under this title after the date of receipt of the consolidation loan. For the purpose of computing the outstanding indebtedness of such an individual, only loans received after such date shall be taken into account.

"(b)(1) Any lender described in clause (A), (B), or (C) of subsection (a)(1) who wishes to make consolidation loans under this section shall enter into an agreement with the Secretary or a guaranty agency which provides—

"(A)(i) that, in the case of lenders described in subsection (a)(1)(C), the lender will make a consolidation loan to any eligible borrower on request of that borrower, if the lender holds an outstanding loan of that borrower which is selected by the borrower for consolidation under this section, and will make such loans to other eligible borrowers only to the extent permitted by the Secretary in an agreement under subsection (d);

"(ii) that, in the case of lenders described in subsection (a)(1)(B), the lender will make, subject to the availability of funds allocated for such purpose, a consolidation loan to any eligible borrower—

"(I) who is, or was at the time of receiving a loan which is selected for consolidation, a resident of the State of such lender; or

"(II) who received loans under this title while attending an institution of higher education in the State of such lender, except that the lender may elect to limit further the availability of its loans under this section to those borrowers for whom the lender is the holder of a loan selected for consolidation; or

"(iii) that, in the case of the Student Loan Marketing Association, the lender will make a consolidation loan to any eligible borrower on request of that borrower;

"(B) that each consolidation loan made by the lender will bear interest, and be subject to repayment, in accordance with subsection (c);

"(C) that each consolidation loan will be made, notwithstanding any other provision of this part limiting the maximum principal amount for all insured loans made to a borrower, in an amount (i) which is not less than the minimum amount required for eligibility of the borrower under subsection (a)(3)(A)(i), and (ii) which is equal to the sum of the unpaid principal, accrued unpaid interest and late charges of all loans received by the eligible borrower under this title which are selected by the borrower for consolidation;

"(D) that the proceeds of each consolidation loan will be paid by the lender to the holder or holders of the loans so selected to discharge the liability on such loans;

"(E) that, in the case of any lender, such lender will not make consolidation loans under this part from the proceeds of bonds or other obligations, the income from which is exempt from taxation under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, issued subsequent to the enactment date of the Student Financial Assistance Amendments of 1985; and

"(F) such other terms and conditions as the Secretary or guaranty agency (whichever is party to the agreement) may specifically require of the lender to carry out this section.

"(2) The Secretary shall issue a certificate of comprehensive insurance coverage under section 429(b) to a lender which has entered into an agreement with the Secretary under paragraph (1) of this subsection. A guaranty agency may issue a certificate of comprehensive insurance coverage to a lender if the lender has entered into an agreement under paragraph (1) of this subsection. The Secretary shall not issue such a certificate under this paragraph to a lender described in clause (B) or (C) of subsection (a)(1) if the Secretary determines that such lender has reasonable access in its State, for the purpose of obtaining such a certificate, to a guaranty agency. In either case, such certificate shall, at a minimum, provide—

"(A) that all consolidation loans made by such lender in conformity with the requirements of this section will be insured against loss of principal and interest by the issuer of such certificate;

"(B) that a consolidation loan will not be insured unless the lender has determined to its satisfaction, in accordance with reasonable and prudent business practices, for each loan being consolidated (i) that the loan is a legal, valid, and binding obligation of the borrower; (ii) that each such loan was made and serviced in compliance with applicable laws and regulations; and (iii) in the case of loans under this part, that the insurance on such loan is in full force and effect;

"(C) the effective date and expiration date of the certificate;

"(D) the aggregate amount to which the certificate applies;

"(E) that, if the lender prior to the expiration of the certificate no longer proposes to make consolidation loans, the lender will so notify the issuer of such certificate in order that the certificate may be terminated (without affecting the insurance on any consolidation loan made prior to such termination); and

"(F) the terms upon which the issuer of the certificate may limit, suspend, or terminate the lender's authority to make consolidation loans under the certificate (without affecting the insurance on any consolidation loan made prior to such limitation, suspension, or termination).

"(3) A consolidation loan made pursuant to this section shall be insurable under a certificate issued pursuant to paragraph (2) only if the loan is made to an eligible borrower who has agreed to notify the holder of the loan promptly concerning any change of address and the loan is evidenced by a note or other written agreement which—.

"(A) is made without security and without endorsement, except that if the borrower is a minor and such note or other written agreement executed by him would not, under applicable law, create a binding obligation, endorsement may be required;

"(B) provides for the payment of interest and the repayment of principal in accordance with subsection (c) of this section and contains notice of the possibility of a revised repayment schedule under paragraph (2) of such subsection;

"(C) provides that periodic installments of principal need not be paid, but interest shall accrue and be paid, during any period—

"(i) during which the borrower is pursuing a full-time course of study at an eligible institution, is pursuing a course of study pursuant to a graduate fellowship program approved by the Secretary, or pursuant to a rehabilitation training program for disabled individuals approved by the Secretary;

"(ii) not in excess of 2 years during which the borrower is serving an internship, the successful completion of which is required in order to receive professional recognition;

"(iii) not in excess of 3 years during which the borrower is temporarily totally disabled, as established by sworn affidavit of a qualified physician, or during which the borrower is unable to secure employment by reason of the care required by a spouse who is so disabled; or

"(iv) which is a single period, not in excess of 12 months, at the request of the borrower, during which the borrower is seeking and unable to find full-time employment; and that any such period shall not be included in determining the repayment period provided pursuant to subsection (c)(2) of this section;

"(D) entitles the borrower to accelerate without penalty repayment of the whole or any part of the loan; and

"(E)(i) contains a notice of the system of disclosure concerning such loan to credit bureau organizations under section 430(b)(2), and (ii) provides that the lender on request of the borrower will provide information on the repayment status of the note to such organizations.

"(c)(1) Consolidation loans made under this section shall bear interest at the rate of 10 per centum per annum on the unpaid principal balance of the loan, except that, if the consolidation loan is used for the purpose of discharging liability on a loan made pursuant to section 428B, the consolidation loan shall bear interest at a rate per annum on such unpaid balance which is equal to the highest applicable interest rate under section 427A on any loan which is selected for consolidation by the borrower. For the purposes of payment of special allowances under section 438(b)(2), the interest rate required by this subsection is the applicable interest rate with respect to a consolidation loan.

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of this part, to the extent authorized by its certificate of insurance under subsection (b)(2)(F) and approved by the issuer of such certificate, the lender of a consolidation loan, with the agreement of the borrower, may establish such repayment terms as will promote the objectives of this section, including the establishment of graduated and income sensitive repayment schedules. In each case a consolidation loan shall be repaid as follows:

"(A) in the case of a consolidation loan the original amount of which is less than $7,500, such loan shall be repaid in not more than 10 years;

"(B) in the case of a consolidation loan the original amount of which equals or exceeds $7,500 but is less than $11,000, such loan shall be repaid in not more than 13 years; or

"(C) in the case of a consolidation loan the original amount of which equals or exceeds $11,000, such loan shall be repaid in not more than 15 years.

"(3) Repayment of a consolidation loan shall commence within 60 days after all holders have, pursuant to subsection (b)(1)(D), discharged the liability of the borrower on the loans selected for consolidation.

"(4) No origination fee or insurance premium shall be charged to the borrower on any consolidation loan, and no insurance premium shall be payable by the lender to the issuer of the certificate of insurance with respect to any such loan.

"(d)(1) If, within 18 months after the effective date of this section, an eligible lender described in subsection (a)(1)(B) for a State has not entered into an agreement with the Secretary or a guaranty agency for purposes of making consolidation loans under this section, the Secretary may, after a hearing and upon a determination of need therefor, enter into an agreement for the purposes of making consolidation loans to eligible borrowers in such State with an eligible lender described in clause (B) or (C) of subsection (a)(1) from another State.

"(2) Notice of the hearing required by paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be sent to the Governor of the affected State and the eligible lenders described in subsection (a)(1)(B) for that State. At any such hearing representatives of such Governor and lenders may present evidence and testimony and examine witnesses, and full consideration shall be given to the views of such Governor and lenders with respect to the interests of the eligible borrowers in that State and with respect to the impact on programs of such lenders of allowing a lender described in clause (B) or (C) of subsection (a)(1) from another State to make consolidation loans pursuant to an agreement under this subsection in such State.

"(3) An agreement under this subsection may contain such terms and conditions as the Secretary may specifically require of the lender to carry out this section.

"(4) The requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection shall not apply if, in any State, an eligible lender described in subsection (a)(1)(B) from another State is functioning as a secondary market described in subparagraph (D) or (F) of section 435(g)(1) prior to the date of enactment of the Student Financial Assistance Amendments of 1985 and such lender agrees to make consolidation loans to eligible borrowers in such State.

"(e) The authority to make loans under this section expires at the close of September 30, 1991. Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize the Secretary to promulgate rules or regulations governing the terms or conditions of the agreements and certificates under subsection (b). Loans made under this section shall not be considered to be new loans made to students for purposes of section 424(a).".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) Section 427(a) of the Act is amended by striking out "A loan" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in section 428C, a loan".

(2) Section 435(g)(1) of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "section 439 (o) and (q)" in subparagraph (G) and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 428C and 439(q)"; and

(B) by striking out "section 428(j)" in subparagraph (H) and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 428(h) and 428C".

(3) Section 438 of the Act is amended—

(A) in subsection (b)(5)(A)(ii), by inserting ", 428C," after "428B"; and

(B) in subsection (c)(2), by striking out "section 428B and section 439(o)" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 428B and 428C".

(4) Section 439(d)(1)(C) of the Act is amended by striking out "428(A), and except with respect to loans under section 439(o)," and inserting in lieu thereof "428A, and except with respect to loans under section 428C,".

(c) SPECIAL ALLOWANCE.—(1) Section 438(b)(2)(A) of the Act is amended by striking out "subparagraph (B)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraphs (B) and (C)".

(2) The first sentence of section 438(b)(2)(B)(i) of the Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "appropriate" before "quarterly rate" the second time it appears; and

(B) by inserting "or subparagraph (C)" before the period.

(3) Section 438(b)(2) of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) In the case of loans made in accordance with section 428C, the applicable per centum to be added under clause (iii) of subparagraph (A) shall be 3 per centum.".

(d) COST EVALUATION REPORT.—The Secretary of Education shall evaluate the cost, efficiency, and impact of the consolidation loan program established by the amendments made by this section and shall report to the Congress not later than June 30, 1988, on the findings and recommendations required by this subsection.

SEC. 16018. EXTENSION OF PROGRAM.

(a) EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY.—Part B of title IV of the Act is amended—

(1) in section 424(a)—

(A) by striking out "1986" and inserting in lieu thereof "1988";

(B) by striking out "1990" and inserting in lieu thereof "1992";

(2) in section 428(a)(5)—

(A) by striking out "1986" and inserting in lieu thereof "1988";

(B) by striking out "1990" and inserting in lieu thereof "1992"; and

(3) in section 439(l), by striking out "1988" and inserting in lieu thereof "1990".

(b) EXTENSION OF FAMILY CONTRIBUTION SCHEDULES.—Section 9 of the Student Financial Assistance Technical Amendments Act of 1982 is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking out "and from July 1, 1986, through June 30, 1987," and inserting in lieu thereof "from July 1, 1986, through June 30, 1987, from July 1, 1987, through June 30, 1988, from July 1, 1988, through June 30, 1989, and from July 1, 1989, through June 30, 1990,"; and

(2) in subsection (c)—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (3);

(B) by striking out the comma at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon; and

(C) by inserting after such paragraph the following new paragraphs:

"(5) April 1, 1987, for the period of instruction from July 1, 1987, through June 30, 1988;

"(6) April 1, 1988, for the period of instruction from July 1, 1988, through June 30, 1989; and

"(7) April 1, 1989, for the period of instruction from July 1, 1989, through June 30, 1990,".

SEC. 16019. SAVINGS FROM OPERATIONS OF THE STUDENT LOAN MARKETING ASSOCIATION.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—In order to contribute to carrying out the directions in the first concurrent resolution on the budget for the fiscal year 1986 (S. Con. Res. 32, 99th Congress, agreed to August 1, 1985) designed to reduce the Federal budget deficit, the Student Loan Marketing Association shall, during the fiscal year 1986, reduce the level of obligations owed to the Federal Financing Bank by $30,000,000 which, but for this section, will be paid to the Federal Financing Bank after October 1, 1986.

(b) SPECIAL RULE.—The amount described in subsection (a) may not be credited by the Student Loan Marketing Association to reduce the obligation to repay the Federal Financing Bank amounts which the Student Loan Marketing Association owes to the Federal Financing Bank in each of the fiscal years 1987 and 1988.

(c) SAVINGS PROVISION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize or require the Student Loan Marketing Association or the Federal Financing Bank to renegotiate the contract or other agreement under which the Student Loan Marketing Association agreed to pay amounts made available by the Federal Financing Bank to carry out section 439 of the Higher Education Act of 1965.

SEC. 16020. DEFINITION.

Section 435 of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

the Secretary (concerning loans covered by Federal loan insurance) or by a guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder (concerning loans covered by a guaranty agreement) to requests from such organizations for responses to objections raised by such borrowers. Subject to the requirements of subsection (c), such agreements shall require that the Secretary or guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder to disclose to such organizations with respect to any loan dispersed to a student—

"(1) the date of disbursement and the amount of the loan;

"(2) the date of default and information concerning collection of the loan, including information concerning the repayment status of any defaulted loan on which the Secretary has made a payment pursuant to section 430(a) or the guaranty agency has made a payment to the previous holder of the loan; and

"(3) the date of cancellation of the note upon completion of repayment by the borrower of the loan or payment by the Secretary pursuant to section 437.

"(b) Such agreements may also provide for the disclosure by such organizations to the Secretary, a guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder upon receipt of a notice under subsection (a)(2) that such a loan is in default, or information which may assist the Secretary, guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder in collecting the loan.

"(c) Agreements entered into pursuant to this section shall contain such provisions as may be necessary to ensure that—

"(1) no information is disclosed by the Secretary, guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder unless its accuracy and completeness have been verified and the Secretary, guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder has determined that disclosure would carry out the purpose of this section;

"(2) as to any information so disclosed, such organizations will be promptly notified of, and will promptly record, any change submitted by the Secretary, guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder with respect to such information, as required by section 611 of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681);

"(3) no use will be made of any such information which would result in the use of collection practices with respect to such a borrower that are not fair and reasonable or that involve harassment, intimidation, false or misleading representations, or unnecessary communication concerning the existence of such loan or concerning such information; and

"(4) with regard to notices of default under subsection (a)(2) of this section, except for disclosures made to obtain the borrower's location, the Secretary, guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder (A) shall not disclose any such information until the Secretary, guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder has notified the borrower that such information will be disclosed to credit bureau organizations unless the borrower enters into repayment of the loan, but (B) shall, if the borrower has not entered into repayment within a reasonable period of time, but not less than thirty days, from the date such notice has been sent to the borrower, disclose the information required by this subsection.

"(d) A guaranty agency, eligible lender, subsequent holder, or credit bureau organization which discloses or receives information under this section shall not be considered a Government contractor within the meaning of section 552a of title 5 of the United States Code (the Privacy Act of 1974).

"(e) The Secretary and each guaranty agency, eligible lender, and subsequent holder is authorized to disclose information described in subsections (a) and (b) concerning student borrowers to the eligible institutions such borrowers attend or previously attended.

"(f) Notwithstanding paragraphs (4) and (6) of subsection (a) of section 605 of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681c(a)(4), (a)(6)), a consumer reporting agency may make a report containing information received from the Secretary, or a guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder regarding the status of a borrower's account on a loan insured or guaranteed under this part until the later of—

"(1) seven years from the date on which the agency paid a claim to the holder on insurance or the guaranty, or

"(2) seven years from the date the Secretary, guaranty agency, eligible lender, or subsequent holder first reported the account to a consumer reporting agency.".

SEC. 16024. CIVIL PENALTIES.

Section 432 of the Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f)(1) Upon determination, after reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing on the record, that a lender or a guaranty agency—

"(A) has violated or failed to carry out any provision of this part or any regulation prescribed under this part, or

"(B) has engaged in substantial misrepresentation of the nature of its financial charges, the Secretary may impose a civil penalty upon such lender or agency of not to exceed $15,000 for each violation, failure, or misrepresentation.

"(2) No civil penalty may be imposed under paragraph (1) of this subsection unless it is determined that—

"(A) the violation, failure or substantial misrepresentation referred to in that paragraph resulted from—

"(i) a clear and consistent pattern or practice of violations, failures, or substantial misrepresentations in which the lender or guaranty agency did not maintain procedures reasonably adapted to avoid the violation, failure, or substantial representation;

"(ii) gross negligence; or

"(iii) willful actions on the part of the lender or guaranty agency; and

"(B) the violation, failure, or substantial misrepresentation is material.

"(3) A lender or guaranty agency has no liability under paragraph (1) of this subsection if, prior to the institution of an action under that paragraph, the lender or guaranty agency cures or corrects the violation or failure or notifies the person who received the substantial misrepresentation of the actual nature of the financial charges involved.

"(4) For the purposes of paragraph (1) of this subsection, violations, failures, or substantial misrepresentations arising from a specific practice of a lender or guaranty agency shall be deemed to be a single violation, failure, or substantial misrepresentation even if the violation, failure, or substantial misrepresentation affects more than one loan or more than one borrower, or both, and the Secretary may only impose a single civil penalty for each such violation, failure, or substantial misrepresentation.

"(5) If a loan affected by a violation, failure, or substantial misrepresentation is assigned to another holder, the lender or guaranty agency responsible for the violation, failure, or substantial misrepresentation shall remain liable for any civil money penalty provided for under paragraph (1) of this subsection, but the assignee shall not be liable for any such civil money penalty.

"(6) Until a matter is referred to the Attorney General, any civil penalty under paragraph (1) of this subsection may be compromised by the Secretary. In determining the amount of such penalty, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, the Secretary shall consider the appropriateness of the penalty to the resources of the lender or guaranty agency subject to the determination; the gravity of the violation, failure, or substantial misrepresentation; the frequency and persistence of the violation, failure, or substantial misrepresentation; and the amount of any losses resulting from the violation, failure, or substantial misrepresentation. The amount of such penalty, when finally determined, or the amount agreed upon in compromise, may be deducted from any sums owing by the United States to the lender or agency charged (unless the lender or agency has in the case of a final agency determination commenced proceedings for judicial review within 90 days of the determination, in which case the deduction may not be made during the pendency of the proceeding).".

SEC. 16025. ASSIGNMENT AND REFERRAL OF NDSL LOANS FOR COLLECTION.

Section 463(a)(5) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(5) provide that where a note or written agreement evidencing a loan has been in default despite due diligence on the part of the institution in attempting collection thereon—

"(A) if the institution has knowingly failed to maintain an acceptable collection record with respect to such loan, as determined by the Secretary in accordance with criteria established by regulation, the Secretary may—

"(i) require the institution to assign such note or agreement to the Secretary, without recompense; and

"(ii) apportion any sums collected on such a loan (less an amount not to exceed 30 per centum of any sums collected to cover the Secretary's collection costs) among other institutions in accordance with section 462; or

"(B) if the institution is not one described in clause (A), the Secretary may—

"(i) allow such institution to transfer its interest in such loan to the Secretary, for collection, and the Secretary may use any collections thereon (less an amount not to exceed 30 per centum of any sums collected to cover the Secretary's collection costs) to make allocations to institutions of additional capital contributions in accordance with section 462; or

"(ii) allow such institution to refer such note or agreement to the Secretary, without recompense, except that any sums collected on such a loan (less an amount not to exceed 30 per centum of any sums collected to cover the Secretary's collection costs) shall be repaid to such institution no later than 180 days after collection by the Secretary and treated as an additional capital contribution;".

SEC. 16026. REPORTING BY CONSUMER REPORTING AGENCY ON NDSL LOANS.

Section 463(c) of the Act is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) Notwithstanding paragraphs (4) and (6) of subsection (a) of section 605 of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. 1681c(a)(4), (a)(6)), a consumer reporting agency may make a report containing information received from the Secretary regarding the status of a borrower's account on a loan made under this part until the later of—

"(A) seven years from the date on which the Secretary accepted an assignment or referral of a loan, or

"(B) seven years from the date the Secretary first reported the account to a consumer reporting agency, if that account had not been previously reported by any other holder of the note.".

SEC. 16027. DEFAULT PENALTY ON NDSL LOANS.

Section 463A(a)(7) of the Act is amended by inserting immediately before the semicolon at the end thereof the following: "and a description of any penalty imposed as a consequence of default, such as liability for expenses reasonably incurred in attempts by the Secretary or institutions to collect on a loan".

SEC. 16028. NDSL LOAN AGREEMENTS.

(a) CHARGES FOR LATE PAYMENTS.—Section 464(c)(1)(H) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(H) pursuant to regulations of the Secretary, shall provide for an assessment of a charge with respect to the loan for failure of the borrower to pay all or part of an installment when due, which shall include the expenses reasonably incurred in attempting collection of the loan, to the extent permitted by the Secretary, except that no charge imposed under this clause shall exceed 20 per centum of the amount of the monthly payment of the borrower; and".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 464(c)(4) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(4) The institution may elect—

"(A) to add the amount of any charge imposed under paragraph (1)(H) to the principal amount of the loan as of the first day after the day on which the installment was due and to notify the borrower of the assessment of the charge; or

"(B) to make the amount of the charge payable to the institution not later than the due date of the next installment.".

SEC. 16029. REFERRAL OF NDSL LOANS FOR COLLECTION.

Section 467 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"COLLECTION OF DEFAULTED LOANS

"SEC. 467. (a) With respect to any loan—

"(1) which was made under this part, and

"(2) which is referred, transferred, or assigned to the Secretary by an institution with an agreement under section 463(a),

the Secretary is authorized to attempt to collect such loan by any means authorized by law for collecting claims of the United States (including referral to the Attorney General for litigation) and under such terms and conditions as the Secretary may prescribe, including reimbursement for expenses reasonably incurred in attempting such collection.

"(b) The Secretary shall continue to attempt to collect any loan referred, transferred, or assigned under paragraph (5)(A), (5)(B)(i), or (6) of section 463(a) until all appropriate collection efforts, as determined by the Secretary, have been expended.".

SUBTITLE C—SAVINGS RELATED TO GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 16031. EXCLUSION OF LIQUIDATION PROCEEDS FROM FAMILY CONTRIBUTION COMPUTATIONS.

Section 462 of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) The Secretary shall, within 30 days after the date of enactment of this subsection, promulgate special regulations to permit, in the computation of family contributions for the programs under subpart 1 of part A and part B of this title for any academic year beginning on or after July 1, 1985, the exclusion from family income of any proceeds of a sale of farm or business assets of that family if such sale results from a voluntary or involuntary foreclosure, forfeiture, or bankruptcy.".

SEC. 16032. ADDITIONAL ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS FOR STUDENT LOANS.

(a) STUDENT IDENTIFICATION.—Section 484(a) of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking out the word "such" each place it appears in paragraph (4) and inserting in lieu thereof "any"; and

(2) by striking out "(which need not be notarized)" in paragraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof "(which need not be notarized but which shall include such student's social security number or, if the student does not have a social security number, such student's student identification number)".

(b) ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATIONS.—Section 484 of the Act is amended by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c) and by inserting after subsection (a) the following new subsection:

"(b) In order to be eligible to receive any loan under this title (other than a loan under section 428B or 428C) for any period of enrollment, a student who is not a graduate or professional student (as defined in regulations of the Secretary), and who is enrolled in a program at an institution which has a participation agreement with the Secretary to make awards under subpart 1 of part A of this title, shall—

"(1) have received a determination of eligibility or ineligibility for a grant under such subpart 1 for such period of enrollment; or

"(2) have (A) filed an application with the Pell Grant processor for such institution for such enrollment period; and (B) received from the financial aid administrator of the institution a preliminary determination of the student's eligibility or ineligibility for a grant under such subpart 1.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 428(a)(2)(C)(i) of the Act is amended by striking out "subparts 1 and 2 of part A," and inserting in lieu thereof "subpart 1 of part A (as determined in accordance with section 484(b)), subpart 2 of part A,".

SEC. 16033. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

Part F of title IV of the Act is amended by adding immediately after section 484 the following new section:

"STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

"SEC. 484A. (a) Notwithstanding any provision of State law that would set an earlier deadline for filing suit—

"(1) an institution which receives funds under this title may file suit for collection of a refund due from a student on a grant made or work assistance awarded under this title during a period of time extending at least until a date six years (exclusive of periods during which the State statute of limitations period otherwise applicable to the suit would be tolled under State law) after the date the refund first became due;

"(2) a guaranty agency which has an agreement with the Secretary under section 428(c) may file suit for collection of the amount due from a borrower on a loan made under part B of this title during a period of time extending at least until a date six years (exclusive of periods during which the State statute of limitations period otherwise applicable to the suit would be tolled under State law) after the date such guaranty agency reimburses the previous holder of the loan for its loss on account of the default of the borrower; and

"(3) an institution which has an agreement with the Secretary pursuant to section 463(a) may file suit for collection of the amount due from a borrower on a loan made under part E of this title during a period of time extending at least until a date six years (exclusive of periods during which the State statute of limitations period otherwise applicable to the suit would be tolled under State law) after the date of the default of the borrower with respect to that amount; and

"(4) subject to the provisions of section 2416 of title 28 of the United States Code, the Attorney General may file suit—

"(A) for payment of a refund due from a student on a grant made under this title until six years following the date on which the refund first became due;

"(B) for collection of the amount due the Secretary from a borrower pursuant to section 428(c)(2)(D) of this title until six years following the date on which the loan is assigned to the Secretary under part B of this title; and

"(C) for collection of the amount due from a borrower on a loan made under this part until six years following the date on which the loan is assigned, transferred, or referred to the Secretary under part E of this title.

"(b) Notwithstanding any provision of State law to the contrary—

"(1) a borrower who has defaulted on a loan made under this title shall be required to pay, in addition to other charges specified in this title, reasonable collection costs; and

"(2) in collecting any obligation arising from a loan made under part B of this title, a guaranty agency or the Secretary shall not be subject to a defense raised by any borrower based on a claim of infancy.".

SEC. 16034. PROGRAM PARTICIPATION AGREEMENTS.

(a) USE OF INTEREST ON FUNDS RECEIVED.—Section 487(a)(1) of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"(1) The institution will use funds received by it for any program under this title and any interest or other earnings thereon solely for the purposes specified in, and in accordance with the provision of, that program.".

(b) AUDIT AND RECOVERY OF FUNDS.—Section 487(b)(1) of the Act is amended by striking out subparagraph (A) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(A)(i) except as provided in clause (ii), a financial and compliance audit of an eligible institution, with regard to any funds obtained by it under this title or obtained from a student or a parent who has a loan insured or guaranteed by the Secretary under this title, at least once every two years and covering the period since the most recent audit, conducted by a qualified, independent organization or person in accordance with standards established by the Comptroller General for the audit of gov-

TITLE XVII—GRADUATE MEDICAL EDUCATION COUNCIL AND TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS TO THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE ACT

SEC. 17001. COUNCIL ON GRADUATE MEDICAL EDUCATION.

Title VII of the Public Health Service Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new part:

"Part H—Graduate Medical Education

"council on graduate medical education

"Sec. 799. (a) There is established the Council on Graduate Medical Education (hereafter in this section referred to as the 'Council'). The Council shall—

"(1) prior to July 1, 1988, and every three years thereafter, provide advice and make recommendations to the Secretary and to the Committees on Labor and Human Resources, and Finance of the Senate and the Committees on Energy and Commerce and Ways and Means of the House of Representatives, with respect to—

"(A) the supply and distribution of physicians in the United States;

"(B) current and future shortages or excesses of physicians in medical and surgical specialties and subspecialties;

"(C) issues relating to foreign medical school graduates;

"(D) appropriate Federal policies with respect to the matters specified in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), including policies concerning changes in the financing of undergraduate and graduate medical education programs and changes in the types of medical education training in graduate medical education programs;

"(E) appropriate efforts to be carried out by hospitals, schools of medicine, schools of osteopathy, and accrediting bodies with respect to the matters specified in subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), including efforts for changes in undergraduate and graduate medical education programs; and

"(F) deficiencies in, and needs for improvements in, existing data bases concerning the supply and distribution of, and postgraduate training programs for, physicians in the United States and steps that should be taken to eliminate those deficiencies; and

"(2) encourage entities providing graduate medical education to conduct activities to voluntarily achieve the recommendations of the Council under paragraph (1)(E).

"(b) The Council shall be composed of—

"(1) the Assistant Secretary for Health or the designee of the Assistant Secretary;

"(2) the Administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration;

"(3) the Chief Medical Director of the Veterans' Administration;

"(4) 6 members appointed by the Secretary to include representatives of practicing primary care physicians, national and specialty physician organizations, foreign medical graduates, and medical student and house staff associations;

"(5) 4 members appointed by the Secretary to include representatives of schools of medicine and osteopathy and public and private teaching hospitals; and

"(6) 4 members appointed by the Secretary to include representatives of health insurers, business, and labor.

"(c)(1) Members of the Council appointed under paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) of subsection (b) shall be appointed for a term of 4 years, except that the term of office of the members first appointed shall expire, as designated by the Secretary at the time of appointment, 4 at the end of one year, 4 at the end of 2 years, 3 at the end of 3 years, and 3 at the end of 4 years.

"(2) The Secretary shall appoint the first members to the Council under paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) of subsection (b) within 60 days after the date of enactment of this section.

"(d) The Council shall elect one of its members as Chairman of the Council.

"(e) Nine members of the Council shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may hold hearings.

"(f) Any vacancy in the Council shall not affect its power to function.

"(g) Each member of the Council who is not otherwise employed by the United States Government shall receive compensation at a rate equal to the daily rate prescribed for GS-18 under the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, for each day, including traveltime, such member is engaged in the actual performance of duties as a member of the Council. A member of the Council who is an officer or employee of the United States Government shall serve without additional compensation. All members of the Council shall be reimbursed for travel, subsistence, and other necessary expenses incurred by them in the performance of their duties.

"(h)(1) In order to carry out the provisions of this section, the Council is authorized to—

"(A) collect such information, hold such hearings, and sit and act at such times and places, either as a whole or by subcommittee, and request the attendance and testimony of such witnesses and the production of such books, records, correspondence, memoranda, papers, and documents as the Council or such subcommittee may consider available; and

"(B) request the cooperation and assistance of Federal departments, agencies, and instrumentalities, and such departments, agencies, and instrumentalities are authorized to provide such cooperation and assistance.

"(2) The Council shall coordinate activities carried out under this section with the activities of the National Advisory Council on Health Professions Education under section 702 and with the activities of the Secretary under section 708. The Secretary shall, in cooperation with the Council and pursuant to the recommendations of the Council, take such steps as are practicable to eliminate deficiencies in the data base established under section 708 and shall make available in its reports such comprehensive data sets as are developed pursuant to this section.

"(i) In the reports required under subsection (a), the Council shall specify its activities during the period for which the report is made.

"(j) The Council shall terminate on September 30, 1996."

SEC. 17002. SPECIAL PAY PROVISIONS.

(a) Service in the Indian Health Service.—(1) Section 208(a)(2)(B) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 210(a)(2)(B)) is amended by inserting "(other than an officer serving in the Indian Health Service)" after "Corps".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect as of October 7, 1985.

(b) Employees at the Gillis W. Long Hansen's Disease Center.—Section 208(e) of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 210(e)) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) Any civilian employee of the Service who is employed at the Gillis W. Long Hansen's Disease Center on the date of the enactment of the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 shall be entitled to receive, in addition to any compensation to which the employee may otherwise be entitled and for so long as the employee remains employed at the Center, an amount equal to one-fourth of such compensation.".

SEC. 17003. USE OF FISCAL AGENTS BY PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE.

Title XXI of the Public Health Service Act is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"use of fiscal agents

"Sec. 2116. (a) The Secretary may enter into contracts with fiscal agents—

"(1)(A) to determine the amounts payable to persons who, on behalf of the Indian Health Service, furnish health services to eligible Indians,

"(B) to determine the amounts payable to persons who, on behalf of the Public Health Service, furnish health services to individuals pursuant to section 319 or 322,

"(2) to receive, disburse, and account for funds in making payments described in paragraph (1),

"(3) to make such audits of records as may be necessary to assure that these payments are proper, and

"(4) to perform such additional functions as may be necessary to carry out the functions described in paragraphs (1) through (3).

"(b)(1) Contracts under subsection (a) may be entered into without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5) or any other provision of law requiring competition.

"(2) No such contract shall be entered into with an entity unless the Secretary finds that the entity will perform its obligations under the contract efficiently and effectively and will meet such requirements as to financial responsibility, legal authority, and other matters as he finds pertinent.

"(c) A contract under subsection (a) may provide for advances of funds to enable entities to make payments under the contract.

"(d) Subsections (d) and (e) of section 1842 of the Social Security Act shall apply to contracts with entities under subsection (a) in the same manner as they apply to contracts with carriers under that section.

"(e) In this section, the term 'fiscal agent' means a carrier described in section 1842(f)(1) of the Social Security Act and includes, with respect to contracts under subsection (a)(1)(A), an Indian tribe or tribal organization acting under contract with the Secretary under the Indian Self-Determination Act (Public Law 93-638).".

SEC. 17004. TECHNICAL REVISIONS RELATING TO EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES FOR CHILDREN.

Section 1910 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300w-9) is amended—

(1) by striking out "grant to not more than four States in any fiscal year" in the first sentence of subsection (a) and inserting in lieu thereof "not more than four grants in any fiscal year to States or accredited schools of medicine in States";

(2) by adding at the end of subsection (a) the following new sentence: "Only one grant under this subsection may be made in a State (to a State or to a school of medicine in such State) in any fiscal year.";

(3) by striking out "other States" in subsection (b) and inserting in lieu thereof "States in which grants under such subsection have not been made";

(1) in subsection (t), as added by section 302 of Public Law 98-270—

(A) by inserting "(1)" after "(t)";

(B) by striking out "each of fiscal years 1985 and 1986," and inserting in lieu thereof "fiscal year 1985"; and

(C) by striking out "for each of such years"; and

(2) in subsection (t), as added by section 3 of Public Law 98-395—

(A) by redesignating paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), respectively; and

(B) by redesignating such subsection (t) as paragraph (2).

SEC. 18003. DETERMINATION OF LABOR SURPLUS AREAS.

(a) In General.—Section 15 of the Small Business Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(n) For purposes of this section, the determination of labor surplus areas shall be made on the basis of the criteria in effect at the time of the determination, except that any minimum population criteria shall not exceed twenty-five thousand. Such determination, as modified by the preceding sentence, shall be made by the Secretary of Labor.".

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on the ninetieth day after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 18004. FEDERAL FINANCING BANK PURCHASE OF GUARANTEED OBLIGATIONS.

(a) In General.—Title III of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"GUARANTEED OBLIGATIONS NOT ELIGIBLE FOR PURCHASE BY FEDERAL FINANCING BANK

"Sec. 320. Nothing in any provision of law shall be construed to authorize the Federal Financing Bank to acquire after September 30, 1985—

"(1) any obligation the payment of principal or interest on which has at any time been guaranteed in whole or in part under this title,

"(2) any obligation which is an interest in any obligation described in paragraph (1), or

"(3) any obligation which is secured by, or substantially all of the value of which is attributable to, any obligation described in paragraph (1) or (2).".

(b) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections for title III is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 320. Guaranteed obligations not eligible for purchase by Federal Financing Bank.".

SEC. 18005. ISSUANCE AND GUARANTEE OF TRUST CERTIFICATES.

(a) In General.—Title III of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"Sec. 321. (a) The Administration is authorized to issue trust certificates representing ownership of all or a fractional part of debentures issued by small business investment companies and guaranteed by the Administration under this Act: Provided, That such trust certificates shall be based on and backed by a trust or pool approved by the Administration and composed solely of guaranteed debentures.

"(b) The Administration is authorized, upon such terms and conditions as are deemed appropriate, to guarantee the timely payment of the principal of and interest on trust certificates issued by the Administration or its agent for purposes of this section. Such guarantee shall be limited to the extent of principal and interest on the guaranteed debentures which compose the trust or pool. In the event that a debenture in such trust or pool is prepaid, either voluntarily or in the event of default, the guarantee of timely payment of principal and interest on the trust certificates shall be reduced in proportion to the amount of principal and interest such prepaid debenture represents in the trust or pool. Interest on prepaid or defaulted debentures shall accrue and be guaranteed by the Administration only through the date of payment on the guarantee. During the term of the trust certificate, it may be called for redemption due to prepayment or default of all debentures constituting the pool.

"(c) The full faith and credit of the United States is pledged to the payment of all amounts which may be required to be paid under any guarantee of such trust certificates issued by the Administration or its agent pursuant to this section.

"(d) The Administration shall not collect any fee for any guarantee under this section: Provided, That nothing herein shall preclude any agent of the Administration from collecting a fee approved by the Administration for the functions described in subsection (f)(2) of this section.

"(e)(1) In the event the Administration pays a claim under a guarantee issued under this section, it shall be subrogated fully to the rights satisfied by such payment.

"(2) No State or local law, and no Federal law, shall preclude or limit the exercise by the Administration of its ownership rights in the debentures constituting the trust or pool against which the trust certificates are issued.

"(f) The Administration shall—

"(1) provide for a central registration of all trust certificates sold pursuant to this section; such central registration shall include with respect to each sale, identification of each development company; the interest rate paid by the development company; commissions, fees, or discounts paid to brokers and dealers in trust certificates; identification of each purchaser of the trust certificate; the price paid by the purchaser for the trust certificate; the interest rate paid on the trust certificate; the fees of any agent for carrying out the functions described in paragraph (2); and such other information as the Administration deems appropriate;

"(2) contract with an agent to carry out on behalf of the Administration the central registration functions of this section and the issuance of trust certificates to facilitate poolings; such agent shall provide a fidelity bond or insurance in such amounts as the Administration determines to be necessary to fully protect the interests of the Government;

"(3) prior to any sale, require the seller to disclose to a purchaser of a trust certificate issued pursuant to this section, information on the terms, conditions, and yield of such instrument; and

"(4) have the authority to regulate brokers and dealers in trust certificates sold pursuant to this section.".

(b) Rules and Regulations; Consultation.—(1) Notwithstanding any law, rule, or regulation, within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Small Business Administration shall develop and promulgate final rules and regulations to implement the central registration provisions provided for in section 321(f)(1) of the Small Business Investment Act, and shall contract with an agent for an initial period of not to exceed two years to carry out the functions provided for in sections 321(f)(2) and 321(f)(3) of such Act.

(2) Notwithstanding any law, rule, or regulation, within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Small Business Administration also shall consult with representatives of appropriate Federal and State agencies and officials, the securities industry, financial institutions and lenders, and small business persons, and shall develop and promulgate final rules and regulations to implement sections 504 and 505 of the Small Business Investment Act.

(c) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections for title III of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 321. Issuance and guarantee of trust certificates.".

SEC. 18006. TERMINATION OF AUTHORITY TO MAKE CERTAIN DISASTER ASSISTANCE LOANS.

(a) In General.—The Small Business Act is amended—

(1) in section (7)(b)—

(A) by striking out "The" after "(b)" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as to agricultural enterprises as defined in section 18(b)(1) of this Act, the,";

(B) by striking out the semicolon at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof a period; and

(C) by striking out paragraphs (3) and (4);

(2) in section 7(c)(4) by striking out the last, undesignated paragraph; and

(3) in section 18(a) by striking out all that follows "Federal Government," through "Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act".

(b) Pipeline Loans or Previous Disasters.—Notwithstanding the amendments made by this section, sections 18002 and 18016, or any other provision of law, the Small Business Administration shall continue to accept, process, and approve loan applications under paragraphs (1) through (4) of subsection 7(b) of the Small Business Act and shall obligate and disburse loan funds on account of disasters declared before October 1, 1985, even if any such application is filed after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 18007. GUARANTEE FEE.

Section 7(a) of the Small Business Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:

"(16) The Administration shall collect a guarantee fee equal to two percent of the amount of the deferred participation share of any loan under this subsection other than a loan repayable in one year or less or a loan under paragraph (13). The fee shall be payable by the participating lending institution and may be charged to the borrower.".

SEC. 18008. PILOT PROGRAM INVOLVING SALE OF DEVELOPMENT COMPANY DEBENTURES.

(a) Pilot Program.—Title V of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 is amended by adding the following new section:

"Sec. 504. (a) Notwithstanding any other law, rule, or regulation, the Administration shall conduct a pilot program involving the sale to investors, either publicly or by private placement, of debentures guaranteed pursuant to section 503 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 as follows—

"(1) of the program levels otherwise authorized by law for fiscal year 1986, an amount not to exceed $200,000,000; and

"(2) of the program levels otherwise authorized by law for fiscal year 1987, an amount not to exceed $295,000,000.

"(b) Nothing in any provision of law shall be construed to authorize the Federal Financing Bank to acquire—

"(1) any obligation the payment of principal or interest on which at any time has been guaranteed in whole or in part under section 503 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 and which is being sold pursuant to the provisions of the pilot program authorized in this section,

"(2) any obligation which is an interest in any obligation described in paragraph (1), or

"(3) any obligation which is secured by, or substantially all of the value of which is attributable to, any obligation described in paragraph (1) or (2).".

(b) Report on Pilot Programs.—The Administration shall report to the President and the Congress on the conduct of the pilot program established under subsection (a) not later than 90 days after the date on which the last sale is made pursuant to such subsection in each fiscal year, and unless a report has been made not later than October 1 of 1986 and 1987, the Administration shall make an interim report by such dates.

(c) Authority for Issuance of Trust Certificates.—Such title is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"Sec. 505. (a) The Administration is authorized to issue trust certificates representing ownership of all of a fractional part of debentures issued by State or local development companies and guaranteed by the Administration under this Act: Provided, That such trust certificates shall be based on and backed by a trust or pool approved by the Administration and composed solely of guaranteed debentures.

"(b) The Administration is authorized, upon such terms and conditions as are deemed appropriate, to guarantee the timely payment of the principal of and interest on trust certificates issued by the Administration or its agent for purposes of this section. Such guarantee shall be limited to the extent of principal and interest on the guaranteed debentures which compose the trust or pool. In the event that a debenture in such trust or pool is prepaid, either voluntarily or in the event of default, the guarantee of timely payment of principal and interest on the trust certificates shall be reduced in proportion to the amount of principal and interest such prepaid debenture represents in the trust or pool. Interest on prepaid or defaulted debentures shall accrue and be guaranteed by the Administration only through the date of payment on the guarantee. During the term of the trust certificate, it may be called for redemption due to prepayment or default of all debentures constituting the pool.

"(c) The full faith and credit of the United States is pledged to the payment of all amounts which may be required to be paid under any guarantee of such trust certificates issued by the Administration or its agent pursuant to this section.

"(d) The Administration shall not collect any fee for any guarantee under this section: Provided, That nothing herein shall preclude any agent of the Administration from collecting a fee approved by the Administration for the functions described in subsection (f)(2) of this section.

"(e)(1) In the event the Administration pays a claim under a guarantee issued under this section, it shall be subrogated fully to the rights satisfied by such payment.

"(2) No State or local law, and no Federal law, shall preclude or limit the exercise by the Administration of its ownership rights in the debentures constituting the trust or pool against which the trust certificates are issued.

"(f) The Administration shall—

"(1) provide for a central registration of all trust certificates sold pursuant to this section; such central registration shall include with respect to each sale, identification of each development company; the interest rate paid by the development company; commissions, fees, or discounts paid to brokers and dealers in trust certificates; identification of each purchaser of the trust certificate; the price paid by the purchaser for the trust certificate; the interest rate paid on the trust certificate; the fees of any agent for carrying out the functions described in paragraph (2); and such other information as the Administration deems appropriate;

"(2) contract with an agent to carry out on behalf of the Administration the central registration functions of this section and the issuance of trust certificates to facilitate poolings; such agent shall provide a fidelity bond or insurance in such amounts as the Administration determines to be necessary to fully protect the interests of the Government;

"(3) prior to any sale, require the seller to disclose to a purchaser of a trust certificate issued pursuant to this section, information on the terms, conditions, and yield of such instrument; and

"(4) have the authority to regulate brokers and dealers in trust certificates sold pursuant to this section.".

(d) Rules and Regulations.—(1) Notwithstanding any law, rule, or regulation, within 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Small Business Administration shall develop and promulgate final rules and regulations to implement the central registration provisions provided for in section 505(f)(1) of the Small Business Investment Act, and shall contract with an agent for an initial period of not to exceed two years to carry out the functions provided for in section 505(f)(2) of such Act.

(2) Notwithstanding any law, rule or regulation, within 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Small Business Administration also shall consult with representatives of appropriate Federal and State agencies and officials, the securities industry, financial institutions and lenders, and small business persons, and shall develop and promulgate final rules and regulations to implement sections 504 and 505 of the Small Business Investment Act.

SEC. 18009. MISREPRESENTATION AS A SMALL BUSINESS OR MINORITY CONCERN.

Section 16 of the Small Business Act is amended by adding to the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(d) Whoever misrepresents the status of any concern or person as a 'small business concern' or 'small business concern owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals', in order to obtain for oneself or another any—

"(1) prime contract to be awarded pursuant to section 9 or 15;

"(2) subcontract to be awarded pursuant to section 8(a);

"(3) subcontract that is to be included as part or all of a goal contained in a subcontracting plan required pursuant to section 8(d); or

"(4) prime or subcontract to be awarded as a result, or in furtherance, of any other provision of Federal law that specifically references section 8(d) for a definition of program eligibility, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $50,000 or by imprisonment for not more than five years, or both.

"(e) Any representation of the status of any concern or person as a 'small business concern' or 'small business concern owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals' in order to obtain any prime contract or subcontract enumerated in subsection (d) of this section shall be in writing.".

SEC. 18010. REPORT CONCERNING ALTERNATIVE SOURCES FOR LOAN GUARANTEES.

Not later than June 30, 1986, the Administrator of the Small Business Administration shall submit to the Committees on Small Business of the Senate and the House of Representatives an internal report concerning—

(1) the options available to provide a guarantee on loans under section 7(a) of the Small Business Act from sources outside the Federal Government, together with such recommendations as the Administrator may have with respect to such options, including an evaluation of the feasibility of establishing a corporation owned by the Federal Government to make such guarantees; and

(2) the imposition, on each participating lender in the guaranteed loan program under section 7(a) of the Small Business Act, of an annual fee of between one-quarter of one percent and one percent of the value of the unpaid balance of any loan made under such program, particularly on the revenues that could be expected and whether such revenues could be used for a loss reserve fund or to defray the cost of administration of the program.

SEC. 18011. USER FEES.

(a) Report on User Fees.—Not later than September 30, 1986, the Small Business Administration shall submit to the Committees on Small Business of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on user fees. The report shall specify for each fee which is currently being imposed or which is under consideration—

(1) the type of service provided by the Administration for which the fee is or may be charged;

(2) the amount of fee imposed or being considered;

(3) the formula for setting the fee; and

(4) the statutory or regulatory authority for the fee.

(b) Review of Appropriateness of Fees.—The Administration shall review all other services provided by the Administration for which no fee is currently being imposed and include in the report its findings and recommendations as to—

(1) whether or not a fee should be imposed for each service; and

(2) whether statutory authority is needed to impose the fee.

SEC. 18012. UTILIZATION OF PROGRAM AUTHORITY.

Section 20(a) of the Small Business Act is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "Sec. 20. (a)"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Administration shall enter into commitments for direct loans and to guarantee loans, debentures, payment of rentals, or other amounts due under qualified contracts and other types of financial assistance and enter into commitments to purchase debentures and preferred securities and to guarantee sureties against loss pursuant to programs under this Act and the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, in the full amounts provided by law subject only to (A) the availability of qualified applications, and (B) limitations contained in appropriations Acts. Nothing in this paragraph authorizes the Administration to reduce or limit its authority to enter into such commitments.".

SEC. 18013. BUSINESS LENDING REFORMS.

Section 7(a)(2) of the Small Business Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "$100,000" both places it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "$155,000";

(2) by striking out "90" in subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof "85";

(3) by striking out "90" in the proviso and inserting in lieu thereof "85"; and

(4) by inserting before the period the following: ": Provided, further, That the Administration may reduce its participation below the per centums stated in this paragraph if the lender requests the reduction under the preferred lenders program or any successor thereto. As used in this sentence the term 'preferred lenders program' means a program under which, pursuant to a written agreement between the lender and the Administration, the lender has been delegated (1) complete authority to make and close loans with a guarantee from the Administration without obtaining the prior specific approval of the Administration, and (2) authority to service and liquidate such loans".

SEC. 18014. SURETY GUARANTEES.

Section 411 of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 is amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by striking out "$1,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,250,000"; and

(2) in subsection (e)(2) by striking out "$1,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,250,000".

SEC. 18015. ELIGIBILITY OF SMALL BUSINESSES OWNED BY INDIAN TRIBES.

(a) Consideration of Indian Tribes.—Section 2(e)(1)(C) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 631(e)(2)(C)) is amended by inserting "Indian tribes," after "Native Americans,".

(b) Clarification of Definition of "Socially and Economically Disadvantaged Small Business Concern".—Paragraph (4) of section 8(a) of such Act (15 U.S.C. 637(a)(4)) is amended to read as follows:

"(4)(A) For purposes of this section, the term 'socially and economically disadvantaged small business concern' means any small business concern which meets the requirements of subparagraph (B) and—

"(i) which is at least 51 per centum owned by—

"(I) one or more socially and economically disadvantaged individuals, or

"(II) an economically disadvantaged Indian tribe, or

"(ii) in the case of any publicly owned business, at least 51 per centum of the stock of which is owned by—

"(I) one or more socially and economically disadvantaged individuals, or

"(II) an economically disadvantaged Indian tribe.

"(B) A small business concern meets the requirements of this subparagraph if the management and daily business operations of such small business concern are controlled by one or more—

"(i) socially and economically disadvantaged individuals described in subparagraph (A)(i)(I) or subparagraph (A)(ii)(I), or

"(ii) members of an economically disadvantaged Indian tribe described in subparagraph (A)(i)(II) or subparagraph (A)(ii)(II).".

(c) Determination of Economic Disadvantage of an Indian Tribe.—Paragraph (6) of such Act (15 U.S.C. 637(a)(6)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "In determining the economic disadvantage of an Indian tribe, the Administration shall consider, where available, information such as the following: the per capita income of members of the tribe excluding judgment awards, the percentage of the local Indian population below the poverty level, and the tribe's access to capital markets.".

(d) Definition of "Indian Tribe".—Section 8(a) of such Act (15 U.S.C. 637(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(13) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'Indian tribe' means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or other organized group or community of Indians, including any Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (within the meaning of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act) which—

"(A) is recognized as eligible for the special programs and services provided by the United States to Indians because of their status as Indians, or

"(B) is recognized as such by the State in which such tribe, band, nation, group, or community resides.".

SEC. 18016. SIZE STANDARD FOR AGRICULTURAL ENTERPRISES.

Section 3(a) of the Small Business Act is amended by inserting the following before the period at the end of the first sentence: ": Provided, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, an agricultural enterprise shall be deemed to be a small business concern if it (including its affiliates) has annual receipts not in excess of $500,000".

SEC. 18017. ENCOURAGEMENT OF VETERANS BUSINESS RESOURCE COUNCILS.

(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that—

(1) Veterans Business Resource Councils have been established in the following ten States: California, Ohio, Texas, New York, Massachusetts, Indiana, Louisiana, Maryland, Minnesota, and Missouri;

(2) the concept of Veterans Business Resource Councils to establish networks of veterans with business experience assisting fellow veterans seeking to establish small businesses merits serious consideration; and

(3) the majority of our Nation's Vietnam era veterans fall within the thirty-five to forty-five-year old age range, in which most people decide to enter into small business ownership.

(b) Recommendations.—The Congress urges the Small Business Administration—

(1) to evaluate the effectiveness of the Veterans Business Resource Councils which are currently operating and to recommend improvements in their operations;

(2) to develop guidelines to assist in the establishment of Veterans Business Resource Councils; and

TITLE XIX—VETERANS' PROGRAMS

SEC. 19001. SHORT TITLE; REFERENCES TO TITLE 38, UNITED STATES CODE.

(a) Short Title.—This title may be cited as the "Veterans' Health-Care Amendments of 1986".

(b) References.—Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this title an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of title 38, United States Code.

Subtitle A—Health Care

SEC. 19011. ELIGIBILITY FOR HEALTH CARE OF VETERANS WITH NON-SERVICE-CONNECTED DISABILITIES.

(a) Hospital Care and Nursing Home Care.—(1) Subsection (a) of section 610 is amended to read as follows:

"(a)(1) The Administrator shall furnish hospital care, and may furnish nursing home care, which the Administrator determines is needed—

"(A) to any veteran for a service-connected disability;

"(B) to a veteran whose discharge or release from the active military, naval, or air service was for a disability incurred or aggravated in line of duty, for any disability;

"(C) to a veteran who, but for a suspension pursuant to section 351 of this title (or both such a suspension and the receipt of retired pay), would be entitled to disability compensation, but only to the extent that such veteran's continuing eligibility for such care is provided for in the judgment or settlement described in such section, for any disability;

"(D) to a veteran who has a service-connected disability rated at 50 percent or more, for any disability;

"(E) to any other veteran who has a service-connected disability, for any disability;

"(F) to a veteran who is a former prisoner of war, for any disability;

"(G) to a veteran exposed to a toxic substance or radiation, as provided in subsection (e) of this section;

"(H) to a veteran of the Spanish-American War, the Mexican border period, or World War I, for any disability; and

"(I) to a veteran for a non-service-connected disability, if the veteran is unable to defray the expenses of necessary care as determined under section 622(a)(1) of this title.

"(2)(A) To the extent that resources and facilities are available, the Administrator may furnish hospital care and nursing home care which the Administrator determines is needed to a veteran for a non-service-connected disability if the veteran has an income level described in section 622(a)(2) of this title.

"(B) In the case of a veteran who is not described in paragraph (1) of this subsection or in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, the Administrator may furnish hospital care and nursing home care which the Administrator determines is needed to the veteran for a non-service-connected disability—

"(i) to the extent that resources and facilities are otherwise available; and

"(ii) subject to the provisions of subsection (f) of this section.

"(3) In addition to furnishing hospital care and nursing home care described in paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection through Veterans' Administration facilities, the Administrator may furnish such hospital care in accordance with section 603 of this title and may furnish such nursing home care as authorized under section 620 of this title.".

(2) Such section is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(f)(1) The Administrator may not furnish hospital care or nursing home care under this section to a veteran who is eligible for such care by reason of subsection (a)(2)(B) of this section unless the veteran agrees to pay to the United States the applicable amount determined under paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(2) A veteran who is furnished hospital care or nursing home care under this section and who is required under paragraph (1) of this subsection to agree to pay an amount to the United States in order to be furnished such care shall be liable to the United States for an amount equal to the lesser of—

"(A) the cost of furnishing such care, as determined by the Administrator; and

"(B) the amount determined under paragraph (3) of this subsection.

"(3)(A) In the case of hospital care furnished during any 365-day period, the amount referred to in paragraph (2)(B) of this subsection is—

"(i) the amount of the inpatient Medicare deductible, plus

"(ii) one-half of such amount for each 90 days of care (or fraction thereof) after the first 90 days of such care during such 365-day period.

"(B) In the case of nursing home care furnished during any 365-day period, the amount referred to in paragraph (2)(B) of this subsection is the amount of the inpatient Medicare deductible for each 90 days of such care (or fraction thereof) during such 365-day period.

"(C)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii) of this subparagraph, in the case of a veteran who is admitted for nursing home care under this section after being furnished, during the preceding 365-day period, hospital care for which the veteran has paid the amount of the inpatient Medicare deductible under this subsection and who has not been furnished 90 days of hospital care in connection with such payment, the veteran shall not incur any liability under paragraph (2) of this subsection with respect to such nursing home care until—

"(I) the veteran has been furnished, beginning with the first day of such hospital care furnished in connection with such payment, a total of 90 days of hospital care and nursing home care; or

"(II) the end of the 365-day period applicable to the hospital care for which payment was made, whichever occurs first.

"(ii) In the case of a veteran who is admitted for nursing home care under this section after being furnished, during any 365-day period, hospital care for which the veteran has paid an amount under subparagraph (A)(ii) of this paragraph and who has not been furnished 90 days of hospital care in connection with such payment, the amount of the liability of the veteran under paragraph (2) of this subsection with respect to the number of days of such nursing home care which, when added to the number of days of such hospital care, is 90 or less, is the difference between the inpatient Medicare deductible and the amount paid under such subparagraph until—

"(I) the veteran has been furnished, beginning with the first day of such hospital care furnished in connection with such payment, a total of 90 days of hospital care and nursing home care; or

"(II) the end of the 365-day period applicable to the hospital care for which payment was made,

whichever occurs first.

"(D) In the case of a veteran who is admitted for hospital care under this section after having been furnished, during the preceding 365-day period, nursing home care for which the veteran has paid the amount of the inpatient Medicare deductible under this subsection and who has not been furnished 90 days of nursing home care in connection with such payment, the veteran shall not incur any liability under paragraph (2) of this subsection with respect to such hospital care until—

"(i) the veteran has been furnished, beginning with the first day of such nursing home care furnished in connection with such payment, a total of 90 days of nursing home care and hospital care; or

"(ii) the end of the 365-day period applicable to the nursing home care for which payment was made,

whichever occurs first.

"(E) A veteran may not be required to make a payment under this subsection for hospital care or nursing home care furnished under this section during any 90-day period in which the veteran is furnished medical services under section 612(f) of this title to the extent that such payment would cause the total amount paid by the veteran under this subsection for hospital care and nursing home care furnished during that period and under section 612(f)(4) of this title for medical services furnished during that period to exceed the amount of the inpatient Medicare deductible in effect on the first day of such period.

"(4) Amounts collected or received on behalf of the United States under this subsection shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

"(5) For the purposes of this subsection, the term 'inpatient Medicare deductible' means the amount of the inpatient hospital deductible in effect under section 1813(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395e(b)) on the first day of the 365-day period applicable under paragraph (3) of this subsection.

"(g) Nothing in this section requires the Administrator to furnish care to a veteran to whom another agency of Federal, State, or local government has a duty under law to provide care in an institution of such government.".

(b) Medical Services Furnished on an Outpatient or Ambulatory Basis.—(1) Subsection (a) of section 612 is amended—

(A) by striking out the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(1) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, the Administrator may furnish such medical services as the Administrator determines are needed—

"(A) to any veteran for a service-connected disability (including a disability that was incurred or aggravated in line of duty and for which the veteran was discharged or released from the active military, naval, or air service); and

"(B) for any disability of a veteran who has a service-connected disability rated at 50 percent or more.";

(B) by designating the sentence beginning "The Administrator may also" as paragraph (2) and in such sentence striking out "The Administrator may also furnish to any such veteran" and inserting in lieu thereof "As part of medical services furnished to a veteran under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Administrator may furnish to the veteran";

(C) by striking out the sentence beginning "In the case of"; and

(D) by adding at the end of such subsection the following:

"(3) In addition to furnishing medical services under this subsection through Veterans' Administration facilities, the Administrator may furnish such services in accordance with section 603 of this title.".

(2) Subsection (f) of such section is amended—

(A) by striking out "The Administrator, within the limits of Veterans' Administration facilities, may" and inserting in lieu thereof "(1) Except as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection, the Administrator may";

(B) by redesignating clause (1) as clause (A), redesignating subclauses (A) and (B) of such clause as subclauses (i) and (ii), respectively, and inserting "and" at the end of such clause;

(C) by striking out clause (2);

(D) by redesignating clause (3) as clause (B);

(E) by designating the second sentence as paragraph (2) and in such sentence striking out "The Administrator may also furnish to any such veteran" and inserting in lieu thereof "As part of medical services furnished to a veteran under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Administrator may furnish to the veteran";

(F) by striking out the third sentence; and

(G) by adding at the end the following:

"(3) In addition to furnishing medical services under this subsection through Veterans' Administration facilities, the Administrator may furnish such services in accordance with section 603 of this title.

"(4)(A) The Administrator may not furnish medical services under this subsection (including home health services under paragraph (2) of this subsection) to a veteran who is eligible for hospital care under this chapter by reason of section 610(a)(2)(B) of this title unless the veteran agrees to pay to the United States the amount determined under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph.

"(B) A veteran who is furnished medical services under this subsection and who is required under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph to agree to pay an amount to the United States in order to be furnished such services shall be liable to the United States, in the case of each visit in which such services are furnished to the veteran, for an amount equal to 20 percent of the estimated average cost (during the calendar year in which the services are furnished) of an outpatient visit in a Veterans' Administration facility. Such estimated average cost shall be determined by the Administrator.

"(C) A veteran may not be required to make a payment under this paragraph for services furnished under this subsection during any 90-day period to the extent that such payment would cause the total amount paid by the veteran under this paragraph for medical services furnished during that period and under section 610(f) of this title for hospital and nursing home care furnished during that period to exceed the amount of the inpatient Medicare deductible in effect on the first day of such 90-day period.

"(D) This subsection does not apply with respect to home health services under this subsection to the extent that such services are for improvements and structural alterations.

"(E) For the purposes of this paragraph, the term 'inpatient Medicare deductible' means the amount of the inpatient hospital deductible in effect under section 1813(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395e(b)).

"(F) Amounts collected or received by the Veterans' Administration under this paragraph shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.".

(3) Subsection (g) of such section is amended to read as follows:

"(g)(1) The Administrator may furnish medical services which the Administrator determines are needed to a veteran—

"(A) who is a veteran of the Mexican border period or of World War I; or

"(B) who is in receipt of increased pension or additional compensation or allowances based on the need of regular aid and attendance or by reason of being permanently housebound (or who, but for the receipt of retired pay, would be in receipt of such pension, compensation, or allowance).

"(2) As part of medical services furnished to a veteran under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the Administrator may furnish to the veteran home health services under the terms and conditions set forth in subsection (f) of this section.

"(3) In addition to furnishing medical services under this subsection through Veterans' Administration facilities, the Administrator may furnish such services in accordance with section 603 of this title.".

(4) Subsection (i) of such section is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(6) To any veteran who is in receipt of pension under section 521 of this title.".

(c) Income Thresholds for Certain Non-Service-Connected Care.—(1) Section 622 is amended to read as follows:

"§622. Determination of inability to defray necessary expenses; income thresholds

"(a)(1) For the purposes of section 610(a)(1)(I) of this title, a veteran shall be considered to be unable to defray the expenses of necessary care if—

"(A) the veteran is eligible to receive medical assistance under a State plan approved under title XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.);

"(B) the veteran is in receipt of pension under section 521 of this title; or

"(C) the veteran's attributable income is not greater than the Category A threshold.

"(2) For the purposes of section 610(a)(2)(A) of this title, a veteran's income level is described in this paragraph if the veteran's attributable income is not greater than the Category B threshold.

"(b) For the purposes of this section:

"(1) The Category A threshold—

"(A) for the calendar year beginning on January 1, 1986, is—

"(i) $15,000 in the case of a veteran with no dependents; and

"(ii) $18,000 in the case of a veteran with one dependent, plus $1,000 for each additional dependent; and

"(B) for a calendar year beginning after December 31, 1986, is the amount in effect for purposes of this paragraph for the preceding calendar year as adjusted under subsection (c) of this subsection.

"(2) The Category B threshold—

"(A) for the calendar year beginning on January 1, 1986, is—

"(i) $20,000 in the case of a veteran with no dependents; and

"(ii) $25,000 in the case of a veteran with one dependent, plus $1,000 for each additional dependent; and

"(B) for a calendar year beginning after December 31, 1986, is the amount in effect for purposes of this paragraph for the preceding calendar year as adjusted under subsection (c) of this subsection.

"(c) Effective on January 1 of each year, the amounts in effect under paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b) of this section shall be increased by the percentage by which the maximum rates of pension were increased under section 3112(a) of this title during the preceding calendar year.

"(d)(1) Notwithstanding the attributable income of a veteran, the Administrator may refuse to make a determination described in paragraph (2) of this subsection if the corpus of the estate of the veteran is such that under all the circumstances it is reasonable that some part of the corpus of the estate of the veteran be consumed for the veteran's maintenance.

"(2) A determination described in this paragraph is a determination—

"(A) that for the purposes of subsection (a)(1)(C) of this section a veteran's attributable income is not greater than the Category A threshold; or

"(B) that for the purposes of subsection (a)(2) of this section a veteran's attributable income is not greater than the Category B threshold.

"(3) For the purposes of paragraph (1) of this subsection, the corpus of the estate of a veteran shall be determined in the same manner as the manner in which determinations are made of the corpus of the estates of persons under section 522 of this title.

"(e)(1) In order to avoid a hardship to a veteran described in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Administrator may deem the veteran to have an attributable income during the previous year not greater than the Category A threshold or the Category B threshold, as appropriate.

"(2)(A) A veteran is described in this paragraph for the purposes of subsection (a)(1) of this section if—

"(i) the veteran has an attributable income greater than the Category A threshold; and

"(ii) the current projections of such veteran's income for the current year are that the veteran's income for such year will be substantially below such threshold.

"(B) A veteran is described in this paragraph for the purposes of subsection (a)(2) of this section if—

"(i) the veteran has an attributable income greater than the Category B threshold; and

"(ii) the current projections of such veteran's income for the current year are that the veteran's income for such year will be substantially below such threshold.

"(f) For purposes of this section:

"(1) The term 'attributable income' means the income of a veteran for the previous year determined in the same manner as the manner in which a determination is made of the total amount of income by which the rate of pension for such veteran under section 521 of this title would be reduced if such veteran were eligible for pension under that section.

"(2) The term 'corpus of the estate of the veteran' includes the corpus of the estates of the veteran's spouse and dependent children, if any.

"(3) The term 'previous year' means the calendar year preceding the year in which the veteran applies for care or services under section 610(a) or 612(f) of this title.

"(g) For the purposes of sections 610(b)(2) and 624(c) of this title, the fact that a veteran is—

"(1) eligible to receive medical assistance under a State plan approved under title XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.);

"(2) a veteran with a service-connected disability; or

"(3) in receipt of pension under any law administered by the Veterans' Administration, shall be accepted as sufficient evidence of such veteran's inability to defray necessary expenses.".

(2) The item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 17 is amended to read as follows:

"622. Determination of inability to defray necessary expenses; income thresholds.".

(3) The first increase under subsection (c) of section 622 of title 38, United States Code, as added by paragraph (1), shall take effect on January 1, 1987.

(d) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Section 525(a) is amended by striking out "section 612(i)(5) of this title" and inserting in lieu thereof "clauses (5) and (6) of section 612(i)".

(2) Section 601(6) is amended—

(A) in clause (A)(i), by striking out "section 612(f)(1)(A)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 612(f)(1)(A)(i)", and

(B) in clause (B)(ii), by striking out "section 612(f)(1)(B)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 612(f)(1)(A)(ii)".

(3) Section 610(e) is amended—

(A) by striking out "may be furnished hospital care or nursing home care under subsection (a)(5)" in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "is eligible for hospital care and nursing home care under subsection (a)(1)(G)"; and

(B) by striking out "subsection (a)(5)" in paragraphs (2) and (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (a)(1)(G)".

(4) Section 612A is amended—

(A) by striking out "clause (1)(B)" in subsection (b)(1) and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (1)(A)(ii)"; and

(B) by striking out "612(f)(2)" in subsection (e)(1) and inserting in lieu thereof "612(a)(1)(B)".

(5) Section 620(f)(1)(A)(ii) is amended by striking out "612(f)(2)" and inserting in lieu thereof "612(a)(1)(B)".

(6) Section 663(a)(1) is amended by striking out "612(f)(2)" both places it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "612(a)(1)(B)".

(e) Reports on Furnishing of Health Care and Implementation of Changes in Eligibility.—(1) The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report for each of fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988 concerning the implementation of the amendments made by this section.

(2) Each report under paragraph (1) shall provide detailed information with respect to the fiscal year for which it is submitted regarding—

(A) the number of veterans who received health care from the Veterans' Administration during the fiscal year concerned (shown in total and separately for hospital care, nursing home care, outpatient care, and domiciliary care);

(B) with respect to veterans who applied for health care from the Veterans' Administration during such fiscal year but did not receive such care—

(i) the number of such veterans (shown in total and separately for hospital care, nursing home care, outpatient care, and domiciliary care); and

(ii) the primary reasons why such care was not furnished;

(C) the guidelines and processes for—

(i) implementation of the income-threshold criteria for Veterans' Administration health-care eligibility established by paragraph (1)(I) and subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (2) of section 610(a) of title 38, United States Code (as added by subsection (a)), paragraph (4) of section 612(f) of such title (as added by subsection (b)), and section 622 of such title (as amended by subsection (c)); and

(ii) the collection of payments required by section 610(f) of such title (as added by subsection (a)(2)) and by section 612(f)(4) of such title (as added by subsection (b)(2));

(D) the numbers and characteristics of, and the type and extent of health care furnished by the Veterans' Administration to, veterans eligible for such care by reason of any such authorities, including—

(i) with respect to those eligible by reason of each such authority, the numbers who applied for and were furnished such care, the type and extent of such care that they were furnished, and their incomes and family sizes; and

(ii) with respect to veterans eligible by reason of section 610(a)(2)(B) of such title, the average and total payments made by such veterans for such care (shown in total and separately for hospital care, nursing home care, and outpatient care); and

(E) the numbers of, and the type and extent of health care furnished by the Veterans' Administration to, veterans eligible for such care by reason of each clause of section 610(a)(1) of such title (shown in total and separately for veterans with service-connected disabilities for each percentile disability rating).

The report for fiscal year 1986 shall include information relating only to care furnished on or after July 1, 1986.

(3) Each report under this subsection shall be submitted not later than the February 1 following the end of the fiscal year for which it is required.

(f) Effective Date.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to hospital care, nursing home care, and medical services furnished on or after July 1, 1986.

(2)(A) The provisions of sections 610 and 622 of title 38, United States Code, as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of this Act, shall apply with respect to hospital and nursing home care furnished on or after July 1, 1986, to veterans furnished such care or services on June 30, 1986, but only to the extent that such care is furnished with respect to the same episode of care for which it was furnished on June 30, 1986, as determined by the Administrator pursuant to regulations which the Administrator shall prescribe.

(B) During the months of July and August 1986, the Administrator may, in order to continue a course of treatment begun before July 1, 1986, furnish medical services to a veteran on an ambulatory or outpatient basis without regard to the amendments made by this section.

(C) For the purposes of this paragraph, the term "episode of care" means a period of consecutive days—

(i) beginning with the first day on which a veteran is furnished hospital or nursing home care; and

(ii) ending on the day of the veteran's discharge from the hospital or nursing home facility, as the case may be.

SEC. 19012. TECHNICAL REVISION OF AUTHORITY TO CONTRACT FOR HOSPITAL CARE AND MEDICAL SERVICES.

(a) Repeal of Contract Authority From Definition of Veterans' Administration Facilities.—Section 601 is amended—

(1) in paragraph (4)—

(A) by inserting "and" at the end of clause (A); and

(B) by striking out the semicolon at the end of clause (B) and all that follows through the end of such paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof a period; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) The term 'non-Veterans' Administration facilities' means facilities other than Veterans' Administration facilities.".

(b) Reenactment of Contract Authority.—(1) Chapter 17 is amended by inserting after section 602 the following new section:

"§603. Contracts for hospital care and medical services in non-Veterans' Administration facilities

"(a) When Veterans' Administration facilities are not capable of furnishing economical hospital care or medical services because of geographical inaccessibility or are not capable of furnishing the care or services required, the Administrator, as authorized in section 610 or 612 of this title, may contract with non-Veterans' Administration facilities in order to furnish—

"(1) hospital care or medical services to a veteran for the treatment of—

"(A) a service-connected disability; or

"(B) a disability for which a veteran was discharged or released from the active military, naval, or air service;

"(2) medical services for the treatment of any disability of—

"(A) a veteran described in section 612(a)(1)(B) of this title;

"(B) a veteran described in section 612(f)(1)(A)(ii) of this title; or

"(C) a veteran described in section 612(g) of this title if the Administrator has determined, based on an examination by a physician employed by the Veterans' Administration (or, in areas where no such physician is available, by a physician carrying out such function under a contract or fee arrangement), that the medical condition of such veteran precludes appropriate treatment in Veterans' Administration facilities;

"(3) hospital care or medical services for the treatment of medical emergencies which pose a serious threat to the life or health of a veteran receiving medical services in a Veterans' Administration facility until such time following the furnishing of care in the non-Veterans' Administration facility as the veteran can be safely transferred to a Veterans' Administration facility;

"(4) hospital care for women veterans;

"(5) hospital care, or medical services that will obviate the need for hospital admission, for veterans in a State not contiguous to the contiguous States, except that the annually determined hospital patient load and incidence of the furnishing of medical services to veterans hospitalized or treated at the expense of the Veterans' Administration in Government and non-Veterans' Administration facilities in each such noncontiguous State shall be consistent with the patient load or incidence of the furnishing of medical services for veterans hospitalized or treated by the Veterans' Administration within the 48 contiguous States, but the authority of the Administrator under this paragraph with respect to the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico shall expire on September 30, 1988, and until such date the Administrator may, if necessary to prevent hardship, waive the applicability to the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico of the restrictions in this paragraph with respect to hospital patient loads and the incidence of the furnishing of medical services;

"(6) diagnostic services necessary for determination of eligibility for, or of the appropriate course of treatment in connection with, furnishing medical services at independent Veterans' Administration out-patient clinics to obviate the need for hospital admission; or

"(7) outpatient dental services and treatment, and related dental appliances, for a veteran described in section 612(b)(1)(G) of this title.

"(b) In the case of any veteran for whom the Administrator contracts to furnish care or services in a non-Veterans' Administration facility pursuant to a provision of subsection (a) of this section, the Administrator shall periodically review the necessity for continuing such contractual arrangement pursuant to such provision.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 602 the following new item:

"603. Contracts for hospital care and medical services in non-Veterans' Administration facilities.".

(c) Conforming Amendments.—(1) Section 612(b)(3) is amended by striking out "clause (i), (ii), or (v) of section 601(4)(C)" and inserting in lieu thereof "clause (1), (2), or (5) of section 603(a)".

(2) Section 612(b)(4) is amended by striking out "section 601(4)(C)" both places it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "section 603".

(3) Section 612A(e)(1) is amended by striking out "601(4)(C)(ii)" and inserting in lieu thereof "603(a)(2)".

(4) Section 903(a) is amended by inserting "hospital care in accordance with section 603 of this title or" after "was receiving".

(5) Section 102(b) of the Veterans' Administration Health-Care Amendments of 1985 (Public Law 99-166) is amended—

(A) by striking out "such section" in paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 603(a)(5)"; and

(B) by striking out "clause (v) of section 601(4)(C)" in paragraph (5) and inserting in lieu thereof "section 603(a)(5)".

"§ 629. Recovery by the United States of the cost of certain care and services

"(a)(1) Subject to the provisions of this section, in any case in which a veteran is furnished care or services under this chapter for a non-service-connected disability described in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the United States has the right to recover or collect the reasonable cost of such care or services (as determined by the Administrator) from a third party to the extent that the veteran (or the provider of the care or services) would be eligible to receive payment for such care or services from such third party if the care or services had not been furnished by a department or agency of the United States.

"(2) Paragraph (1) of this subsection applies to a non-service-connected disability—

"(A) that is incurred incident to the veteran's employment and that is covered under a workers' compensation law or plan that provides for payment for the cost of health care and services provided to the veteran by reason of the disability;

"(B) that is incurred as the result of a motor vehicle accident to which applies a State law that requires the owners or operators of motor vehicles registered in that State to have in force automobile accident reparations insurance;

"(C) that is incurred as the result of a crime of personal violence that occurred in a State, or a political subdivision of a State, in which a person injured as the result of such a crime is entitled to receive health care and services at such State's or subdivision's expense for personal injuries suffered as the result of such crime; or

"(D) that is incurred by a veteran—

"(i) who does not have a service-connected disability; and

"(ii) who is entitled to care (or payment of the expenses of care) under a health-plan contract.

"(3) In the case of a health-plan contract that contains a requirement for payment of a deductible or copayment by the veteran—

"(A) the veteran's not having paid such deductible or copayment with respect to care or services furnished under this chapter shall not preclude recovery or collection under this section; and

"(B) the amount that the United States may collect or recover under this section shall be reduced by the appropriate deductible or copayment amount, or both.

"(b)(1) As to the right provided in subsection (a) of this section, the United States shall be subrogated to any right or claim that the veteran (or the veteran's personal representative, successor, dependents, or survivors) may have against a third party.

"(2)(A) In order to enforce any right or claim to which the United States is subrogated under paragraph (1) of this subsection, the United States may intervene or join in any action or proceeding brought by the veteran (or the veteran's personal representative, successor, dependents, or survivors) against a third party.

"(B) The United States may institute and prosecute legal proceedings against the third party if—

"(i) an action or proceeding described in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph is not begun within 180 days after the first day on which care or services for which recovery is sought are furnished to the veteran by the Administrator under this chapter;

"(ii) the United States has sent written notice by certified mail to the veteran at the veteran's last-known address (or to the veteran's personal representative or successor) of the intention of the United States to institute such legal proceedings; and

"(iii) a period of 60 days has passed following the mailing of such notice.

"(c)(1) The Administrator may compromise, settle, or waive any claim which the United States has under this section.

"(2)(A) The Administrator, after consultation with the Comptroller General of the United States, shall prescribe regulations for the purpose of determining the reasonable cost of care or services under subsection (a)(1) of this section. Any determination of such cost shall be made in accordance with such regulations.

"(B) Such regulations shall provide that the reasonable cost of care or services sought to be recovered or collected from a third-party liable under a health-plan contract may not exceed the amount that such third party demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Administrator it would pay for the care or services in accordance with the prevailing rates at which the third party makes payments under comparable health-plan contracts with facilities (other than facilities of departments or agencies of the United States) in the same geographic area.

"(C) Not later than 45 days after the date on which the Administrator prescribes such regulations (or any amendment to such regulations), the Comptroller General shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and the House of Representatives the Comptroller General's comments on and recommendations regarding such regulations (or amendment).

"(d) Any contract or agreement into which the Administrator enters with a person under section 3718 of title 31 for collection services to recover indebtedness owed the United States under this section shall provide, with respect to such services, that such person is subject to sections 3301 and 4132 of this title.

"(e) A veteran eligible for care or services under this chapter—

"(1) may not be denied such care or services by reason of this section; and

"(2) may not be required by reason of this section to make any copayment or deductible payment in order to receive such care.

"(f) No law of any State or of any political subdivision of a State, and no provision of any contract or other agreement, shall operate to prevent recovery or collection by the United States under this section or with respect to care or services furnished under section 611(b) of this title.

"(g) Amounts collected or recovered on behalf of the United States under this section shall be deposited into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

"(h)(1) Subject to paragraph (3) of this subsection, the Administrator shall make available medical records of a veteran described in paragraph (2) of this subsection for inspection and review by representatives of the third party concerned for the sole purposes of permitting the third party to verify—

"(A) that the care or services for which recovery or collection is sought were furnished to the veteran; and

"(B) that the provision of such care or services to the veteran meets criteria generally applicable under the health-plan contract involved.

"(2) A veteran described in this paragraph is a veteran who is a beneficiary of a health-plan contract under which recovery or collection is sought under this section from the third party concerned for the cost of the care or services furnished to the veteran.

"(3) Records shall be made available under this subsection under such conditions to protect the confidentiality of such records as the Administrator shall prescribe in regulations.

"(i) For purposes of this section—

"(1)(A) The term 'health-plan contract' means an insurance policy or contract, medical or hospital service agreement, membership or subscription contract, or similar arrangement, under which health services for individuals are provided or the expenses of such services are paid.

"(B) Such term does not include—

"(i) an insurance program described in section 1811 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395c) or established by section 1831 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395j);

"(ii) a State plan for medical assistance approved under title XIX of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1396 et seq.);

"(iii) a workers' compensation law or plan described in subparagraph (A) of subsection (a)(2) of this section; or

"(iv) a program, plan, or policy under a law described in subparagraph (B) or (C) of such subsection.

"(2) The term 'payment' includes reimbursement and indemnification.

"(3) The term 'third party' means—

"(A) a State or political subdivision of a State;

"(B) an employer or an employer's insurance carrier;

"(C) an automobile accident reparations insurance carrier; or

"(D) a person obligated to provide, or to pay the expenses of, health services under a health-plan contract.".

(b) Effective Date.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), section 629 of title 38, United States Code, as amended by subsection (a), shall apply to care and services provided on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2)(A) Such section shall not apply so as to nullify any provision of a health-plan contract (as defined in subsection (i) of such section) that—

(i) was entered into before the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(ii) is not modified or renewed on or after such date.

(B) In the case of a health-plan contract (as so defined) that was entered into before such date and which is modified or renewed on or after such date, the amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply—

(i) with respect to such plan as of the day after the date that it is so modified or renewed; and

(ii) with respect to care and services provided after such date of modification or renewal.

(3) For purposes of paragraph (2), the term "modified" includes any change in premium or coverage.

(c) Reports.—(1) Not later than six months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the process for and results of the implementation of section 629 of title 38, United States Code, as amended by subsection (a). Such report shall show the costs of administration (and a detailed breakdown of such costs) and the amount of receipts and collections under such section.

(2) Not later than February 1, 1988, the Administrator shall submit to such Committees a report—

(A) updating the information in the report submitted under paragraph (1); and

(B) providing information on the process and results of such implementation through at least the end of fiscal year 1987.

Subtitle B—Miscellaneous Provisions

SEC. 19031. STUDY OF EFFECT OF VIETNAM EXPERIENCE ON HEALTH STATUS OF WOMEN VIETNAM VETERANS.

(a) Requirement for Epidemiological Study.—(1)(A) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall provide for the conduct of an epidemiological study of any long-term adverse health effects (particularly gender-specific health effects) which have been experienced by women who served in the Armed Forces of the United States in the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam era and which may have resulted from traumatic experiences during such service, from exposure during such service to phenoxy herbicides (including the herbicide known as Agent Orange), to other herbicides, chemicals, or medications that may have deleterious health effects, or to environmental hazards, or from any other experience or exposure during such service.

(B) The Administrator may include in the study conducted under this paragraph an evaluation of the means of detecting and treating long-term adverse health effects (particularly gender-specific health effects) found through the study.

(2)(A) If the Administrator, in consultation with the Director of the Office of Technology Assessment, determines that it is not feasible to conduct a scientifically valid study of an aspect of the matters described in paragraph (1)—

(i) the Administrator shall promptly submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a notice of that determination and the reasons for the determination; and

(ii) the Director, not later than 60 days after the date on which such notice is submitted to the committees, shall submit to such committees a report evaluating and commenting on such determination.

(B) The Administrator is not required to study any aspect of the matters described in paragraph (1) with respect to which a determination is made and a notice is submitted pursuant to subparagraph (A)(i).

(C) If the Administrator submits to the Congress notice of a determination made pursuant to subparagraph (A) that it is not scientifically feasible to conduct the study described in paragraph (1)(A), this section (effective as of the date of such notice) shall cease to have effect as if repealed by law.

(3) The Administrator shall provide for the study to be conducted through contracts or other agreements with private or public agencies or persons.

(b) Approval of Protocol.—(1) The study required by subsection (a) shall be conducted in accordance with a protocol approved by the Director of the Office of Technology Assessment.

(2) Not later than July 1, 1986, the Administrator shall publish a request for proposals for the design of the protocol to be used in conducting the study under this section.

(3) In considering any proposed protocol for use or approval under this subsection, the Administrator and the Director shall take into consideration—

(A) the protocol approved under section 307(a)(2)(A)(i) of the Veterans Health Programs Extension and Improvement Act of 1979 (Public Law 96-151; 38 U.S.C. 219 note); and

(B) the experience under the study being conducted pursuant to that protocol.

(c) OTA Reports.—(1) Concurrent with the approval or disapproval of any protocol under subsection (b)(1), the Director shall submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a report—

(A) explaining the reasons for the Director's approval or disapproval of the protocol, as the case may be; and

(B) containing the Director's conclusions regarding the scientific validity and objectivity of the protocol.

(2) If the Director has not approved a protocol under subsection (b)(1) by the last day of the 180-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director—

(A) shall, on such day, submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a report describing the reasons why the Director has not approved such a protocol; and

(B) shall, each 60 days thereafter until such a protocol is approved, submit to such committees an updated report on the report required by clause (A).

(d) OTA Monitoring of Compliance.—(1) In order to ensure compliance with the protocol approved under subsection (b)(1), the Director shall monitor the conduct of the study under subsection (a).

(2)(A) The Director shall submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress, at each of the times specified in subparagraph (B), a report on the Director's monitoring of the conduct of the study pursuant to paragraph (1).

(B) A report shall be submitted under subparagraph (A)—

(i) before the end of the 6-month period beginning on the date on which the Director approves the protocol referred to in paragraph (1);

(ii) before the end of the 12-month period beginning on such date; and

(iii) annually thereafter until the study is completed or terminated.

(e) Duration of Study.—The study conducted pursuant to subsection (a) shall be continued for as long after the date on which the first report is submitted under subsection (f)(1) as the Administrator determines that there is a reasonable possibility of developing, through such study, significant new information on the health effects described in subsection (a)(1).

(f) Reports.—(1) Not later than 24 months after the date of the approval of the protocol pursuant to subsection (b)(1) and annually thereafter, the Administrator shall submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress a report containing—

(A) a description of the results obtained, before the date of such report, under the study conducted pursuant to subsection (a); and

(B) any administrative actions or recommended legislation, or both, and any additional comments which the Administrator considers appropriate in light of such results.

(2) Not later than 90 days after the date on which each report required by paragraph (1) is submitted, the Administrator shall publish in the Federal Register, for public review and comment, a description of any action that the Administrator plans or proposes to take with respect to programs administered by the Veterans' Administration based on—

(A) the results described in such report;

(B) the comments and recommendations received on that report; and

(C) any other available pertinent information.

Each such description shall include a justification or rationale for the planned or proposed action.

(g) Definitions.—For the purposes of this section:

(1) The term "gender-specific health effects" includes—

(A) effects on female reproductive capacity and reproductive organs;

(B) effects on reproductive outcomes;

(C) effects on female-specific organs and tissues; and

(D) other effects unique to the physiology of females.

(2) The term "Vietnam era" has the meaning given such term in section 101(29) of title 38, United States Code.

SEC. 19032. ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON NATIVE-AMERICAN VETERANS.

(a) Establishment of Committee.—Not later than May 1, 1986, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs shall establish an advisory committee to be known as the Advisory Committee on Native-American Veterans (hereinafter in this section referred to as the "Committee").

(b) Duties.—The Committee shall examine and evaluate programs and other activities of the Veterans' Administration with respect to the needs of veterans who are Native Americans, including American Indians and Alaska Natives. Such examination and evaluation shall include—

(1) an assessment of the needs of such veterans with respect to health care, rehabilitation, readjustment counseling, outreach services, and other benefits and services under programs administered by the Veterans' Administration; and

(2) a review of the manner in which and the extent to which the programs and other activities of the Veterans' Administration meet such needs.

(c) Members.—The Committee shall consist of—

(1) the Secretary of Labor (or a representative of the Secretary of Labor designated by the Secretary after consultation with the Assistant Secretary of Labor for Veterans' Employment);

(2) the Chief Medical Director and Chief Benefits Director of the Veterans' Administration or their representatives; and

(3) members appointed by the Administrator from the general public, including—

(A) representatives of veterans who are Native Americans, including American Indians and Alaska Natives and such veterans with service-connected disabilities; and

(B) individuals who are recognized authorities in fields pertinent to the needs of such veterans, including the specific health-care needs of such veterans and the furnishing of health-care services by the Veterans' Administration to such veterans.

(d) Participation by Other Agencies.—The Administrator may invite representatives of other departments and agencies of the Federal Government to participate in the meetings and other activities of the Committee.

(e) Number and Pay of Members.—The Administrator shall determine the number and pay and allowances of the members of the Committee appointed by the Administrator.

(f) Reports.—(1) Not later than February 1, 1987, and February 1, 1988, the Committee shall submit to the Administrator a report containing the findings and any recommendations of the Committee regarding the matters described in subsection (b) that were examined and evaluated by the Committee during the preceding fiscal year.

(2) Not later than 60 days after receiving each such report, the Administrator shall transmit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives a copy of the report, together with any comments and recommendations concerning the report that the Administrator considers appropriate.

(g) ALASKA NATIVE DEFINED.—For the purposes of this section, the term "Alaska Native" has the meaning given the term "Native" in section 3(b) of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1602(b)).

(h) TERMINATION.—The Committee shall terminate 90 days after the date on which the second report is transmitted by the Committee pursuant to subsection (f)(2).

SEC. 19033. WAIVER OF CONGRESSIONAL NOTICE-AND-WAIT PERIOD FOR ADMINISTRATIVE REORGANIZATION OF CERTAIN VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION AUTOMATED DATA PROCESSING ACTIVITIES.

(a) WAIVER.—The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may undertake the administrative reorganization described in subsection (b) without regard to the requirements of section 210(b)(2) of title 38, United States Code.

(b) COVERED ADMINISTRATIVE REORGANIZATION.—The administrative reorganization referred to in subsection (a) is a reorganization that—

(1) involves the transfer of certain functions from the Office of Data Management and Telecommunications of the Veterans' Administration to the Department of Veterans' Benefits of the Veterans' Administration; and

(2) is described in letters dated November 1, 1985, that were submitted by the Administrator to the chairmen and ranking minority members of the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and House of Representatives.

SEC. 19034. RATIFICATION OF CERTAIN TEMPORARILY EXPIRED AUTHORITIES.

(a) VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION REGIONAL OFFICE IN THE REPUBLIC OF THE PHILIPPINES.—Any action by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs in providing, during the ratification period, for a Veterans' Administration Regional Office in the Republic of the Philippines under section 230 of title 38, United States Code, is hereby ratified with respect to that period.

(b) CONTRACT CARE AUTHORITY IN PUERTO RICO AND THE VIRGIN ISLANDS.—Any action by the Administrator in entering into a contract applicable to the ratification period for furnishing care described in subclause (v) of section 601(4)(C) of title 38, United States Code, any action by the Administrator under such contract, and any waiver described in that subclause made by the Administrator that is applicable to that period, is hereby ratified with respect to that period.

(c) ALCOHOL AND DRUG TREATMENT AND REHABILITATION CONTRACT PROGRAM.—Any action by the Administrator in entering into a contract described in section 620A(a) of title 38, United States Code, that is applicable to the ratification period, and any action by the Administrator under such contract, is hereby ratified with respect to that period.

(d) RATIFICATION PERIOD DEFINED.—For the purposes of this section, the term "ratification period" means the period beginning on November 1, 1985, and ending on December 3, 1985.

TITLE XX—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 20001. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

(a) When the Senate is considering a reconciliation bill or a reconciliation resolution pursuant to section 310 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, upon a point of order being made by any Senator against material extraneous to the instructions to a committee which is contained in any title or provision of the bill or resolution or offered as an amendment to the bill or resolution, and the point of order is sustained by the Chair, any part of said title or provision that contains material extraneous to the instructions to said Committee as defined in subsection (d) shall be deemed stricken from the bill and may not be offered as an amendment from the floor. An affirmative vote of three-fifths of the Members, duly chosen and sworn, shall be required to sustain an appeal of the ruling of the Chair on a point of order raised under this section, as well as to waive or suspend the provisions of this subsection.

(b) No motion to waive or suspend the requirement of section 305(b)(2) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, as it relates to germaneness with respect to a reconciliation bill or resolution, shall be agreed to unless supported by an affirmative vote of three-fifths of the Members, duly chosen and sworn, which super-majority shall be required to successfully appeal the ruling of the Chair on a point of order raised under that section, as well as to waive or suspend the provisions of this subsection.

(c) This section shall become effective on the date of enactment of this title and shall remain in effect until January 2, 1987.

(d)(1)(A) Except as provided in paragraph (2), a provision of a reconciliation bill or reconciliation resolution considered pursuant to section 310 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 shall be considered extraneous if such provision does not produce a change in outlays or revenues, including changes in outlays and revenues brought about by changes in the terms and conditions under which outlays are made or revenues are required to be collected; (B) any provision producing an increase in outlays or decrease in revenues shall be considered extraneous if the net effect of provisions reported by the Committee reporting the title containing the provision is that the Committee fails to achieve its reconciliation instructions; (C) a provision that is not in the jurisdiction of the Committee with jurisdiction over said title or provision shall be considered extraneous; (D) a provision shall be considered extraneous if it produces changes in outlays or revenues which are merely incidental to the non-budgetary components of the provision.

(2) A provision shall not be considered extraneous under (1)(A) above if: (A) it is designed to mitigate the direct effects clearly attributable to a provision changing outlays or revenues and both provisions together produce a net reduction in the deficit; (B) it will result in a substantial reduction in outlays or a substantial increase in revenues during fiscal years after the fiscal years covered by the reconciliation bill or reconciliation resolution; (C) a reduction of outlays or an increase in revenues is likely to occur as a result of the provision, in the event of new regulations authorized by the provision or likely to be proposed, court rulings on pending litigation, or relationships between economic indices and stipulated statutory triggers pertaining to the provision, other than the regulations, court rulings or relationships currently projected by the Congressional Budget Office for scorekeeping purposes; (D) such provision will be likely to produce a significant reduction in outlays or increase in revenues but, due to insufficient data, such reduction or increase cannot be reliably estimated.●

THE MEDICAL MALPRACTICE INSURANCE PROBLEM

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, the medical malpractice problem in this country continues to grow. All 50 States have considered some form of legislation to address the problem this year alone and there are bills pending in Congress as well. Some say the problem is reaching a crisis point. However we label it, there is no question that the health care system of the United States is being adversely affected by the fallout of the malpractice problem.

Malpractice insurance premiums are skyrocketing, reaching as high as $100,000 a year for some specialty physicians, such as neurosurgeons. These higher malpractice insurance costs are forcing doctors and hospitals to raise their charges and then pass these costs on to third-party payers and individual consumers. The number of malpractice claims has tripled over the past decade and million-dollar settlements happen on a regular basis. The average settlement has grown from $5,000 to over $300,000 in just 6 years.

We all know the statistics. We all have our theories on why the malpractice system is out of control. We all have our fingers pointed at someone to blame. But this fingerpointing and theorizing miss the critical issue: The malpractice crisis is pricing some physicians out of business, particularly doctors in rural areas, and especially those who deliver babies. And this is affecting access to health care in rural America, and individuals there can ill afford to lose this service.

In my home State, the Minnesota Medical Association estimates that over 100 Minnesota doctors have stopped delivering babies, primarily because malpractice insurance costs double when the practice includes obstetrics. Last week, as I traveled in southwestern Wisconsin, I read of a physician in Viroqua, Dr. Jessica Ambelang, who has seen her malpractice premium increase 500 percent in the past 5 years. This year she expects to pay between $32,000 and $40,000. Dr. Ambelang is an obstetrician-gynecologist. She has decided that she must soon leave this rural community, where she thought she'd always live and work, if she wants to continue practicing medicine and avoid bankruptcy.

I suggest that my colleagues read the newspaper article about Dr. Ambelang, and I ask that it be printed in the RECORD following my statement. Her situation is being repeated every day across this country. A solution to the malpractice problem must be found, and fast. Rural Americans need available and accessible health care, and doctors who deliver babies are vital to that system.

MALPRACTICE INSURANCE CHASING DOCTORS AWAY

(By Carol Kaufmann)

VIROQUA, Wis.—Jessica Ambelang still cries when she thinks about her decision to leave Viroqua.

As Jessica's 3½-year-old son George sat on her lap, making a futile attempt to keep his sleep-laden eyes open, Jessica said George and his three brothers are chief reasons she and her husband plan to leave the Vernon County community of about 3,700 people at the end of June.

Jessica, the 36-year-old wife and mother of four preschool-aged sons, cannot afford to also be Jessica, the doctor with more than 300 economically-strapped patients to see and skyrocketing malpractice rates to pay.

Jessica is an obstetrician and a gynecologist who, like doctors within her specialty across the nation, has seen her malpractice rates rise much more quickly than those other doctors pay. Neurosurgeons, she added, also have been hit hard by rising costs.

Part of the reason obstetricians are paying higher rates, Jessica said, has to do with unrealistic expectations.

Across the country, more people are expecting babies to always be born perfect. When some of those babies aren't perfect, more people are suing.

"It's socially acceptable," said Jessica, "that if you're not satisfied with an outcome, you sue."

High monetary awards by sympathetic juries and judges, she said, also have contributed to rising rates.

Wisconsin, she claimed, "is one of the worst. Malpractice is the equivalent to having a lottery in Wisconsin."

Jessica cited a $9 million award recently given in Milwaukee as an example of a judgment that was "too high."

Rep. John Medinger, D-La Crosse, said Wisconsin's legislature is trying to do something about the growing malpractice problem.

Medinger said he served on the legislative council committee that developed a bill that would cap the amount of malpractice awards, including medical costs and pain-and-suffering judgments, at $3.3 million.

Neither the doctors nor the lawyers, Medinger said, are happy with the proposed legislation—"so I figure that means it's a good compromise."

Medinger said "the doctors want to see a bill that would cap pain-and-suffering at $1 million, with unlimited awards for medical expenses."

Nothing was settled in a recent session of the Wisconsin Legislature, although it was expected a special session would be called later on the matter.

Besides setting limits on awards, Jessica said she would like to see "discounts given to people who choose to practice in underserved areas—and increasing rates for being in an overserved area. . . . People in rural areas don't sue as often as people living in a city.

"That's because," she said, "patients are also your friends. And people are less likely to sue someone who's a friend."

Jessica and Medinger agreed that they would like to see doctors policing their profession with heavier hands, weeding out physicians prone to making mistakes.

Jessica said she was hoping a law controlling malpractice claims would pass before financial burdens forced her and her physician husband, Tom to leave Viroqua. That hasn't happened.

When Jessica started her practice in 1982 from Vernon Memorial Hospital, she took out a loan to pay a $7,000 malpractice insurance policy. This year she paid $23,000 for the protection.

Next year, Jessica predicted, coverage for specialists like her will rise to between $32,000 and $40,000—about five times what it was five years earlier.

"That is more than 50 percent of everything I collect," she said adding that if she stays in the rural community, taking out loans won't be the answer—"We'll be filing for bankruptcy."

But, said Jessica, there is another reason she can't make ends met by staying in Viroqua.

Unlike obstetricians in other communities who pass on their increasing insurance rates to their patients, Jessica said that won't be her solution in Viroqua.

"This area is so poor. . . . I cannot charge $1,200 for a C-section because they don't have it," she said adding, "I could be obnoxious about making collections, but I still believe we should take care of the poor. Sure these people might have farms, but they have no liquid assets."

Jessica estimated that about 25 percent of the patients she sees do not pay their bills. Another 25 percent, she said "pay promptly."

The remaining 50 percent, said Jessica, receive medical assistance. That means their bills get paid in amounts set by the government, not subject to change just because malpractice rates rise.

By the time she pays insurance, baby sitters and office expenses, Jessica's net income from her parttime practice—which includes about 18 hours a week in the office and about 22 hours on-call and in the hospital delivering babies and making rounds—is $7,000 for the year.

"There are plenty of rich doctors around, but," Jessica said, "you're not going to find them in the inner-city and you're not going to see them in the rural areas."

Tom, 35, is a family practitioner who, before taxes, insurance and other expenses earns $38,000 from his practice at the Hirsch Clinic in Viroqua. He also moonlights in Vernon Memorial's emergency room one weekend a month and covers the office for Phillips Bland in Westby each Friday. That gives him an extra $1,200 each month.

"A family practitioner (in an urban area), fresh out of medical school, with the same number of patients, can make the same or more than a family practitioner in this area makes in his or her whole life," said Jessica.

Despite his lower-than-average income, Tom still comes out better in terms of paying malpractice rates as a family practitioner than does his obstetrician-gynecologist wife. He would do even better if he stopped delivering babies.

Tom said his malpractice rates, which this year amounted to $12,000, would be about $10,000 lower if he did not deliver babies.

"There are family practitioners in this community who don't deliver babies for just that reason," he said, adding that he knows of three such doctors. When he and Jessica leave, the Viroqua area will have lost a total of five doctors who will be able to deliver babies.

Jessica said that in Wisconsin, doctors who specialize in obstetrics-gynecology cannot drop obstetrics, as they can and have done in other states because of malpractice rates.

Jessica and Tom are angry with a legal system and insurance rates that they say are robbing them of their dreams to practice medicine in the Wisconsin countryside

The Ambelangs graduated together from Sparta High School and went to the University of Wisconsin. They began dating in high school.

Tom started preparing to become a doctor during his first year in college and Jessica took pre-med courses even though she said she had planned originally to be a teacher.

But they both applied and were accepted into the University of Wisconsin's Medical School.

Tom and Jessica married during their senior year of medical school.

While they were in medical school, Jessica said she and Tom committed to something else. Along with Jessica's brother, J.R. Menn—who is a pediatrician serving the Viroqua area—they made plans to serve the rural community.

"We like the rural lifestyle. We like the people and think they're underserved," said Jessica. "We're not here for the money. We're here to help people.

"We made up our minds a long time ago that we'd never be rich. But now it's not a matter of not getting rich. We're looking at filing for bankruptcy if we stay," she said.

As her second son George sat dozing on her lap, his battle against sleep lost, Jessica talked about wanting to make enough money to pay for her sons' educations and for her and Tom's retirements—something she said is impossible now.

"If we stay, we would have nothing to show for it," said Jessica. "If I didn't have a husband and children, I wouldn't leave."

Jessica said the only way she could afford to keep practicing medicine in Viroqua would be to set full-time hours, "and then," she added, "I'd never see my children."

Jessica and Tom's other children are Charlie, 5; Henry, 2; and John, 6 months.

She and Tom try to alternate their hours so that their children do not have baby sitters all of the time.

But being on-call and rushing out at all hours of the day or night go with the territory—especially in a rural area, said Jessica. She said their phone rings between six and 12 times a day with demands for her medical attention.

Getting a reliable baby sitter who is willing to also work on-call, said Jessica, can be expensive. Sometime, she added, it is not even possible.

Jessica recalled how one brisk fall evening, the phone rang while whe was bathing her three sons, calling her to an emergency. John hadn't been born yet.

Tom wasn't home to take care of the boys.

"I had no car because Tom had it. So," she said, "I had to load the three little boys into a stroller and dash down the street to the hospital . . . I left them with a nurse and kept running down the hall to the patient.

"That would have never happened in a city," said Jessica.

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

What also would have never happened in a city happened six months ago, when her youngest son was born.

While she was having mild contractions of her own, Jessica delivered another woman's child. She also delivered one baby each day she was in the hospital after her baby was born.

Jessica was quick to add, "I didn't feel that I was imposed on at all. Mine was an easy delivery."

Jessica said "my life is centered around my patients, my kids, my husband and my house."

The Ambelangs' belief in sustaining rural life in their community extends into where they spend their money.

"We have made a policy of not buying out of town unless we can't find it here," Jessica said. "We are trying to return the money we earn here to the community. That goes for Westby, too."

They have carried that attitude into their considerations about where to relocate their medical practices.

Jessica said they want to stay in Wisconsin—or at least within a four-or-five-hour drive from their families in Sparta and Norwalk. But La Crosse is not a likely site because, Jessica said, "I think if we went to La Crosse we would have patients follow us there and it would put a drain on the local hospitals and doctors."

As she nudged George gently, needing to wake him so she could see a patient at the hospital, Jessica returned to her feelings about leaving Viroqua:

"I feel like a traitor abandoning the rural areas. The federal government has abandoned the rural people. So has the state. If I didn't have a husband and children, I wouldn't leave."

George was awake, ready to go with his mom.●

BUDGET SCOREKEEPING REPORT

● Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I hereby submit to the Senate, the budget scorekeeping report for this week, prepared by the Congressional Budget Office in response to section 5 of the first budget resolution for fiscal year 1986. This report also serves as the scorekeeping report for the purposes of section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act, as amended.

I ask that the report be printed in the RECORD.

The report follows:

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, April 8, 1986.

Hon. PETE V. DOMENICI,
Chairman, Committee on the Budget,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The attached report shows the effects of Congressional action on the budget for fiscal year 1986. The estimated totals of budget authority, outlays, and revenues are compared to the appropriate or recommended levels contained in the most recent budget resolution, S. Con. Res. 32. This report meets the requirements for Senate scorekeeping of Section 5 of S. Con. Res. 32 and is current through March 27, 1986. The report is submitted under Section 308(b) and in aid of Section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act, as amended.

No changes have occurred since my last report.

With best wishes,
Sincerely,
RUDOLPH G. PENNER,
Director.

FISCAL YEAR 1986 CBO WEEKLY SCOREKEEPING REPORT FOR THE U.S. SENATE AS OF MARCH 27, 1986

[In billions of dollars]

	Budget authority	Outlays	Revenues	Debt subject to limit
Current level [1]	1,057.1	980.7	778.6	2,007.9
Budget resolution, S. Con. Res. 32	1,069.7	967.6	795.7	[2] 2,078.7
Current level is:
Over resolution by		13.1
Under resolution by	12.6		17.1	109.7

[1] The current level represents the estimated revenue and direct spending effects (budget authority and outlays) of all legislation that Congress has enacted in this or previous sessions or sent to the President for his approval. In addition, estimates are included of the direct spending effects for all entitlement or other programs requiring annual appropriations under current law even though the appropriations have not been made. The current level excludes the revenue and direct spending effects of legislation that is in earlier stages of completion, such as reported from a Senate Committee or passed by the Senate. The current level of debt subject to limit reflects the latest U.S. Treasury information on public debt transactions.

[2] The current statutory debt limit is $2,078.7 billion.

BINGHAMTON HIGH SCHOOL PATRIOTS

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, among the many great schools in New York, one is especially proud today. Binghamton High School, home of the Patriots basketball team, now celebrates the culmination of a tremendous 25–1 season.

Mr. President, I share in the pride Binghamton feels for its team today, and I ask that, in recognition of the accomplishments of this very special group of young people, an article from last week's Binghamton Press & Sun-Bulletin, entitled "Pats Give Binghamton a New Identity," be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

[From the Binghamton Press & Sun-Bulletin, Mar. 26, 1986]

PATS GIVE BINGHAMTON A NEW IDENTITY

(By John W. Fox)

"I bet now when someone says Binghamton, they'll all know who we are."

Steve Brundage, who made the proclamation after Binghamton High's ultimate basketball victory on Sunday, may never again find himself the first person quoted in the top story on the front page of a daily newspaper.

Brundage has been an integral part of the Patriots' whole for two seasons, despite what the playing-time stats may say. And his remark could be that of Everyman.

Every city, town and hamlet yearns for identity. Sports is often the only avenue.

Who had heard of Cut'n Shoot, Texas, before the brief challenge by a heavyweight fighter named Roy Harris? Or of French Lick, Ind., until Larry Bird ventured out?

Some places have race cars to thank. What few would know of a bend in the River Sarthe, except for 24 Hours of LeMans? Or recognize an interior Florida milk stop, except for its 12 Hours of Sebring?

Add now the annual 19½ Hours of Binghamton, to which Brundage referred. It takes place in late March on the Glens Falls Civic Center playing court, in one reviewer's words when The Riceman Cometh, from 9 p.m. on a Saturday night until the checkered flag shortly before 4:30 the next afternoon.

Binghamton surely was not an unknown city, just a misspelled city, before its current high school athletic dynasties. However, in the quest for identity, nearly all of us pray that it be favorable identity, not the monkey on the back that Apalachin and Three-Mile Island still live with.

Binghamton has not been fortunate in that respect. Its two most protracted national mentions of the last quarter century have been the chemical contamination of the State Office Building and the tragic deaths in Binghamton General Hospital's "salt babies" mixup.

On the positive front, what? The senate majority leader in Albany is ordinarily identified by the media as being from Binghamton. The professional hockey team's games and won-lost standing appear daily in the newspapers of at least 12 other U.S. and Canadian cities with a provincial interest in the American Hockey League. In maybe 200 to 300 papers, "Binghamton State" shares one line of small print for some 25 basketball games a year.

After that, the going gets tougher. Granted, Rod Serling came from here, and Elmar Oliveira, Singer-Link and Security Mutual live here, but the association is infrequent in national press.

But for week-in, week-out identity in big, boldface type, what has Binghamton ever had to equal Section C, Page 8 in yesterday's editions of USA Today for the last five months. First, late-developing inclusion in that paper's national "Super 25" of high-school football teams. Then, overlapping the latter for a couple of weeks, the similar basketball rankings.

There it was yesterday, in almost quarter-inch-deep letters and numerals: "13, Binghamton, NY (25–1) . . ."

The five lines of small print that follow succinctly complete the season saga of the Messrs. Rice, Coleman, Tolerson, Middlebrooks, Mack, et al, et Brundage—straitjacketing previously unbeaten Hempstead and New York City champion Brooklyn Lincoln.

No reason to cry over spilt milk, but at the time of its one late-January stumble at Vestal, Binghamton was No. 4, ahead of Camden, NJ, the current top banana. Just multiply those weekly bold letters by the USA Today's daily circulation of roughly three million copies, coast to coast, and it may put the Patriots' national "ink" in contention for the all-time high to sports recognition with a Binghamton attachment.

When baseball players such as Whitey Ford and Thurman Munson made rapid risers to stardom, writers often referred to their coming up from the Yankees farmclub in Binghamton (the one that played in Johnson City!), but such a printed association was short-lived.

Number one in sport page credits for Binghamton would surely have been former heavyweight champion Jack Sharkey, had he not deserted Clinton Street for Boston before becoming a professional boxer. As it is, No. 1 probably belongs to the stable of horses—Kentucky Derby winner Exterminator, Sun Beau, etc.—whose owner without fail as identified as Willis Sharpe Kilmer of Binghamton.

Compared to horsemen and boxers, athletes in team sports are far less commonly identified by hometown. So Bill Hallahan's World Series pitching feats were those strictly of a St. Cardinal, not a Binghamton resident, in publications outside Broome County.

When this Monday's out-of-town papers reached local newsstands, one lingering fear was dispelled. With Bridgehampton High—mighty little Suffolk County neighbor of Southampton and Westhampton—romping to the state Class D title in the first half of the Sunday double-header. I shuddered that possessive New York writers would applaud "Binghampton" for completing a sweep for Long Island.

However, just as Steve Brundage bet, the metropolitan papers knew "who we are." The Post's Steve Barenfield, for instance "(Lincoln High's) Railsplitters ran into a buzzsaw called Binghamton and were over powered."

Newsday's Mike Candel wrote: ". . . Hempstead was only a pretender to the throne. Binghamton has the real King."

The New York Times even magnified the Patriots' proportions. Its report described MVP Rice as "burly."

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

● Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, with regard to S. 2031, a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to release restrictions on certain property located in Calcasieu Parish, LA, I request that the Congressional Budget Office estimate of the costs of this measure be printed in the RECORD at this point. The cost estimate was not available at the time the report was filed.

The estimate follows:

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, March 27, 1986.

Hon. JAMES A. MCCLURE,
Chairman, Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, U.S. Senate, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has reviewed S. 2031, a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to release restrictions on certain property located in Calcasieu Parish, Louisiana, and for other purposes, as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, March 26, 1986.

The bill would release public purpose and other restrictions on several parcels of land located in Calcasieu Parish, Louisiana. Mineral rights to the land would continue to be reserved to the federal government. Based on information from the Department of the Interior, we estimate that enactment of this bill would result in no cost to the federal government or to the state or local governments.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them.

With best wishes,
Sincerely,
RUDOLPH G. PENNER,
Director.●

NBC PROGRAM ADDRESSES THE NEEDS OF TEENS

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I want to commend NBC for their new after-school news program called "Main Street," which premiered late last year. This program, aimed at teenagers, features hard news as well as human interest and trivia. It is broadcast monthly on Tuesdays—4–5 p.m., e.s.t. "Main Street" is the first network news effort directed at the needs and desires of young people.

The host of "Main Street" is Bryant Gumbel, coanchor of "Today." His experience and personality provide the setting necessary to promote active participation by the teenage correspondents. Several youths, from different areas and different backgrounds, discuss their feelings about an issue with Mr. Gumbel after each major segment of the program.

The stories are reported as seen through young people's eyes. In addition to the hard news, the program provides features on personalities who interest young people, such as Bruce Springsteen. The object of the show is to inspire young people to watch and learn—to consider the news as important and as interesting as entertainment television.

The program has already covered a range of issues, from AIDS and its effect on schools in America to warning labels on rock and roll records that contain sexually explicit lyrics. These issues are serious and deserve attention, not only from adults, but from the young people whom they affect.

The key to the success of "Main Street" is the belief that teenagers should be aware and actively involved in the issues of today. The program provides an opportunity for different opinions to be heard. In return, the teenagers receive the respect they have earned. NBC has opened up a whole new and unique opportunity for teenagers. Hopefully, this program will also spark new interest and awareness among adults. It is up to every American to realize that the future of our Nation lies in the hands of our youth. We cannot ignore their problems and "Main Street" has begun to take an interest in helping them and society address these problems.

Again, I commend those at NBC who had the wisdom to undertake the "Main Street" project.●

S. 1625—CONGRESSIONAL OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

● Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, with regard to S. 1625, a bill to permit the use and leasing of certain public lands in Nevada by the University of Nevada, I request that the Congressional Budget Office estimate of the costs of this measure be printed in the RECORD at this point. The cost estimate was not available at the time the report was filed.

The material follows:

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
U.S. CONGRESS,
Washington, DC, March 27, 1986.

Hon. JAMES A. MCCLURE,
Chairman, Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has reviewed S. 1625, a bill to permit the use and leasing of certain public lands in Nevada by the University of Nevada, as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, March 26, 1986.

The bill would override a public purpose use clause on 470 acres of former public lands now owned by the University of Nevada to allow the university to use the land for a research and development center. Based on our review, we estimate that enactment of this bill would result in no cost to the federal government or to state or local governments.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them.

With best wishes,
Sincerely,

(For RUDOLPH G. PENNER.)●

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

SOVIET JEWRY

● Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I am pleased to take this opportunity to join with my colleagues in expressing the concern of the U.S. Congress about the fate of Soviet Jewry. Each of the past 3 years, I have participated in the congressional call to conscience vigil in order to dramatize the plight of those who have been denied the right to emigrate or have been imprisoned by the Government of the Soviet Union. I believe that this type of sustained, coordinated effort by Members of Congress is very effective in letting the Government know of our deep concern about certain Soviet policies.

I am tremendously concerned about the emigration policy of the Soviet Union. There are so many Soviet citizens who have been denied permission to leave that country to live with their families outside the Soviet Union. These practices of the Soviet Government are particularly troublesome because they are usually related to the religious practices of the citizens involved. Persecution against Jews and Christians has increased in recent months, and we in the United States must speak out about this situation. As a number of my colleagues and I pointed out in a March 11 letter to our President, anti-Semitism is part of the military indoctrination program in the Soviet Union. Viewings encouraging this line of thinking are often offerings of prime-time television, also under Communist control. The harassment, beatings, arrests and jailings of many Jews for simply attempting to leave the country continue to go on without any account having to be given. These people continue to struggle to maintain any semblance of Jewish social, religious or cultural life while they are trapped in the Soviet Union, always living under the fear of being discovered.

Most of us are aware of the alarming decrease in the number of Jews who have been allowed to emigrate from the Soviet Union during the past few years. This type of persecution and discrimination continues to increase dramatically. It is critical that in the midst of ongoing discussions between our Government and that of the Soviet Union, we must not forget our responsibility to the "refuseniks." There are approximately 2.5 million Soviet Jewish citizens that are the targets of undeserved pressure by their Government, and 400,000 persons that are struggling to reach Israel. President Reagan must especially insist that those in the Soviet Union who openly express their Jewish identity are not isolated from any ongoing contact with outside Jewish cultural and religious institutions.

The continuance of negotiations between President Reagan and Soviet Leader Gorbachev is crucial. It has proven encouraging that in the past, there has been a correlation between levels of emigration from the Soviet Union and relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. In times of positive relations between our two Governments, emigration levels have been higher than in times of poor relations. It will take all of our hopes and prayers to ensure the continuance of these peacetime discussions.

There are strong signals being sent back and forth between the White House and the Kremlin that every issue is negotiable. That does offer a glimmer of hope, but what is really needed is substantive policy changes. Even after the Geneva summit, it is difficult to see any real change in the policy of Soviet emigration. Nor is there any promise or indication that there will be a more open policy in the future. Last year, only 1,140 Jews were allowed to be free to live in the country of their choosing.

I urge the President to press for the release of these prisoners of conscience. Those citizens who desire to emigrate to a Western democratic country should be granted that freedom. We, as representatives from our Nation's 50 States, must continue to advocate this freedom which every person in every country is entitled to. In my own State of Oklahoma, there are several groups, affiliated with national and international organizations, who speak out and actively challenge Soviet policy regarding emigration.

Furthermore, the release of these prisoners would enhance the goodwill between our two countries and would inevitably facilitate the lessening of tensions including the ongoing discussion of arms control. Mr. President, we do have a stake in this battle, and I urge my colleagues' continuing concern to bring justice to those so unfairly oppressed.●

SOCIAL SECURITY COLA

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today in support of vital legislation for the senior citizens of this country. My distinguished colleague, Mr. HEINZ, has introduced Senate Resolution 375, of which I am an original cosponsor, to insure that senior citizens continue to receive Social Security benefits which take into account the rate of inflation. I wholeheartedly support this legislation, and I am pleased that Mr. HEINZ has brought this matter to the attention of the Senate.

Currently, Social Security beneficiaries receive a cost-of-living adjustment when the consumer price index rises by at least 3 percent in a single year. However, without a 3-percent increase in the CPI, Social Security benefits receive no adjustment for an increase in the cost of living. No cost of living adjustment is made for recipients until the combined CPI for one or more years is greater than 3 percent.

This type of system could create a great deal of hardship for beneficiaries. A 2.9-percent increase in the cost of living has no immediate impact on a recipient's payment. A beneficiary would be forced to stretch last year's payments to meet this year's prices.

In addition, a postponed COLA would result in a long-term loss to the Federal Government. Beneficiaries who retire the year of the postponed COLA would eventually drain the Social Security trust funds of a greater amount than they would have had there not been a postponement of the cost-of-living adjustment. When these individuals receive their first year of payments, their COLA would include compensation for inflation that occurred before their retirement.

A 1985 report by the actuary's office at the Social Security Administration states that postponing the COLA would result in a long-term net loss because the extra COLA is permanently included in the benefits received. An August 1985 report from the office of the actuary of the Social Security Administration estimates that the cost of this COLA trigger could be 0.02 percent, approximateley $364 million per year at 1986 levels.

Furthermore, no cost-of-living increase would cancel scheduled increases in the taxable wage base. No COLA would mean less taxable income and less income for the Social Security trust funds.

Triggering the COLA was a device designed to cut administrative costs. With increased computerization, these savings are not very substantial. There does not appear to be a single legitimate reason for continuing the 3.9 percent COLA trigger.

Congress realized the futility of postponing the COLA in 1984 and voted to cancel the COLA trigger. I believe we should make that decision a permanent one. I encourage my colleague to give this proposal the same support it received 2 years ago.

Thank you, Mr. President.●

DOD's GROWING "BLACK" BUDGET

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President a recent article by David Morrison in the National Journal shows the alarming increase in the Pentagon's top secret spending accounts, commonly referred to as the "black" budget. This budget, containing items so highly classified that none but a very few legislators can review them, has grown from $5.5 billion in 1981 to an estimated $22 billion in the 1987 request—an increase of over 300 percent.

This figure represents 7 percent of the Pentgon's budget authority request that is effectively removed from congressional scrutiny and oversight. This $22 billion equals roughly 60 percent of the $38 billion deficit reduction package the Congressional Budget Office [CBO] has identified will be necessary to reach the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings target of a $144 billion deficit in fiscal year 1987. Now some of this money probably goes to projects that deserve funding; some clearly does not. My point is that we simply don't know. We could well be wasting huge sums of money that should be directed at reducing the deficit. And we don't have a clue whether this money is well spent, or whether we need to undertake this or that project.

A pattern has emerged in the Reagan defense requests. Each year, since 1981, the administration has requested more and more "black" funding. Many of the projects rumored to be under lock and key ought to be at least discussed. Should we research this kind of weapon? Do we need that kind of requirement? What are the arms control and foreign policy implications?

We're not talking about discussing blueprints. We're talking about Congress' role in shaping defense policy. The Weinberger strategy seems to be one of classifying projects and budget figures in order to stave off debate over a growing number of highly questionable programs. We all recognize the need for strict security controls for certain defense programs, but this increasing classification is not warranted. In many cases, it is likely that the Soviet KGB knows more about these supersecret efforts than the American public. Who then are we keeping secrets from? This is not a stellar example of democracy in action.

The irony is that many items of interest to the Pentagon are now receiving more attention by virtue of their secrecy than they otherwise would have received. Questions about the Stealth advanced technology bomber are now widespread, for example, in large measure because DOD refuses to comment on budget projections and technical assessments. Some of this criticism may be unjustified; some may not. Until the Pentagon becomes more forthcoming on its "black" spending, this controversy will continue. Effective congressional oversight is crucial, and in many cases this involves the public's right to know as well.

Mr. President, I ask that Mr. Morrison's article be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

[From the National Journal, Mar. 1, 1986]

PENTAGON'S TOP SECRET "BLACK" BUDGET HAS SKYROCKETED DURING REAGAN YEARS

(By David C. Morrison)

The United States, most observers would agree, maintains one of the most open defense establishments in the world, even if only by comparison with its major foreign counterparts.

Just one manifestation—and guarantor—of this remarkable degree of military disclosure is the small army of Pentagon officials who parade each year before the 19 congressional subcommittees with direct oversight responsibility for defense matters to explain and justify, often in nitpicking detail, their weapons programs and operating plans.

The 40-odd volumes of printed testimony these hearings produce each budget season, even though carefully sanitized to remove what the services regard as sensitive data, divulge a wealth of information about current U.S. military affairs to anyone dogged enough to plow through thousands of pages of fine print. The Defense Department itself consumes uncounted reams of paper every year churning out reports on its budgets and activities.

Members of Congress, outside analysts and a small handful of Pentagon insiders complain, however, that this generally observed tradition of military openness is being undermined by an unsettling new budgetary trend.

Since the Reagan Administration arrived in Washington five years ago, a steadily growing proportion of the Pentagon's budget has been funneled into highly classified programs—the so-called black budget. Defense policy analysts may disagree on the exact size and rate of increase of the "black" defense budget, but few dispute that it has grown significantly over the past half-decade.

A review of Defense Department budget reports by National Journal confirms the surge in secret defense spending—to more that $22 billion in the fiscal 1987 budget request—a 300 per cent increase over the $5.5 billion in 1981.

The amount of classified funds earmarked for research and development (R&D) and procurement projects that the Pentagon declines to enumerate in specific budgetary line items has jumped from $891.9 million in fiscal 1981 to $8.6 billion in the fiscal 1987 request, a tenfold increase.

That $8.6 billion—a lot of money by most yardsticks, but only 3 per cent of the Defense Department's $311.6 billion request for fiscal 1987—nevertheless constitutes only one piece of the Pentagon's classified budget puzzle.

The 1987 defense budget also contains almost $14 billion worth of another kind of black money: programs for which the department enumerates the budget request in specific line items—generally worth billions of dollars each and bearing either code-word nicknames or vague, nondescriptive titles—and for which it does not publicly reveal the purpose.

The dollar value of five such large line items in the Air Force procurement budget has jumped from $3.8 billion in fiscal 1981 to $11.5 billion in the request for 1987; that's an increase of more than 200 per cent, or double the percentage increase in the Pentagon's total procurement budget over the same period.

Additional pockets of black dollars are reportedly tucked away in the operations and maintenance and military personel budgets, although the amounts of those funds are difficult to gauge.

The Defense Department, not surprisingly, maintains an official stance of strict silence on the growth in black budgeting and the reasons for its growth. "Nobody here ever discusses that aspect of the budget," said a Pentagon spokesman. "That's an area we cannot talk about."

Other players in the Washington budget game, however, are more vocal in commenting on the black hole that is rapidly widening in the Pentagon budget.

"You are talking about 20 per cent of the [defense R&D] budget being hidden and, of that 20 per cent, I would say most of it is on the basis of national security, but a lot of it doesn't belong there." Anthony R. Battista, the staff director of the House Armed Services Research and Development Subcommittee, warned members in a briefing last March. "That is the kind of stuff you got to pay close attention to this year, because the number and scope of the black programs is growing at a phenomenal rate."

Defense reporter Richard C. Barnard has written on several occasions about the Pentagon's black budget, first for Defense Week and more recently as editor of a new weekly, Defense News.

"The problem was first pointed out to me in 1982 by a deputy assistant secretary of Defense," Barnard said. "We were discussing other matters and he said, 'By the way, if you want to see a problem we have around here, you should take a look at the black programs.' His main objection was that at least a third of this stuff was black to make it easy [to manage] or to cover somebody's ass."

One concern of critics is that through black budgeting, the Pentagon and its contractors might be attempting to end-run normal procurement procedures. Others however, maintain that the defense acquisition process is so hopelessly screwed up that shielding programs from the multilayered oversight bureaucracy that typically manages or micromanages weapons production actually yields significant cost and performance benefits.

Precisely because classified weapons programs are scrutinized by fewer agencies and individuals, however, there is worry in some quarters that black budgeting might permit misguided programs to flourish while facilitating the king of procurement abuse that has generated so much juicy fodder for headline writers and Pentagon-bashers in recent years.

"In part," said Gordon Adams', director of the Defense Budget Project, a Washington-based research organization, "this whole problem of enormous growth of black programs has to do with a larger issue, which is the extent to which [the Defense Department] does not trust Congress and the public. There's a tremendous paranoia these days about what Congress will do with your program and what the public will think about it."

These concerns become especially acute as the roster of secret projects expands beyond spy satellites and other traditionally black intelligence-gathering activities to include such big-ticket strategic nuclear weapons as the radar-evading Advanced Technology Bomber (ATB), also called stealth, and even tactical cruise missiles.

"I would prefer to see more of it [black money] moved into the public domain," Les Aspin. D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said in an interview. "They have programs in there that it's time they were moved out into the open."

HIDING THE FUNDS

Black budgeting is by no means a new phenomenon. Some Pentagon projects have always been financed secretly and run strictly behind closed, triple-locked doors. The U.S. photoreconnaissance satellite program; for one, while generally known to the outside world, was not officially acknowledged from 1962, when a special secrecy directive was signed by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, until 1978, when President Carter alluded to the two decades-old program in a speech designed to bolster support for the verifiability of the pending second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

The National Reconnaissance Office, which manages satellite and aircraft reconnaissance for a variety of user agencies, has yet to be acknowledged even though its existence has been known ever since its name was inadvertently mentioned in a 1973 congressional report. The office reportedly has an annual budget of $3 billion-$4 billion.

Almost as secretive is the National Security Agency. Charged with overseeing all U.S. signals intelligence gathering activities, the agency functions as a sort of global electronic vacuum cleaner, intercepting a wide range of communications, radar and weapons test telemetry signals. Estimates of its annual budget range from $5 billion-$10 billion.

Funds for the agency and for the reconnaissance office, as well as for the CIA, are reportedly tucked away somewhere in the Defense Department's black coffers. The budgetary pockets many analysts believe are likely repositories for these intelligence-related dollars are four big Air Force procurement line items labeled special programs, special update programs, selected activities and special update program—and another line item in that service's R&D budget called special activities. All told, those five items account for $9.6 billion in the fiscal 1987 Air Force budget request.

John E. Pike, a defense analyst for the Federation of American Scientists who spends much of his time studying obscure Defense Department documents, contends that the $4.1 billion selected activities line item holds operating funds for the intelligence agencies.

"The Air Force Cost and Planning Factors Manual gives you outlay rates for the various procurement categories, and they break it down by chocolate [classified] and vanilla [unclassified]," Pike said. "The outlay rate for 'classified Air Force other procurement' is like 85 percent in the first year. An outlay rate like that screams 'agency operating budget.'"

The average outlay rate—the pace at which new defense appropriations are spent—for the first year of an actual procurement program is 13 percent. Funds for personnel and operations are spent much more quickly, lending support to Pike's thesis that the Air Force's selected activities include a lot more than miscellaneous procurement.

Most experts interviewed believe that intelligence and reconnaissance programs were quite properly conducted under the cloak of secrecy, although some felt the extreme degree of secrecy—the National Reconnaissance Office classifying its letterhead, for instance—often bordered on the absurd. Those same sources, however, were generally less tolerant of the thick veil of secrecy that has been drawn over the budgetary details of the stealth fighter, bomber and cruise missile programs.

"The way we piss away money, how do the budget numbers mean anything?" asked Paul Hoven, a research associate at the Project on Military Procurement, a Washington public-interest group. "If we buy a $7,000 coffee pot, how can anyone tell anything just by looking at the budget?"

Combing defense budget documents looking for telltale traces of stealth money has become a popular sport in Washington and on Wall Steet. The heavy betting this year on where advance procurement money for the stealthy ATB might be cached rides on a line item in the Air Force's aircraft procurement category, entitled other production charges. The $3.7 billion request for that line item is a $1.5 billion increase over this year's allocation and a $2.9 billion jump over fiscal 1981 funds—a good sign that it is a catchall for black money.

Research funds for the ATB have long been rumored to reside in a classified Air Force R&D line item called advanced concepts. But the program element number—the six-character alphanumeric code appended to all R&D programs—indicates that advanced concepts involves some sort of black missile program. A more likely candidate for ATB funds is a line item called special improvement projects.

Both of those unhelpfully titled programs are found in the Air Force's strategic R&D budget listings, which contain eight black line items worth a total of $2.6 billion for fiscal 1987. Among them are two, called Bernie and Leo, the unknown purpose of which has been driving outside analysis mad with curiosity. Cute code names are nothing new; in the mid-1970s, Air Force stealth aircraft research was called Harvey, after the invisible rabbit in the play in that title.

The procurement line item for the secret Advanced Cruise Missile is clearly labeled, although the Air Force declines to say how much it plans to spend in fiscal 1987. Since there are only two black projects in that budget category—the other, called tactical drones, is generally thought to be the Pave Tiger, a small, unpiloted attack aircraft—it is easy to subtract out the black funds, $841.6 million, most of which can be assumed to be for the stealthy new cruise missile.

Also stashed away somewhere in the defense budget is research and production money for the secret F-19 stealth fighter and the Army-Air Force Joint Tactical Cruise Missile, designed to attack Soviet targets far behind the lines in a European war. (See NJ, 1/4/86, p. 22.)

Along with $548.8 million for black intelligence and communications projects, the Navy R&D budget contains another half-billion dollars for 15 research projects with such code names as Chalk Banyan, Link Hazel and Retract Maple, all thought to involve secret submarine silencing and detection efforts.

The Army procurement budget contains $251 million for such black electronics programs as Trojan, which 1984 congressional testimony identified as a signals intelligence collection effort. Another $100 million worth of M-1 tank cannon shells and 155-millimeter howitzer nerve gas shells have, for some reason, been blacked out.

Zeroing in on black funds concealed in the $86.4 billion operations and maintenance budget for 1987 is a more difficult undertaking. But a congressional reporting document, Justification of Estimates for Operations and Maintenance, reveals at least one black item; $158.7 million this year for something elliptically termed the Special Tactical Unit Detachment.

Those millions, apparently, finance operations at "Dreamland," a restricted site on the enormous expanse of Nellis Air Force Base near Las Vegas, Nev., where the Air Force tests secret aircraft. Lt. Gen. Robert M. Bond, vice commander of the Air Force Systems Command, died two years ago in a mysterious, highly publicized crash at Dreamland.

Finding the black in the proposed $10.2 billion military construction budget is much less arduous because the Pentagon sets out the $57.5 million for secret construction in identifiable line items. Among the black projects are $2.9 million for housing at "Base Thirty," a TR-1 spy plane base at a classified overseas location, and $5.5 million for a satellite control facility at "Base Forty-Three," a secret site in the United States.

It is difficult to discern how much black money is in the Pentagon's personnel budget, $76.8 billion in the fiscal 1987 request. "The number of people who work for the [National Security Agency] is classified, and the same thing goes for the CIA," said Jeffrey T. Richelson, a professor of government at the American University and author of "The U.S. Intelligence Community" (Ballinger, 1985). "So I would suppose that there probably are black activities included in the personnel budget."

There is a great deal, obviously, that outsiders can never hope to learn about the Pentagon's black budget by deciphering open documents. "If they don't want you to find it, it's hard to find; these people are not fools," cautioned Joseph F. Campbell, an aerospace analyst for Paine Webber Group Inc. in New York.

"They screw around with those numbers," said David J. Smith, a senior analyst with Sanford C. Bernstein & Co., a New York-based broker. "Now that people are chasing it [black financing], they're putting things in there to throw them off the track."

ACCOUNTABILITY

Sources, even those with inside knowledge, disagree on the extent to which black programs are subjected to adequate oversight.

"In my experience, some of the black programs have a much more attentive level of oversight than some of the regular programs," said William J. Perry, a former Defense undersecretary for research and engineering.

"There are three reasons to have black programs," asserted Thomas S. Amlie, who works with gadfly A. Ernest Fitzgerald in the office of the Air Force assistant secretary for financial management. "One, it deserves to be black. There may be five of those, and Stealth isn't one of them. Two, you're doing something so dumb you don't want anyone to know about it. Or, three, you want to rip open the money bag at both ends and get out a big scoop shovel, because there's no accountability whatsoever."

On several recent occasions, officials have publicly aired the possibility that some black programs are established precisely to elude oversight. Such a note of caution found its way into the report issued last November by the Commission to Review Department of Defense Security Policies and Practices, chartered in the wake of the Walker family Navy spy scandal.

"The possibility exists that such programs could be established for other than security reasons," suggested the Stillwell Commission, so named after its chairman, retired Army Gen. Richard G. Stillwell; "in other words, to avoid competitive procurement processes, normal inspections and oversight or to expedite procurement actions."

Battista of the House Armed Services Committee staff lent flesh to the commission's suggestion in his briefing last spring, describing "a jamming system one year that was funded in the black world, not because of national security [because] it was developed as a white world program. It turns out they funded the losing contractor in a competition [and made the program black] so Congress wouldn't be aware of that."

A March 1983 General Accounting Office (GAO) report also uncovered cases of inappropriate program classification. The report was a review of Pentagon oversight of "carve-out" contracts written for classified programs that are supposedly of such great sensitivity that the Defense Investigative Service is relieved of its usual security inspection responsibility, which devolves instead to the Pentagon office managing the program.

The information restrictions of such programs are sweeping. According to a 1984 Pentagon memorandum, "mere knowledge of the existence of a [carve-out] contract or of its affiliation with the [black] Special Access Program is classified information." L. Brit Snider, director for information security in the office of the deputy Defense undersecretary for policy, said most black programs involve carve-out contracts.

The GAO told of a service carving out a contract only to "prelude someone from identifying the military service involved and the amount of money being spent." Several contractors and Pentagon officials, the GAO said, "told us that they thought that carve-out contracts were being used to expedite procurement and facilitate sole-source [noncompetitive contract] awards."

Hoven of the Project on Military Procurement, which acts as a conduit to the news media for Pentagon whistle blowers, maintained that "black almost tends to be synonymous with a major boner. There must be some programs that are really crest-of-the-wave kind of technology that you don't want the Russians to read about in The Washington Post. But from the [Pentagon] underground, we keep getting word that more and more problems get shifted into the black programs."

In response to concerns expressed by members of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Defense last spring. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger assured the panel that the Air Force "has always maintained both stringent management controls and independent audits of these [black] programs."

Amlie, however, after reciting a litany of contracting abuses prevalent in "white" programs, stated that "the black programs are worse, much worse, because nobody's looking over their shoulder. The few that I know something about are abominably run."

John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee and its Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee, who is conducting a long-running investigation into defense contractor ethics, also has grave concerns about accountability for black projects.

On Jan. 16, Dingell wrote to Weinberger that "the subcommittee is aware of an increasing number of abuses by the contractors involved in these 'black' programs. We have documented evidence that abuses are occurring. Secrecy is being used by the contractors as a device to cloak mischarging, overcharging and, in some cases, engaging in outright illegal activities."

The most glaring example Dingell cited was the Brousseau case, Ronald E. Brousseau Sr., a purchasing agent for Northrop Corp.'s stealth bomber program, pled guilty to fraud and bribery in 1984 after being snared in an FBI sting operation while hustling subcontractors for kickbacks. Transcripts of conversations taped by a wired informant and quoted in the U.S. Attorney's sentencing memorandum suggest that Brousseau, at least, was not impressed by the oversight of black programs.

"We don't have any heads, we don't have any supervisory people," Brousseau bragged during a May 1984 meeting "Nobody questions dollars or anything like that as long as I can show competition, whether it's true competition or courtesy [fraudulent] competition or bullshit competition."

A Northrop spokesman, queried about Brousseau, said, "We turned him in; that was our controls that got him." But the U.S. Attorney's memorandum states that Brousseau was fingered by an executive from RH Manufacturing, one of the southern California subcontractors to whom he had offered kickbacks.

Dingell said in an interview that he has been getting "generally good cooperation from Northrop folks" in his subcommittee investigation. His biggest problem, he said, lay in judging the adequacy of the disclosure filings that Northrop and other contractors working on black projects made to the Securities and Exchange Commission. In his letter to Weinberger, therefore, Dingell requested a list of all black Air Force programs worth more than $10 million and information on the auditing procedures for such contracts.

Dingell's request triggered a heated Jan. 29 letter to Weinberger from Senate Armed Services Committee chairman Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. "The increasing number of claims that the so-called 'black' programs are growing out of control and are subjected to too little oversight is a matter that I take strong exception to," Goldwater wrote. His committee, he asserted, "has subjected these programs to far more scrutiny and review than 'white' programs with comparable budgets."

Citing the success of black program procedures in "keeping information of unprecedented military value from the pages of our newspapers and the halls of the various rumor mills in town," Goldwater told Weinberger, "I think you ought to resist any, stretching of jurisdictional boundaries that expands access to these critically sensitive national security programs."

Peter D.H. Stockton, an investigator for Dingell's subcommittee, took exception to the Senator's argument. "Goldwater mischaracterizes the hell out of what Dingell is after," said Stockton. "No one's raised any question about our jurisdiction to look into how defense contractors do their business. When he says we're asking for broad access to these programs, you can see from our letter that it's really quite limited."

Concerning security, Stockton pointed to a recent lapse committed by Goldwater, who last June, after viewing the stealth prototype, disclosed to reporters that the ATB has a flying-wing configuration similar to Northrop's experimental YB-49 aircraft of the late 1940s. Further, a Senate Armed Services Committee press release last April let slip the fiscal 1986 Pershing II missile production run, which, for reasons best known to the Army, remains a classified number.

"We've been dealing very responsibly with the most sensitive information in the government—vulnerabilities in nuclear weapons production plants—and no information on that has leaked out of here," Stockton asserted. "So it's bullshit that we can't handle that stuff."

Gerry Smith, a Goldwater defense aide, declined to address recent committee security lapses but reasserted the Senator's position. "There's already too many people with their fingers in the pie," Smith said, "and it just doesn't do any good to increase that."

As to the adequacy of congressional oversight of black procurement, Arnold L. Punaro, staff director for Senate Armed Services Committee Democrats, agreed with Goldwater that black programs receive as much oversight as their unclassified counterparts. "Some people's definition of doing proper oversight is that if they don't agree with what was done, then there is no oversight," he complained.

Black programs largely fall outside of the many reporting requirements that Congress has imposed on the Pentagon. Every quarter, for example, Congress receives Selected Acquisition Reports detailing the cost growth of about 100 major weapon programs. The Defense Department, however, informed the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Defense two years ago that "the Secretary of Defense has determined that certain programs, because of their highly sensitive classification, are exempt from [the reporting] procedures."

In the House Armed Services Committee, according to chairman Aspin, black procurement is scrutinized by the Procurement and Military Nuclear Systems Subcommittee and black R&D by the Research and Development Subcommittee. Later in the authorization process, a panel that includes members of those subcommittees and members of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence looks at all of the black programs. The Pentagon, Aspin said, "is pretty forthcoming. There's always a concern about whether you're getting the full story, but that's true about any program."

One Member who has found the Pentagon less than forthcoming is Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla. He was instrumental in attaching to the fiscal 1986 defense authorization bill an amendment requiring a Defense Department report detailing costs for the Advanced Technology Bomber.

Synar was displeased with the Air Force report that arrived on Feb. 1. "Although the report is top secret and I can't discuss its contents," he said in a press release. "I can tell you that the essence of the report is only three sentences long. This is an obvious affront to Congress." The ATB cost estimate, a Synar aide said, was expressed in unadjusted fiscal 1981 dollars and was not supported by requested reliability assessment.

Synar has asked the GAO to conduct an independent audit of the bomber's costs. "I think this is typical of the attitude of the Pentagon," he charged in an interview, "and has triggered some new [congressional] interest in looking deeper into these black programs."

The Synar case and the Dingell-Goldwater tussle highlight the jurisdictional problems that can arise when Members who lack formal defense oversight responsibility seek wider access to information about projects on the Pentagon's lengthening list of black projects.

"There isn't any general rule, and that's awkward," said Russell Murray, special counselor to the House Armed Services Committee. "All Members have to vote on appropriations, and so they have a right to know what they're voting about. But at the same time, you have very properly classified development programs that you don't want bruited about by 535 Members."

Punaro of the Senate Armed Services Committee said that any Senators who want information on black programs can get it, the only issue being whether or not they have the time and interest to pursue the matter. "The same situation exists on bills that come out of other committees," he said.

Aspin said it is more difficult for House Members to get fuller disclosure on black programs. "If a Member wants to know about it because he votes on it, he should be allowed to do so," Aspin said. "We're in a tug-of-war with the Pentagon over Mike Synar on that right now."

TWO-EDGED SWORD

Whatever the merits of black programming in promoting procurement efficiency or outfoxing the Soviets, the Pentagon may find, as programs hidden in its black box continue to burgeon in size and number, that secrecy, like the truth, can be a two-edged sword.

Hiding budget projections does stifle unwanted debate. But, as is happening now with the ATB program, the very fact that the numbers are hidden becomes, in itself, an unwanted controversy. In the process, the rumored costs conceivably become vastly more inflated than the actual costs. The Pentagon, its lips firmly zipped, is powerless to decisively dispel rising speculation about a stealthy flying pork barrel.

Withholding even the most general technical information can also defuse some of the contentious wrangling about military requirements that has beset such weapons as the MX missile and the B1-B bomber while allowing officials to make almost mystical claims for performance.

In his fiscal 1987 report to Congress, for instance, Weinberger dangled the tantalizing prospect of stealth aircraft enabling the United States "to reach into the Soviet Union and destroy selectively highly valued targets." While the specifics of stealth technology are "appropriately classified," he continued, "publicly available evidence should suggest that these possibilities are not fanciful."

But persistent rumors percolating in both the liberal and conservative wings of the defense analysis community hold that the ATB might well prove an under-powered and overfinanced turkey. The Pentagon is now confronted by what promises to become a heated bomber debate with little meaningful that it can say publicly in its own defense.

In a gloomy assessment last September of the Air Force's budgetary and hardware prospects for the rest of the century, Armed Forces Journal International editor Benjamin F. Schemmer took that service to task for its "self-defeating secrecy."

Noting that one out of every five procurement dollars in the Air Force budget, and two out of every five of its R&D dollars, were slated for black programs, Schemmer worried that "so much secrecy doesn't bode well for future Air Force budgets . . . It's hard to win public support—and thus congressional votes—for programs [the Air Force] can't even name, much less brag about."●

KURT WALDHEIM TO NAZI WAR CRIMES

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I am proud to be an original cosponsor of Senate Resolution 373. I commend Senator Wilson for introducing this resolution urging the Department of Justice to review documents brought forward by the World Jewish Congress concerning former U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim. These documents indicate that Mr. Waldheim served with the Nazi Secret Service, the Abwehr, and that he was actively involved in Nazi war crimes.

The documents released by the World Jewish Congress indicate that Kurt Waldheim was part of the command staff of a German Army unit that massacred 5,000 Yugoslavs in July 1942. Mr. Waldheim has insisted that he was only a translator in the Balkans in the army of General Alexander Loehr.

Mr. President, I ask that the letters I sent on March 24 to U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III and U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar be printed in their entirety at the conclusion of my remarks. In these letters, I urge the Department of Justice to ask for all charge files compiled by the U.N. War Crimes Commission, including those on Mr. Waldheim, and that the United Nations comply with this request.

I also ask that a letter I sent to the Department of State's Bureau of European and Canadian Affairs on April 2 be printed in its entirety at the conclusion of my remarks. In this letter, I ask that the Department contact Yugoslavian officials to request that they make available to the United States copies of documents concerning Waldheim's involvement in Nazi war crimes.

On April 2, the Israeli Government asked the World Jewish Congress for its documents on Kurt Waldheim so it could begin its own investigation. Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres is quite right when he says that Mr. Waldheim must answer the questions raised by these documents.

I urge my colleagues to give Senate Resolution 373 their wholehearted support to express the united will of the Congress that our Government vigorously work to identify, investigate, and enforce our laws concerning Nazi war criminals.

The letters referred to follow:

U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC, March 24, 1986.

Hon. Edwin Messe III,
Attorney General of the United States, Department of Justice, Constitution Ave. & 10th St. N.W., Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Attorney General: It is common knowledge that there are as many as 40,000 "charge files" now being held in the United Nations archives. These files were compiled by the United Nations War Crimes Commission in the period following World War II. Although their contents have remained secret, there is considerable speculation that the evidence obtained in them will be of great help to the Office of Special Investigations, to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and to law enforcement agencies worldwide in pursuing the perpetrators of the Holocaust.

In the past, the Justice Department has requested access to these files from the United Nations Secretariat. Although access was apparently promised in 1980 to then Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti, there has been no follow through on this. With the exception of 3 files that have been turned ove for law enforcement purposes (those of Adolf Eichmann, Klaus Barbie, and Josef Mengele), the rest of the files have been kept secret.

I ask now that you formally renew the Justice Department's request for access to these files. Such a request now is especially timely in light of the recent revelation that former U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim himself has been identified as being a subject of charge file 79/724.

I am not seeking public disclosure of these files, but we do need them to be made available for legitimate law enforcement purposes. I have also written U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar asking that he grant this request when it is made by our office.

Sincerely,

Alfonse D'Amato,
United States Senator.

U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC, March 24, 1986.

Hon. Javier Perez de Cuellar,
Secretary General of the United Nations, 799 United Nations Plaza, New York, NY.

Dear Mr. Secretary General: As you know, up to 40,000 "charge files" compiled by the United Nations War Crimes Commission in the period following World War II have been kept closed to law enforcement agencies worldwide for these past 40 years. To the best of my knowledge, only three have been released: those of Adolf Eichmann, Klaus Barbie, and Josef Mengele. This secrecy has frustrated the work of such U.S. law enforcement agencies as the Office of Special Investigations and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, as well as similar organizations in other nations.

I call on you to reverse this policy, especially in light of the relevation that former U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim is a subject of charge file 79/724. I have requested U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese to make a formal request of you on behalf of the United States Justice Department that these files be opened for legitimate law enforcement purposes. It is my hope that you will be able to grant this request when made.

This is not a witch hunt. We seek the opening of the entire charge file archive for legitimate law enforcement purposes.

Sincerely,

Alfonse D'Amato,
United States Senator.

U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC, April 2, 1986.

Hon. Rozanne Ridgeway,
Assistant Secretary, Bureau of European and Canadian Affairs, Department of State, Washington, DC.

Dear Secretary Ridgeway: Last month, documents were made public which indicate that former United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim served with the Nazi Secret Service, the Abwehr, and his involvement in war crimes. I ask that you contact Yugoslavian officials and request that they make available to the United States copies of documents concerning Waldheim's involvement in Nazi war crimes.

Various press reports indicate the existence of these documents, and that they are in Yugoslavian possession. In fact, the Yugoslavian government made these documents available for scrutiny by selected members of the press, but did not allow the documents to be copied. In view of the urgent public interest in this case, I strongly believe that these documents should be obtained and made available to responsible authorities in the United States.

As you are aware, participation in Nazi war crimes is grounds for exclusion of an individual from entry into the United States under law. Accordingly, you should be taking steps to gather evidence on this issue to make an informed determination concerning Waldheim's suitability to enter the United States. Because of the pendency of the Austrian Presidential election and Waldheim's candidacy for that office, it is all the more urgent that all available evidence be gathered and assessed in a timely manner.

I look forward to hearing from you soon concerning this urgent and very important matter.

Sincerely,

Alfonse D'Amato,
U.S. Senator.●

NAUM AND INNA MEIMAN: A TREATY WHICH CAN BE PREVENTED

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, I want to call to the attention of my colleagues the dire case of two Soviet Jews, Naum and Inna Meiman.

I spoke to Naum a few weeks ago and he was extremely concerned that their phone had been disconnected. Inna is suffering from cancer and is in constant pain and danger. Without a telephone, the Meimans are even more isolated in case of an emergency.

The Meimans applied to leave the Soviet Union over 10 years ago and have been refused permission to go to Israel many times. The Soviets maintain that Naum is a security risk because he did "secret" research work 25 years ago. Naum correctly asserts that any "classified" work that he may have performed is outrageously out of date.

All the Meimans wish to do is to spend their last remaining days in the land of their fathers and mothers—Israel.

I urge the Soviet Government to restore phone service and to permit the Meimans to emigrate.●

REAUTHORIZATION OF WORKSHOP ELIGIBILITY FOR GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS

● Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise today in support of legislation which promotes sheltered workshops for the blind and handicapped. I commend my colleague, Mr. Weicker, for introducing this worthy legislation.

S. 2147 reestablishes the eligibility of sheltered workshops for the blind and handicapped to compete for Small Business contracts with the Federal Government. Sheltered workshops are nonprofit organizations licensed by the Department of Labor which hire at least 75 percent of their work force from the handicapped and blind. Work centers for the handicapped citizens of this country cannot compete with large companies. Work centers, if looked at realistically, are nothing more than small businesses.

Currently, sheltered workshops are allowed, under provisions of the Javits-Wagner-O'Day Act, to request that certain services or commodities be set aside permanently and placed on a "procurement" list. If the list is approved, the Government must purchase these goods exclusively from sheltered workshops.

These workshops, however, are currently excluded from bidding on Federal Government projects that are not set aside because they are nonprofit organizations. S. 2147 would restore the eligibility which existed from 1981–83, during which time workshops successfully bid on $6.7 million of contracts out of a total of $38 billion awarded under the Small Business Act.

The Javits-Wagner-O'Day Act provides approximately $250 million a year in business to workshops. Workshops, however, complain that the application process is too long and too complicated, and that they need a speedier, more efficient process in order to compete in the "spot" market for Government contracts. A recent example of how the process is not working occurred when a sheltered workshop was disqualified from a contract with Hill Air Force Base in the State of Utah, even though its bid of $26,650 was almost $5,000 lower than the next lowest bidder. As a result of the loss of contracts like this, disabled workers who were making quality goods at competitive prices are gradually being laid off.

I am pleased, that Mr. Weicker has recognized the importance of this problem. Allowing these nonprofit employers of the blind and handicapped to operate as normal small businesses is the only feasible way to promote sheltered workshops.●

PROPOSED ARMS SALES

● Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, section 36(b) of the Arms Export Control Act requires that Congress receive prior notification of proposed arms sales under that act in excess of $50 million or, in the case of major defense equipment as defined in the act, those in excess of $14 million. Upon such notification, the Congress has 30 calendar days during which the sale may be reviewed. The provision stipulates that, in the Senate, the notification of proposed sales shall be sent to the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

In keeping with the committee's intention to see that such information is available to the full Senate, I ask to have printed in the Record at this point the notifications which have been received. The classified annexes referred to in several of the covering letters are available to Senators in the office of the Foreign Relations Committee, room SD-423.

The material follows:

Defense Security Assistance Agency,
Washington, DC, April 8, 1986.

[In reply refer to: I-00895/86ct]

Hon. Richard C. Lugar,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Relations, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Chairman: Pursuant to the reporting requirements of Section 36(b)(1) of the Arms Export Control Act, we are forwarding herewith Transmittal No. 86-27 and under separate cover the classified annex thereto. This Transmittal concerns the Department of the Air Force's proposed letter(s) of Offer to the People's Republic of China for defense articles and services estimated to cost $550 million. Shortly after this letter is delivered to your office, we plan to notify the news media of the unclassified portion of this Transmittal.

Sincerely,

Glenn A. Rudd,
Acting Director.

[Transmittal No. 86-27]

Notice of Proposed Issuance of Letter of Offer Pursuant to Section 36(b)(1) of the Arms Export Control Act

(i) Prospective Purchaser: People's Republic of China.

(ii) Total Estimated Value:

	Million
Major Defense Equipment*	$412
Other	138
Total	550

*As defined in section 47(6) of the Arms Export Control Act.

(iii) Description of Articles for Services Offered: Fifty-five integrated avionics system kits, support equipment, training and system installation.

(iv) Military Department: Air Force (SAA).

(v) Sales Commission, Fee, etc., Paid, Offered, or Agreed to be Paid: None.

(vi) Sensitivity of Technology Contained in the Defense Articles or Defense Services Proposed to be Sold: See Annex under separate cover.

(vii) Section 28 Report: Case not included in Section 28 report.

(viii) Date Report Delivered to Congress: April 8, 1986.

Policy Justification

PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA—INTEGRATED AVIONICS SYSTEM KITS

The Government of the People's Republic of China (PRC) has requested the purchase of 55 integrated avionics system kits, support equipment, training and system installation. The estimated cost is $550 million.

This sale will contribute to the foreign policy and national security of the United States by helping to improve the security of a friendly country which has been an important force for political stability and economic progress in Asia and the world.

These integrated avionics system kits will be used by the PRC to modernize fifty F-8 interceptor aircraft. This sale will provide the PRC with certain defensive capabilities. The PRC will have no difficulty absorbing these avionics system kits into its armed forces.

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

The sale of this equipment and support will not affect the basic military balance in the region.

The prime contractor for procurement of these kits will be a U.S. aerospace manufacturer to be selected by a USAF source selection board.

This sale will require the assignment of 25 U.S. contractor personnel in the PRC for a minimum of nine months; eleven of these 25 contractor personnel will remain in the PRC for three years. Up to five USAF personnel will be in the PRC from one to six years on temporary or continuing assignments.

There will be no adverse impact on U.S. defense readiness as a result of this sale. All equipment will be from new procurement.

Defense Security Assistance Agency,
Washington, DC, April 8, 1986.

Hon. Richard C. Lugar,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Relations, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Chairman: Pursuant to the reporting requirements of Section 36(b)(1) of the Arms Export Control Act, we are forwarding herewith Transmittal No. 86-28 and under separate cover the classificed annex thereto. This Transmittal concerns the Department of the Army's proposed Letter(s) of Offer to Pakistan for defense articles and services estimated to cost $20 million. Soon after this letter is delivered to your office, we plan to notify the news media of the unclassified portion of this Transmittal.

Sincerely,

Glenn A. Rudd,
Acting Director.

[Transmittal No. 86-28]

Notice of Proposed Issuance of Letter of Offer Pursuant to Section 36(b)(1) of the Arms Export Control Act

(i) Prospective Purchaser: Pakistan.

(ii) Total Estimated Value:

	Million
Major Defense Equipment*	$20
Other	0
Total	20

*As defined in Section 47(6) of the Arms Export Control Act.

(iii) Description of Articles or Services Offered: Two thousand thirty I-TOW missiles, including 30 to be expended during Fly-to-Buy program.

(iv) Military Department: Army (VFU).

(v) Sales Commission, Fee, etc., Paid, Offered, or Agreed to be Paid: None.

(vi) Sensitivity of Technology Contained in the Defense Articles or Defense Services Proposed to be Sold: See Annex under separate cover.

(vii) Section 28 Report: Case not included in Section 28 report.

(viii) Date Report Delivered to Congress: April 8, 1986.

Policy Justification

PAKISTAN—I-TOW MISSILES

The Government of Pakistan has requested the purchase of 2,030 I-TOW missiles, including 30 to be expended during Fly-to-Buy program. The estimated cost is $20 million.

This sale will contribute to the foreign policy and national security of the United States by helping to improve the security of a friendly country which has been and continues to be an important force for political stability and economic progress in Southwest Asia.

The Government of Pakistan will use these I-TOW missiles to upgrade its overall force mobilization plan and to enhance its basic defense capability. Since this is a follow-on sale Pakistan will have no difficulty absorbing these I-TOW missiles into its armed forces.

The sale of this equipment and support will not affect the basic military balance in the region.

The prime contractor will be the Hughes Aircraft Company of Tucson, Arizona.

Implementation of this sale will not require the assignment of any additional U.S. Government personnel or contractor representatives to Pakistan.

There will be no adverse impact on U.S. defense readiness as a result of this sale.

Hon. Richard C. Lugar,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Relations, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Chairman: Pursuant to the reporting requirements of Section 36(b)(1) of the Arms Export Control Act, we are forwarding herewith Transmittal No. 86-29 and under separate cover the classified annexes thereto. This Transmittal concerns the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force proposed Letters of Offer to Saudi Arabia for defense articles and services estimated to cost $354 million. Shortly after this letter is delivered to your office, we plan to notify the news media of the unclassified portions of this Transmittal.

Sincerely,

Glenn A. Rudd,
Acting Director.

Total	98

*As defined in Section 47(6) of the Arms Export Control Act.

(iii) Description of Articles or Services Offered: Nine hundred ninety-five AIM-9L SIDEWINDER missiles and associated spare parts, 30 SIDEWINDER training missiles, training, technical assistance and support equipment.

(iv) Military Department: Navy (AAX).

(v) Sales Commission, Fee, etc., Paid, Offered, or Agreed to be Paid: None.

(vi) Sensitivity of Technology Contained in the Defense Articles or Defense Services Proposed to be Sold: See Annex under separate cover.

(vii) Section 28 Report: Case not included in Section 28 report.

(viii) Date Report Delivered to Congress: April 8, 1986.

Policy Justification

SAUDI ARABIA—AIM-9L SIDEWINDER MISSILES

The Government of Saudi Arabia has requested the purchase of 995 AIM-9L SIDEWINDER missiles and associated spare parts, 30 SIDEWINDER training missiles, training, technical assistance and support equipment. The estimated cost is $98 million.

This sale is consistent with the stated U.S. policy of assisting friendly nations to provide for their own defense by allowing the transfer of reasonable amounts of defense articles and services. It will demonstrate the continuing willingness of the United States to support Saudi Arabian efforts to improve the security of the country through modernization of its forces. In a regional context, continuing support of defensive capabilities of Saudi Arabia will also contribute to overall Middle East security and will serve to deter further expansion of the Iran-Iraq war in the Arabian Gulf.

The sale of these additional missiles will add to the stability of the region by contributing to the ability of the Royal Saudi Air Force to sustain defense against hostile, advanced aircraft which could attack Saudi Arabia and to protect vital targets such as oil fields and Saudi shipping lanes with minimum warning.

The sale of this equipment and support will not affect the basic military balance in the region.

The Royal Saudi Air Force will be able to absorb this missile into its inventory both from the operational and maintenance perspectives, as it has already demonstrated capabilities to operate and maintain AIM-9 series missiles.

The prime contractors for this sale will be the Raytheon Corporation of Lowell, Massachusetts and Ford Aerospace Corporation of Newport Beach, California.

Implementation of this sale will not require the assignment of any additional U.S. Government personnel or contractor representatives to Saudi Arabia.

There will be no adverse impact on U.S. defense readiness as a result of this sale.

(viii) Date Report Delivered to Congress: April 8, 1986.

Policy Justification

SAUDI ARABIA—AIM-9P4 SIDEWINDER MISSILES

The Government of Saudi Arabia has requested the purchase of 671 AIM-9P4 SIDEWINDER aid-to-air missiles, spares and support equipment. The estimated cost is $60 million.

This sale is consistent with the stated U.S. policy of assisting friendly nations to provide for their own defense by allowing the transfer of reasonable amounts of defense articles and services. It will demonstrate the continuing willingness of the United States to support Saudi Arabian efforts to improve the security of the country through modernization of its forces. In a regional context, continuing support of defensive capabilities of Saudi Arabia will also contribute to overall Middle East security and will serve to deter further expansion of the Iran-Iraq war in the Arabian Gulf.

(vii) Section 28 Report: Case not included in Section 29 report.

(viii) Date Report Delivered to Congress: April 8, 1986.

Policy Justification

SAUDI ARABIA—STINGER MISSILES

The Government of Saudi Arabia has requested the purchase of 200 basic STINGER air defense guided missile systems including 200 missiles, an additional 600 missiles, support and training equipment, spare parts, technical support and training. The estimated cost is $89 million.

This sale is consistent with the stated U.S. policy of assisting friendly nations to provide for their own defense by allowing the transfer of reasonable amounts of defense articles and services. It will demonstrate the continuing willingness of the United States to support Saudi Arabian efforts to improve the security of the country through modernization of its forces. In a regional context, continuing support of defensive capabilities of Saudi Arabia will also contribute to overall Middle East security and will serve to deter further expansion of the Iran-Iraq war in the Arabian Gulf.

The sale of these additional STINGER systems and missile rounds will add to the stability of the region by contributing to the low level point air defense capability to protect vital military installations and oil fields, and oil related facilities.

The sale of this equipment and support will not affect the basic military balance in the region.

The Saudi Arabian Land Forces will be able to absorb these additional missiles, from both an operational and maintenance standpoint, based on demonstrated capabilities developed from a previous sale.

The prime contractor will be the General Dynamics Corporation of Pomona, California.

Implementation of this sale may require the assignment of additional U.S. Government personnel and contractor representatives; however, the number of persons and the length of time they will be needed in Saudi Arabia has not yet been determined.

There will be no adverse impact on U.S. defense readiness as a result of this sale.

(iii) Description of Articles or Services Offered: One hundred air launched HARPOON missiles with containers, spare parts, technical assistance and support equipment.

(iv) Military Department: Navy (AAY).

(v) Sales Commission, Fee, etc., Paid, Offered, or Agreed to be Paid: None.

(vi) Sensitivity of Technology Contained in the Defense Articles or Defense Services Proposed to be Sold: See Annex under separate cover.

(vii) Section 28 Report: Case not included in Section 28 report.

(viii) Date Report Delivered to Congress: April 8, 1986.

Policy Justification

SAUDI ARABIA—HARPOON MISSILES

The Government of Saudi Arabia has requested the purchase of 100 air launched HARPOON missiles with containers, spare parts, technical assistance and support equipment. The estimated cost is $107 million.

This sale is consistent with the stated U.S. policy of assisting friendly nations to provide for their own defense by allowing the transfer of reasonable amounts of defense articles and services. It will demonstrate the continuing willingness of the United States to support Saudi Arabian efforts to improve the security of the country through modernization of its forces. In a regional context, continuing support of defensive capabilities of Saudi Arabia will also contribute to overall Middle East security and will serve to deter further expansion of the Iran-Iraq war in the Arabian Gulf.

These missiles will be used on Saudi Arabian F-15 aircraft to expand the degree of protection currently afforded Saudi coastal facilities and shipping lanes by the Royal Saudi Naval Forces' shipborne surface-to-surface HARPOONS. In addition, reaction time to hostile surface vessels will be significantly reduced.

The sale of this equipment and support will not affect the basic military balance in the region.

The Royal Saudi Naval Forces have already demonstrated the ability to operate and maintain this missile in its surface-to-surface mode. The Royal Saudi Air Force is expected to demonstrate this same capability.

The prime contractor will be the McDonnell-Douglas Astronautic Corporation of St. Louis, Missouri.

Implementation of this sale may require the assignment of additional U.S. Government personnel and contractor representatives; however, the number of persons and the length of time they will be needed in Saudi Arabia has not yet been determined.

There will be no adverse impact on U.S. defense readiness as a result of this sale.●

WE HONOR ARMENIAN-AMERICANS

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, April 3 was Armenian Appreciation Day, a day to honor those Armenians who will continue to struggle for freedom throughout their lives. Over the centuries the Armenians have fought against Persians, Romans, Mongols, and the Ottoman Turks. Armenians independence was achieved in 1920, only to be ended abruptly by an invasion of Russian and Turkish troops. In 1921, Eastern Armenia became the Armenian Soviet Socialist Republic. The territory once known as Armenia is now divided between Iran, Turkey, and the Soviet Union.

During the 19th century there was a resurgence of nationalism and culturalism in Armenia after almost 400 years of Turkish dominance. In 1894 the Sultan of Turkey began a campaign to drive Armenians from their homeland and a wholesale massacre broke out. Emigration of Armenians to the United States increased significantly.

In 1915 Russia invaded the Moslem Ottoman Empire which was allied with Germany. The Turks ordered the deportation of all Armenians from the Anatolian highlands. Turkish authorities forced the Armenians into the Syrian deserts under conditions of plague, starvation, and extreme exhaustion. In addition, the Turkish tribes massacred the Armenians. As a result of the deportation and massacres, approximately half of the Armenian population was annihilated. The remaining Armenians were incorporated into Soviet Armenia, Europe, the Middle East, and the United States.

Between 1915 and 1923, an estimated 600,000 to 1.5 million Armenians died at the hands of the Turks. The Turks deny any accusations of genocide of the Armenians. The facts can speak for themselves.

Despite the conditions under which the Armenians fled to the United States, we Americans are indebted to them for the valuable contributions that they have made to our society. Their contributions can be seen in the areas of art, architecture, music, and literature, as well as many other facets of our lives.

Today is a special day to remember these Armenians who constitute increasing population in our country. In my home State of Illinois, a large community of Armenians is located in Chicago. I see this population as an added asset to our city.

With ratification of the Genocide Treaty, the United States hopes to prevent any further acts such as the Armenian massacres. I hope that the Armenians will continue to prosper and enjoy the freedoms of our country by overcoming the painful memories of their past.●

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

THE POLISH AMERICAN STRING BAND, CHAMPIONS AGAIN

HON. ROBERT A. BORSKI

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor a great fraternal and musical group from my hometown, the Polish American String Band. The Polish American String Band recently earned its 10 prestigious first prize in Philadelphia's famous annual Mummers' Day Parade.

The Polish American String Band has a long tradition of excellence among Philadelphia's great Mummers bands. It was founded in 1933 by Mr. Joseph Jankowski and the Polish business community in Port Richmond. For the past 47 years, it has participated in the traditional New Year's Day Mummers' Parade, giving an opportunity for musical excellence and community involvement to hundreds of men and boys.

Participation in the Polish American String Band offers its members a chance to learn the values of teamwork and friendship. It offers them a chance to strive for success each New Year's Day. It gives them a chance to make great music while working with their friends and neighbors.

I salute the officers of the Polish American String Band, its president, Bob Dombroski, and its captain, Ray Danielewicz, and all the band members for their championship performance last New Year's Day. I would also like to honor all hard-working wives, mothers, daughters, and sisters who contribute to the band's successful efforts. And I would like to join in wishing good luck to the new officers of the band for 1986–87, including its new president, Stan Magenta, Sr.

The Polish American String Band has been winning friends and honors for its members and its community for over 50 years. I salute them for their most recent honors and I wish them many years of continued success.

PAUL CRAIG ROBERTS ON THE DEFENSE BUDGET DEBATE

HON. JIM COURTER

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. COURTER. Mr. Speaker, as the following article by Paul Craig Roberts demonstrates, the current debate over the defense budget has a little something for everyone. The defense critics can lambaste the Reagan defense buildup, and the Reagan administration can point to modest progress which warrants continued robust funding.

Meanwhile, the intelligence community is reporting that Soviet defense spending is approaching 15 to 17 percent of their gross national product, dwarfing our present 6 percent GNP commitment. Even if the spending numbers are in dispute, there is no disputing the figures that show the Soviet Union outstripping United States production in every significant category of military hardware since 1974. By comparison, the defense budget debate is a mere sideshow.

The article follows:

[From Business Week, Apr. 14, 1986]

THE PENTAGON BUDGET: FACT VERSUS FICTION

(By Paul Craig Roberts)

The Reagan Administration and its critics are at odds on many issues, but on one critical matter they agree: There has been a massive buildup in the nation's defense.

Critics on the left bemoan this buildup as a resurrection of the arms race, while the Administration claims that the buildup is forcing the Soviets back to the bargaining table for arms-reduction talks. Even the conservative chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, Pete V. Domenici (R-N.M.), believes that Reagan has achieved such a large increase in defense that it is safe to cut $25 billion from the latest defense budget.

To an extraordinary degree, the facts are different from the perception. As the chart shows, the actual path of real defense spending under Reagan closely parallels that projected by the outgoing Carter Administration in 1981. Real defense spending bears no relationship at all to the buildup that Reagan proposed.

The level of real defense spending that the Reagan Administration had planned to reach by 1986 is not expected to be attained even by 1991. Real defense spending in 1986 is $19.8 billion below the amount projected in Reagan's first budget and only $2.2 billion above the projections in Carter's last budget.

Everyone exaggerates. Because the public does not accurately perceive the actual course of military spending during Reagan's Presidency, the defense budget is exposed to the peril of the Gramm-Rudman Act's deficit-reduction formula. If the latest projections of the Congressional Budget Office are based on an accurate assessment of attitudes in Congress, the increase in real defense spending is over. The CBO projects no rise in real defense spending from 1986 to 1991 and shows the defense budget declining as a share of GNP from 6.4% in 1986 to 5.7% in 1991, the same share as in 1975.

Fiction often prevails over fact because of the partisan nature of political competition. First of all, an Administration and its supporters naturally seek to exaggerate its success in accomplishing its goals and to minimize the failures. When faced with a setback, they show a strong tendency to declare victory. At the same time, an Administration's opponents, who are attacking these goals, also exaggerate the degree to which they have been achieved. In this way, both the Administration and its critics scaled down what was to be a major military buildup into little more than a modest improvement in our defense posture—without producing any change in the public's perception of what was happening to defense spending.

Absorbed, as they must be, in public relations and political maneuvering, the participants in the Washington power game often lose sight of the real issues. If this modest military buildup becomes a casualty of hyperbole and misperception and as a consequence is further cut back, the U.S. is likely to remain the world's second most powerful nation. If Ronald Reagan, with his electoral victories, cannot succeed with a military buildup, no one is likely to succeed. The Soviet Union is not blind to the implications. The prospect of being the dominant power in the international arena is scarcely an incentive for the Soviets to restrain their own ongoing military buildup.

It is dangerous for the Reagan Administration and its critics to project the image of a buildup that is greater than its substance. On the one hand, it misleads the American public and U.S. allies about our relative strength. On the other hand, it tells the Soviet government that in this country the political stake in maintaining a pretense is so great that illusion crowds out reality. The sputtering Reagan defense buildup indicates that the U.S. does not perceive the increase in Soviet defense efforts as threatening. As Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said last year, if this perception proves wrong: "History will not give us a second chance."

CONGRESSIONAL SALUTE TO THE HONORABLE PETER KALFE OF PASSAIC, NJ, IMMEDIATE PAST COMMANDER, ROSOL-DUL MEMORIAL POST NO. 359 AMERICAN LEGION

HON. ROBERT A. ROE

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, April 12 residents of the city of Passaic, my congressional district and State of New Jersey will gather together at the annual past commanders dinner of Rosol-Dul Memorial Post No. 359 of the American Legion, a gala anniversary celebration of the veterans of our community in testimony to the outstanding endeavors of their leadership in veterans affairs—always giving willingly and unselfishly of their time in seeking justice and equity for all of our people. This year's featured honored guest is the immediate past commander—the Honorable Peter Kalfe of Passaic, NJ—whose standards of excellence as the chief executive officer of Rosol-Dul Memorial Post No. 359 during 1984–85 has served to carry on the sterling traditions and purpose of this highly esteemed veterans organization with quality leadership and sincerity of purpose which has truly enriched our community, State, and Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I know that you and our colleagues here in the Congress will want to join with me in extending our heartiest congratulations and best of wishes to Peter Kalfe and share the pride of his wife Natalie; their children: Carol, John, Mark Lynd, and Maryann Coral; and granddaughter, Michele on this milestone of achievement in their family endeavors.

Mr. Speaker, the Rosol-Dul Memorial Post No. 359, which was organized in the fall of 1945, is one of our Nation's most prestigious affiliates of the American Legion. We are all familiar with the noble goals and objectives of the 2.6 million-member organization of the American Legion. These military service veterans, working through 16,000 community level posts, dedicate themselves to God and country and traditional American values; a strong national security; adequate and compassionate care for veterans, their widows and orphans; community service; and the wholesome development of our Nation's youth. Peter Kalfe has, by his example and lifetime of dedication to these same true American ideals, personified exemplary leadership in his responsible service to our people.

Mr. Speaker, Pete was raised in Passaic, NJ and attended local schools in Passaic. He served our people and our Nation with distinction during World War II as a gunner in the Navy with the armed guard in the South Pacific from 1944 to 1946.

In his career pursuits he has served our community, State and Nation as a distinguished public safety officer. He is a detective with the Passaic Police Force and has just announced his retirement from the department where he has served for the past 35 years.

Throughout his lifetime Detective Kalfe has forged ahead with dedication, devotion, and sincerity of purpose in combating crime and protecting the life of our people. We applaud his knowledge, training, hard work, and personal commitment that has enabled him to achieve the fullest confidence and strongest support of the people of our community. He has always applied the most sophisticated and advanced techniques of his profession. During the past three and a half decades he has received many citations for his meritorious service as a law enforcement officer and we are especially proud of his most recent highly coveted award—the "Cop of the Year" which he received from the Passaic Optimists.

Mr. Speaker, Pete Kalfe has been a member of Rosol-Dul Memorial Post No. 359 for the past 18 years and has served on various committees before attaining the high office of public trust as commander of this esteemed veterans organization. At this point in our historic journal of Congress may I commend Peter Kalfe to you along with all of the past commanders of Rosol-Dul Memorial Post No. 359 who throughout the past 41 years have served their membership and the people of our community with their leadership endeavors in veterans affairs, as follows:

Rosol-Dul Memorial Post No. 359 American Legion Passaic, NJ past commanders

Mr. Speaker, it is indeed appropriate that we reflect on the deeds and achievements of our people who have contributed to the quality of our way of life here in America and I am pleased to call your attention to Pete's lifetime of outstanding public service. We do indeed salute a most distinguished public safety officer, good friend, and great American—the immediate past commander of Rosol-Dul Memorial Post No. 359 of the American Legion—the Honorable Peter Kalfe of Passaic, NJ.

PROPOSED TVA CHANGES WOULD IMPROVE EMPLOYEE MORALE AND EFFICIENCY

HON. RONNIE G. FLIPPO

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. FLIPPO. Mr. Speaker, previously, I have discussed some of the problems at the Tennessee Valley Authority and a proposed change in the management structure of the agnecy. The proposal also includes changes designed to improve TVA employee morale and efficiency which I want to discuss.

COMPENSATION AND EMPLOYEE POLICIES

Compensation of a job may include regular salary or wages, other monetary renumeration, such as bonuses and awards; psychic satisfaction for a job well done, peer approval and admiration; and perquisites such as office size, furnishings, dining rooms, automobiles, parking spaces, insurance, and other advantages not available to most other employees.

Traditionally, the TVA has eschewed individual employee bonuses, perquisites, and recognition in favor of recognition of team effort and the psychic rewards of completion of worthwhile projects which had a high approval factor within the community.

However, as TVA began to move technically into the nuclear age, some of the traditions began to present problems. Management policies which had worked well under a different set of circumstances began to become problems for the TVA and thus for the people of the region who pay TVA's bills.

For example, TVA's management adopted a policy that limited candidates for reactor operator or senior reactor operator to non-degreed persons. Another policy excluded nuclear onsite engineers from consideration as reactor operators or senior reactor operators.

As the program developed, the need for nuclear management people at higher levels grew. Yet the people in TVA's management tract had not necessarily had in-depth nuclear experience, especially at the operating level. Partially as a result of TVA's management policies which failed to put in place an effective management training program to develop an adequate number of nuclear managers, problems began to surface for the agency. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission criticized TVA for promoting people to middle- and upper-level management positions in the nuclear program without regard for the nuclear experience of these people. In July 1985, before the nuclear shutdown, NRC cited TVA for a total of 10 management policies, primarily relating to personnel, as possible factors in TVA's nuclear difficulties.

Earlier, in response to this developing personnel problem, TVA management attempted to alter compensation practices at the agency. These efforts were poorly developed from the standpoint of justification in face of tradition and statutory restraint. The attempts met with loud and widespread opposition from some employees and many ratepayers.

As with any organization, TVA employees are the agency's greatest asset. Without the dedication, hard work, understanding, and support of the employees, any organization can fail. In a highly technical operation with safety concerns, such as the nuclear program, the prospect for failure is magnified without full and ardent employee support.

The legislaton allows the new board to take a fresh look at the entire matter of employee relations, compensation policies, and similar issues which bear on the success of the corporation. If found appropriate after public hearings and review, the legislation also allows the new board to establish a fund each year to recognize unusually meritorious acts which benefit the corporation. This program might be patterned after other Federal employee reward programs.[1]

---

[1] At least two different types of Federal award programs are in place. Under the Incentive Awards Program, an employee (or group) who proposes a suggestion, develops an invention, or makes a contribution beyond the scope of the job, may receive up to $25,000. Top managers, in the Senior Executive Service, are eligible for lump sum payments for performance up to 20 percent of basic pay. Additional awards in the SES are limited to 5 percent of executives designated as meritorious ($10,000 lump sum payment) and to 1 percent designated as distinguished ($20,000 lump sum payment).

In addition, the board each year would have authority to authorize retention or recruitment supplements for positions where the pay was found to be higher in other Government positions, such as in the Senior Executive positions, and in certain other engineering, medical or technical positions or in cases where no similar positions are found within the Federal Government.

The payment to an employee during any fiscal year for wages, salary, supplements, bonuses, or other compensation could not exceed the rate payable for level I of the Executive Schedule (currently $86,200). The payment for basic wages or salary could not exceed level V (currently $68,700).

COST FACTORS INVOLVED IN IMPROVED POLICY AND MANAGEMENT PROPOSALS

The objective of the restructuring is to provide the TVA and its customers with a management mechanism to enable the agency to be more efficient, responsive, and accountable. An improved management system, even if the managers are better rewarded, should produce savings through more efficient operations.

The legislation recognizes that an outstanding CEO for an organization such as TVA can earn and should be paid more than current Federal salary ceilings. The legislation relies on the good judgment of board members living among the ratepayers to take into account reasonable peformance objectives, regional variations, and the public nature of TVA in establishing the compensation package for such a person.[2]

The costs of the changes in the board itself are more easily identified. The salaries of the three-person full-time board total $218,200 a year at present. Travel and staff support costs are in addition.

After the initial organizational phase, a restructured TVA board would probably average 30 or 40 meeting days per year. During years when members averaged 40 meeting days each, the compensation for the restructured board would be a total of $167,859.

If the restructured eight-person part-time board required use of all authorized meeting days, the total compensation would be $212,200 a year. If only 50 percent of the authorized days were required, the total compensation would be $146,000.

Variables such as distance from meeting places and number of days of meeting would influence the travel cost. To the extent that the board functions are policy-oriented rather than for day-to-day management, total staff support attributable to the board should be less than presently expended.

Current board staff cost attributable to day-to-day management and operations would be attributed to the CEO under the proposed arrangements.

From the standpoint of the individual board members, the annual stipend provided by the legislation ($10,000) is somewhat less than the stipend for similar business corporation. Korn/Ferry indicates the average annual fee for the 1,000 largest U.S. corporations was $11,700 per director in 1983.

Because of the public service nature of the TVA, it seems inappropriate to provide complete parity with stipends provided to those serving on boards of private business corporations.

The directors' fees for each day of actual meetings would be at the daily rate for level V of the Executive Schedule (currently about $264 per day). This compares to the average per meeting fee provided by business corporations of $717 in 1983.[3] The average total compensation for directors of business corporations in 1983 was $18,090. This average is a reflection of the relatively few days the boards of established corporations meet annually.

Travel expenses would be reimbursed as they are for other Government employees.

THE TVA INSPECTOR GENERAL BACKGROUND

Several Members from the TVA region have introduced legislation (H.R. 3464, 99th Congress) to bring the TVA under the provisions of the Inspector General Act of 1978, with a statutory IG appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The bill would also vest the TVA's IG with certain electric rate review jurisdiction.

Democrat JACK BROOKS has introduced legislation (H.R. 3077, 99th Congress) to provide all Federal entities, such as TVA, with a single, consolidated internal audit unit and audit unit director with the powers and authority of the statutory IG's designated for certain departments. H.R. 3077 audit unit directors would be appointed by the agency head and would not require Senate confirmation.

The TVA board hired, in late January 1986, a person designated as inspector general of TVA. Whether all the internal audit functions will be effectively transferred to this new office remains to be seen. In any event, the TVA-designated IG is unlikely to be able to function as a statutory IG because TVA lacks the ability to confer on the office all of the authority and jurisdiction provided by the Inspector General Act of 1978 and its amendments.

H.R. 3464 for a TVA inspector general was based on the TVA management structure as it exists; that is, the board is responsible for establishing policy and then dons another hat to attempt to manage the agency. The present situation, with the board appointing the IG, has been compared to having the board investigate itself to see how well the board is carrying out its policies and the laws and regulations the board is attempting to administer. Should the board err in either of its functional roles, the appeal is to the board.

A completely different set of circumstances would prevail under the TVA board restructuring proposal. Under the proposal, the board's function is to establish policy, monitor the administration and execution of the policy, and regulate electric rates. The management, administration, and execution of the policy is the responsibility of the chief executive officer and the professionals employed to assist the CEO.

Under the proposed new structure, it seems appropriate to have the inspector general as an arm of the board because the monitoring and review responsibilities of the board would be separated from the operational responsibilities which are vested in the chief executive officer.

Thus, the new board proposal calls for the IG to be appointed by the restructured board.

IMPROVED IG FUNCTION

This section of the bill would establish an office of the inspector general in the TVA. Additionally, it would strengthen audit and investigative activities in TVA by requiring that existing audit and investigative offices be consolidated. The IG would report directly to the board and be given the same duties and authorities as statutorily established inspectors general.

Nobody likes to have their actions reviewed. The need for offices of inspector general, however, is well established, and Congress has created statutory IG's in 17 departments and agencies. Statutory offices of inspector general have proven highly successful. Over the last 2½ years, their work has resulted in about $15 billion annually in monetary benefits to the government, including recoveries from investigative activities and savings resulting from management improvements.

By providing, through this legislation, the TVA's IG with the authority granted to Presidentially appointed, statutory IG's, the role of the TVA's IG function will be enhanced and strengthened. By assuring that various audit and investigative functions are placed under the TVA's IG, coordination and efficiency in the discharge of the IG function are more likely. Should the TVA board remove the IG, such action would have to be reported to the Congress.

The earlier legislation, H.R. 3464, also provided the proposed TVA IG with certain rate review responsibilities. By restructuring the board's responsibilities, as the new legislation does, by giving the board monitoring, review and oversight duties divorced from responsibilities for day-to-day operations, the board itself should be independent enough to give more confidence to the rate review function.

STATEMENT OF HON. HELEN DELICH BENTLEY ON LAUNCHING OF THE "FORT McHENRY"

HON. MARCY KAPTUR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recommend to our colleagues, a statement made recently by our esteemed colleague from Maryland, HELEN BENTLEY, on the occasion of the launching of the Fort McHenry. Her's is an intelligent and thought-provoking piece on the state of our defense industrial base.

---

[2] Although the TVA lacks some of the criteria frequently used in establishing compensation packages for CEO's in private corporations (earnings per share, return on assets, return on equity, market penetration, or such factors), TVA should have other annual and long-term management objectives which could be used as a basis for evaluating a CEO's performance and eligibility for a particular level of bonus payment.

[3] Data for director compensation such as that presented by Korn/Ferry may reflect the large number of major corporations clustered in the high-cost major metropolitan areas of the country.

STATEMENT OF HON. HELEN DELICH BENTLEY ON THE LAUNCHING OF THE "FORT MCHENRY"

The launching of a ship is a happy event for all concerned . . . a happy event as are all births, a time of excitement and hope! In ancient times, a new vessel was christened by a sacrifice to the Gods . . . human or animal . . . a blessing against the rigors and dangers of life at sea.

To all nations throughout history, the ability to travel in search of trade has been the hope for the future of their people. And, in times of threat to that future, hope lay in the ability to withstand invasion from those who would pillage and destroy. History, joined with necessity, has built the great Naval and Merchant fleets of the world.

This morning we are privileged to be invited to participate in this historic panorama celebrated by the Psalmist;

"They that go down to the sea in ships;
That do business in great waters; These see the works of the Lord, and His wonders in the deep."

As a Marylander, I am so especially proud to be asked here to christen the USS Fort McHenry. The defeat of the British at Fort McHenry in Baltimore Harbor during September, 1814, signaled the end of the War of 1812 and forever ended any threat of future English intervention in the affairs of our young country.

It was that battle which inspired Francis Scott Key to compose the Star Spangled Banner. Many people are unaware that Key was aboard one of the British ships during the battle. He had been sent as an emissary from the government seeking the freedom of an American doctor who had been captured and taken hostage on board one of the British frigates.

Not only did Maryland give the nation its National Anthem at Fort McHenry, we gave the country a major victory. The men who fought at Fort McHenry and North Point were members of the Maryland Militia, not federal government troops. They were provisioned and supported by the citizens of Baltimore.

Are we scrappy in Maryland? You bet we are! In the 1812 War, our ships' captains were so good at capturing British ships that the London Press called Baltimore a "nest of pirates."

Isn't it fitting that the USS Fort McHenry is an LSD—Whidbey Island Class? A scrappy ship used as a durable dock? A ship which can be loaded at sea and carry virtually any type of cargo, including troops?

The LSD has a valiant history which started in World War II. And to many of my generation, the "landing barge," as it was known then, calls to mind picture after picture of helmeted, young Americans pouring onto beaches of the world. From Iwo Jima and Tarawa—to Normandy, the LSD was the symbol of the power of the United States moving onto the islands of the Pacific and the continent of Europe of bringing freedom, once again, to those beleaguered nations.

Forty years later, those countries still look to us to be the leaders of the free world. The young men who disembarked in those far off lands came home many years ago—their jobs well done. Now, it is their sons and grandsons who will be loading this ship—who may well be landed off this ship on distant shore.

The world has changed a great deal in forty years, but America still assumes the responsibility for defending freedom where it is threatened, where it needs our support.

Because I believe this so strongly, I have been a major supporter of the President's effort to restore the Defense budget after the deep cuts of the Carter years. It is critical that we always be ready in a world where the Russians view civil unrest in a foreign nation as an opportunity to extend Soviet ideology and interests far beyond the territory of continental Russia.

In truth, since the all out Defense efforts of the 1940's, we have not been able to disarm. The Second World War went from hot to cold. Our Defense appropriations ebbed and waned as did the support of the American taxpayer for an unseen war being waged for minds and hearts . . . for territory, half the world away.

But the Russian commitment to domination of the West has not waned one whit. Forty years later, Russian civilians are still suffering shortages of housing and consumer goods in order to feed the Soviet military machine. The Russians see many guns on May Day, but they rarely see butter on their tables.

We have been blessed over these years, as the leading industrialized nation of the world, to be able to have produced both. Though the price for Defense has been heavy—the expansion and diversity of the American economy since the 1940's has generated tax revenues to accommodate not only the needs of both our civilian and military sectors—but, we have also assumed the larger share of the Defense costs for the rest of the free world.

We may be fast approaching the end of the era—Pax Americana. Basic changes in the economic structure of the country over the last decade are bound to impact on our Defense posture—in several areas—in a very few years.

To illustrate the depth of this change in our nation's economic fabric, I will recall to you what manufacturing in this country meant—a few short years ago.

I grew up in the mining country of Nevada—my father was a copper miner. The American West was a place of coal and copper mines, iron and silver and gold mines. The Northwest cut timber. Texas was wild-cat oil wells and the gas industry was digging lines to the East. The South and North Central States and New England were busy manufacturing centers producing products for the American market and the world.

Everywhere the railroad went taking these raw resources to smelters and furnaces. The ports and the rivers were filed with traffic moving to and from refineries . . . always moving the energy to the source of the finishing process of the raw material.

Raw material in, finished product out. Trains and trucks, boats and barges picked up iron and steel, sheets of tin and copper and moved them on to manufacturing plants where machine tools made better machine tools and they in turn were shipped out to make nuts and bolts, rivets, ball bearings—hundreds of thousands of parts and pieces of parts—which in turn became other manufactured goods—then needing to be packaged and shipped—and, at the end, the wholesalers and retailers took over.

On every level of this production, energy was used, jobs created, value added at each step and always—always—remember—tax revenues were paid to every level of government.

To service this manufacturing base—several tiers deep—a service industry developed. Banks, insurance companies, restaurants, motels: McDonald's grew apace with the tourist industry which grew in proportion to the expanding affluence of well paid, well trained workers.

This total picture has been changed!

A great part of that manufacturing base has been lost. Because of the high levels of imports of all products, demand for raw materials and onshore energy has gone down as the plants have shut their doors. Every industry involved in the handling of raw material to finished product has been severely impacted and we are left with an increase in GNP barely above two percent—half of that accounted for by Defense expenditures.

Oil refineries are closed—cheaper to buy refined oil abroad and ship it; 8 out of 10 nuts, bolts and large screws are imported as are 60% of all N/C turning Machine Tools. 80% of all strategic ball bearings under 30 millimeters come from abroad. Steel import penetration reached 30% in one month of 1985, and every month—on average—25,000 jobs are lost in manufacturing jobs in America.

We are being asked to accept the proposition that only one sector of that widely diversed economy of the last forty years will support America into the year two thousand. Services.

I strongly disagree.

Defense is much more than capital ships of the Navy! Missiles which can be launched once . . . at great expense . . . never to be recovered! State-of-the-art High Technology weapons which freeze up when their computers are exposed to blowing sand or intense jungle humidity.

Defense demands an industrial base—on shore—to build the weapons, to repair the weapons, to ship the weapons out!

Defense demands clothing—uniforms and boots for the men and women who fight—vehicles—trucks, tanks, ambulances, weapons carriers, radios, watches, televisions, computers, typewriters, binoculars. Every article demanded by the civilian sector with a vengeance.

"Fortress America" which must go seven thousand miles away for ball bearings and fasteners, radios and watches and a myriad of other parts needed for an active war machine . . . has already been breached.

The rising demand for strategic Defense imports comes at the same time that our Merchant Marine has reached a historic low point. U.S. Navy ships . . . for the first time in the history of the country . . . outnumber merchant ships.

It is not outrageous to suggest that the Merchant Marine Act of 1936—which provided for the rebuilding of our Merchant fleet—was one of two major factors in winning the Second World War.

The other factor was our industrial base and the wealth of natural raw materials which fed it. The Great Depression had left us with idle manufacturing lines and many operations were being run on one shift, but production machinery had not been sold off abroad, mines flooded.

Machine tools are so important to a war effort that D-Day was put off for one whole year because of the shortage of machine tools in 1941. All those lives lost not for lack of weapons, but for the lack of machining centers to make the weapons.

Behind every batallion in the field stands a phalanx of machinists and tool and die makers, pattern makers and welders.

The average age of a machinist in this country—two years ago—was 59 years of age. It takes 8 years to fully train a machinist!

We are at a grave time in the history of this nation. We are making decisions not just for this year, but for the next century. We are charged with taking a course which will effect not only Defense, not only our position as the Leader of the free world, but—we are charged to cast a mold which will determine the political and social future of the year two thousand.

I reject the notion that we will be servants to the rest of the world. I reject the theory that we will import raw materials and all the finished products that a consumer-Defense society needs. I dispute the idea that a nation dependent upon the rest of the world for what it needs can be a leader or in the end, even remain "independent" as our Constitution says we must!

We have proved over two hundred years that we are the greatest, most compassionate nation the world has ever known. Were it not so, Japan and Europe would not be competing with us today. We rebuilt them with our nation's money—not as Conquerer's, but as an enlightened country—never turning our face away from suffering.

Now—it must be our turn! It is time that we look to our own needs as a nation, to the good of our own people. I will sponsor, this year, legislation calling for a "Marshall Plan for America."

The empty factories and the men and women without jobs are no longer abroad . . . in the ruins of the Second World War . . . Today, they are here . . . in America! Too many of our steel mills stand empty. Too many machine shops are in ruin . . . their machinery long ago sold off to Singapore, to South Korea. The desolation is here. And, we are much the poorer for it.

I want to put the "Chrysler bail-out" program in place once again to re-industrialize America. Our companies have starved for long term, low interest capital and they need time to recover the awful effects of the high dollar.

Right now . . . today . . . we are producing steel more cheaply, and more competitively . . . per ton . . . than any country in the world. However, when American steel enters the world market, the high dollar clobbers it and it must compete with foreign steel whose losses, many times, are under-written through government subsidization. The steel industry . . . all of our industries . . . need time to ride out the fall of the dollar. We must also find some formula which will compensate our companies for the competitive edge which government subsidization gives foreign products.

The President's Voluntary Restraint Agreement with the European Community of steel producers started October 1, 1985 . . . and still, many countries have not signed on. The clock on the five year agreement is running, and they will not sit down with us to negotiate. All the while European exports of steel have been as high as 30% of the American market—the Restraint Agreement calls for 18.5%.

I have asked the Congressional Steel Caucus to urge that the clock be stopped. The five year period should begin to count when ALL Countries have signed aboard. The nonconforming countries should not be given a shorter overall period of time in which to control their shipments.

I think we have to get after these people. If, in Defense, America must always be ready, so must we also be ready to defend our vital industrial base! For a year now, I have been pushing DOD and AID to ship American-flag bottoms on foreign purchases . . . conforming to the law. The shock, to me, is that I have to push. That the issue would even be moot.

To be a leader means many things. Primary in the world today . . . it means to protect freedom. To do that, we must be strong in all ways. We must not forget that without domestic industry, there can be no weapons. That in previous wars this has been our major strength, our major contribution to our allies.

We must secure this promise, not only for them, but for our future independence and safety.

We stand here today in debt to the generations of brave Americans who did not come back from places like Iwo Jima, who did not survive the battle of Fort McHenry. We also owe it to their memory to fight for the return of America's strength.

As I christen this ship, please join me in committing your energies to the continuing fight for a stronger America!

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize Mr. Oscar J. Kunkle, recipient of the Spirit of Philadelphia Award for his 43 years of service in the Burholme First Aid Corps. Through all these years of volunteer work and leadership, Mr. Kunkle has demonstrated the highest dedication to the ideal of community service.

Mr. Kunkle joined the Burholme First Aid Corps in 1943 and has served continuously since. He has been a State-certified emergency medical technician and served as a dispatcher and ambulance attendant. For the past 12 years he has been president of the corps. Even now, at age 74, he still drives an ambulance every week and works as a dispatcher.

It is important to realize that Mr. Kunkle has contributed over 40 years of work as a volunteer. He has never received any compensation for his contributions to the ambulance corps, but has simply done it to help serve his community.

The Spirit of Philadelphia Award is given by WCAU TV, channel 10, to honor just such people. It exists to recognize the people who help keep our community going, who freely give of themselves and their time to help their neighbors. WCAU has chosen a particularly fitting recipient of its honor in Mr. Kunkle.

I join channel 10 and the members and supporters of the Burholme First Aid Corps in saluting Oscar Kunkle for his many years of dedicated work in behalf of his neighbors and his community. Both he and the first aid corps deserve our respect, admiration and support for all their work.

READER'S DIGEST ON SOVIET SPECIAL FORCES

HON. JIM COURTER

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. COURTER. Mr. Speaker, most of my colleagues are probably unaware that the first Pershing II missile deployed in Europe was not part of NATO forces. In fact, a model of the Pershing II was deployed prior to 1983 at a Soviet special forces training base. As the following article from Reader's Digest explains, the Soviet Spetsnaz, special purpose forces have detailed plans for disrupting vital NATO military plans and destroying key military installations—including Pershing II and GLCM bases—during time of crisis. Perhaps most chilling is the revelation that senior U.S. and NATO military authorities are marked for assassination, to prevent the granting of permission for nuclear weapons release.

Soviet special forces have been instrumental in some of the most successful and brutal Soviet military operations in recent years. Czechoslovakia in 1968; Afghanistan in 1979; Sweden in 1984—all bear the unmistakable fingerprints of the shadowy Spetsnaz. And, as a recent magazine article indicates, they are busy planning the next operation, perhaps using female commandos against United States military bases in Britain. I commend the Reader's Digest article to your careful attention.

The article follows:

[From Reader's Digest, Apr. 1986]

SPETSNAZ: THE SOVIETS' SINISTER STRIKE FORCE

(For some years, Western intelligence agencies have been piecing together evidence of a clandestine Soviet military force, a large, covert army, brutally trained and poised to spearhead an invasion of Western Europe—or beyond. Here, in a comprehensive report, are the shocking facts compiled for Reader's Digest by syndicated columnist Dale Van Atta.)

A military bus pulls up to a U.S. Army training center in West Germany. Assuming it is filled with GIs coming back from town, sentries approach the bus routinely, only to be cut down by bursts of fire from weapons with silencers. The bus roars into the base as the two commando teams on board don gas masks.

Inside the facility, Americans, whose duty is to guard Pershing II nuclear-missile launchers, die within minutes beneath an invisible blanket of nerve gas, and the launchers are rendered useless.

A second Pershing base in Heilbronn falls in similar fashion. At the same time, five key NATO communications facilities—in Maastricht, the Netherlands, and in the German towns of Boerfink, Kindsbach, Massweiler and Vogelweh—are knocked out. Confusion reigns at the NATO high command in Brussels. Top officers and political leaders are missing. Some are found dead in their homes.

Meanwhile, frogmen emerge from the chilly waters near Keflavik, Iceland, a vital link in NATO's antisubmarine operations. Using equipment deposited on the sea beds months earlier, they immobilize reconnaissance and communications facilities.

No allied—or even neutral—country is immune. In Stockholm, Sweden, a machine-gun battle near the palace ends with the abduction of the royal family by frogmen, who had lain in wait until signaled by agents in the capital.

The best Soviet commandos, with the help of long-established covert agents, have suddenly brought the NATO alliance to an excruciating crisis. With its tactical nuclear capability, its communications and its leadership crippled in one stroke, what will the West do to prevent a Soviet invasion of Western Europe.

Although these events are hypothetical, planning for them is real. Gen. Pyotr Ivanovich Ivashutin, the balding, bull-necked commander of Glavnoye Razvedyvatelnoye Upravleniye (GRU), the intelligence arm of the Soviet military, has at his disposal a force of 30,000 men and women trained to carry out these tasks.

Western intelligence services have been slow to learn of the existence and makeup of these commando groups, which already credited with such operations as the 1979 assassination of the president of Afghanistan and the suppression of anti-Soviet activities in Bulgaria in the mid-1960s. But now their threat is known, as is the group's real name: Spetsnaz, from spetsalnaya naznacheniya, meaning special-purpose forces.

"The development of Spetsnaz is a particularly menacing aspect of the growth of Soviet military power," says U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense Noel Koch. "Their job is to destroy a nation's infrastructure and kill people. They are an integral part of Soviet peacetime operations, and in wartime could pose a grave threat of strategic disruption in the NATO area—and in the United States itself."

SCOUTING FOR SABOTAGE

A typical Spetsnaz unit has a senior and a junior officer, a communications man, a medic, and at least two demolition and four reconnaissance specialists. Commonly used equipment includes surface-to-air missiles, "burst" communications transmitters (which send a short "squirt" of encrypted signals by satellite back to headquarters), and a list of targets, which may be attacked or merely watched. A Spetsnaz brigade, made up of 100 of these teams, includes ten career-officer units, the elite of the elite, whose primary mission is assassination of enemy leaders. Altogether, U.S. intelligence reckons that Spetsnaz's total wartime strength includes 20 brigades, each with 900 to 1200 men, plus at least four naval brigades.

Selection to a Spetsnaz unit is a high honor. "Only recruits who pass rigorous tests are accepted,"; says a GRU defector who lives in England under the pseudonym Viktor Suvorov. He maintains (and intelligence sources concur) that many of the Soviet Union's best athletes, particularly members of its Olympic team, are Spetsnaz commandos. International sporting events give them the double advantage of horning skills in marksmanship, skiing and swimming, while familiarizing themselves with the countries to which they might return someday as saboteurs.

Spetsnaz officers and men enjoy higher pay, better food, longer leaves, quicker promotion and earlier retirement than regular army personnel do. But they earn their perks. In survival exercise they are dropped over wilderness areas and then required to spend days or weeks on their own—without sleeping bags.

But on a typical mission, each Spetsnaz member carries the Kalashnikov light automatic rifle with 300 rounds of ammunition and a bayonet that doubles as a saw and wire cutter, a P6 pistol with silencer, six hand grenades or a hand-grenade launcher, and a James Bondish knife that, at the touch of a button silently propels a lethal blade a full 30 feet.

Sheer brutality marks Spetsnaz methods. One of their main training centers—at Zheltyye Vody in the Ukraine—is close to concentration camps. According to Suvorov, gulag inmates are used in hand-to-hand combat training, allowing Spetsnaz troops to punch, gouge, kick and maim at will. "It's much more realistic than sticking a knife in a sack of sand," he says.

INFILTRATE, ASSASSINATE

Intelligence reports on a secret Spetsnaz training base west of the Urals prove that they train against U.S. and NATO targets. There are fullsize mockups of civilian airliners (for hijack training), American and French jet fighters, nuclear-missile launchers, Pershing and ground-launched cruise missiles. Ironically, the first Pershing II "missile" deployed in Europe was not in West Germany in 1983, but at an earlier date in the Soviet Union as a model at the training center.

In an actual conflict, Spetsnaz teams would infiltrate Western Europe and the United States during a period of international tension— but before the U.S.S.R. declared war. Besides clandestine airdrops, frogmen and mini-sub landings, there would be a higher-than-normal number of sports and cultural delegations entering the targeted countries.

The staffs of Soviet embassies and consulates would be augmented by unusually fit young men and women acting as guards, chauffeurs and gardeners. These teams would activate networks of "sleeper" agents, who already live near bases, arsenals and communications centers. They keep watch, provide information and maintain safe houses where Spetsnaz teams could hide.

In the event of a sneak attack, the teams would target or attack nuclear-weapons facilities; destroy command-control systems and neutralize military bases; disrupt public-power and broadcasting stations; and assassinate political and military leaders.

Assassination is key to Soviet blitzkrieg planning. Since NATO's nuclear weapons can be unleashed only by political leaders, eliminating them would delay the decision to retaliate with nuclear arms. C.N. Donnelly, head of the Soviet Studies Research Centre at Britain's Royal Military Academy, says, "It is the total political collapse of key NATO governments that the U.S.S.R. must seek to accomplish in as short a time as possible."

This audacious strategy takes advantage of NATO's unwieldy structure. Alliance procedures require consultation among its 16 member countries in the event of hostilities, and it takes a few days to mobilize NATO's forward defense. Trucks have to line up at storage sites in Western Europe, for example, to load nuclear warheads, then take take them to their units along public roads, making ideal targets for Spetsnaz ambush teams. As Britain's Military Defence warned in 1984, "the main threat is not large-scale invasion but sabotage by squads of specially trained troops."

MYSTERIOUS SUBMARINES

According to U.S. intelligence, Spetsnaz troops have been at work for years. In Special Operations in U.S. Strategy, Defense Intelligence Agency expert John Dziak writes: "In Czechoslovakia in 1968, the Soviet seizure of the Prague airport was carried out by Spetsnaz troops under KGB orders. These units arrested party leader Aleksandr Dubcek and dispatched him to Moscow. Similar missions were carried out against other 'enemies' on KGB lists."

The Christmastime invasion of Afghanistan in 1979 was a classic Spetsnaz operation. Key Afghan army officers were lured to a reception in honor of "Afghan-Soviet friendship." As the officers celebrated, they were locked in the hall and blown up by a Spetsnaz unit.

But according to KGB defector Maj. Vladimir Kuzichkin, the primary objective of the several hundred Spetsnaz men flown into Kabul was the assassination of President Hafizullah Amin. On December 27, Spetsnaz forces wearing Afghan uniforms and under KGB command approached the Darulaman Palace from three sides, fought their way to Amin, and killed him, his family and guards.

Western intelligence, which depends heavily on radio intercepts, refugee and defector reports, indicates that the greatest Spetsnaz involvement today is in Afghanistan, where they are helping 120,000 Red Army troops fight guerrillas. "While costly, Afghanistan is considered by the Soviet military to be the first real operational laboratory for their armed forces since World War II," Dziak reports.

"Spetsnaz forces have influence well beyond the Soviet Union because their unconventional warfare tactics make them an excellent tool for exporting revolution," says U.S. Secretary of the Army John Marsh. Not only Afghan, but Cuban and other Third World troops have been to Spetsnaz training camps in the U.S.S.R.

Units of Spetsnaz are deployed regularly to probe the intelligence and military reflexes of the West. A favorite tool is a mini-submarine, able to crawl on the sea bed with tanklike tracks. Spetsnaz mini-subs spy on Swedish naval bases and look for potential landing beaches for assault swimmers. They have crept underwater to within a mile of Stockholm's Royal Palace. In March 1984 the Swedish army, using machine guns and hand grenades, repulsed Spetsnaz frogmen near a large navy base. More recently, these subs have been reported off the Strait of Gibraltar, the choke point between the Atlantic and Mediterranean, and have left tracks on the ocean bottom near Japanese naval bases.

Contemplating the Kremlin's bold use of Spetsnaz, Edward Luttwak, a top military analyst at The Center for Strategic and International Studies at Georgetown University, comments, "It's yet another sign that the Soviet Union is seriously planning its offensives."

Our Western allies have begun to cope with the ugly reality of Spetsnaz. For example, Britain is strengthening its Territorial Army and has established a Home Service Force for defense and to improve its guard systems for vital installations. And with good reason. Jane's Defence Weekly reported last January: "The Soviet Union has maintained a secret detachment of female Spetsnaz forces near Greenham Common Air Base since the deployment of U.S. Air Force land-based Tomahawk cruise missiles there in December 1983. Soviet defectors have disclosed that several trained agents infiltrated women's protest groups at Greenham Common and were present at all times."

The Pentagon believes a multilayered response is necessary to foil Spetsnaz. Those groups, including leading public officials threatened by such a strike force, should be made aware of its capabilities. Agencies such as the FBI and Border Patrol, which would detect and respond to an attack by Spetsnaz forces, must know what to look for and be prepared to react. Finally, our intelligence-gathering on Spetsnaz—leanring how, when and where they will strike—must be beefed up.

"The development of Spetsnaz has been rapid, and we are only now recognizing the magnitude of the threat they pose," concludes the Pentagon's Koch. "We must vastly improve our rear-area security to deal with that threat."

THE ACTUAL EFFECTS OF GRAMM-RUDMAN ON FEDERAL AID TO HIGHER EDUCATION

HON. ROBERT A. ROE

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to share with my colleagues information about the disastrous effects that Gramm-Rudman will have on the College Work-Study Program on colleges and schools in my district and on the State of New Jersey. While we had been led to believe by the sponsors of that budget-balancing legislation that the sequestration of funds would be even-handed, a careful reading of the report (attached) reveals that such is not the case.

At congressional request, on March 27, 1986, the U.S. Department of Education produced a computerized survey showing marked differences in the College Work-Study Program for institutions in New Jersey and across the whole country. This document is entitled the "United States Department of Education Campus-Based Student Financial Assistance Programs-Comparison of Award Year 1986–1987 Tentative Awards: Actual Awards According to the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (Public Law 99–177) and Estimated Awards According to the Fiscal Year 1986 Appropriations Act (Public Law 99–178)." The data reveals that some institutions face cuts of as much as 80 percent in the face of a 4.3-percent reduction as mandated by Gramm-Rudman.

In my district, William Paterson College will lose 2 percent in student assistance funds, Passaic County Community College will lose 9.3 percent in college work-study awards, and Montclair State College will lose 11 percent in supplemental educational opportunity grants [SEOG]. The Berdan Institute in Totowa stands to lose 2.7-percent SEOG awards, the Clifton School of Business will lose 4.5-percent SEOG awards, and the Katherine Gibbs School in Montclair will lose 5-percent SEOG awards.

The inequities in these reductions in my own district can be found elsewhere in the State of New Jersey. Hudson County Community College in Jersey will lose 22.4 percent of its Federal assistance, the Wilfred Academies will suffer an 11-percent reduction in aid, and the Institute of Business and Technology in Newark will have its Federal aid cut by 23.8 percent. At the same time, there will be no reduction in college work-study allocations for both Princeton University in Princeton and Rutgers University in New Brunswick.

Mr. Speaker, it strikes me as blatantly unfair to reduce allocations for Federal support for higher education in this manner. Some students will be penalized while others will not; some colleges and universities will suffer reduced enrollments; others will not. Career opportunities for some New Jersey students will be jeapordized; others will not see their career goals threatened. These inequitable reductions in allocation for Federal aid to education violate the basic principles of American democracy, and should not be allowed to stand, for they are not in the best interests of our Nation.

BACKGROUND ON TVA PROBLEMS

HON. RONNIE G. FLIPPO

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. FLIPPO. Mr. Speaker, the Tennessee Valley Authority is an Agency of Government which has been and continues to be of great value to the Nation and to the region in which it is located.

However, problems have begun to surface in recent years. Because of my great esteem for the potential service of TVA to the Nation, I have devoted considerable time to a review of the problems and an evaluation of corrective actions. I want to share my findings with my colleagues.

WHAT IS THE PROBLEM?

An elephant, the old story goes, is a creature put together by a committee.

The Tennessee Valley Authority [TVA] is a Federal corporation running the Nation's largest electric power system—and managed by a committee. It may be the only organization of its size in the Nation operating under a board of directors that both makes policy and carries out the management of that policy—by a three-member committee.

It is time to end this inefficient system by which the Agency is under a three-headed creature, a troika system that means no one person is responsible, no one person is accountable, no one monitors management.

If management by troika were not bad enough, this Federal Agency is virtually a law unto itself, insulated from outside forces. It makes decisions in a closed manner. It is insulated from "interference" by the Congress and the President—and insulated from "interference" by the people who pay for its electric power program, the electricity ratepayers in the Tennessee Valley.

This Agency, amazingly, sets its own electricity prices—prices that have skyrocketed in the past 15 years. TVA may be the only electric service provider in the United States that sets its own prices, without a formal public hearing process, without regulation from any outside force or group of forces.

What, then, are the problems that have led to the proposal to amend the TVA Act?

First, an archaic, irrational management structure—established without extended analysis more than half a century ago. This management-governance structure has two serious flaws:

It mixes apples and oranges—putting into the hands of one body the jobs of policy and management. When the Board also manages, there is no one to monitor management.

Management by committee, with no person responsible and no one accountable.

Second, a bureaucratic organization that is virtually a law unto itself, insulated from outside forces. TVA may have more autonomy, and less accountability to outside forces, than any Federal agency of its size and scope.

Third, no voice in policy making by the electric ratepayers of the region—who pay every dollar of TVA's electric power costs. Six million electric ratepayers, paying TVA well over $4 billion a year, but with no representation on the TVA Board, no formal process to critique the Agency on billion-dollar decisions.

What has been the result of these circumstances?

The results have been:

Ineffective management, so ineffective that the TVA Board has been forced to bring in outside private consultants to manage the nuclear power program. Employee morale has suffered.

Bad policy making, perhaps the most disastrous in this Nation's electric utility industry. Bad decisions—made without input, by a three-member committee—that may cost the Tennessee Valley ratepayers as much as $10 billion—for nuclear power facilities that will not produce 1 dollar's worth of electricity. Waste, on a huge scale.

No clear responsibility to the ratepayers for these multibillion dollar policy mistakes. The ratepayers, who pick up the tab for every dollar of TVA's power system costs, have no representation, no formal process of input and protest. No voice.

An agency that sets its own prices, without even an adversarial hearing process.

A weakened agency internally, due in part to the Board's attempt to handle both policy making and management, and doing neither well.

What does this proposal offer to deal with these problems?

The proposal would:

Put the Agency under a modern management setup, based on the model of a business-like corporation. This would include a part-time board concentrating on policy-making and on monitoring the Agency's performance, a professional manager—chief executive officer—selected by the Board, to manage the Agency on a day-to-day basis, and Board committees to deal in depth yet at an arms length from day-to-day management with such policy issues as electric rate-making.

Require, for the first time, that TVA directors be representative of the region, and of the electric ratepayers.

Provide for an Inspector General, under Federal law, to report to the new, part-time, policy-making board. The recently appointed TVA Inspector General reports to the Board, but this is the same board that manages the Agency. So, at present, the IG, in effect, reports to management. Under this proposal, the part-time Board would focus on policy. Thus, the Board would oversee and monitor management, not be a part of it.

TVA became half a century old in 1985. From TVA's early days questions have been raised about the wisdom of the dual role of policy and management thrust on the three-member Board. Rhetoric, New Deal enthusiasm, and the delivery of highly desirable services helped to mask the structural problems and to thwart those who expressed concern about the symptoms of the problems. As the TVA faces serious real problems in operation of a nuclear power system, in employee morale, in the confidence of those it serves, and in its role for the future, it is time to move beyond lamenting the symptoms of the problem. This proposal is an effort to prepare TVA for continued service to the people of the region and of the Nation by updating TVA management structure through introduction of modern corporate governance concepts for greater responsiveness and accountability. The people of the United States and the electric ratepayers of the TVA region deserve at least this much in this valuable institution.

THE SCOPE OF THE PROPOSAL

The legislation is in two parts. The first focuses on a small portion of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act, section 2, and a paragraph in section 3, dealing with the composition and duties of the board of directors. No other sections of the TVA Act are invovled. The second part amends the Inspector General Act to give the TVA's inspector general statutory structure, authority and responsibilities.

The proposal:

First, recognizes the TVA's special role as a Federal corporation.

Second, reflects the fact that TVA is a complex organization with some highly technical activities and requires sophisticated, professional management of its operations plus the public participation and support of its policy function due to its statutory political nature.

Third, is based on the reality that the TVA is a different enterprise than a publicly held business corporation and a different enterprise than the original institution itself.[1]

Fourth, establishes a new form of management which incorporates essential elements of prevailing corporate governance structure for greater control, accountability, and responsiveness.

The thrust of the proposal would fix the responsibility for day-to-day operations of TVA in a single chief executive officer, the same as is found today in most of the corporations in this country and in all the cooperatives and municipal systems which distribute TVA power. The responsibilities of the board would change from day-to-day management of the agency to monitoring and regulating the agency and making policy adjustments as necessary.

Under such a concept, the board should be viewed as trustees for the combined constituencies of the agency, rather than the current concept of the board as technocrats attempting to manage a complex public organization. The major change is the elimination of the board's present dual, and sometime conflicting responsibilities, for establishing policy and then implementing the policy without any other independent review or evaluation. The board remains the ultimate corporate authority.

THE HISTORY

Compared to other elements of the TVA Act and its predecessors, the composition and duties of the board and the functions of governance of the TVA received scant attention of the Congress of 1933. The initial TVA or Muscle Shoals legislation originated in the War Department in 1919 and called for a board of from 3 to 11 members appointed by the Secretary of War. The first Norris bill in 1922 called for three full-time board members appointed by the President for no fixed term.

In 1928, the first TVA bill approved by the Congress established a five-member, part-time board and a chief executive officer. The second TVA bill to pass both Houses—in 1931—provided three part-time board members and general control and management of the agency by a general manager. The first bills introduced in 1933 still called for a strong general manager but differed on the number of days board members could serve per year. After President Roosevelt's April 10, 1933, message on TVA, new bills were introduced calling for three full-time board members. Ultimately, the idea of a general manager was dropped from the enacted version. But for most of the period when Congress was actively considering TVA or Muscle Shoals legislation, emphasis was on a part-time board, or Muscle Shoals legislation, emphasis was on a part-time board, and chief executive officer chosen by the board to manage the agency.

From the perspective of the first board members who had a hand in drafting the final version of the TVA Act, the nature of the tasks facing the start up of the agency and the political urgency for rapid results in those desperate early New Deal days may have seemed to favor the kind of three-man full-time board which emerged from the conference committee. Yet the most noted early TVA scholars expressed grave doubts about the wisdom of this structure. Even the first board changed its views on the matter of a chief executive officer and established a general manager in 1936.[2]

One early TVA scholar, Herman Finer, writing in 1944 on "TVA: Lessons for International Application," was clear about the question:

> Whether a full-time board of directors was, or is, necessary is doubtful. It was not the deliberate result of careful congressional meditation on alternatives * * *. Experience of the first 8 years of the TVA's operation * * * certainly raises the question whether a board of three men each with equal authority could not be better replaced with a single administrator.

Another scholar, C. Herman Pritchett has written:

> My experience and information concerning the TVA are largely limited to the first 10 years of its existence. However, during that period the problems resulting from a small full-time board were only too evident.

Thus, it seems the problems attributable to the board structure and size are not limited to recent times. The difficulties have been there from the beginning.

While various constituencies may differ with positions expressed by individual TVA directors over the years, it is unproductive to attempt to second guess or berate prior decisions and actions of particular directors or boards. Under the tripartite management scheme established by the original legislation, no single director can assume the responsibility nor suffer the blame for specific management failures. While the simple approach to TVA's problems would be to fault board members with whom one disagrees, a more thorough analysis points strongly to the structure through which the board operates as the weak link in the governance of the agency.

THE 1959 CHANGES

A profound change in the nature of TVA was brought about by the self-financing legislation of 1959 when the responsibility for the electric power program was transferred from the people of the United States to the people of the TVA region. In expressions through the political process in the early 1950's, the people of the United States refused to provide further resources for development of the TVA's electric power program. The decision was intolerable to the people of the TVA region and their desire for the continued availability of electric energy culminated in the 1959 TVA self-financing legislation, again through the political process.

Thus, in 1959 the TVA became basically a regionally-financed agency in regard to electricity, an agency whose policies directly affected the pocketbook of every citizen in the region. But though this drastic change in accountability and responsibility took place a quarter of a century ago, there has been no change in TVA's formal methods of accountability to the people.

For example:

There is no independent regulation of TVA's wholesale electric rates—which make up more than 80 percent of the total retail cost of electricity for the Valley's users—by any entity other than a TVA Board composed of policy-maker/managers, who also have the responsibility for operations of the agency.

There is no formal process by which TVA's decisions, sometimes multibillion-dollar decisions, are subject to public review, through hearings or other methods.

There is no administrative device through which the people of the region are represented in the TVA decision-making process.

There is no formal procedure by which the region's people or their representatives can effectively comment on TVA actions.

In practice, numerous informal methods are used by the TVA Board to air public opinion. The agency, in fact, has in recent years stepped up its efforts to obtain the views of people in the region. But—in an era where public participation and organizational responsiveness are the trend of the times—TVA policymaking rests almost totally in the hands of three persons who not only make those policies, but manage the execution of the policy as full-time agency employees.[3]

The TVA's statutory mandate is so broad that no single outside institution can effectively control the agency. Congress cannot—and has done nothing to control the TVA for a quarter of a century, since the self-financing amendments of 1959. Congressional attention is primarily after-the-fact due to the nature of the relationship between the executive and the legislative branches. Presidents do not, even though they nominate TVA directors. Presidents appear to have more pressing national and international problems to absorb their attention. OMB does not—even though OMB and TVA engage in constant skirmishes.

As important as the TVA decisions are to the people of the region in terms of the agency's ability to make commitments which require payment by the people of the service area, the business of TVA fades to inconsequential in comparison to other pressing national problems with which the President and the Congress must deal. As the national budget approaches a trillion dollars a year, the TVA's appropriated program of a mere $100 million or so appears in only the most detailed accounts.

The essential result of the 1959 amendments was to make the people of the Tennessee Valley region totally responsible for paying for whatever costs the TVA power program incurred. The TVA Board tells the people of the region what expenditures are necessary and what the costs will be. There is no other appeal or review, even an ineffective procedure, available to the public to challenge these charges or question the appropriateness of actions.

THE PHILADELPHIA PROTESTANT HOME

HON. ROBERT A. BORSKI

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the Philadelphia Protestant Home, which has just completed a $13 million construction project which will greatly improve the services it offers to its residents.

The Philadelphia Protestant Home was formed in 1890 by 14 local churches. Since then it has grown into a group of 34 churches representing five different denominations. These churches provide full support for the Protestant Home, which has a staff of 160 and serves over 500 residents.

The Protestant Home makes a strong commitment to caring for its residents, even devoting $500,000 a year to supporting residents who cannot pay themselves.

To honor the completion of 3 years of work in expanding and upgrading their facilities, the Protestant Home is sponsoring a week long series of seminars on issues concerning older persons. These sessions will address the important matters of retirement planning, coping with retirement itself, and the role of religious groups in supporting older persons. They will also focus on how young people can better understand the elderly.

The Philadelphia Protestant Home has played a very positive role in its community, offering its social hall to local groups like the AARP and the Boy Scouts.

I strongly commend the Philadelphia Protestant Home for the fine services it offers its residents and for its efforts in promoting better understanding of the needs of retired persons among all of us. As a member of the House Select Committee on Aging, I share these very concerns. I am pleased that the Protestant Home will continue to make a highly positive contribution to the people of the Third Congressional District and to everyone in the Philadelphia area.

I know I am joined by all my colleagues in wishing the Philadelphia Protestant Home the best of all possible success in its new facilities, and with all its future activities.

BIELARUSIAN INDEPENDENCE DAY

HON. FRANK ANNUNZIO

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, March 25 marked the 68th anniversary of the Bielarusian National Republic, and I am glad to take this opportunity to commemorate this important event in the history of a free people.

The Bielarusian Coordinating Committee of Chicago, dedicated to the restoration of human liberty in Bielarus, held their annual commemorative banquet and program to mark this occasion. This year's observance was held on Sunday, March 23, at 1 p.m. at the Regency Inn, 5319 West Diversey Avenue in Chicago, and I join with the members of the Committee in their prayers, hopes, and determination that the Bielarusian people will once again have a free nation.

As noted by the committee, the Bielarusian Independence commemoration is a sad occasion, and one seldom hears about Bielarus in our press reports because Bielarus has been completely cut off from the world by the heavy presence of Soviet troops, and because Moscow continues to destroy the Bielarusian Nation by assimilation. The Russians have attempted to wipe out the Bielarusians' history, their culture, and their language, and want them to completely forget their past. The communists have written new books, manufacturing a new culture and inventing a new history for the Bielarusian people in an attempt to completely liquidate the Bielarusian people. Nevertheless, many Bielarusians have stood firm in their resolve to oppose the actions of the Communists.

To mark this 68th anniversary, I added my name to a Congressional letter sent to General Secretary Gorbachev in which I called for the immediate release of Mikhail Kukobaka, the brave Bielarusian dissident who was first arrested in 1970 for "anti-Soviet slander," and had continually been rearrested each time his prison term has been served. His only crime is that he has renounced his Soviet citizenship and desires to emigrate from Russia. This courageous individual who continues to stand up against the tyranny of his oppressors is a source of strength and inspiration for Bielarusians throughout the world, who hope and pray for the day when their beloved country may once again join the community of free nations. The text of the letter to General Secretary Gorbachev follows:

[1] There is no evidence either early legislators or TVA boards anticipated the current situation regarding financing of the agency or the scope of the electric program.

[2] For an expanded review of the early management structure proposals, see staff discussion paper: The Tennessee Valley Authority Board: Why Three Full-Time Members?

[3] An apparent exception to this situation is the recently hired "nuclear czar". Here, the board is said to have given extraordinary authority to a recognized nuclear expert to make any necessary changes to restore the TVA's nuclear plants to operation. But the very fact that the board was forced to bring in a "nuclear czar" indicates that a three-member body is an ineffective management device. Someone has to be in charge and responsible.

MIKHAIL GORBACHEV,
General Secretary, Central Committee of the Communist Party USSR, The Kremlin, Moscow, RSFSR, USSR.

DEAR SECRETARY GORBACHEV: We, the undersigned Members of the United States Congress, are writing to request your intercession in the case of Mikhail Kukobaka.

Since 1970, when he was first confined for anti-Soviet slander, Mr. Kukobaka has been rearrested each time that his sentence has been served. Eligible for release in October 1984, he was given a new sentence of 7 years detention in a labor camp and 5 years in internal exile. Mr. Kubobaka has renounced Soviet citizenship and has expressed the desire to emigrate to a Western country.

As evidenced by the long period of confinement, we believe that Mikhail Kukobaka has served ample time for the charges brought against him and can see no purpose for extending his sentence. He posseses no state secrets and would pose no threat to Soviet security. On behalf of many Bielarusian-Americans concerned about the plight of Mr. Kukobaka and in the interest of improving U.S.-U.S.S.R. relations, we urge you to release Mikhail Kukobaka and to allow him to emigrate.

Thank you for your consideration of this matter and we eagerly await your response.

Mr. Speaker, the United States has benefited enormously from the courage and vitality of Bielarusian-Americans, who have contributed spiritually, economically, and intellectually to the strength of our Nation. It is with pride that I join with Bielarusian-Americans in the 11th Congressional District of Illinois which I am honored to represent, and Americans of Bielarusian descent throughout the country, who are commemorating the 68th anniversary of the independence of Bielarusia, and I share their hope that one day the people of Bielarusia can once àgain enjoy the blessings of freedom and national self-determination.

A TRIBUTE TO FRANK H. MACHADO

HON. TONY COELHO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. COELHO. Mr. Speaker, on April 11, 1986, friends and admirers of Mr. Frank H. Machado will gather to honor him on the occasion of his retirement from his position as director of the Stanislaus County Veterans Service Office after 25 years of service to the veterans of Stanislaus County, CA.

Frank first began working for Stanislaus County in 1961 when he was hired as a veterans' service officer, and in 1979 he was promoted to the position of director of the Veterans Service Office. Over the years he has been highly involved in veterans affairs throughout the State of California. He has served as president of the Modesto post of the American Legion, has served in a variety of statewide legion offices, and ,s currently a candidate for the position of California Department Commander.

Frank's efforts on behalf of veterans have not gone unrecognized. He has received an award from the U.S. Naval Sea Cadets in appreciation for his dedicated service to the military, and received both the Man of the Year and Loyalty awards from the Modesto chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Last year, his service to veterans throughout the State was recognized by the California State Assembly.

In addition to his service to our community and State, Frank has also worked hard to serve our country. Last month he retired from the U.S. Naval Reserves after 20 years of dedicated service in the Reserves.

I would like to join with Frank's other friends in saluting him for all his efforts on behalf of veterans throughout California over the last quarter century. I wish him continued health and happiness in his retirement.

BILL KUCEWICZ PINPOINTS "YELLOW RAIN" EVIDENCE

HON. JIM COURTER

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. COURTER. Mr. Speaker, one of the most tiresome "fool's errands" in United States-Soviet relations has been the protracted search for conclusive evidence that the "yellow rain" chemical weapons samples found in Southeast Asia are not, in fact, bee feces. In their efforts to absolve the Soviet Union of any blame for chemical weapons attacks, several noted scientists have been demanding "smoking gun" evidence before they will abandon their quaint insect excrement hypothesis.

But, as the following article from the Wall Street Journal notes, the Canadian Government may be preparing to produce the most damning evidence thus far, linking Soviet client states to the conduct of despicable chemical weapons "experiments" on the people of Cambodia and Thailand. Together with numerous eyewitness accounts and independent laboratory analyses, the Canadian report may finally convince the obstinate skeptics that the Soviet Union is capable of committing atrocities at the same time that it is excoriating the Reagan administration for poisoning "the spirit of Geneva." I urge my colleagues to pay careful attention to the following article.

[From the Wall Street Journal, Mar. 31, 1986]

YELLOW RAIN CONFIRMED

(By William Kucewicz)

The Canadian government is about to release the most conclusive proof yet that yellow rain is a man-made weapon. The evidence supports the U.S. charges that the Soviet Union and its allies have used deadly toxin weapons in Southeast Asia. The Canadians have not only found positive yellow-rain samples from an attack site, but they also have what appears to be part of a weapon. The new data go a long way toward solving some of the yellow-rain riddles that have baffled scientists and military experts ever since the first attacks more than a decade ago.

The study was conducted by the Ottawa-based Defense Research Establishment, an agency of the Ministry of Defence whose work includes chemical weaponry. The analysis, titled the "Final Summary Report on the Investigation of Yellow Rain Samples from Southeast Asia," is expected to be released in mid-April. Canadian officials refused to provide any information about the report; however, sources familiar with the report provided the Journal with the essential details.

Canadian scientists found trichothecene mycotoxins—the same deadly fungi identified by the U.S. government and independent American scientists—in yellow-rain samples collected from a 1982 attack site in Thailand. The Canadians also apparently acquired part of a yellow-rain weapon—a piece of plastic bag—from the same site. The plastic was covered with high concentrations of various trichothecenes and carried no pollen grains.

PRIMITIVE EXISTENCE

On Feb. 19, 1982, at 9:30 a.m., an unmarked, single-engine plane circled the Thai village of Ban Sa Tong, located about 10 kilometers west of the Cambodian border. After five or six circuits, the aircraft dropped a yellow substance from a height of about 5,000 feet. According to previously published reports, six houses in the southeast sector of the village were "liberally covered" with a yellow powder that stuck to roofs, walls, foliage and ground.

The people of Ban Sa Tong live a primitive existence. Their houses are raised on piles and consist primarily of a single communal room, largely devoid of furniture, with one wall open to the outside. Despite these conditions, visitors reported that the houses and people were clean. The villagers' primary occupation is tending crops in surrounding fields. Immediately following the attack, the shocked inhabitants notified Thai authorities.

The incident was most striking at the time because no area of Thailand had ever been hit before by a yellow-rain attack. All of the previous evidence compiled by the U.S. government involved attacks in Laos—mainly against the primitive H'Mong people—and in Cambodia. The U.S. has said that these attacks were conducted by Vietnamese and, occasionally, Laotian forces. The U.S. has charged the Soviet Union with supplying the yellow-rain material and providing military advisers to assist in its use. This violates the Biological Weapons Convention of 1972 and the Geneva Protocol of 1925.

Thai authorities sent public-health officials and military experts to investigate the incident. They found, however, that no major epidemic had occurred as a result of the yellow rain. Absent were the severe symptoms reported by the H'Mong and Cambodians, especially the profuse internal hemorrhaging and agonizing deaths. None of the villagers, for instance, were hospitalized. Thai authorities concluded that the event was a ruse, perhaps intended to test Thai reactions.

Canada then sent in its own epidemiological team to investigate the incident at Ban Sa Tong. The medical experts, with the cooperation of Thai authorities, interviewed 33 villagers, most of whom lived in the area where the substance actually landed. Blood samples were taken and about 200 leaf samples were collected. Several metal roofs and walls were scraped clean of the yellow powder. Control samples were also collected from surrounding areas. All of the samples were sent back to the National Defense Headquarters in Ottawa for analysis.

Unlike the Thai doctors, the Canadian medical team "soon discovered minor symptoms which appeared unusual." The team found that 21 of the 33 villagers (or an unusually high 64%) were ill due to the yellow-rain attack, though none had died. Their symptoms included mouth and throat soreness, increased thirst, stiffness, trembling, cough, shortness of breath, chest pain, nausea, itching of the skin, rapid heart beat, blurred vision, weakness and dizziness. All of these symptoms are associated with yellow-rain attacks elsewhere in Asia. The epidemiological findings were published by the medical branch of Canada's National Defence Headquarters in August 1982.

The team concluded that the "uncommon level of illness" in Ban Sa Tong was the result of no other "possible causal mechanism common to all those affected except the yellow substance dropped on the village." Without laboratory analysis of the samples, however, the Canadian team stopped short of declaring that Ban Sa Tong had been hit by chemical weapons, though the report as a whole concluded that chemical-biological weapons "are being used" in Southeast Asia "against unprotected troops and civilians with inadequate medical support." Moreover, it added, "Most of the deaths associated with the use of CW/BW agents are the result of inadequate or inappropriate medical care."

The new report on the Ban Sa Tong samples concludes that there was in fact a chemical-weapon attack using the same mycotoxins that the U.S. government has found in Laos and Cambodia (and also on two Russian gas masks from Afghanistan) The Thai samples included three different types of trichothecenes—T2, HT-2 and DAS—which don't naturally form in combination. None of the control samples for neighboring areas showed any traces of the relatively rare trichothecenes, and villagers in those areas showed no signs of trichothecene-associated illnesses. The Canadian report, therefore, rules out the possibility these particular mycotoxins were naturally occurring. They could only come from man-made weapons.

The environmental samples showed relatively low levels of the toxins. This may explain why these villagers didn't suffer the types of violent deaths seen at other yellow-rain attack sites. By comparison, high levels of trichothecenes were found on the piece of plastic bag. And this has led Canadian researchers to conclude that the plastic is actually part of the cleverly simple weapon itself.

Villagers said that the aircraft had dropped something that appeared to explode in midair releasing its yellow contents, according to previously undisclosed evidence in the new report. Among the remnants of the device was the piece of plastic. Canadian experts surmise that the yellow powder was contained in a plastic container with an explosive charge that would rip the plastic apart and scatter the powder in a big yellow cloud. This would help to explain the nagging question of why no shrapnel has ever been found at attack sites. (The other most commonly used technique for disseminating yellow rain has been aerial spraying, much like cropdusting, which leaves noting but the yellow powder behind.)

TEST FINDINGS

Back in Ottawa, experts were mindful of the controversy that yellow rain might be nothing more than pollen or droppings of Asian honeybees. Harvard biochemist Matthew Meselson and some of his colleagues had challenged the U.S. data on yellow rain. They said the yellow-rain samples were not trichlothecene-laced weapons but rather merely bee feces. In an attempt to settle this dispute, the Canadian scientists used electroscanning pictures, or photomicrographs, to look closely at the samples. They found no pollen or feces on the plastic. They only discovered unusually high concentrations of the trichothecenes. The new report adds a typical scientific caveat: Because the Canadians were given the plastic, they cannot vouch for its authenticity. Nonetheless, all the other evidence points to the plastic as part of a Soviet-inspired yellow-rain device.

The plastic also helps to explain another running question. In late 1981, Joseph Rosen of Rutgers University tested a yellow-rain sample for ABC News. Besides finding three types of trichothecenes, he also discovered a man-made, industrial compound—polyethyleneglycol. It is possible that this came from the plastic containing the yellow rain.

Canada is not the only country to have tested yellow-rain samples from Ban Sa Tong. Britain and France have conducted their own tests, and Thai authorities sent samples to Japan for analysis. According to well-placed sources, all of these tests showed positive results for the mycotoxins, though not one of the governments has ever publicly confirmed the tests or results. Officials at the U.S. Army's chemical-testing lab in Aberdeen, Md., wouldn't comment on the Canadian report, and refused to say whether they had tested yellow-rain samples from the Thai site.

The Canadian yellow-rain evidence—along with the still-unpublished results from British, French and Japanese laboratories—vindicates the U.S. position. Yellow rain is indeed a Soviet developed and distributed biochemical weapon. The results from Ban Sa Tong also make ludicrous the theory that yellow rain is only bee feces.

FEDERALISM

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert my Washington Report for Wednesday, April 2, 1986 into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

FEDERALISM

Over the years, Hoosiers have often expressed to me their lack of confidence in the federal government. They believe that it is badly run, that its policies are poorly implemented, that it is mired in bureaucracy, and that it intrudes too much into private activities. At least since the mid-1970's, Washington has been sympathetic to these complaints, and has tried to deal with them, with mixed success, through a wide range of proposals to reorganize, reduce and improve government. One area these complaints are being taken seriously is in the relation between the states and the federal government.

The division of responsibility for governing between the federal government and the states is fundamental to our constitutional system. The balance of responsibility between the states and the federal government is constantly evolving. It is not the type of issue that can be resolved once and for all because it depends on the political and economic trends of the period. In the last decade, after nearly fifty years growth in federal responsibility, a transformation has taken place; as the federal role diminishes, state and local governments have gradually assumed greater responsibility for many domestic policies.

The shift in responsibility from the federal government to the states has been accompanied by a drop in federal aid to the states and localities. In 1980, federal aid made up a quarter of all revenues of state and local governments. It now makes up a fifth. Assistance has dropped from 15.5 percent of the total budget and 3.4 percent of GNP in 1980 to 11.2 percent of the total budget and 2.7 percent of GNP in 1985. The heaviest cuts in federal spending in recent years have been among the state and local assistance programs. The budget proposed by the President for 1987 would continue this reordering of fedral budget priorities. Federal aid to state and local governments, which has been declining since 1978, could be cut even more over the next several years under the new federal deficit reduction plan.

President Reagan came to office promising to adjust the relationship between the federal and other levels of government. In 1982 he proposed a major reordering of responsibility. As part of that plan, the federal government was to swap all responsibility for welfare in exchange for becoming the main health care provider. The federal government, which runs Medicare for the elderly and disabled, was to take over Medicaid for the poor. In turn, state governments were to take over Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) and the Food Stamp Program. A second part of the plan would have consolidated more than forty other forms of federal aid to state and local governments and gradually reduced federal aid for them. As that happened, state governments could either levy their own taxes and continue the programs or let the programs expire. The plan failed, partly because the states were uneasy about having to assume the welfare burden, and partly because the states viewed it as a reduction in aid, not as a way to sustain programs.

Even though this swap failed, the President has had significant impact on the federal/state balance of power. The changes add up to a large increase in state influence. States now have greater discretion to spend money allotted under the new block grant setup and a larger role in job training. Less regulation and administrative oversight for many federal domestic programs and changes in Medicaid have improved states' ability to cut and control costs. More significant is the underlying shift in perception of what the federal government can do. With few exceptions, the federal government is no longer expected to create programs to correct domestic problems.

The role of state governments has been enhanced in several ways. State and local officials have become policy innovators in areas formerly dominated by the federal government. Workfare programs, in which recipients "pay back" benefits by doing public service jobs, have been introduced in 39 states with promising results. States are experimenting with new ways to provide quality, affordable health services, setting up community-based alternatives to nursing homes, encouraging preventive health care, and ensuring that the poor have access to health services. Many states have instituted reforms in their school systems, including competency tests and merit pay for teachers, tougher graduation requirements, and longer school days. States and local communities are competing aggressively for outside investors. States use tax incentives to encourage corporations to invest in blighted urban areas, and state-sponsored private corporations are providing investment capital. Virtually every state is seeking new ways to help those with marginal income find homes they can afford. In these and other domestic policy areas, the states have emerged as the new engines of innovation.

Overall, I am favorably impressed by the resurgence of state and local governments. The character and the degree of this resurgence varies from state to state, but the shift seems to be both important and lasting. As the President and Congress search for ways to reduce the deficit, state and local officials will be asked to assume a greater role in U.S. domestic policy. As federal aid shrinks, state and local governments will increasingly have to rely on their own resources. I doubt that the federal government will have the fiscal flexibility either to take responsibility back from the states or to increase funds to them, at least in the near future. I do have the uneasy feeling that many local and state governments may not have the resources to fill the gaps left by federal budget cuts. That means the new federalism must be monitored closely to assure that important services are not dropped. I also expect that local governments will increasingly look to their state capitals for assistance as the federal government pulls back in domestic areas.

At every stage of our political and economic development, the question of the relation of the states to the federal government will be addressed anew. For now, state and local governments are taking on added duties and importance.

INSURANCE COMPANY ACCOUNTING QUESTIONED

HON. JAMES J. FLORIO

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. FLORIO. Mr. Speaker, I recently inserted in the RECORD an article regarding questions raised about the manner in which insurance company reserves are reported. I am here inserting three subsequent articles from the Journal of Commerce on this subject and on insurance industry accounting in general. These articles report on the doubts of regulators and accounting experts about current industry practices.

Mr. Speaker, with the country now in the midst of a crisis in the availability of liability insurance, this somewhat technical issue takes on great significance. Responsible officials cannot begin to deal with the insurance crisis if they cannot get accurate data. For example, if we rely on incomplete data, we could be hit almost without warning by a wave of insurance company insolvencies leaving unpaid claims and widespread economic damage in its wake.

I hope these articles will help inform my colleagues about this important issue—an issue with very serious implications.

[From the Journal of Commerce, Mar. 25, 1986]

BOTH SETS OF UNDERWRITING BOOKS UNDER FIRE

(By James Nolan)

For arcane reasons dating to the 1920s, the commercial insurance industry keeps two sets of books.

But now, with the industry under pressure to reform its underwriting practices, both accounting systems are coming under heavy fire.

Public companies report to both the Securities and Exchange Commission and to state regulators. However, mutual companies, owned by their policyholders, report only to the states.

The rationale is that the reports to the SEC serve the investment interests of stockholders. Reports to the states are supposed to assure policyholders that companies can and will pay claims.

Evidence is mounting that for myriad reasons both reporting methods are falling far short of their goals.

Recent events show statutory reporting rules in the states are being applied unevenly and enforcement of the rules is sporadic.

In Iowa, the insurance commissioner says he can't trust accounting reports filed with his office, particularly by companies in questionable financial health.

In California, legislation is pending to call on independent third parties to certify the statutory accounting reports. Regulators want more intense scrutiny to protect policyholders.

Early this month, the National Association of Insurance Commissioners denounced lenient state accounting techniques established by their predecessors.

A pervasive discontent with statutory insurance industry bookkeeping has been simmering for two years. The issue came to a boil in January when Cigna Corp., the nation's second-largest property/casualty insurance company, boldly announced an enormous accounting change.

In a press release, Cigna said it was adding $1.2 billion to its reserve account for the payment of future claims.

What Cigna didn't say was that it was putting only $600 million in cash into the fund. The balance would come from interest income over the years on the cash. That is to say, the reserves would be discounted.

State insurance regulators permit discounting only for workers compensation reserves. With compensation payments, the pay-out stream for the future can be calculated with a great deal of precision.

For general commercial liability, discounting on a future that is highly uncertain isn't accepted. The reserves must be put aside dollar for dollar.

Peter W. Gillies, Connecticut insurance commissioner, uncovered Cigna's discounting when he questioned the firm by telephone. His discovery came in the last week in February, the eve of the March 1 deadline for the insurance industry to file financial statements with the state regulators.

In Connecticut and Pennsylvania, Cigna's state of domicile, regulators said Cigna did indeed file statements with the discounting entries on the books.

At the moment, both states are conferring and a decision on accepting the statements is expected momentarily.

In California, however, Bruce Bunner, insurance commissoner, flatly warned Cigna and any other company of like mind in mid-February that if they submitted financial statements containing discounted reserves, the filing would "be construed as the filing of a false or misleading financial statement with intent to deceive, which is against the law."

Cigna went ahead and filed the statements with the discounting reports included. In mid-March California sent the statements back to Cigna and ordered that the offending numbers be stricken from the reports.

Coincidently, the Securities and Exchange Commission signaled discontent with insurance industry the discounting issues also.

The American Institute of CPAs, the governing body for the profession, formed a committee this year to study the issues and make recommendations.

G. Michael Crooch, a partner at Arthur Andersen & Co., one of the nation's largest accounting firms, said that "traditionally, insurance companies have been under-reserved. If you discount, the reserves will be lower still."

The problem for the CPAs, Mr. Crooch said, is to reach common ground with actuaries, the professionals within the companies who work out the complex formulas for establishing reserves.

The gulf separating the two accounting systems can be seen specifically in the SEC reports for 1984. The Travelers Insurance Co., the nation's third largest public underwriter, told the SEC it was discounting more than $700 millon reserves, mostly for workers compensation.

Questioned later, Travelers said it dutifully reported the transaction in its state reporting. But the $700 million bookkeeping entry did not appear in summaries of the statutory accounting reports published by the A.M. Best Co., and industry rating and reporting service.

A Best spokesman said the clerks who go over the voluminous state accounting reports and type them into computers do not always pick up all of the accounting entries.

[From the Journal of Commerce, Mar. 25, 1986]

HISTORY OF ACCOUNTING IN INSURANCE ANALYZED

Double entry bookkeeping was perfected in Venice about 500 years ago.

The basic idea is that every transaction has two sides, a debit and a credit. When tens of thousands of transactions are separated this way, there is a marvelous check on the honesty of the accounting system. It's called balancing the books.

But quicker than you can say "green eye shade," skillful accountants learned to economize with the truth and make the books say other things.

Thus, the independent audit was devised. An outsider stands between buyer and seller and attests to the accuracy of the books.

In the insurance industry, the history of accounting has taken strange turns.

There has been state regulatory accounting for all insurance companies for some 60 years. But over the years the bookkeeping paths have divided for publicly held stock companies and mutual companies owned by the policyholders.

After the stock market crash of 1929, President Roosevelt got Congress to pass the Securities and Exchange Act in 1933, establishing the Securities and Exchange Commission. The basic charge to the SEC was to oversee the accounts of public stock companies, including some in insurance.

Now, public insurance companies keep books as ordered by the SEC. A third party audit by independent certified public accountants is mandated.

But, on the so-called convention, or regulatory financial statement filed by insurance companies with the states, there is virtually no independent third party analysis of the books. The accounting reports are submitted by company officers, with the word of a notary public that they are, indeed, the officers.

State regulatory examiners go over the books, but as a New Jersey insurance commissioner once said, "we are outmanned and outgunned by the companies."

In a few states, CPAs are brought into the picture. They add separate comments to the statutory statements. But the CPAs do not feel easy about it by any means.

The American Institute of CPAs has begun a special study to determine what is good and bad about how the insurance industry actuaries set up reserves to pay claims, the largest single item on the liability side of the balance sheet.

[From the Journal of Commerce, Mar. 14, 1986]

PROPERTY/CASUALTY RESERVE DISCOUNTING HIT

(By James Nolan)

State insurance regulators "are very unhappy" with the prospects that property/casualty insurance companies "are discounting reserves all over the lot," said John E. Washburn, Illinois director of insurance.

Mr. Washburn said the discounting issue was of major concern at a number of committee meetings during the Western Zone meeting of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners in San Francisco this week.

The discounting of reserves argument was thrust to the fore last month when it was revealed that the Cigna Corp. the nation's second largest property/casualty insurer, was adding $1.2 billion to its reserve account for an array of commercial lines of insurance.

Cigna said the $1.2 billion was only half in cash. The other $600 million of reserves to pay future claims would come from interest income on the cash.

After the NAIC meeting Mr. Washburn said that the regulators from the 50 states assembled in San Francisco were "very apprehensive already about the quality of the industry reserves. We must determine how widespread the practice is. We need a full scale look at this because of the obvious effect it has on the reserves."

Because all of the state departments are swamped at the moment with financial statements from hundreds of companies, it can not be determined which, in particular, are discounting, Mr. Washburn said.

"But in our shop, we are devoting all of our attention to the problem." he said.

The volume of the paper work is huge and most state departments are grossly understaffed.

In New York, for example, one of the better-staffed departments, each examiner must read 60 financial statements, each of which in some cases can run to several hundred pages.

Cigna made its announcement one month before the March 1 deadline for companies to file their statutory accounting data with the state regulators.

As events unfolded after the Cigna news, Bruce Bunner, California insurance commissioner, sent a blistering warning to all companies licensed to do business in California.

"It appears," Mr. Bunner said, "that a growing number of property and casualty insurers are reporting unpaid losses and loss adjustment expenses (reserves) on a discounted basis in their statutory financial statements."

He said that such discounting of loss reserves "overstates statutory net worth."

Mr. Bunner concluded that the filing of financial statements that included discounted reserves for anything other than workers compensation claims "may be construed as filing a false or misleading statutory financial statement with intent to deceive, which is against the law."

In another pressing concern, the commissioners began work in San Francisco on an unforseen problem with a new claims-made form adopted by the industry.

The new Commercial General Liability form specifies conditions for a so-called "long tail" form of coverage, that protects a policyholder against claims that arise after the policy period ends.

The "tail" to be purchased by a corporation may run up to five years.

But now in court cases, the question has been raised that if the insurer that sold the long-tail coverage goes insolvent, will the responsibility fall to the state guaranty fund to pay claims? An amendment to the NAIC model law government guaranty funds is expected to be developed.

THE VOICE OF WISCONSIN'S THIRD DISTRICT

HON. STEVE GUNDERSON

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, few sessions in recent history have been as crucial as this one in determining America's future. With the passage of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction legislation, Congress is now mandated to finally put to death a legacy of financial carelessness which has left our Nation with hundreds of billions of dollars in yearly deficits. It's quite clear, though, that this crisis can be solved only with the cooperation and shared effort of all Americans.

I'm proud to say, Mr. Speaker, that the people of Wisconsin's Third District have broadcast their commitment to the discipline necessary to end $200 billion annual deficits. They have clearly demonstrated their willingness to take their eyes off their own special interests and focus instead on what's necessary for the continued prosperity of our Nation.

Earlier this year, I mailed my legislative questionnaire to all Third District residents, giving them another opportunity to express their opinions on many of the major issues of this Congress.

Those who responded spoke loud and clear on the urgency to reduce the deficit. Over 62 percent—more than four times those who selected any other issue—named deficit reduction as Congress' top priority for this session. What's more, a solid two-thirds favored deficit reduction through spending cuts, rather than tax increases.

Of those responding, a majority wanted these cuts carried out in all Government programs, with no exemptions. This concern for fairness was also reflected in their feelings on Social Security and Medicaire. Fifty-five percent of the respondents said all Government entitlement programs' cost of living adjustments should be frozen, rather than just those of Federal retirees' pensions. And almost two-thirds favored Medicare eligibility based on need as well as age.

My constitutents even expressed their concern for rising deficits in their attitudes on foreign affairs. They chose our foreign trade deficit as Congress' top foreign policy priority.

Mr. Speaker, like many of my colleagues, I view the results of this annual survey as one of the many tools that I will use to ensure accurate representation of my constituents. It's my responsibility to speak for the Third District in this Chamber. In that regard, today I submit the complete results of my 1986 general legislative questionnaire.

1986 QUESTIONNAIRE

Total participants: 2,456.

1. This year will be dominated by "deficit reductions." Such action should be achieved through:

	Number	Percent
Spending cuts	1638	66.7
Tax increases	87	3.5
Combination	731	29.7

2. If cuts are to be made, which areas should be exempted from cuts:

	Number	Percent
Low-income programs	759	30.9
Agriculture	626	25.5
Assistance to local governments	317	12.9
Veterans programs	594	24.2
Education	527	21.4
Defense	363	14.8
Senior citizen programs	761	31.0
No programs should be exempt	1,020	41.5

3. While the Farm Bill has been enacted, government will still play a major role in agriculture through implementation of the bill. The federal priority in 1986 should focus on:

	Number	Percent
Regulating imports	1,371	55.8
Changing the Tax Code	1,068	43.5
New ag technology for the family farm	430	17.5
Credit assistance for needy farmers	719	29.3

4. Recent actions have seen federal retirees lose their cost of living adjustment (COLA) for 1986. At the same time, Social Security recipients received theirs. To be fair, in the future:

	Number	Percent
All COLA's should be frozen	1,280	54.4
None should be frozen	445	18.9
Maintain present policy	629	26.7

5. With the recent increase in federal outlays for Medicare, some have suggested eligibility for Medicare should be based on financial need, not just age.

6. Economic development is of vital importance to western Wisconsin. The government can best assist in this development by:

	Number	Percent
Reducing deficits and interest rates	1,676	68.2
Providing government loans and grants	216	8.8
Providing more training and retraining	373	15.2
Promoting manufacturing industry	1,217	49.6
Promoting tourism	520	21.2

The first chart lists the number of participants who selected each item as first priority, second priority, etc. The second chart is a ranking calculated as follows: each first priority vote is worth 7 points, each second priority vote 6 points, etc.

7. What are the most important foreign policy issues facing us today? Please rank in priority, with the most important first.

CONGRESSIONAL SALUTE TO THOMAS P. RALEY

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call my colleagues' attention to a very special businessman and community leader will be honored on April 7, 1986 for his many years of civic involvement and contributions with the Torch of Liberty Award from the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith at a testimonial dinner in my Sacramento, CA congressional district.

Mr. Thomas P. Raley, who will receive the highly prestigious award, is owner and chairman of Raley's Supermarkets/Drug Centers, one of the largest supermaket chains in the Nation. Widely known as one of Sacramento's first and foremost entrepreneurs, he built his business from its humble, single-store beginning in 1935 into a massive 47-store operation today.

Throughout his career, Mr. Raley has been widely recognized as one of the leaders in the grocery store business, especially for introducing several innovations, including self-service meat sections, drug services and development of the superstore concept. But that leadership in the industry also has extended to his hometown through involvement and support for a number of civic organizations and community groups. He has been a long-time supporter of the Crocker Art Museum and the Stanford Home as well as numerous other humanitarian and social causes.

In addition, Mr. Raley has been honored by numerous active and successful community groups and organizations for his many contributions of time, talent, and resources, including his appointment in 1985 to the Junior Achievement Greater Sacramento Chamber of Commerce's Certificate of Appreciation for his support and involvement in that organization's programs and activities. He has also received the Good Scout Award from the Golden Empire Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

On behalf of the people of Sacramento, I would like to congratulate Mr. Raley on the recognition he has received and thank him for his many efforts to making our community a better place to live and work.

BUSH WRONG ON OIL PRICES

HON. BARNEY FRANK

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, among the more glaring hypocrisies that flourish in our public dialog today is the one which holds that the free market was a wonderful device for setting oil prices when it sent them upward, but that Government intervention becomes essential if the free market sends prices in the opposite direction.

The recent venture by Vice President BUSH to persuade the Saudi Arabians to cooperate in keeping oil prices from dropping was one of the most flagrant examples of this glaring inconsistency. I have made a hasty search of various texts which preach the advantages of the free market. In none of them did I discover chapters—or even footnotes—which asserted that the virtues of the market do not apply when commodity prices are going down. To argue, that the free market must be allowed to set energy prices, and then to call for various forms of government intervention when that free market behaves in ways that the oil producers find inconvenient, is hypocrisy of the most basic sort.

If Vice President BUSH wants to act as a representative of the oil producing interests, he ought to find a more appropriate forum from which to do that than the Vice Presidency of the United States. And those Members of the Congress who are clamoring for oil import taxes and other forms of Government intervention to prop up oil prices ought to go back to 1981 and before and re-read some of their own rhetoric about the virtures of the free market. Or perhaps, since their own understanding of the free market appears flawed, they would profit by reading the attached editorial from the Boston Herald which makes the point against intervention to prop up oil prices quite cogently.

[From the Boston Herald, Sunday, Apr. 6, 1986]

FIRM COURSE NEEDED IN OIL-PRICE "CRISIS"

By far the worst move the White House could make to deal with the unchecked slide in oil prices would be to heed the counsel of those aides and experts who see it as a "crisis."

They'd like President Reagan to help solve the problem either by talking Saudi Arabia into cutting production, thereby starting prices on the way up again, or imposing an import fee on foreign oil to help U.S. oil firms weather the storm—or both.

Thus far, despite the dissenting voices of Vice President George Bush and Energy Secretary John Herrington, Mr. Reagan is, we are told, committed to allow supply and demand, rather than political tinkering, set the price structure.

We urge him to continue on this course, because the overwhelming weight of the evidence proves its wisdom.

Consider what the 30-cent-a-gallon cut in the cost of gasoline and heating oil in the past few months will mean if it holds for the rest of the year.

It will enable the average consumer in this state to save a minimum of $360 on fuel for his or her car and home.

It will reduce the energy expenses of private industry by hundreds of millions of dollars, generating jobs and still more prosperity in the process.

It will give cities and towns some small measure or relief from other rising costs and the shrinking supply of federal dollars.

It will hold the annual inflation rate to 1.7 percent, encourage lower interest rates and lop an estimated $30 billion from the nation's trade deficit.

And, forgive us, but all these boons are made sweeter by the fact that they are in large part coming at the expense of OPEC nations, whose oil prices from the early 1970s to late 1985 were nothing less than highway robbery committed on the rest of the world.

We waste no worry on them—but yes, we are concerned about the hardship the price cuts are causing our major oil-producing states—Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. They're being hurt by wholesale layoffs in the oil industry and in smaller businesses dependent on it for their livelihood. They're being pinched by the loss of a large chunk of the tax revenues that they relied on those companies to pay.

Their prospects for improvement aren't helped by the reluctance of the industry to spend money on exploring for new wells while oil prices are so low.

However, we cannot agree that government should impose an import fee—or any other type of subsidy-in-disguise—to help U.S. drillers out of the doldrums. American consumers in all 50 states, not overseas producers, will foot the bill for that in one form or another.

That's not an answer; it's a handout—of a kind the president has consistently and rightly opposed. Massachusetts and other industrial states proved that when they thought, and fought, and conserved their way out of hard times during the years of oil shortage. Texas, et al, deserve the same chance now.

TRIBUTE TO SHEILA BURKE

HON. TONY COELHO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. COELHO. Mr. Speaker, the entire community of Merced, CA, shares in the pride stemming from the appointment of Sheila Burke as Senate Majority Leader ROBERT DOLE'S chief of staff. Sheila was raised in Merced, in the county I also call home, and attended school there prior to pursuing her college education and political career.

As this article from the Merced Sun-Star reflects, Sheila has quickly earned respect and admiration as the first woman to hold the position of the top aide to the Senate majority leader. I join in offering her my own congratulations and best wishes.

[From the Merced (CA) Sun-Star, Mar. 10, 1986]

BURKE: FORMER MERCEDIAN IN POLITICAL ARENA

Former Mercedian Sheila P. Burke, named chief of staff for Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole (R-Kan) in early February, has proven someone from a small town can make it big in Washington.

Described by the Washington Post as "the most powerful woman in the vast, invisible machine that supports the work of the Senate's 100 visible components," she is believed to be the first woman to hold the job—"one of the most influential, exacting and exhausting staff positions in Congress.

Burke believes it is not unusual for someone from a small town to accomplish this. "It's possible for someone from a small community to do this who works well in the field and who has the technical experience to move into this kind of job," she said.

After graduating from Merced schools, Burke worked as staff nurse for Alta Bates Hospital in Berkeley. Nine years ago, Burke became program director of the 40,000-member-National Student Nurses Association in New York, filling in as a medical-surgical nurse on weekends at Manhattan's Doctors Hospital.

Her expertise in politics brought her to the attention of staff members of the Senate Finance Committee at the time Dole was looking for someone with medical experience to be his aide for health issues.

As Dole's legislative assistant, she was responsible for preparing legislative proposals and amendments on matter regarding health, welfare, social security, and women's rights. This position also gave her first-hand experience working with constituent problems and developing issue memoranda for the Senator.

Her practical and political experience as a nurse paid off in her work on dramatic changes in the health field including hospital prospective payment systems and major changes in Medicare.

Burke is known in Washington as being remarkably open and having excellent judgment on what will work and what will not. She gives the appearance of working with unusual calm, with an assured command of the issues, and a confident can-do attitude.

She served as a staff member of the Senate Finance Committee from 1979–82, while earning a master of public administration degree from Harvard's Kennedy School of Government.

She also served as a research assistant in the school's center of health policy and management and service as a visiting lecturer, and on the adjunct faculty of Georgetown University, University of Pennsylvania, and Marymount College in Arlington, Va.

From 1982–84, as deputy staff director on the U.S. Committee on Senate Finance, she supervised staff members responsible for all the income security programs including Social Security, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, supplemental security income, and disability insurance.

She also served as the main staff contact for health issues before the Finance Committee, including Medicare, Medicaid, maternal and child health, and peer review organizations.

She had major responsibility for evaluating legislative proposals, drafting committee documents, legislation and presentation of income security issues to committee members.

From 1985–86, she served as deputy chief of staff for the office of the Senate Majority Leader.

According to Burke, "My most important job is being sure Senator Dole is prepared—and with both sides of an issue." Understanding the perspective of the different players and where they may be willing to compromise is the other crucial component in moving legislature through.

Long days are routine for Burke, married to David Chew, a high-level official and deputy to the president.

They were married in Merced three years ago, Chew was on Dole's staff previously and worked for Donald Regan when he was Secretary of the Treasury.

Burke, 35, moved from San Francisco to Merced when she was 10, and attended Our Lady of Mercy schools here. She attended college at the University of San Francisco, a Jesuit institution, where she received her nursing degree.

LIBYAN ACTION AND WAR POWERS

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring to your attention a public statement and a letter sent by the chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, DANTE FASCELL, to President Reagan concerning the recent incidents involving United States naval forces off the coast of Libya. Also, included with these observations by Chairman FASCELL is an article by J. Brian Atwood, published in the Washington Post on March 30, 1986.

As Chairman FASCELL explains, the United States had the right to conduct naval exercises in international waters. However, he has raised questions pertaining to the requirements of the War Powers Act which must be addressed in order to obtain a full understanding of the President's use of U.S. forces in the Gulf of Sidra starting on March 24, 1986.

The President argued, subsequently, that the War Powers Act did not apply in the case of the U.S. maneuvers in the Gulf of Sidra, but Mr. Atwood's article points out that there were legal reasons in this instance to raise the War Powers Act.

It is critical for the Congress to know all the circumstances surrounding the use of U.S. forces. There is understandably deep concern about the aggressive and contemptible actions taken by Libya, but Mr. FASCELL's letter and remarks, with the argument of Mr. Atwood's article, points out that there were important considerations of legal and constitutional procedure which must be considered in examining United States actions as well.

I encourage my colleagues to consider the questions Chairman FASCELL raised and the views expressed in Mr. Atwood's article.

The press release, letter, and article follows:

STATEMENT OF THE HONORABLE DANTE B. FASCELL, MARCH 24, 1986

The attack on Libyan missile sites—no matter how justified they may appear in light of Qudhafi support for terrorism and other aggressive actions—raises serious questions and concerns, especially in relation to the War Powers Resolution.

The United States has the right to conduct military exercises anywhere in international waters and it would be wrong to let an irrational dictator like Qudhafi unilaterally determine where the boundary of those waters lies. If deliberately provoked, the United States also has a right to respond to armed attacks from Libya.

A calm and rational review suggests the clear possibility that this incident could erupt into a significant conflict resulting in the loss of American lives.

My concern in this matter also relates to full compliance with our nation's laws and constitutinal procedures, most appropriately the War Powers Resolution. To my knowledge, for example, the administration has not consulted with Congress on the policy which produced this situation as required under Section 3 of the Resolution. Further, to the extent that U.S. armed forces have now clearly become involved in hostilities, I would expect the administration to provide a War Powers Report.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, March 24, 1986.

THE PRESIDENT,
The White House, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Your recent policy decision involving the deployment of American naval forces off the coast of Libya has been a matter of great concern to me. That concern was heightened this morning by reports that an American aircraft was fired on by a Libyan missile.

I write you in the context of my oversight responsibilities for full implementation of the War Powers Resolution. As the original House sponsor of that legislation I have an abiding determination to assure full compliance with the law.

Like you, I recognize that the actions of Libyan leader Qudhafi are contemptible in every respect. His repeated support for terrorism and his direct aggression against neighboring states merit the world's harshest condemnation.

In pursuing policies intended to offset Mr. Qudhafi actions, I am sure you would agree that we must respect and abide by our own laws and constitutional procedures. In that connection, I believe your Administration's actions in the Gulf of Sidra have failed to adequately satisfy the requirements of the War Powers Resolution.

As demonstrated by today's reported attack, these deployments constituted from the outset a situation where imminent involvement in hostilities was a distinct possibility clearly indicated by the circumstances even prior to today's development.

Under the circumstances, prior consultation with Congress was required under the War Powers Act.

In view of these circumstances, I respectfully urge you to comply fully with the provisions of the War Powers Resolution before the situation evolves further.

With best wishes, I am
Sincerely yours,
DANTE B. FASCELL,
Chairman.

CONGRESS: BYPASSED AGAIN

(By J. Brian Atwood)

When the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Rep. Dante Fascell (D-Fla.), complained last week that the administration should have consulted with Congress under the War Powers Act over the conflict in the Gulf of Sidra, he received little support from his congressional colleagues. The president's provocation of Libyan strongman Qudhafi was in its early stages a popular move that received strong bipartisan support. Reference to the War Powers Resolution must have seemed to many a throwback to Vietnam-era concerns.

But Fascell was correct in pressing the legal case. The resolution created a procedure to bring Congress into the fateful decisions involving war and peace. If the administration felt no need to consult Congress in the case of a popular engagement, can we expect any more when troops are committed in more controversial circumstances? Perhaps Fascell's legal position will be more appealing in the situation evolving on the Honduras-Nicaragua border.

The administration's attitude toward the War Powers Resolution was expressed explicitly by Secretary of State George Shultz during the Lebanon crisis. He angrily called it an unacceptable constraint on presidential power and subsequently called for its repeal.

It is even more revealing to consider the maneuvers of the administration lawyers who planned the last Gulf of Sidra exercise in 1981.

No one in the working group convened to plan the exercise doubted its purpose. The intention was to provoke Qudhafi while challenging Libya's bogus territorial claim to the gulf.

It was felt that a strong rationale had to be developed to get around the resolution's requirement to consult Congress "in all possible instances" when hostilities are "imminent" or clearly indicated by the circumstances." The methods chosen should be instructive to today's Congress.

The lawyers asked the Pentagon to review the military plans and determine the likelihood that U.S. forces would become engaged in combat. If the "probability of conflict" rose to 50 percent or above, then, according to the legal construct, consultations with Congress were required. Not surprisingly, the Pentagon's computers never produced a probability-of-conflict scenario reaching the threshold.

Then the Navy sought a change in the "rules of engagement." They wanted to allow Navy pilots to fire on Libyan planes when they "locked on" with their radars, indicating they were targeting U.S. aircraft.

This request was abandoned when the lawyers suggested that a change in the rules of engagement would demonstrate that the administration knew in advance that hostilities were "clearly indicated by the circumstances." The Navy apparently took the view that it was more important to avoid congressional consultation than to gain a slight edge. In any case, when the anticipated engagement took place on Aug. 19, 1981—and two Libyan aircraft were destroyed by two F-14s—Pentagon spokesman Gen. Philip Gast was able to claim that U.S. pilots were "adhering to the rules that U.S. aircraft would be adhering to anywhere in the world."

Once again in 1986, administration spokesmen were emphasizing the routine nature of the military exercise while simultaneously seeking political credit for the decision to use force against a tyrant. Early in the week high officials were quick to praise their president for being aware in advance that sending the Navy into the gulf could cause a confrontation. Later in a letter to Congress explaining why prior notice was not required, the operation took on the benign qualities of a "peaceful exercise" and part of a "global freedom of navigation program . . . on international waters."

Congress' reaction to the current Gulf of Sidra crisis is sure to be watched by administration lawyers seeking precedents to circumvent the War Powers Resolution. Perhaps Fascell's colleagues were intimidated by the initial popularity of the president's action. Whatever the cause, Congress cannot now afford to acquiesce in a clear circumvention of its legal prerogative.

LIMITING FOREIGN INVESTMENT IN AMERICAN AGRICULTURE

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, it's certainly no secret that we have an overproduction problem in virtually every sector of the agricultural economy. For several years now, we have tried to address surplus dairy production through a series of supply management programs which have been, in large part, producer financed.

The 1984-85 dairy diversion program successfully reduced dairy production by 8 billion pounds at a savings of $1 billion to the taxpayers.

The recently announced dairy termination program—whole-herd buyout program—will remove a total of 12.28 billion pounds of milk production over the next 18 months. Producers who signed up for the program have to stay out of dairying for 5 years.

In short, American dairy producers have made real efforts to deal with the domestic surplus we face in the dairy industry.

You can, then, imagine their outrage when an Irish investment company, Masstock International, announced that they would be investing $35 million in new milk production and processing facilities in and around Macon, GA, over the next 5 to 6 years.

Their plan is to establish 10 1,000-cow operation—2 this year, 3 more over the next 3 years, and 5 more over the following 3 years—all of which can be expanded to 2,000 cows at any time without new additions. Besides bottling milk, their processing facilities will produce yogurt, cottage cheese, and ice cream.

When completed, the Masstock operation will result in an 8-percent increase in the total Georgia dairy operation which presently numbers some 847 producers and 120,000 cows.

More importantly, it will singlehandedly wipe out 1.25 percent of the reduction we will accomplish through the whole-herd buyout program. Further, this sole operation will cost the taxpayers $2 million annually simply to buy up the dairy products created by the milk it supplants.

Now, what makes a bad situation worse is that—believe it or not—Masstock has received $4.5 million in financing through low interest, tax-exempt industrial development bonds [IDB's]. Not only do we have foreign investors building huge operations during a period of surplus production, but we're actually giving them Federal financial encouragement to make those investments.

In response to this situation, I am today introducing two bills to limit the use of IDB's and the benefits of Federal farm programs to foreign interests involved in American farm operations. Senator KASTEN is introducing the same legislation in the other body today as well.

The first bill would simply eliminate the Federal tax-exempt status of any IDB used to finance the purchase, construction, or improvement of farm property by foreign persons.

The second bill would prohibit foreign persons, except a foreign person who is operating a single small- or mid-sized family farm, from receiving any benefits under USDA crop insurance, FmHA loan, storage facility, disaster payment, price support or other Commodity Credit Corporation programs.

Obviously, at the Federal level we cannot stop foreign interests from engaging in farm operations in any particular State. However, we can eliminate any Federal incentive that might encourage such foreign investments.

The bills I am introducing today are intended to do just that and I urge my colleagues to give them their careful consideration.

CONGRESSIONAL SALUTE TO D.W. McKENZIE

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call to the attention of the U.S. House of Representatives a very special public servant who has performed his most important job with dedication and success over a period of nearly three decades.

On March 27, 1988, friends, family members, elected officials and his working associates will honor Mr. Dee W. McKenzie, Public Works Director for Sacramento County, for his many years of outstanding service to the people of his community.

Mr. McKenzie is retiring from his position with Sacramento County without much fanfare or notice, but those of us who know how important our roads, streets and highway systems are feel a very personal sense of gratitude to him for his tireless efforts in this important area of critical infrastructure development and maintenance. During his tenure with Sacramento County, Mr. McKenzie was largely responsible for the construction of three bridges and road systems across the American River that tie important segments and suburbs of the metropolitan community together through a coordinated transportation network.

Not surprisingly, Mr. McKenzie also is the person most responsible for bringing Sacramento County out of the dark ages of sewer disposal by leading efforts to finance and construct a regional wastewater treatment plant.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the people of Sacramento, I would like to take this opportunity to personally thank Mr. McKenzie for his many years of dedicated service to our community and extend my personal best wishes to him and his family for a very happy and successful retirement.

REAGAN NOT SERIOUS ABOUT ARMS CONTROL

HON. BARNEY FRANK

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, it has sadly become apparent in the last several months that the Reagan administration has no serious interest in arms control or arms reduction. One of the areas in which agreement to control nuclear arms is likeliest is that of a cessation of nuclear tests. A verifiable agreement to stop all nuclear testing between the United States and the Soviet Union would be an enormous step on behalf of a more peaceful and stable world. An end to testing would give some assurance to people that newer and more terrible—and potentially more destabilizing—weapons were not being developed.

In recent weeks, the Soviet Union has been far more forthcoming on this issue than it has been in a long time. The Soviets have been observing a moratorium on testing, and have been far more willing than previously to discuss the critical issue of verification. We cannot be sure that the Soviets are interested in signing a fully verifiable treaty to ban all nuclear tests, and, tragically, because of the apparent lack of interest in the Reagan administration in achieving this goal, we may never know what the Soviets are willing to agree to.

President Reagan and his national security advisors have become more and more clearly hostile to the notion of negotiating an end to nuclear tests. Large majorities in both Houses of Congress have urged the administration to get on with the issue of nuclear test bans. But this administration continues to refuse to support the work of its Republican predecessors in the area of nuclear tests. The President will not agree to ratification of treaties already agreed to, and he will make no serious effort to negotiate a comprehensive test ban.

It is official policy of this Government to oppose nuclear proliferation but a government which insists on continuing nuclear testing, and refuses to explore the seriousness of a Soviet offer of a ban all tests, has little persuasive force in trying to lead others into a nonnuclear commitment.

William V. Shannon, former American Ambassador to Ireland, is a very thoughtful and independent analyst of American foreign policy. He has by no means been uniformly critical of the President, and indeed, in his recent article published in the Boston Globe headlined "An Opportunity for Arms Control, but the President is Not Listening," he makes statements partially supportive of the star wars program with which I disagree. There are other statements in there with which I and others might take issue, but the central point of Mr. Shannon's article is a telling and undeniable one: President Reagan does not appear to be seriously interested in arms reduction.

I ask that Mr. Shannon's article be printed here.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR ARMS CONTROL, BUT THE PRESIDENT IS NOT LISTENING

(By William V. Shannon)

The prospects are poor for a significant agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union to reduce the number of nuclear weapons. President Reagan has resumed weapons testing in Nevada and rejected the Soviet proposal for a comprehensive nuclear test ban. He believes that further testing will enhance America's relative military strength.

The new Soviet leadership headed by Mikhail Gorbachev wants to stabilize the military competition at existing levels. Since the gross national product of the Soviet Union is little more than half that of the United States and since the technological gap between the two economies is widening. Gorbachev and his associates would presumably like to cut back on military spending and shift resources to more productive uses.

The Reagan administration sees this as an opportunity not to slow down and possibly halt the arms race but to "close the gap" between ourselves and the Russians. There is no doubt that the Soviet Union by a sustained drive has achieved what can be seen as military superiority over the United States. It has more long-range missiles on land and in submarines, and more warheads. In terms of medium-range missiles and warheads aimed at Western Europe, it has more than the British and French combined, plus US cruise and Pershing missiles.

With regard to conventional forces, the Russians outnumber the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Western Europe, deploy a sizable army along the border with China, and have several divisions fighting a nasty little war in Afghanistan.

It is equally true, however, that this military superiority is not sufficiently great to guarantee the Soviets victory in a major war. A nuclear war remains an adventure in mutual suicide.

When there is an arms race under way, military planners on both sides can always see the need for testing new weapons. The United States, for example, is now working on a new missile to be launched from submarines that will be powerful enough and accurate enough to reach every land-based missile site in the whole of the Soviet Union. If work proceeds on the Strategic Defense Initiative ("star wars") project, this country might eventually have a defensive system strong enough to blunt any Soviet counterattack.

Both the new submarine-launched missile and "star wars" are immensely attractive if one assumes, as military planners tend to do, that a major war is inevitable. A halt to testing new offensive weapons and new defensive systems makes sense only if one assumes that a nuclear war would be an unimaginable catastrophe and that it is the first duty of statesmen to try to diminish the possibility of its occurring.

Although President Reagan unquestionably and sincerely thinks of himself as a man of peace, it is not at all clear that he has thought through the implications of nuclear warfare. Unlike all of his post-World War II predecessors, he has consistently given arms control a low priority. He has opposed every arms-control agreement beginning with President Kennedy's Limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty in 1963 and including President Nixon's Antiballistic Missile Treaty and the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT I) in 1972 and President Carter's SALT II in 1979.

Reagan has been obsessed with notions of American military weakness and of Soviet cheating. Soviet strength, and Soviet aggression. Only the other day he was recalling in an interview American military maneuvers in 1941 when some soldiers were using wooden sticks for lack of sufficient rifles.

If the details of on-site inspections could be worked out, a comprehensive ban on all nuclear testing could dramatically slow the arms race and be a long step toward a more stable peace, it would be another great gain if both sides reaffirmed the ABM treaty and banned antisatellite weapons in outer space. Except for Edward Teller and the coterte of young scientists gathered around him at the Livermore Radiation Laboratory in California, physicists are overwhelming of the opinion that defensive systems in space would confer no lasting advantage that the other superpower could not overcome.

The chief value of "star wars" is that it has made the Soviet leaders more amenable to discussing arms control. If "star wars" were sacrificed now in exchange for a Soviet agreement to scale down the number of nuclear warheads on longrange missiles and bombers from about 10,000 on each side of about 1,000, the savings in money and the gain in mutual confidence and stability would be enormous. But this will not happen.

In President Reagan, this country has a leader who hears the trumpet call of the cavalry and dreams of victory.

RETURN TRIP TO CENTRAL AMERICA

HON. VIN WEBER

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. WEBER. Mr. Speaker, one of my constituents, Mrs. Linda Westrom, recently traveled to Central America a second time to see the changes occuring in Nicaragua, El Salvador, and Costa Rica since her trip in 1984.

As we continue to prepare ourselves for another vote on aiding the Nicaraguan democratic resistance. I urge my colleagues to read Mrs. Westrom's report. Her first-hand report reiterates the importance of these countries to the future of her people and to the United States. The future lies in our support of efforts to ensure that these people retain their right to basic civil liberties.

The report follows:

REPORT ON CENTRAL AMERICAN TRIP, COSTA RICA, NICARAGUA, AND EL SALVADOR, JANUARY 18–28, 1986

(By Linda Westrom)

PREFACE

In November 1984, I visited the countries of Mexico, El Salvador and Nicaragua. This was with a group sponsored by the Augsburg College Center for Global Service and Education. It was a trip purported to show us the root causes of poverty and injustice. What it proved to be was a liberal, biased message telling us that the root causes of poverty and injustice was the "evil, capitalist United States." Another participant, Jane Otten of Big Fork, Montana, and I wrote a report on our findings of this trip, which was printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on April 16, 1985.

In January 1986, I again visited El Salvador, Nicaragua, and also Costa Rica. This time the group was CODECA, Council for Democracy in Central America, led by Gay Johnson of Denver, Colorado. It was very worthwhile as I could again verify many of the facts and feelings from the first trip.

The United States is so vast, that we often forget that the countries in Central America are sovereign nations because of their proximity to one another. To us geographically, they seem similar to our states.

COSTA RICA

Costa Rica is a small, agricultural country of 2.5 million people. They are a democracy and important ally of the United States. National security, foreign policy and economic policies are prime topics of discussion in this country.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS

At the time of our visit, the presidential election was two weeks away. The enthusiasm of the people in the campaigns was marvelous. Children were included, giving away pamphlets and flags. According to the Editor of La Nacion, Eduardo Ulibarri, there was not a major issue in this campaign as the two parties had a high degree of consensus. Corruption had become a minor issue, with charges of different kinds.

There was a consensus between the parties that an economic policy is vital. Costa Rica has a debt of four billion dollars. According to Ulibarri, the government previously thought that it was cheaper to import than produce, and to pay for the imports, credit was obtained and then Costa Rica could not pay the credit.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Chamber of Commerce in Costa Rica is now 70 years old. The Chamber President, Armando Guarida, listed their objectives, "First in our minds is the interest of our country. We defend private enterprise. There is no liberty or democracy without private enterprise." They are trying to change the tax codes to encourage private investments. Unfortunately, they cannot change their geographical location. As Leonard Ferris of the Chamber told us, "North Americans are geographically ignorant. They come down here, interested in investing, but when they realize that Nicaragua is right next door, they leave on the next plane and take their money with them."

An additional burden on their economic stability is the large number of refugees flooding in from Nicaragua. The refugees are willing to work, but there are not enough jobs available for both Costa Ricans and refugees.

NATIONAL SECURITY

Foreign policy and national security are linked together, and the major cause for alarm is Nicaragua. Costa Rica did assist the Sandinistas to come to power, and Costa Rica still carries a balance of 100 million dollars which the Sandinistas owe them.

Because Costa Rica has no standing army, they must depend on their civil guards, about 4500, and their rural guards, about 3500. Thus, the massive buildup of men, armaments and air power in Nicaragua is exceedingly ominous.

Foreign policy as linked to the United States is good, Ulibarri told us. "We have similar values, interest, and political values. Here, it is unpopular to be against the United States." In addition, he said, "We do not see pressure from the United States in foreign policy (as related to Nicaragua), although we do in economic policies." However, a note of wariness was evident as he told us that some Costa Ricans would like the United States to solve Costa Rica's problems. They would like the United States to invade Nicaragua or to prevent Nicaragua from invading Costa Rica. "We are somewhat skeptical of the degree of commitment, however. The United States' stand in international affairs is not necessarily a longlasting policy.

Foreign policy in regards to their other neighbors is good. Panama, for instance, has a national government with no desire to expand so there are good relations there. Also, there are good, strong relations with other Central America countries, especially, the three who have had elections, Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador.

The Catholic Church in Costa Rica is free and uncensored. Archbishop Ramon Arrietta spoke to us one evening. His comments on the coming election were that the church tells the people that we are going to elect many people and to be sure to choose the best.

NICARAGUA

Nicaragua has now become the country of the "haves" and the "have-nots". The "haves" are now the Sandinistas, who have effectively extended their system of controls to exclude the "have-nots" who comprise those who do not embrace the party line 100%. The problems are rife, the blame is easy to place—always the United States.

The Sandinista flag is displayed beside the National flag of Nicaragua. The Sandinista party army has effectively become the national army. The spy system, or the CDS block system, has systematically put everyone in reach of the Nine Comandantes.

MISKITO, SUMO AND RAMA INDIANS

The Miskito Indians know all too well the results of opposing the controls of the Sandinistas. After Somoza was ejected, the Miskito Indians were willing to work with the Sandinistas for a better Nicaragua. Too late they realized the cost. Their automony was ignored, their culture was ignored, their livelihood was ignored, they were persecuted for their religious beliefs, their claims to their land were ignored. At first, they fled their land, but then they returned to fight back, this time with bullets.

Now, even though the Sandinistas have publicly stated their government policy was a mistake, Miskito Indians question the validity of the Sandinistas' statements. In visiting with two Miskito Indians they questioned, "If they admit they were in error, why are they still committing these atrocities against us? Why are they still persecuting us for our religious beliefs? Why did they promise to accept our claims to our land, and then deny them the next day? Why do they still take our homes and or businesses?"

One of our group asked if he could get to the east side of Nicaragua, where the Miskito, Rama and Sumo Indians live. According to the Miskito Indians we spoke to, he would have to come across the sea. Later, in visiting with a journalist from La Barricada, the Sandinista's party-line newspaper, she told us of a plane which goes from Managua to the east side. But, permission must first be obtained from the Ministry of Interior, the plane holds only 30 people, goes once a week, and preference is given to people who live on the East side.

The Miskito Indians and also a man from the FDN whom we spoke to, asked for our aid. They asked for food, uniforms, and socks and boots. They asked for medicine, communication equipment, boats, motors, guns and ammunition. They specifically and repeatedly stated they do not want United States people to fight for them. They are willing to do the fighting, they said, and the dying. The Miskito Indians and the man from FDN want their children to live in freedom and accept the fact that they themselves may have to die to accomplish this.

They also feel that this is a conflict that Nicaraguan citizens must solve. In total contrast, the journalist from La Barricada, and Martin Vega, from the Ministry of Foreign Relations deny citizenship to any who fight against the Sandinistas. The contras are regarded as mercenaries who fight for a foreign country, we were told. The Cuban, PLO, East German, Libyan and Russian presence were either ignored or not considered foreign countries. The only ones that the Sandinistas will negotiate with, they said, is the United States.

CENSORSHIP

Censorship is a major tool of the Sandinistas. Last October 15, 1985, the Sandinistas took further measures. The Catholic Church is now forbidden to be on the radio, (television access had been previously denied.) A bulletin issued from the Catholic Church was seized on the grounds it was hostile to the Sandinistas. To justify seizing this bulletin, the Sandinistas changed articles, re-printed it on church letter-head paper, and then seized it.

According to the journalist at La Barracada, they also do not like the censorship. "However", she said, "it is necessary, because we are at war and have political foes, who are always pretending to attack. Everyone should be responsible for censorship so as not to cause chaos. Those who transgress should be fined or closed. This is not the way it is now, but that is what we want. The irresponsibility of La Prensa is affecting everybody and the freedom of the press. People need accurate information, but La-Prensa is only provoking unrest and upheaval. As an example, La Prensa wrote about the price of sugar, and that it would be rationed. So, people went out and bought it, to hoard it, and the price went up. Barricada also wrote about it, but with information to get a better system. We explained that the cane fields are lacking for workers and that we need to have more workers to get more sugar. Where are the workers? They are at war, out fighting."

RATIONING

It is now illegal to speak of scarcities, which also include butter, milk, and meat. Food is rationed and each person gets 4 oz. of rice and 1 lb. of beans. Clothing is also rationed and each person gets 2 shirts, 2 pairs of pants, and 1 pair of underpants in 6 months. A ration card is received for attendance at block meetings. Water is also rationed now. The water is turned off two days a week, from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Personal rights are non-existent if you are a have-not in Ncaragua. The private people that we spoke to in Nicaragua, heads of non-Sandinista unions, professional people, all mentioned the lack of habeus corpus. Most said that they, too, had been in Sandinista jails. They were all aware that at any time of the day or night, they could again be picked up by the Sandinista soldiers, their businesses confiscated, given a number instead of a name and thrown into jail.

INFLATION AND ECONOMY

The economy of Nicaragua is reflected by the inflation and is a major problem for the people. At the airport, travelers must exchange $60 into cordobas, with the rate of exchange at 28 cordobas to $1.00. At the Intercontinental Hotel, where we stayed, the exchange rate was 750 cordobas to $1.00. The black market rate now ranges anywhere from 900 to 1200 cordobas to $1.00.

A law was recently passed that everyone must put their cash in a bank, and use a checking account.

There are 5 major laws pertaining to the economic system. 1. Law of export. This empowers the government to have a military monopoly on exports. The people sell to the government and the government then sells the produce where and as they wish. 2. Law of imports. People must buy from the government and cannot import for their own business. 3. Law of internal trade. The government tells people what price to sell for, from whom to buy, to whom to sell, when to sell and where. 4. Finance system. The banks are monopolized by the state and this also includes insurance. 5. National system of salaries. People are permanently "pigeon holed" in 28 categories. To be promoted, an entepreneur must ask permission of the labor industry.

Any job application now includes questions on class extraction, political and ideological background, if the person fought against Somoza, and who with and why or why not.

The national debt of Nicaragua now stands at 6 billion dollars, which does not include the military debt. Contrary to the propaganda of the Sandinistas, the economy was deteriorating long before the contra activities began taking a toll.

Esso and Shell signs are still seen, and Nicaragua still can buy from these companies. However, one man said, "these companies are very business like"—in other words, they expect to be paid.

Several members of COSEP signed and sent a critique of the economic system under the Sandinistas to the Nine Commandantes in October of 1981. For their efforts, some were put in jail for up to seven months, and others managed to leave the country just ahead of the Sandinista soldiers.

FREEDOM OF RELIGION

Freedom of religion is almost non-existent now in Nicaragua. The Sandinistas state that they have no official religion. They insist that God does not exist. Oddly enough, they also insist that God is against the Revolution. Thus, they have a standard reply for all situations.

Although Nicaragua is predominantly Catholic, there are also Protestant denominations who have been repeatedly harrassed. Campus Crusade, Child Evangelism Fellowship, the Nicaraguan Bible Society, Assembly of God are among these. Jimmy Hassan of Campus Crusade for Christ reported in a recent article that the Sandinista authorities told him, "The problem is that you preach to young people about Jesus Christ, and because of that, they separate themselves from Marxism. And we will never permit this in Nicaragua." This was borne out by a billboard in Managua which proclaimed that God is against the Revolution.

There are Catholic priests who claim to have no problems with the Sandinistas, who have not been harrassed, or censored.

According to Msgr. Carballo, there are 320 priests in Nicaragua and 15 are for the Sandinistas. In addition, there are priests in Nicaragua who are not officially registered with the Catholic Church of Nicaragua.

One recent mass, organized by the Sandinistas, paid homage to and used the photos of guerrilla leaders who had died and were now proclaimed as heroes. The Columbian terrorists who assassinated the 12 magistrates were also hailed as heroes. We were told of baptisms in which the child was baptized in the name of Carlos Fonseca, a Sandinista who died in 1976.

The appointment to the office for Cardinal for Obando y Bravo was dismissed as a contrived and political appointment, the Sandinista people told us.

Cardinal Obando y Bravo faces many harrassments, including having his mail censored, speaking invitations delivered too late, telephone calls at odd hours, death threats and limited mobility.

CONTRAS

The Contras, or freedom fighters, came into existence under several different people. One was Eden Pastora, who had been a Sandinista leader. He had been instrumental in the taking of the National Palace in 1978. After the 1979 takeover, Pastora became disillusioned and left Nicaragua in 1981. According to the Sandinista authorities now, Eden Pastora was not a "true revolutionary and did not understand the full depth of the Revolution."

Propaganda of the Sandinistas says that the Contras consist of former National Guardsmen who are fighting to return to the old days under Somoza. In actuality, in the Contras, there are 13 National Guardsmen and these held a rank lower than captain. In addition there are 53 MDs and there are 43 former Sandinistas, according to a spokesman from the FDN.

The Sandinistas point to their "accomplishments" in the decrease in infant mortality rates, of being named a model government in health care by WHO.

The literacy campaign boasts that now people can sign their name and read up to a 6th grade level. When asked about the textbooks and their content, such as: 2 grenades plus 2 grenades equals 4 grenades, the reply was: "Education is not neutral. Look at these books for yourself." But to see them, we would have to go to the Nicaraguan Embassy in Washington, D.C.

When questioned about the huge national debt, the human rights violations, the reply of the Sandinistas was to point to other countries who had larger debts and more human rights violations.

FUTURE FOR PEOPLE

Repeatedly we were told by Nicaraguan people that they, too, fought against Somoza. They, too, gave the Sandinistas a chance to prove that as they had been good revolutionaries, they could govern well. But now they realize that the Marxist-Leninist line had been from the beginning. Now they recognize that the Sandinistas have formed a totalitarian government. "Other people in South America talk about us and we don't have the right to talk about ourselves," they told us.

No one wanted to go back to Somoza's dictatorship, or even make comparisons. But many felt that those days were not as oppressive, or devoid of human rights as now. Fear makes it difficult to live and work, we were told. Some regretfully admitted having doubts about trusting their own family members.

In capitalism, one man told us, he who does not work does not eat or have a place to live. But, under Communism, if you do not obey, you do not eat or have a place to live.

EL SALVADOR

El Salvador, also, has a history of juntas, coups and violence, and the last revolution was in 1979. Since that time, there has been an effort to stabilize the country by strengthening the economy, by free elections, and by respecting human rights.

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

Although they have made progress, they do have problems, and complex problems.

AGRARIAN REFORM

The Agrarian Reform which took the land from the large land-owners and gave it to the peasants is still in the first phase, the coop phase. The smallest acreage taken over by the government was 40 hectares although most acreages seized were 500 hectares or more. The landowners were paid with 25% cash and 75% bonds. As of yet, title to the land remains in the coop, and not with the peasants.

Even though peasants had worked the land for years, they were woefully lacking in management skills. Organization, bookkeeping, bank loans, marketing were new skills that needed to be learned, and quickly. Because these problems had not been anticipated and planned for, production dropped. This in turn, resulted in more economic problems for the whole country.

The coffee growers who before marketed their own coffee on an individual basis, no longer do so. The government buys the coffee and markets it. The coffee growers are protesting that the incentive to take the financial risks to grow the coffee is no longer there. Also, the growers feel that coffee is not being marketed by people with know-how and is only being used a political tool.

At the same time that the land was taken away, the banks were nationalized. No forewarning was given, soldiers marched in and told the employees that the banks and all furnishings now belonged to the state.

GUERRILLA MOVEMENT

Coronel Hernandez of COPREFA, the press arm of the military, gave us a view of the guerrilla movement which still exists in El Salvador. Helped by Cuba and Nicaragua from the beginning, the guerrillas originally numbered about 15 thousand men. But because the Salvadoran army has become better trained in guerrilla warfare, the guerrillas now number 4 to 6 thousand men. The guerrillas have also changed their tactics. Before, they would stop traffic and extract a "war tax" from motorists, and would also stop the agricultural products from getting to market. The Salvadoran army now has regular patrols and guards in key areas and roads. This has forced the guerrillas to resort to small groups who commit acts of sabotage, especially of electricity and communication.

HUMAN RIGHTS

Human rights violations was and is major concern. At the height of the Death Squads, murders numbered up to 800 a month. Human rights improvement thus became a contingent of aid from the United States. We visitied the Commission of Human Rights and talked to Sonja Mundoz. There are 3 offices located in different parts of El Salvador where people can come and report human rights violations. This group visits the security forces daily, and records names of captives. These prisoners can be kept in a garrison for 15 days. During this time, private interviews can take place, family can take medicine, clothing and food to them. If they are sent to another place, the Human Rights group keeps track of them. The figures given by the Human Rights Commission of atrocities are those that they have verified.

If Salvadoran soldiers are involved in atrocities, they are discharged from the army and then tried by a civilian court.

Interestingly enough, the guerrillas will not allow the Human Rights Commission to investigate atrocities committed by guerrillas.

Progress has been made in human rights. A small thing, but important, is that policemen now wear visible ID numbers.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

Freedom of the press is alive and well in El Salvador. President Duarte had made the rate of exchange official in El Salvador—5 colones to $1.00 and the black market was 6 colones to $1.00—and also frozen the price of the Family Food Basket. Many people disagreed with this, and were on TV giving their viewpoint.

The newspaper that we visited, El Diario de Hoy, often disagrees and says no. One group took out a subscription to this newspaper in the name of President Duarte.

FREE ELECTIONS

March of 1984 was a major stepping stone for the people of El Salvador. Elections, free elections, were held, and Duarte was elected President. Then, in March of 1985, free elections were held to elect a national assembly.

Although El Salvador is a very small country with a large population, they would like to be completely self sufficient. Many people we spoke to acknowledged the assistance of the United States, and also acknowledged that they still need our help.

PRESIDENT DUARTE

President Duarte has been continually criticized in the media of the United States as being merely a puppet of the United States. El Salvador had had a history of upheavals, of military coups and juntas. Democracy does not come easy. As one lady put it, "He is the best of the worst."

The Arena party would like to see Duarte out of office. In meeting with their president, Freddy Cristiani, and their treasurer, Orlando Menendez, they told us their party's philosophy. They believe in private enterprise with as few restrictions as possible. The agrarian reform is a disaster, they said. The majority of the population is below 40, and education is badly needed. Because the economy is struggling, most children must work in agriculture and cannot finish school. Then, too, there are not enough schools to meet the need.

DISPLACED AND REFUGEE CAMPS

The uncertainty and upheaval produced by the guerrillas sabotage and fighting have resulted in approximately 500 thousand people who have left their homes. Those who have left El Salvador are termed refugees, and those who have re-located are termed displaced people.

Because these people regarded their moving as temporary, the government has no policy or regulations in regards to camps. Some families have gone to relations and resettled themselves. But approximately 5 to 8% end up in a camp. There is a constant movement from camp and camp, and some families have been in their camps up to 5 years. Now the government has instituted the Ministry of Planning to bring order out of this chaos.

People living in these camps have chosen sides, either the guerrilla side or the government side. If they are linked to the guerrilla side, they go to the private church camps. If they are linked to the government side, they go to the government run camps.

Aid comes to El Salvador for these people from about 45 different organizations, from the Red Cross and the UN, and denominational church groups. The private church groups are of the few teaching the people a trade to enable them to be self supporting.

The problems surfacing in these camps are many. Although these people receive only the most basic needs, there is a growing dependency on these handouts. Families have been disrupted, and fathers are not there to give families stability. There is delinquency, prostitution and drug and alcohol abuse. And, because the economy is down, there are fewer jobs available for all Salvadoran people, resulting in a lack of motivation for these displaced people.

PROGRESS

Even though El Salvador is often portrayed in our media as war-torn and in constant upheaval, there is progress being made. Particularly noteworthy is the people who are returning to El Salvador to work for their country's future. These people had lived and worked in the United States for many years, and have now moved back to El Salvador. One lady to whom I spoke lives in the United States, but her children live with her ex-husband in El Salvador. When I asked if she didn't miss them, she replied "Yes, but I think there are too many freedoms in the United States. It is better for them here."

El Salvador contends with the guerrillas being aided by the Sandinistas of Nicaragua, and they are very aware of the political ideologue of the Sandinistas. Coronel Hernandez stated his belief that the Sandinistas do not have the people's support in Nicaragua, and that El Salvador must help the contras, not militarily but in other ways. Both he and Rolando Monterosa of El Diario de Hoy told us that if the Sandinistas are successful, their next stop will be El Salvador.

SUMMARY

In Central America, Nicaragua has become the focal point. In the American hemisphere, Nicaragua has become the focal point.

Even though her Sandinista Marxist/Leninist history is brief—since 1979—she has gained world-wide notoriety.

The phrase "Revolution without borders" applies to the Sandinista Marxist/Leninist movement. This alone makes her neighbors exceedingly nervous. The traditional Latin American dictator is harmful for his people, but not for his neighbors, as Armando Guardia of Costa Rica told us.

Terrorism. Kidnapping. Hijacking. Murder. Each has been linked to the network of which Nicaragua has become a part.

Disinformation. Nicaragua has not only employed a public relations firm in the United States to disseminate disinformation, but has also had assistance of the expertise of the USSR KGB.

Throughout history, indecisiveness is catastrophic. We of the United States need to make a decision. Will we assist Nicaragua to become a model for the world—the first country who won against Communism. Or will we continue to vacillate, giving the Sandinistas more time to further oppress Nicaraguan citizens.

We must help the Contras, the Freedom Fighter, the Miskito Indians, the Rama and Sumo Indians. These people deserve the right to participate in governing themselves, to have freedom of religion, to have freedom of speech, and above all, to have freedom from fear. One member of our group put it in perspective, that this is really a fight for men's souls.

NATIONAL GOVERNORS' ASSOCIATION POSITION ON SUPERFUND

HON. JAMES J. FLORIO

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. FLORIO. Mr. Speaker, the conference committee is currently considering the many important issues involved in final legislation to extend and expand the superfund toxic waste cleanup program. The States have been partners with the Federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in the implementation of this program and have many valuable insights to share with us.

Recently, the National Governors' Association wrote to members of the conference committee to explain its priorities for the final legislation. The NGA letter underscores the importance of strong, specific uniform national cleanup standards in the legislation as well as the procedures that will guarantee meaningful State involvement in the cleanup process. I recommend the NGA position to my colleagues as the Congress continues to develop final legislation.

National Governors' Association,
March 13, 1986.

Hon. James J. Florio,
U.S. House of Representatives, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Congressman Florio: The Superfund hazardous waste cleanup program is the cornerstone of the nation's effort to protect the public health and the environment by correcting past mismanagement of hazardous wastes, and the National Governors' Association strongly supports its reauthorization as a top priority of this Congressional session. As Chairman and Vice-Chairman of the NGA Energy and Environment Committee, we are writing to ask your attention to several issues which are critical to the states and to the success of the Superfund cleanup effort. In particular we urge you to:

Adopt the provisions of the House bill regarding cleanup standards. The Governors strongly support the presumption that applicable or relevant and appropriate state or federal standards will guide cleanup decisions. Under the House bill the EPA Administrator retains sufficient flexibility to waive such standards when there is a substantial evidence as to the necessity of meeting a different level of cleanup, but we believe better, more permanent cleanups will result when existing standards are used.

Maintain the opportunity provided by the House bill for "substantial and meaningful involvement" by the states in the initiation, development, and selection of the remedial action to be undertaken. This should specifically include an opportunity to review and comment on the remedial investigation and feasibility study, the planned remedial action, the engineering design, and relevant technical data and reports, as well as notice and an opportunity to participate in settlement negotiations.

Preserve permits issued under state law as provided by the Senate bill, for both on-site and off-site cleanups. During House markup the Governors also argued strongly in favor of maintaining permits under federal law, with the exception of permits under Subtitle C of the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act where remedial action is taken on the site of the release. We do not believe that state or federal permits will be a substantial cause of delay in cleanups, yet they will be instrumental in ensuring that the public is adequately protected in the event incineration, underground injection, or other remedial measures transfer waste residues off site or into other media.

Adopt the provisions of the House bill establishing a response program for the release of petroleum into the environment from an underground storage tank. Leaking underground tanks represent a serious and growing public health threat, and we believe the time has come to address this problem.

We know that the decisions you must make in reauthorizing Superfund are difficult, but the national interest requires a full five-year reauthorization of this important statute. We would like to work you in the weeks ahead to secure the reauthoriztion, and hope you will contact us if we can be of any assistance. We have enclosed a copy of the NGA position on Superfund, and will very much appreciate your consideration of our views on these matters.

Sincerely,

Governor Anthony S. Earl,
Chairman, Committee on Energy and Environment.
Governor Arch A. Moore, Jr.,
Vice-Chairman, Committee on Energy and Environment.

SUPERFUND

The Governors believe that the protection of public health and the environment requires a major and very long-term commitment from businesses, the federal government, and the states to clean up abandoned and leaking hazardous waste sites, spills, and other releases of hazardous and toxic substances. As the next step in this commitment, the Governors urge the Congress to expeditiously reauthorize and extend for five years the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA/"Superfund"). In reauthorizing this important law, the Congress should address the following issues:

Response Trust Fund. The Governors urge the Congress to reauthorize and expand the Hazardous Substance Response Trust Fund. The fund should be increased to at least $9 billion so that it will be adequate to address the sites on the national priority list and new sites, including hazardous waste facilities which may close before final RCRA permits are issued. At least one-fifth of the total trust fund amount should be made available each year. To develop additional revenues for the Superfund, the Governors recommend that the petroleum and chemical feedstock taxes, which are the mainstays of the existing fund, be increased. In developing any other revenue sources, the Governors favor taxes which create economic incentives for minimization and proper disposal of hazardous wastes as a preferred alternative to increasing the general fund share of the Superfund program beyond the current level.

State Response Funds. It is imperative that the states have adequate resources to carry out their responsibilities under Superfund and to respond to situations in the absence of EPA action. CERCLA should be amended to repeal any preemption of the development or use of state trust funds, including those based on chemical feedstock and waste-end taxes, for purposes related to environmental protection and restoration.

State Role. The Governors believe that centralized decision-making has unnecessarily slowed the Superfund program, and that public health protection demands quicker response actions. The remedial action program is particularly cumbersome and should be streamlined. The Superfund program can be made more efficient if the states and regional offices are given larger decision-making authorities than they currently have. In particular, states should have the option to take the lead role in planning and implementing Superfund response actions, with a right of first refusal to assume the lead at particular sites. State concurrence should be required before EPA or responsible parties undertake any removal or remedial action under CERCLA. The law should allow states to develop a statewide generic response for sites on the national priorities list, and the administrator of EPA should be required to approve such programs within a reasonable period of time or show cause why he has not done so. Once this program has been approved, the state should be able to assume full and complete responsibility for management of the cleanup effort at national priorities list sites where it chooses to take the lead. Such responsibility should include establishing priorities, undertaking remedial investigations/feasibility studies, selecting contractors, conducting removals or remedial cleanups, and similar actions.

Cost Recovery. The Governors urge the Congress to provide clear guidance to the EPA to clean up hazardous sites as the first priority and negotiate with responsible parties second. If negotiations have not succeeded after a reasonable period, litigation is appropriate. The current practice of the state and the federal government litigating separately to recover their respective share of cleanup costs is duplicative and wasteful. It should be made clear that states already have a cause of action to recover costs at sites where they have contributed matching funds, and the states and the EPA should be directed to agree that one or the other will have the lead in litigation for full recovery of both the state and federal shares.

Cleanup Standards. EPA, the states, and responsible parties have been hampered in site cleanup decisions by the lack of a clear definition of "how clean is clean." The EPA should be directed to work in close cooperation with the states to develop criteria or guidelines to be included in the national contingency plan on the level of remedial action which is acceptable to protect public health and the environment. These criteria should reflect considerations such as relevant and appropriate federal and state standards, the hazardous or toxic materials involved, the environmental pathways which could lead to human exposure or environmental damage, the population at risk at a particular site, and the cost effectiveness of optional cleanup strategies.

State Program Grants. The Governors believe that Superfund cleanup will be faster and more effective if the states have adequate capacity to plan and implement the program. To develop such capacity, the fund should be used to support grants to states for program development, site identification and assessment, enforcement, oversight, and administrative expenses at all sites.

State Match. The Governors believe there is no justification for requiring a larger state match for Superfund cleanup at sites which have been publicly owned or operated than at privately owned sites. CERCLA should be amended to provide that the match required against cleanup actions is 10 percent at all sites, whether or not owned or operated by the state or a political subdivision. The 10 percent state share for sites owned or operated by states or political subdivisions should be considered a final settlement of all liability under CERCLA for the state or political subdivsion. In addition, the Governors believe that the Congress should liberalize conditions under which states may generate credits which can be used to offset the state match requirement for remedial actions. In particular, the period for which state cleanup expenditures can be credited should extend from January 1, 1978, to the date a cooperative agreement was signed or cleanup commenced at a particular site. Such credits should be useable against further cleanup at that site, or at other sites in the same state.

Operation and Maintenance Expenses. CERCLA should be amended to provide that the response trust fund should be used to support operation and maintenance activities for a specified period at sites after cleanup actions have been taken commensurate with the expected operation and maintenance life. It should be clear that these expenditures are subject to the same state match requirements as cleanup actions.

Post-Closure Liability. The Governors believe that the post-closure liability fund, established to provide monitoring and maintenance at hazardous waste sites beginning five years after closure, is not adequately funded and should be at least doubled in size. In addition, the law should be amended to extend the liability period for owners or operators from five to at least thirty years after closure. EPA should also be directed to review insurance requirements for owners and operators of hazardous waste facilities to ensure there are adequate resources available to perform monitoring and take any corrective actions necessary during the thirty years after closure. For purposes of cost recovery, the Superfund and states which have contributed matching funds should be considered priority claimants in bankruptcy proceedings against the owner or operator of any site or any other responsible party who declares bankruptcy before all closure requirements have been satisfied.

Natural Resource Damage Claims. The three-year window provided by CERCLA for states to file claims for damages for natural resources damage expired before the Department of the Interior published guidelines necessary to file such claims. The Department of the Interior should be directed to expeditiously develop such guidelines, and funds should be appropriated for that purpose. In addition, the window of opportunity for states to file such claims should be extended to at least five years after the date of enactment of the CERCLA reauthorization.

Federal Sites. Cleanup of federal sites should be expedited. EPA should have responsibility for assuring that remedial actions at federal sites are consistent with the national contingency plan. Federal site cleanups should not be financed by the trust fund.

Petroleum Exemption. Congress should affirm that, notwithstanding the "petroleum exemption," sites containing listed hazardous substances are within the scope of CERCLA coverage. This amendment is directed to the leaking underground storage tank problem. It is not the intent of the Governors that CERCLA apply to oil production and refining activities.

Voluntary Cleanups. The Governors believe that voluntary cleanup activities by responsible parties can make a significant contribution towards the nation's hazardous waste cleanup goals. To foster such voluntary cleanups, CERCLA should provide a mechanism through which responsible parties may negotiate and sign cleanup agreements with the federal government without having to admit to causing an "imminent and substantial endangerment." These agreements must be fully enforceable and should have clauses allowing cleanup negotiations to be reopened in the event additional environmental risks are discovered, which were unknown at the time the original cleanup agreement was developed or in the event a remedial action selected proves to be inadequate to protect human health and the environment. If negotiations with responsible parties do not result in acceptable cleanup agreements within a reasonable period, EPA should undertake regular cleanup, enforcement, and cost recovery actions. This recommendation is not intended to have any effect on other parties' suits against potentially responsible parties.

Land Disposal. The Governors recognize that CERCLA can play an essential role in the development, application, and siting of alternative hazardous waste disposal technologies. To that end, the Governors believe that EPA should consider alternative hazardous waste disposal technologies—for both on-site and off-site application—as the preferred means of disposal with regard to CERCLA remedial actions. Additionally, the Governors believe that CERCLA should be amended to prohibit deep-well injection and land burial of hazardous wastes removed from Superfund remedial action sites unless, consistent with P.L. 98-616, EPA determines that such disposal is acceptable under specified circumstances which protect human health and the environment.

THE FIRST REFORMED CHURCH OF POMPTON PLAINS, NJ

HON. DEAN A. GALLO

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. GALLO. Mr. Speaker, the spirit of rededication is the driving force of our American dream. We look to our past as a source of strength and guidance. No matter how far we may stray from the path of the past, we will eventually return to the way that is clearly marked for us throughout our history.

Forty years before the birth of our Nation, a small band of Dutch farmers gathered together in a new land.

In April 1736, a church was founded in the plains of Morris County, NJ. In 1986, 250 years later, that church, the First Reformed Church of Pompton Plains, celebrates a landmark anniversary.

The original church was dedicated on April 7, 1736, under the pastorate of the Rev. Johannes Van Driessen. The church prospered in its early years, with a membership of 72 in the spring of 1738. A new building was built in 1771, on land donated by Theunis Dey. This new building was located on what is now Newark Pompton Turnpike—the site of the present church.

Throughout the years, the church grew physically and spiritually. One hundred years after it was built, the church was enlarged and repaired under the leadership of the Rev. John Van Neste Schenck. The church was dedicated on November 22, 1671, 7 months after the 100th birthday of the church. It was also on that day, however, that the church family mourned the passing of their energetic minister.

Addressing the needs of parishioners from the surrounding towns, small chapels were built for the purpose of education. These chapels were located in various towns, including Wayne, Lincoln Park, and Towaco—known as Jacksonville at the time. Throughout the years, due to the growth of the mother church, these chapels came to form independent churches, most of which remain a part of the Reformed Church in America.

The decade of the 1900's brought tremendous growth to the church. With more people joining the congregation, the financial status of the church has enabled the construction of a "church house" in 1926, and a fellowship hall in 1965. But the period also brought tragedy to the life of the church, as well as growth. On October 24, 1937, little over a year after the bicentennial celebration of the church, the sanctuary was completely destroyed by fire. While the actual cause of the inferno is not known, faulty wiring seems probable. This tragic loss, however, brought out the invigorating spirit of the congregation and its dynamic minister, the Rev. Eugene H. Keator. One and a half years later on April 7, 1939, the 203rd anniversary of the church, a new building, larger than the old, was dedicated. This grand edifice, it should be noted, was completed free of debt.

In 1953, the church acquired another piece of property—the Mandeville home, adjacent to the church proper, which dates back to 1788. This old stone house, which once served as the Pompton Plains Post Office, is now the church manse.

During this special anniversary year, the congregation looks to a future of growth. Under the leadership of Rev. Andrew R. Rienstra, and associate pastor Vincent A. Fasano, the congregation renews its commitment to spreading the good news, both at home and around the world.

Spring is a time of rededication. Our religious tradition recognizes this need for renewal through the celebration that begins with Ash Wednesday and culminates with Pentecost Sunday.

On the occasion of the 250th Pentecost to be celebrated by the congregation of the First Reformed Church of Pompton Plains, we honor and recognize a tradition that is both religious and secular. Rooted in our history, it continues to grow upward toward the stars.

CATASTROPHIC ILLNESS

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert my Washington Report for Wednesday, March 26, 1986, into the Congressional Record:

Catastrophic Illness

In one public meeting after another, Hoosiers tell me of their worry that serious injury or illness could lead them to financial ruin. They point out that few families have the resources to meet the cost of catastrophic illness.

Their concerns are well-founded. Although rare, medical bills for devastating cases can easily exceed $100,000. Catastrophic illness can strike anyone, but the problem is especially severe for the elderly. More than 200,000 older persons each year are hospitalized for more than 60 days and are personally responsible for extraordinary medical costs. The cost of long-term care in a nursing home averages $60 a day, or $23,725 a year. Even with some coverage, illnesses such as a stroke or heart attack, or long-term disabling conditions like Alzheimer's disease or cancer, can quickly exhaust retirement funds saved from a lifetime of work.

Such costs have fueled discussion on the need for catastrophic health care coverage. Medicare, a major federal health insurance plan, is designed for acute, not long-term, illness. The 30 million older persons on Medicare have all their hospital bills covered for 60 days, after a deductible is paid. Illnesses lasting longer than 60 days can be devastating. Heavy coinsurance costs begin on the 61st day. Coinsurance can last up to 90 days longer. After that, Medicare payment ends.

Medicare patients must also worry about doctor's fees and nursing home costs. Government insurance pays part of approved doctors' charges, but, with major surgery, the remainder can total thousands of dollars. For nursing home care, Medicare pays only for short-term skilled care, not custodial care of any kind. Only after a patient is impoverished will Medicaid take over.

Almost two-thirds of Medicare beneficiaries now buy widely-advertised "Medigap" policies. These policies, costing between $500 and $1,500 a year, pay certain costs Medicare does not cover. Many people mistakenly believe these policies cover the costs of catastrophic illness. Many Medigap policies pay only for skilled care in a certified home and stop after 100 days, the time Medicare funds end. Insurance policies for long-term care still are not widely available.

There is broad agreement on the need for protection against the financial risks of catastrophic illness, but there are questions over how best to do so: What are the proper roles of the federal government and the private insurance industry? How should the financial burden of health care be distributed? Who should be eligible, and how comprehensive should coverage be? What are the long-term effects of different proposals? Various proposals suggest either a larger government role, greater reliance on the private insurance industry, or a mix of both.

Because of fiscal constraints, it is likely that any government plan would initially be limited to the elderly and would take up where Medicare insurance stops. One recent proposal by doctors and health care experts would expand the federal health insurance system. Its aim is to aid Medicare patients who need prolonged hospital or nursing home care, to reduce their costs, and to improve home health care benefits. Funds could come from a variety of sources, including increased social security taxes, a new tax on high income retirees, and increased Medicare premiums. Supporters stress the comprehensive coverage and widely shared costs of such a plan, while critics worry about the new taxes and broad program expansion in an era of fiscal restraint.

The Reagan administration prefers reliance on private insurers rather than on government. The Administration's proposed voucher system would allow recipients to buy policies from private insurers and group plans, comparable to Medicare's coverage, but not for long-term care. Some private policies provide limited long-term care. Such policies typically provide benefits of between $30-$60 per day for up to four years coverage of skilled and intermediate nursing home care, with varying home-care benefits sometimes included. Cost ranges from $200 yearly for limited coverage for those 55 years old to over $4,000 for broader coverage for those 75 or older. Supporters of vouchers maintain that the marketplace will assure cost-effective delivery of medical services, while critics charge that such a system lacks comprehensive coverage and will leave vulnerable people uncovered.

Other proposals would mix public and private involvement. In his state of the Union Address, the President directed former Indiana Governor Otis Bowen, now Secretary of Health and Human Services, to find ways to provide affordable insurance for those whose life savings are at risk from catastrophic illness. I commend this initiative. Dr. Bowen, before he became Secretary, had a plan to cover unlimited hospitalization and some physician charges not now under Medicare, with a limit on patient liability. Coverage would be funded by increased premiums. It is unclear if his study, due in December, will be similar. In addition, new tax laws would encourage investment in "individual medical accounts" to insure against catastrophic illness. Congress has held hearings on catastrophic health insurance, and limited hospital catastrophic proposals are expected. Other proposals mixing public and private involvement are broader in scope than the Bowen proposal, including coverage for long-term care and dental, eye, hearing and prescription costs. Debate on these proposals centers on breadth of coverage and funding.

I am impressed by the sense of urgency with which Hoosiers discuss the problems caused by catastrophic illnesses. I am also encouraged by the new attention we are giving the problem. I have made no judgment on the various proposals, but I expect any solution to rely on both the private and public sectors. Although shrinking budgets are an important restraint, it is essential that attention be given to catastrophic insurance for both acute and long-term illness. Only then will the widespread fear of the financial impact of catastrophic illness be eased.

A TRIBUTE TO MAESTRO SANDOR SALGO

HON. TONY COELHO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. COELHO. Mr. Speaker, on May 1, 1986, friends and admirers of Maestro Sandor Salgo, the music director and conductor of the Modesto Symphony, will gather to pay tribute to the maestro in honor of his 10th season with the symphony.

Maestro Salgo joined the Modesto Symphony in 1976. Since that time attendance has increased dramatically, and the symphony has consistently played to a sold-out house. Maestro Salgo has also worked hard to serve the Modesto community—he regularly arranges special concerts for senior citizens and children. He also has given a number of educational presentations to the community.

Maestro Salgo has received international acclaim for his excellence as a conductor and as a music director. He has served as a guest conductor with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra of London, the Staatsoper of Berlin; and the National Symphony Orchestra of Mexico. He received the Dinkelspeil Award from Stanford University for his outstanding service to undergraduate education there, and most recently was awarded the Chevalier of the National Order of Arts and Letters by the French Government in recognition of his contribution to French music in California.

I would like to join with Maestro Sandor Salgo's other admirers in expressing my deepest appreciation for all that he has done over the last decade for the Modesto Symphony and for the people of Modesto. I wish him continued success in the years to come.

THE NEVADA TEST SITE: ITS IMPACT ON THE STATE, THE NATION, AND THE WORLD

HON. HARRY REID

OF NEVADA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. REID. Mr. Speaker, the recent underground nuclear explosion at the Nevada test site has spurred international reaction to the testing program itself. This has occurred in the shadow of a test ban treaty resolution passed by the House on February 26, 1986.

I voted against the resolution. Of course, I believe that nuclear testing should eventually be stopped, but, Nevada should be protected in the process. It is critical to the State of Nevada and its people that we are provided with just compensation for the lost use of the land and the loss of jobs for at least 7,000 people.

That's why I would like to share again with you the speech I delivered on the floor of the House just prior to the vote on the test ban resolution.

Mr. Reid. Mr. Chairman, Nevada is a unique State. Not only does it have the bright lights of Las Vegas and the Strip, the beautiful alpine glacial lake of Lake Tahoe, but our State is unique in that it contains the only nuclear test territory in the Free World. On my trips out to the test site I have seen the destruction and the contamination of what was once beautiful and potentially productive land. I think it is difficult to describe unless you have been there. Not only did we have the atmospheric tests in the early days of testing, but since then we have had the underground testing and the whole countryside is a pockmark of holes from 100 feet to hundreds of feet deep. Hundreds and hundreds of bombs have laid waste to Nevada's precious countryside making it worthless for future generations.

When we tested in Micronesia after World War II we allowed them to be compensated for the damage done. The testing in Micronesia represents only a fraction of the testing activity we have seen over the last few decades in Nevada. We in Nevada expect the same or better treatment. This land is not only desert, it has a multitude of uses from grazing to mining to recreational activities. These economic opportunities are no longer available to Nevada.

Before I can support a comprehensive test ban it must include compensation for Nevada's scorched lands. Today I am introducing a resolution to have Congress express its sense that the United States should pay compensation to civilians working at the Nevada test site who lose their jobs due to ratification of a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty and to the State of Nevada for degradation of the land at the test site caused by nuclear weapons testing.

The Nevada test site presently employs about 7,000 men and women. If you include the support industries, the site generates nearly $1 billion for our economy. Many have come to depend on nuclear testing in Nevada for their livelihood.

Yes, we should stop testing eventually, but we cannot do that without provisions for the many families in Nevada who have come to depend on it in one way or another. I cannot support a bill that will not compensate Nevadans for this loss as well as the state for the loss of the countryside.

Nevadans should not be abandoned. I will be introducing, as I will talk about in a few minutes, a bill to provide for compensation for our land and for our people.

We in Nevada have accepted nuclear waste disposal on our doorstep and we have put up with decades of bombing in our backyard because we knew it was in the interests of our country. We are only asking for what we know we deserve.

PROPOSED CHANGES TO IMPROVE TVA MANAGEMENT

HON. RONNIE G. FLIPPO

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. FLIPPO. Mr. Speaker, earlier I discussed some of the background leading up to the management problems evident in the Tennessee Valley Authority today. In the near future I will be introducing legislation to improve the management structure of this agency which is so useful to the people of the Tennessee Valley and of the Nation. I want to share with my colleagues my thoughts on the proposed changes.

THE CORPORATE MODEL

In rhetoric and in fact, the TVA's corporate structure borrowed heavily from the corporate business world of the time of its creation as opposed to the general form for public institutions in a democratic society. No words in the act address the concepts of limitation of powers or of separation of powers inherent in the system of dual Federal State sovereignty or in the tripartite organization of the Federal Government. (The original board's attempt to divide administration of the TVA major programs among themselves is generally regarded as a disastrous experiment in management.) The Agency was even given broad blanket authority to conduct its business without the annual authorizations required of many programs. Only through the appropriations process did those who were paying the construction bills have a voice in operations of the TVA. When the national taxpayer said "no more" in the 1950's, the self-financing act transferred this obligation for power programs to the people who lived in the region and needed the energy if the region were to develop and prosper. The role of the electric program seemed to be growing in TVA's total program.

Franklin Roosevelt in 1933 had asked for "a corporation clothed with the power of government but possessed of the flexibility and initiative of private enterprise." The TVA Act itself states, "The board shall direct the exercise of all powers of the corporation." This is similar to the concept of the model corporation statute of the 1920's and 1930's, which stated: "The business of the corporation shall be managed by the board of directors."

The impossibility of such an arrangement has since been recognized in business literature and the model statute has been changed to reflex the more realistic concept: "The business of the corporation shall be managed under the direction of the board of directors.[1]

While private enterprise has been flexible and innovative in its approach to corporate governance, the same cannot be said of TVA. The TVA still clings to the concept that the three-member board can effectively manage the corporation (actually, any two members at any moment in time can direct the corporation). This fragments the responsibility and accountability.

The uniqueness of TVA, its roles and functions, limits the blanket adoption of the business corporate governance model for the agency. However, enough similarity to large private corporations exists—size, complexity, technical challenges, delivery of services, huge financial obligations, a large number of employees, diverse constituencies—to recommend modification of such a model of the governance structure which is found in the major business institutions in this country, such as General Motors, Ford, AT&T, and others.

The business corporation board model, with outside directors to monitor, oversee and regulate the day-to-day management by professionals, seems to offer other advantages for TVA because of the differences between the TVA and private business organizations.

TVA is not subject to the constraints of competition and the marketplace to the same extent as a business. Outside directors could provide a valuable new perspective of the feelings of consumer stockholders who must pay the bills TVA incurs.

TVA is not subject to regulatory review of its actions in its electric power operations as other utilities are. Outside directors could come closer to providing a more creditable armslength review of rate questions.

TVA does not have to respond to the pressures and probing of the financial markets before undertaking major projects. Outside directors could effectively seek justification of need before major projects are launched.

Thus, a broader based Board of concerned members, detached from the responsibilities of day-to-day operations, could provide useful policy guidance to TVA and service some of the functions listed above which are absent under the present governance arrangements.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE NEW BOARD

Generally, the same statutory requirements as apply to Board members now would apply to the members of the new Board. This involves U.S. citizenship, a belief in the feasibility and wisdom of the TVA Act, and a ban on financial interests in businesses which would be adversely affected by the success of TVA (primarily electric utilities and chemical fertilizers). Additionally, a requirement for geographic diversity would be added and the prohibition against engaging in any other business or professional activity would be removed.[2]

Citizens of the valley, in making recommendations to the President, and the President, in proposing nominations to the new TVA Board, should also consider in candidates the other attributes commonly sought in directors for large, complex organizations. These include:

First. Integrity;

Second. Wisdom;

Third. Independence;

Fourth. A valid knowledge or experience that can bear on TVA's problems and deliberations of the board;

Fifth. A record of accomplishment within organizations;

Sixth. An inquiring mind;

Seventh. A willingness to speak one's mind;

Eighth. An ability to challenge and stimulate management;

Ninth. An orientation to the future; and Tenth. A willingness to commit time and energy.

The proposal directs the President to consider for nominations the recommendation of the Governors, individual citizens, and business, industrial, labor, environmental, electric power distribution, and civic and service organizations. The proposal also calls for the President to seek qualified board members to reflect the diversity and needs of the service area, that is, no single constituency should dominate the board.

Essentially, the same political process which has applied to the selection of TVA directors for more than 50 years would still apply under the proposal. That is, interested constituencies of the TVA would make suggestions to the President who would send nominations to the Senate for public hearings and confirmation. At all points in the political process, the people of the region would still be free to express their thoughts on the nominees through the media, through their elected officials, and through other means of expression available to citizens of this country.

[1] The form of corporate governance which emerged for TVA could be said to reflect the public administration reform theme of the 20's which exaulted "professional" or "technocratic" management over "political" or "people-oriented" management. This reform effort's most enduring contribution to public administration has been the strong city manager movement.

[2] To assure geographic diversity the legislation requires that three of the board members be residents of Tennessee; one a resident of Alabama; one, Kentucky; one, Mississippi; one a resident of either Georgia, North Carolina or Virginia, and one a resident of any state in the Union. Terms would be for 3 years with reappointment possible for two additional terms.

What changes is the number of board members and their potential for increased contacts with the total constituency of TVA through the larger number of board members and the location of board members at diverse geographic points within the service area.

The critical difference under the proposal is in the function and purpose of the board. While the initial TVA board evolved into a three-person policy and management entity, the restructured board's function would be to establish policy and monitor its execution by full-time professional managers.

Although the new board members may come from a specific constituency, organization, group or geographic area, as they always have, the new board and its members would reflect a broader view than the view constrained by the somewhat different perspective of day-to-day management which may have more narrow obligations and responsibilities.

Except for the few guidelines of the legislation and the report and legislative history, no quotas or other restrictions would be imposed for board membership so the President would have the greatest possible flexibility to nominate a diverse board of the most excellent people available for service on the TVA board.

The 6-month delay from enactment of the legislation to its implementation would allow the President time to select and nominate the new board members. During this period the incumbent board members would continue to serve. Nothing in the legislation prevents the President from nominating incumbent members to service under the restructured board.

HOW THE NEW BOARD WOULD FUNCTION

After confirmation by the Senate, the new board would be organized under the direction of the Chairman designated by the President. The Chairman would name members to the various committees the board might find necessary: a nominations and compensation committee (to seek a chief executive officer and fix compensation); the rate review committee (to review electric rate structure and changes) the audit committee (to name auditors and review audit reports) and an executive committee (to set board agendas and other designated functions).

One of the initial priorities would have to be the drafting and adoption of a set of bylaws for the board. This would define the exact duties of the committees and the responsibilities and authority of the chief executive officer. Another would be the search for and hiring of a chief executive officer to actually operate the agency. The board has great flexibility in seeking this individual either inside or outside of the TVA. (See The Chief Executive Officer, below.)

Board members would serve on two-to-five committees depending on the number of committees in being at any one time. Service on the statutory committees should generally be considered for the duration of the term of the member appointed. (See Board Committees, below.)

If monthly meetings of the full board were established, up to 48 meeting days would be available for each member to attend committee meetings and other authorized activities.

As is the case of board members in business corporations, TVA board members would not be expected to have individual staff assistants. However, some of the board's committee functions would probably require assistance of a small permanent staff and perhaps, depending on the nature of the activity, augmentation by temporary staff from time to time.

Any attempt to completely describe board functions and operations runs the risk of either providing a potential straight jacket that fits only the current moment or being incomplete or imprecise. On the whole, the original TVA Act leans toward the latter position.[3]

Board members who are unacquainted with the role of boards in the corporate world would be well served by a review of the considerable current business literature on the subject.

In discussing the changing role of boards as observed in the business world, J. Spencer Letts observed in the July 1980 issue of Business Lawyer:

> Although it has been defined in many ways, the contemplated role for the board usually contains an element which may be characterized as that of "corporate watchdog." In the performance of this role, board members would proceed from an attitude of skepticism and would be expected to raise questions broadly probing the wisdom of proposals made by management as well as the procedures by which such proposals are formulated.
> The value of having the board play this role seems apparent if one presumes that management will consistently follow the profit motive and bring to the board proposals which will be in its own and the corporation's best economic interest. The role of the board would then be to raise questions to determine whether the proposals in fact would serve the corporation's economic interest and also to determine whether their implementation would contravene some larger social or moral interest, as might proposals involving the creation of pollutants or the making of "sensitive payments".
> The directors would also be responsible for monitoring self-dealing by the management and making sure that corporate acts are properly recorded and disclosed so that potentially objectionable practices would be sure to receive scrutiny . . . .
> The more independent the director, the more likely that he will be fully able to perform this function. While not expressed in precisely these terms. SEC Chairman Harold Williams seems to have followed somewhat this line of reasoning. His suggestions that boards of directors might best be composed entirely of independent directors other than the chief executive, have usually be premised on his view that forces working on directors who are not completely independent may cause them to be too supportive. . . .
> . . . The significant contributions of directors need not be made at routine meetings. Most corporate boards in fact are simply too large to lend themselves to collective decision making, and the most important matters of necessity have been and continue to be resolved prior to the board meeting.

THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

The legislation creates a new position within TVA, the chief executive officer [CEO]. This individual would have the responsibility for the day-to-day management of TVA and the carrying out of policies established by the board of directors, a pattern of operation found in almost every business corporation. This is also the pattern of operation found in the electric distribution systems within the TVA area. In naming a nuclear "czar" TVA appears to be moving in the direction of a strong chief executive officer, that is, the transferring of some of the board's authority for operating the nuclear division to a single individual for at least a limited period of time.

Although the first TVA board members eliminated the concept of a statutory executive or manager which had been provided in early versions of the TVA legislation, a position of general manager was soon found useful and was created by the board in 1936.

The proposal's statutory CEO would probably acquire some of the functions of the TVA's present office of general manager and certainly some of the management functions now exercised by the three-man board.

The CEO would appoint, with the advice and consent of the board, and without regard to the provisions of Civil Service laws applicable to officers and employees of the United States, such managers, assistant managers, officers, employees, attorneys, and agents as are necessary for the transaction of the business of the Corporation. The CEO would define the duties of these people and would establish, subject to board approval, the rate of basic pay for such managers, assistant managers, officers, employees, attorneys, and agents, not to exceed the annual rate payable for positions at level V of the Executive Schedules in effect at the end of the applicable fiscal year.

The present level V rate is set at $68,700 per year, an amount lower than some TVA executives are paid today. However, procedures to prevent reduction in pay and, under some circumstances, to provide increases in compensation over what is now allowed, are provided under section 2(h). (See Compensation and Employee Policies, below.)

The detailed definition of the CEO's responsibilities, authority and compensation would be set out initially by the board and then negotiated as to specifics into contract form by the board and the selected individual. The legislation requires the CEO have management experience in large, complex organizations. The CEO would not necessarily have to be well versed in all aspects of TVA's operations because of the exceptional quality of many of the TVA's managers and operators available to assist the CEO in management of the corporation.

The concept of compensation incentives for performance is also introduced. This is a move toward the idea reflected in some business organizations that outstanding performance should be rewarded and failure should result in penalty.

The legislation allows the board the flexibility to hire the most outstanding CEO available and provides the board with ability to reward the CEO or discharge him. Because such people are never in great supply, an outstanding CEO could exert great influence within the organization because of the possibility the officer would retire or take some other job.

BOARD COMMITTEES

The legislation mandates the board establish at least two committees. The audit committee, composed entirely of nonmanagement directors, would be similar to the audit committee of a business corporate board of directors. Considerable business literature offers guidance for the new board in defining the details of this committee's obligations and responsibilities.

The electric rate review committee introduces a new concept and a new step in the rate review process for TVA. The committee's responsibilities include both rates (generally reviewed annually) and rate structure (examined as the board determines necessary but generally less frequently than rates).

The concept is for the rate review committee to function as a regulatory review body in examining the rate adjustments recommended by the management and agency staff. The committee would look at the details of the requested adjustments, the assumption behind the adjustment requests, hold public hearings on the proposals to receive the views and observations of ratepayers and make some recommendations to the full board for rate changes or rate structure changes. The board would be the ultimate decision maker on rate questions.

The difference in the proposed procedure and the existing procedure is the independence and separation of those making final rate decisions from those involved in putting the request together. The present board structure, with board members having both policy and day-to-day operating involvement in the agency, does not provide the appearance of the kind of independent rate examination to which other utilities are generally subject. Under the present arrangement, the same board reviewing and passing on rates may have already made decisions and judgments about projects, purchases, or programs which influence the factors requiring rate adjustments.[4]

The board could create other committees of board members as the board deemed appropriate. A restraining factor would be the number of days individual board members are authorized work each year. A restructured TVA board would probably be more active, in terms of meeting days, than the board of a private corporation. In 1983, the average private corporation board had eight regular meetings. The largest number, 31.8 percent, had between 10 and 12 regular meetings. In private corporations the average board member spent 125 hours annually on board matters including review, preparation, meetings and travel.

Initially, during the reorganization phase, considerable time might be required of the restructured TVA board. For that reason, up to 60 meetings a year are provided in the legislation. After the reorganization phase, the new TVA board members should find an average of 30 to 40 meeting days a year adequate for regular sessions, committee meetings and hearings.

The most prevalent permanent committees of business corporations, in addition to the audit committee, include the executive committee and the compensation and nomination committee, the latter is involved in selection of the CEO and the compensation of the CEO and other executives. Other committees, temporary or permanent, might be created by the board to examine issues and hold public hearings on matters that would have a substantial effect on the economic, environmental, social or physical well-being of the people of the region.

The board would determine whether the committee functions required staff support. A small administrative staff might be appropriate to support the executive function of the board. The rate review function, because of the complex technical nature of some of the factors in rate review, probably will require permanent staff or consultants to assure the kind of independent rate review the ratepayers deserve. The only extra staff cost incurred under the new arrangement, if any, would be to the extent that current personnel levels in support of policy functions were increased.

THE GLOBAL ECONOMY: A THREAT TO AMERICAN POWER

HON. JAMES T. BROYHILL

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. BROYHILL. Mr. Speaker, I have long been an advocate of free trade and open markets around the world. Today, world markets are not open to American products for a number of reasons. At the same time, the United States is a victim of unfair and illegal imports to the tune of billions of dollars each year. These two problems have created disastrous conditions for American industry. They have also led thoughtful Americans to react strongly and advocate very restrictive actions against imports.

While I continue to support meaningful trade reform and strong action against unfair and illegal trade practices, I think it is important for my colleagues to be aware that many Americans are advocating far more drastic action. As an example, I have included for the RECORD a recent speech by William Hawkins entitled "The Global Economy: A Threat to American Power." If we do not act now to bring about reasonable reforms and better enforcement, the measures being advocated by Mr. Hawkins in the following address may be unavoidable.

THE GLOBAL ECONOMY: A THREAT TO AMERICAN POWER

(By William R. Hawkins)

Unemployment and business failures have drawn most of the attention from those who have been concerned by the growing foreign trade imbalance. This is natural given their immediate and visible impact. However, an even more dangerous long-term trend is in progress which, if not countered, will undermine not only the wealth but the power of the United States in the world arena.

The de-industrialization of the American economy which started under the pressure of imports from other developed economies and from the developing economies of East Asia will continue as other less developed nations attempt to accelerate the industrialization process by penetrating the affluent American market.

In many countries, the domestic market alone is too small to justify investment in heavy industry or high technology and exports become necessary if new industry is to be established in the near future. This means that the rapid advance of the Third World can only be accomplished by slower growth, higher unemployment and the decline of the industrial sector in the U.S. and other developed capitalist nations.

The leaders and partisans of the Third World understand this. That is why the demand for more open markets in America and Europe was part of the program for a New International Economic Order (NIEO), a program which explicitly called for the transfer of wealth and power from the developed capitalist nations (the West) to the Less Developed Countries (LDC) of the Third World (the South). The industrial sector of the West was to be relocated to the South and with it, its immense ability to generate wealth. In 1972, the LDCs accounted for only 6.9 percent of world manufacturing, by 1980 had growth to 15.5 percent. The NIEO target was 25 percent.

What was to replace this loss in the West was not addressed. Perhaps nothing was to replace it since the purpose of the NIEO was to narrow the gap between West and South, a process which can be pursued not only by the rise of the South but also by the decline of the West.

The U.S. and other Western nations have not agreed to dismantle their industrial bases by government decree in order to accommodate the LDCs. However, inaction on the part of the U.S. government in respect to the protection of its industrial base from foreign assault threatens to produce the same dismal outcome. Between 1980 and 1984, U.S. manufacturing exports fell 16 percent while imports increased 65 percent. Over two million jobs in manufacturing were lost. A manufacturing trade deficit of $50 billion developed in 1984 from what had been a $19 billion trade surplus in 1980.

The U.S. still has a manufacturing trade surplus with the LDCs, but it declined over the 1980-1984 period, just as the U.S. trade deficit with Japan, East Asia and Europe increased. As the LDCs continue to industrialize, this one regional area of U.S. surplus will erode and vanish, making the future of American industry bleak indeed.

Any change in the distribution of world wealth will also produce a change in the balance of world power. This is especially true if the economic change occurs in the industrial sector. Defense material is composed mainly of tanks, ships, vehicles, aircraft, missiles, and ordnance. All of these are made largely of metal which has been forged, shaped, coated, or fabricated. It is then combined with a broad range of other manufactured products as optics, electronics, chemicals and computers. The peacetime defense industry does not possess enough excess capacity to meet the demands of even a limited conflict.

[4] The TVA board function in regard to rates should completely differ from the function of the board of an investor-owned public utility. The obligation of the board of an investor-owned utility is to maximize the return to stockholders (profits) within statutory guidelines. The rate proposals are reviewed by and finally determined by state-established regulatory commissions (or in some cases the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission). Under this proposal, the restructured TVA board would perform an arms-length review of the rate requests presented by TVA's management. In effect, the restructured board would function as a regulatory body.

In a crisis, the industrial sector will have to be mobilized to meet national needs. This means that the definition of strategic industry must be broadened beyond just the peacetime defense establishment.

In World War II, the U.S. was the only nation able to expand its output to meet not only its own needs but a substantial share of the needs of its allies without drastic reductions in domestic living standards. It is unlikely that the U.S. could repeat that performance as the "Arsenal of Democracy" today. And the capability is deteriorating. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger stated in his 1983 Report that the "problems which remain in the defense industry are, in fact, a subset of our overall economic industrial problems."

Many strategic industries are under siege by imports which have captured an overall 17 percent share of domestic merchandise sales. Foreign producers have captured 22 percent of the U.S. market for steel, 37 percent for machine tools, 60 percent of consumer electronics, over 27 percent for automobiles, 34 percent of wide-bodied jet aircraft and over 60 percent for industrial robots.

The ferroalloy industry is near collapse. Mineral refining is moving offshore. Shipbuilding is kept afloat only by government subsidy. Threats run the spectrum from the older "smoke stack" industries to the newest "high-tech" fields. The struggle for control of world industry will be fought for the rest of this century, with the winners set to dominate the first part of the next century.

To think of international economic policy as an aspect of power politics requires a change of assumptions from those which normally govern policy-making. There are essentially three ways to think about how the world economy works. The viewpoint which currently controls trade policy is Classical Liberalism. In its system, the individual is the central actor, usually in the role of consumer.

Economic relations are harmonious and cooperative. The goal is to maximize global material benefits. Distribution of these benefits are not a major concern, nor is there any constructive role for national governments. Indeed, the hope was that economics could be separated from politics completely. The system would work best in a peaceful world without borders, an environment its advocates either mistake for the real world or enshrine as an ideal from whose worship one must not wander by invoking such lowly concerns as national advantage.

The most vocal critics of the Liberal view have been Marxists. They see the world as a struggle between classes, the minority of oppressive "have" versus the mass of noble "have-nots" which in global terms means championing the LDCs against the West. Their support for policies of redistribution and for socialist governments have had the effect of pushing conservatives into a knee-jerk support of "free trade" liberalism.

Yet, the Marxists and the Liberals have a flaw in common. Neither thinks of the world in terms of autonomous nation-states representing organic societies based on shared values and interests. Both are based on subsets of society; individuals or classes, and thus miss the essential fact of human social organization.

A simple look around the world should suffice to convince one that the world is organized into nations with conflicting goals, scrambling to acquire wealth and power so that their goals can be attained.

Thinking of economic policy as an arm of national security in a dangerous and unstable world is the third alternative system: Mercantilism. In practice, if not in theory, the Marxists have adopted much of the thinking of mercantilism with one major difference. The Marxists are working for the decline of the U.S. while an American mercantilist works to gain every advantage possible for his country. The mercantilist can be expected to be more successful than the Marxist because the mercantilist intends to harness the dynamic, progressive qualities of capitalism for the national interest.

In 1979, the staff of the OECD published a report entitled "Facing the Future", which attempted to predict the shifts in economic power that would occur under different international conditions. It predicted that in an open global economy, the U.S. share of world GNP would fall by more than one-third, from 29 percent of 1975 to 19 percent in the year 2000.

The U.S. has certain advantages which make protectionism a viable option whereas in other nations it would not be. The U.S. has the world's largest domestic market, large enough to sustain internal competition and economies of scale while still maintaining diversification.

It already has core of basic industries and a skilled labor force. It is a leader in new technology. It needs only to preserve these capabilities from being undermined by foreign rivals. Historically the U.S. reached a position of economic pre-eminence as the wealthiest, most productive industrial state with minimal involvement in world trade and a record of protecting its domestic producers.

The U.S. should reject global interdependence. The fact that needed manufactured products could be made off-shore more cheaply does not offer a viable alternative if the potential reliability of these suppliers is examined objectively. How secure would the nation be at the outbreak of a war if 50 or 60 percent of the goods, technology, production facilities or equipment needed for mobilization had to be obtained quickly from foreign sources?

Of course, the aim of a protectionist policy is not to stifle all trade. The U.S. needs to import certain raw materials and oil and to export agricultural goods. There are broad areas of consumer goods where imports pose no strategic problems. And exports should be encouraged. The aim is to eliminate the U.S. trade deficit in a manner which preserves the industrial base of the country.

Selective protectionism is thus more logical and less damaging to trade than the solution to the deficit advocated by most free traders. Free traders usually blame the rise of the dollar's value on the world currency markets for the decline of U.S. exports and the increase in imports. While this is a contributing factor now, it does not explain the industrial malaise of the 1970s when the dollar was weak.

The policy implication of the "strong dollar" argument is that the dollar should be weakened. This will either "automatically" occur as a consequence of recurring deficits or could be brought on by intervention by monetary authorities. However, such a move would raise the price of all imports, not just those in strategic industries and is thus a more radical approach than selective protection which would leave most of the economy untouched.

A strong dollar is a strategic asset. It makes necessary imports relatively less expensive and improves the nation's terms of trade. It also makes the maintenance of the extensive American military infrastrcutre and troop deployments in foreign lands less burdensome to taxpayers. Deficits will eventually weaken the dollar unless the deficits are ended by protective measures.

The U.S. is de-industrializing because it is no longer profitable to invest in the restructuring/renewing of basic industry. Competition from foreign rivals, usually made possible by cheap labor and/or government support, lowers prices and sales, thus the return on investment. Expansion in the Third World promises higher returns and attracts capital (sometimes too much capital as the world debt crisis would indicate). Transnational corporations mover all or part of their plants out of the U.S., free to ship back to the U.S. whatever they produce offshore.

American industry and investors find it more profitable to put their money into areas other than manufacturing, even when new technology is available. The U.S. has the worst record of any industrial nation in terms of investment in new plant and equipment. American industry must be made profitable again. Imports must be curtailed either by quotas or by tariffs, either by negotiation or by law.

The survival of basic industries and the expansion of new high-technology firms are interdependent. A major market for high-technology is basic industry which must apply these new tools to become more productive. The pace of American high-tech industry will be slowed if it must seek its markets primarily through exports. High technology cannot be substituted for basic industry in the economy, they must work together.

Slogans about "free trade" and "automatic" market adjustments have little relevance for American security needs. Left to itself, the economy will structure itself to meet the normal peacetime desires of consumers, which is not the same structure required to meet the needs of the nation during those infrequent but decisive periods of crisis which can be expected in the future

The United States cannot allow the actions of others to determine its destiny. The challenge confronting the U.S. is to keep its basic industry alive in the face of intense global pressures on all manufacturing sectors and to encourage new industry.

The targeting of key industries which are at the core of the American industrial base and vital to the mobilization of American strength, by foreign producers who only want to use the U.S. market for their own expansion, is of crucial concern to the future of the U.S. economy and the nation it supports. A passive non-policy which simply hopes that the problem will go away does not serve the national interest.

ON DEFENSE PROCUREMENT

HON. JIM KOLBE

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, although I'm not a member of the House Armed Services Committee, I have seen the statement presented by Earle C. Williams before the Senate Armed Services Committee on March 19, 1986, in which he makes a number of excellent points with respect to the defense acquisition process. As a member of the Small Business Committee, I believe the points made are of such significance that they should be shared with my colleagues.

Mr. Williams, president and chief executive officer of BDM International, Inc., called for "a framework of consensus" between the private and public sectors in the interest of an efficient and economical defense acquisition process.

He cited several instances where recently enacted procurement legislation and proposed legislative changes will not achieve improvements that are necessary in the process.

Mr. Speaker, because of the importance of this subject to the Nation's defense and to many of my colleagues, I am pleased to submit the following excerpts from Mr. Williams' testimony:

The media and others have made the topic of defense procurement a favored one for discussion, and I regret to say, they have created very unfavorable images of the defense contractors in the minds of the American people . . . The problems we have today won't go away, and constructive actions are needed to bring about a change in public attitudes.

These hearings, the legislation your committee is considering, and the Packard Commission Report all contribute to a favorable change by proposing actions which I hope will bring about the balanced and sound perspective to the procurement process that is sorely lacking . . . We should seek to have everyone involved in the procurement process—Congress, the Executive Branch, the military services, the press, and the public—understand what is involved for industry and business if we are to participate in the procurement process in an economically viable and positive manner.

The avalanche of enacted and proposed legislative changes, with topics ranging from travel expenses to false claims to criminal penalties, will not achieve the improvements we seek. Legislation prescribing operating details, which up until now have been handled administratively by DOD within the general policy guidance found in the procurement statutes, will not affect the procurement system in a positive way. We will find that the consequences of this "zero-defects approach" will outweigh the advantages that come with effective use of the private sector, namely the defense contractor community, to achieve real improvements in the current system.

DOD's procurement system is losing the flexibility, responsiveness, and quality people it needs to do the job . . . Fear of criticism is causing people to act unwisely. People are buying data they don't need because someone might criticize them for not doing it. Auditors are questioning costs, not because sound judgment requires it, but because if they don't they might be criticized . . . Then, there are in-house auditors and inspector general staffs plus the defense contract audit agency and the defense investigative service to assure enforcement of the rules and regulations . . . It's no wonder that program managers and contracting officers are no longer able to keep things moving and turn out systems in a timely and economic way.

The professional and technical services industry shares many of the concerns expressed by our colleagues in the hardware business. There are, however, several specific matters of particular concern to the services industry which I would like to discuss.

FEDERALLY FUNDED RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT CENTERS

The enactment of the Competition in Contracting Act of 1984, Public Law 98-369, was indeed landmark legislation in terms of its impact upon the acqusition process. While espousing competition, it nevertheless permits exempting from this requirement certain oreganizations which provide professional and technical services, thus organizations which provide professional and technical services, thus potentially providing them with a protected market . . . The Competition in Contracting Act, authorizes the head of an agency to use procedures other than competitive procedures to award a contract to a federally funded research and development center or to a nonprofit or educational institution to establish or maintain an essential engineering, research or developmental capability.

This exemption for nonprofit institutions and federally funded research and development centers enables them to provide, without competition, professional and technical services which are available from the private sector, and may prevent for-profit companies from competing for the contract.

I recommend that the principle of effective competition be restored by removing the present exemption from competition which nonprofit institutions and federally funded research and development centers now enjoy . . . This change would preserve the unique contributions that educational institutions make to our economy and society. At the same time, for-profit firms would be able to compete with federally funded research and development centers and nonprofit institutions in those instances where all of them possessed comparable professional and technical services expertise. This would assure the government of a broader critical mass of skills from which it could draw to establish or maintain essential engineering, research or developmental capabilities.

NON-COMPETITIVE PROCEDURES AWARDS

Another industry concern has been the deleterious effect the Competition in Contracting Act has had on the willingness of agencies to award sole source contracts in response to unsolicited proposals reflecting unique ideas . . . Companies are reluctant to advance innovative or creative concepts which are needed by DOD and the military services in order to develop systems and to solve operational problems. Unsolicited proposals submitted for those reasons, we find, are apt to emerge in the form of a competitive procurement or, in time, to be turned over to a federally funded research and development center to pursue.

TECHNICAL CAPABILITIES AND COST

A topic of major concern to the professional and technical services industry is the issue of technical capabilities or quality of services versus cost or "lowest bid" in the procurement of sophisticated services that are required by complex programs and systems. Quality of service should not be equated with the ability to simply deliver nominally satisfactory services. The technical capabilities of the professional and technical services sought by the client for his or her system is as critical as the equipment or manufactured component if the system is to function effectively. The professional and technical services firms that provide such services are frequently required to conceive, develop, evaluate, test, and modify systems or programs and, therefore, have a direct impact on the cost and effectiveness of the system or program being provided to the client. A $60,000-a-year physicist retained for system design and architecture cannot be replaced by two $30,000-a-year physicists.

It is essential that the defense acquisition process recognize that the procurement of professional and technical services is different from the procurement of equipment and other manufactured items and routine and mechanical types of services. Primary emphasis should be placed on technical capabilities.

If we are to achieve a proper balance between technical capabilities and cost when procuring professional and technical services, the Congress must include a clear, strong policy statement in appropriate legislation. The statement should underscore the legitimacy of allowing technical capability, at a reasonable cost, to be the dominant factor in procurement and selection of professional and technical services. The importance of technical capabilities in relation to cost should be reflected in the acquisition process from the procurement request stage through the source selection phase.

I wish to assure you that the best firm in the professional and technical services industry are not worried by legislative and regulatory requirements calling for competition . . . Competition, however, should be viewed as a means of improving the acquisition process, not as a religious concept.

I am concerned by a tendency, under the guise of a competitive procurement request, for agencies to include in the solicitation request requirements that are largely irrelevant to the statement of work and that serve to limit the competition . . . I point out this type of situation to the committee because I believe that it is important to assure that the procuring agencies do not intentionally or unintentionally frustrate the principles of competition when competition is truly appropriate. (These hearings) are timely and will focus attention on the need for a consensus by all involved which will establish the improved ground rules for the defense acquisition process.

TRADE RECIPROCITY NEEDED BETWEEN IMPORTS OF JAPANESE STEEL AND UNITED STATES EXPORTS OF MET COAL TO JAPAN

HON. NICK JOE RAHALL II

OF WEST VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, as the various committees in Congress involved with trade begin to formulate a comprehensive fair trade bill, I believe we are all very much aware of 1985's record trade deficit of $148.5 billion and the fact that one single country, Japan, is responsible for approximately one-third of this trade imbalance.

One of the major causes of the United States-Japan trade deficit is the continued and aggressive exportation by Japan of steel products into this country. Despite the voluntary restraint agreement which has been negotiated with Japan on steel, it appears that country continues to circumvent both the intent and scope of the agreement with respect to certain steel products.

For that matter, the Japanese have not honored the November 1983 Joint Policy Statement on Energy Cooperation issued by President Reagan and Prime Minister Nakasone, particularly as it relates to United States exports of metallurgical coal to Japan.

This is a matter of grave concern to myself, and other representatives of coal-producing regions. Metallurgical coal is an essential ingredient in the production of steel. The joint policy statement sought to, among other items, maintain purchases of United States metallurgical coal over future years as steel production in Japan improved.

This agreement provided the United States with an element of trade reciprocity between Japanese steel imports and United States metallurgical coal exports. After all, the United States is Japan's largest market for steel products.

Since November 1983, however, we have witnessed the collapse of what was to be a two-way street on the steel and metallurgical coal trade between Japan and the United States. Despite the fact that steel production has increased in Japan, and despite the fact that Japanese steel exports into the United States continue at a level beneficial to Japan, that country has slashed the amount of United States metallurgical coal it is purchasing and has riden roughshod over what the world market views as being a reasonable price for the dwindling amount of United States metallurgical coal it is still buying

Because of this situation, today I, along with the gentleman from Kentucky, Hal Rogers, am introducing a concurrent resolution which seeks reciprocity in the steel and metallurgical coal trade between the two countries.

If the Japanese value their exports of steel to the United States, then they should place equal value on United States metallurgical coal exports to Japan.

The resolution urges the negotiation of an enforceable agreement under which Japan will import United States metallurgical coal in quantities equivalent to that used in the production of Japanese steel products exported to the United States.

Mr. Speaker, I believe we have given the Japanese a chance to play a fair game in this trade. Instead, with respect to the coal trade, they have negotiated in bad faith. It is time for strong action.

NICARAGUA: A MORE EFFECTIVE POLICY

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert my Foreign Affairs Newsletter for March 1986 into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD:

NICARAGUA: A MORE EFFECTIVE U.S. POLICY

The U.S. needs a more effective policy toward Nicaragua. Our policy of military pressure has failed to change Sandinista behavior, and Nicaragua is less democratic, more repressive, more pro-Cuba and pro-Soviet than it was five years ago. The President himself admits as much: he now says that Nicaragua is a communist state—something he didn't say in 1981.

U.S. funding of the Contras has made democracy and a negotiated settlement in Nicaragua more remote. Within Central America, the Contras war is now more destabilizing than the Sandinistas, and our fixation with Nicaragua means that we are neglecting far more important problems in Latin American, such as the debt crisis and its impact on new, fragile democracies we support.

After five years the U.S. is still unclear about its goals in Nicaragua. Do we want the Sandinista to change their policies, or do we want to oust them? Rhetoric and actions do not mesh. The President says that "Nicaragua is a foreign policy question of supreme importance." If this is so, then why are we trying to fund an ineffective, untrained peasant army—which has little support in Nicaragua—to protect our supremely important interests?

We need to re-think the fundamental premises of our policy toward Nicaragua. First, unilateralism cannot succeed. We need the active support of Latin America and Western Europe. We cannot conduct a war on the pretext of promoting democracy if Latin democracies oppose that war. Second, the Contras are simply not capable in the next several years, whether we fund them or not, of changing Sandinista policies. Barring the use of the Marines, only a long-term policy supported by our friends will be sustainable or successful over the long-term. There are simply too many questions about the Contras relating to their political viability, adherence to democracy, military performance, respect for human rights, and support in the region for the U.S. to invest heavily in them. Third, policy must be articulated accurately. We must be clear about what behavior threatens vital U.S. interests and cannot be tolerated, but we must not exaggerate the threat posed by Nicaragua or exaggerate what interests we consider vital. Otherwise our policy will lose credibility.

A better policy toward Nicaragua would consist of three parts in equal measure: isolation and containment of the Sandinistas; a long-term strategy of carrots and sticks; and active U.S. support for Contadora and negotiations.

First, we should prevent the Soviet Union or its allies from developing an offensive capability in Central America that threatens U.S. security. We should support economic and military assistance to strengthen the democracies of Central America against threats from Nicaragua or anywhere else. We should use skillful diplomacy, encouraging the support of our friends and allies, to isolate and contain Nicaragua—diplomatically, politically, economically, and militarily.

Second, we should use carrots and sticks. If Nicaragua were to agree to a ceasefire, remove Soviet and Cuban advisers, reduce the size of its armed forces, or make progress toward national reconciliation and a pluralistic democracy, we should respond positively. We could suspend U.S. military exercises in the region, resume normal trade, and support bilateral and multilateral assistance for Nicaragua. On the other hand, if Nicaragua's behavior worsened we could press Europe and Japan—now Nicaragua's largest trading partners—to cut trade and cooperate in blocking assistance. We could impose more comprehensive economic sanctions. We could break diplomatic relations with Nicaragua. Such steps, however, would only be effective if taken together with our friends and allies.

Third, the U.S. must effectively support the Contadora negotiations. For the European Community, Japan, and 13 Latin American governments, including each in Central America, Contadora is the preferred course. No democratic government publicly supports U.S. funding of the contras, and the Contradora countries are on record that this policy is counterproductive to the goal of a negotiated settlement.

The U.S. has yet to make public comment on the third Contadora treaty draft issued six months ago. If we do not like the draft, we should work to improve it. The current draft has many positive elements which serve U.S. interests. If agreed to and implemented by Nicaragua, it would stop new military deliveries to the Sandinistas, establish a ceiling on the size of their military forces and a schedule for their reduction, prevent the establishment of Soviet or Cuban military bases, force Nicaragua to send home all foreign military advisers, and end Nicaragua's support for the export of revolution. A Contadora agreement would also substantially increase Latin American and Western European political pressure on Nicaragua to live up to treaty commitments for national reconciliation, a pluralistic democracy and free elections.

Why would Nicaragua live up to a deal made with the U.S. through the Contadora process? Because its survival would depend on it. The Sandinistas know that the heart of the bargain is that we would let them survive in exchange for a halt to foreign policies we do not like and improvement in their domestic record. If they reneged, all bets would be off, including any U.S. pledges at Contadora. With a regional agreement in place, the U.S. would have a much better legal and diplomatic basis to respond to Nicaraguan misdeeds than it does now. With strong diplomatic support from Western Europe and Latin America, the United States could make life for Nicaragua very difficult.

Nicaragua needs peace and economic development. The Soviets and Cubans cannot provide either one. Nicaragua knows that Latin America, Western Europe and the United States hold those keys—and that only a Contadora agreement can lead them to open the door.

CARVING OUT LAMB'S SHARE OF THE MARKET

HON. TONY COELHO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. COELHO. Mr. Speaker, recently, an article appeared in the Fresno Bee about a good friend of mine, Mr. Stanley Kooyumjian, of Fresno, CA.

For many years, Stanley was the proprietor of the well-known Fresno restaurant, "Stanley's," which specialized in Armenian cuisine. He sold the restaurant a few years ago, and since that time has served as a marketing director for the American Lamb Council. In this capacity, Stanley has been working to increase the market for lamb by demonstrating new and innovative ways to prepare and serve it.

Stanley has been working with lamb for many years, and as the article discusses, has been quite successful in convincing others about the variety of uses that lamb is well suited for. Due to the efforts of Stanley and others like him, lamb consumption in the United States has been increasing rapidly every year.

In recognition of Stanley's fine efforts on behalf of the U.S. lamb industry, I ask that the article from the Fresno Bee be reprinted here in the RECORD.

[From the Fresno Bee, Mar. 2, 1986]

CARVING OUT LAMB'S SHARE OF THE MARKET

(By Richard D. Hall)

Using a meat saw and two knives, former Fresno restaurateur Stanley Kooyumjian expertly divided a 75-pound lamb carcass into a variety of cuts, some of them new to the trade.

His small, attentive audience at the Fresno Hilton Hotel included three executive chefs from major restaurants in Chicago, San Francisco, and Portland, Ore.

Kooyumjian, 52, began working with lamb as a boy in his father's Home Market on Broadway, then he featured lamb dishes in his Armenian restaurant. "Stanley's," downtown and later on Shaw Avenue.

Tired of the long hours, he sold the restaurant. For the last 2½ years he has been one of seven marketing directors for the American Lamb Council, the industry's promotion arm. Kooyumjian's territory is California and Nevada, where his duties include demonstrating new ways to break a carcass, changes the council says will benefit packers, purveyors, retailers and food-service markets.

Talking as he worked at the session last week, Kooyumjian said, "All I'm trying to do is stimulate some ideas, using nice cuts."

Lamb consumption has been growing by leaps and bounds, especially in restaurants. The increase is 56 percent in four years, Kooyumjian said.

Within the last five years, lamb dishes have climbed from 28 percent to 48 percent of the red meat consumed at his restaurants, said David Asher-Tournant. He is executive chef for the Bankers Club, Carnelian Room and Montgomery Street Bar and Grill, all in the Bank of America headquarters building in San Francisco.

By comparison, beef consumption has dropped from 55 percent to 32 percent, Asher-Tournant said. Veal has dropped in popularity from second to third place, and fresh pork has remained last in the red meats, although it increased from 1 to 5 percent, he added.

The San Francisco restaurants are part of the Fine Dining Division of ARA Services. The three executive chefs and their general manager, Christian De Vos, came to Fresno for Kooyumjian's demonstration as part of their quarterly meeting to plan new menus.

Despite the upsurge in lamb consumption, beef and veal continue to lead on the red meat side in ARA restaurants generally, De Vos said fish and poultry are 50 percent of the business, he added.

"Lamb is a cut of meat people do not know how to cook at home," De Vos said. "That's why it's a good piece to have in restaurants."

When he came from Belgium 12 years ago as an executive chef, De Vos said, lamb was "only considered an ethnic food, or to serve at Easter. That's really turned around in the last several years.

Tim Indart of Clovis, president of the American Sheep Producers Council, expressed optimism that after some tough years the industry has begun to build back. The council includes the American Lamb Council and the American Wool Council. Financed by assessments, from the 116,000 lamb producers, the U.S. industry promotes itself on a $6 million budget, far less than the beef and pork industries spend.

Consumption outstrips domestic supply, and the visiting chefs said they preferred U.S. lamb over the imports from Australia and New Zealand. American lamb tastes better, and a larger selection of cuts are available from domestic producers, they said.

Indart said that another factor in lamb's new popularity "is people are beginning to realize lamb is a healthful item, and a change from beef or chicken. I think it's lower in cholesterol than a lot of the other meats. I think people have become more health-conscious."

However, Bonnie F. Liebman, staff nutritionist at the Center for Science in the Public Interest, said in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C., that "there is no difference between beef and lamb."

Although some cuts are less fatty than others, she said, "the problem with lamb is the same as with beef—high in fat. Saturated fat [in lamb] is in the same range as beef. Saturated fat raises cholesterol in the blood."

Low-fat foods are poultry with the skin removed and fish, she said.

The Lamb Council contends that its product "satisfies today's customer preference for light, nutritious meals," noting that lamb contains "as few as 158 calories per 3-ounce serving."

Liebman countered that most serving portions are larger than three ounces. Lamb recipes the council distributed call for serving sizes of 5 to 8 ounces.

Asked about their concern for diners' nutrition, the visiting executive chefs said they paid more attention to customer satisfaction.

Kooyumjian's demonstrations are aimed at increasing customer pleasure by encouraging food-service officials and retail stores to work with various lamb cuts.

He showed the all-male audience a revision in lamb shoulder cuts the American Lamb Council recommends: In separating the shoulders from the hotel rack, one of the four major wholesale cuts of a lamb carcass, the break should be made between the 5th and 6th ribs, instead of the traditional separation between the 4th and 5th ribs. The 5th rib, which contains a portion of the hard shoulder blade bone, is not desirable when left on the hotel rack.

Watching Kooyumjian work, Durbin W. Breckenridge of Fresno, vice president of Hestbeck's wholesale meats, told him, "On the retail and wholesale level, we need to know where we can go with that shoulder." Kooyumjian replied that he may schedule a local program just for stores.

As he picked up the lamb breast, Kooyumjian said the piece has "never been particularly successful because of a stigma by the public." Then, as he cut a "Denver rib" from the breast, Kooyumjian pronounced it, "good eating. I think the people you are getting your racks from will be happy to give you Denver rib."

Kooyumjian moved quickly to a "Saratoga roll," one of several cuts possible from the lamb shoulder, which is boned and formed into a compact roll. Pinned with skewers, the roll may be cut into individual chops and become a restaurant's "special of the day."

"It's an extension of the rack," Kooyumjian commented, referring to the roll. "An underworked piece of meat. Not a tough piece of meat." It may be cut into cutlets, medallions, or a Wellington, he added.

"Very few people want to work with the shoulder," said Asher-Tournant. "It's unpleasant."

"There are some problems there," Kooyumjian admitted, referring to packing procedures. He added, "I'll talk to your supplier."

Kooyumjian's many stops each month include packing houses, where, he says, "they're beginning to believe me" that growers should not be penalized financially for delivering carcasses weighing more than 55 pounds. The traditional thinking has been that a large animal is tough, he added.

Despite the traditional thinking that a large animal is tough, the lamb council says, improved production methods are achieving "larger, meatier and higher-quality lambs."

The larger animals permit some cuts of meat that could not be obtained from smaller lambs, Kooyumjian said.

THE MARTIN LUTHER KING ESSAY CONTEST

HON. MAJOR R. OWENS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that the Peace Academy which Congress authorized has not come to fruition every effort must be made to promote peace. On January 20, 1986, at the first celebration of the birthday of Martin Luther King, the 12th Congressional District awarded prizes to students who participated in an essay contest on peace. More than 400 students submitted essays. The following are the winners in the elementary school essay contest.

THE TIME I MADE PEACE IN MY CLASS

(By Darlene Maxis, Public School 628, District 18)

The time I made peace in my class was when I was in the third grade. The class was walking through the halls when a boy named Kevin stepped on Michael's new pair of Pro-players sneakers. They began to argue because Kevin didn't say he was sorry. I heard loud voices. I strolled over to see what was happening. As I got even closer to the boys they began to fight. I tried to stop the fight as quickly as I could by asking them back into their classroom. As soon as we did Michael turned to all the boys and asked them to jump Kevin after school or at lunchtime. I knew I had to do something before lunchtime or it would be too late. I stood in front of the room and started talking. I explained to the boys that it doesn't make sense to fight because Kevin stepped on Michael's Pro-Players and didn't say he was sorry. Wouldn't it be stupid getting all the boys against Kevin just for stepping on another boy's sneakers? The class grew silent and I could tell they were thinking. Then Kevin got up and walked over to Michael and said "Sorry." Michael said "Sorry" too. Everything was okay. That's how I made peace in the third grade.

I think fighting makes no sense because it makes things worse in your life. It causes a lack of communication with people. God didn't put us on this planet to fight. He put us on this Earth to live together in harmony.

I REMEMBER THE TIME I MADE PEACE IN MY CLASS

(By Candace Mounsey, Public School 135, District 18)

A long time ago in second grade, I made peace in my class. A girl in my class stole a sharpener from someone's desk. I was the only one in my class who saw her take it. I wanted to tell the teacher, but I wanted her to confess for herself. It was time to go home, but the teacher said she wasn't leaving without the sharpener taken from the student's desk. I talked to the girl but she said she was never going to confess. She asked me to tell the teacher she stole it but I told her "Honesty is the Best Policy" so use it. She didn't want to listen but I still spoke to her. I told her she would never live with herself if she didn't return that sharpener. So she confessed. The teacher was proud of her and me for encouraging her. The teacher didn't punish her because she was honest. That was the time I made peace in my class.

THE TIME I MADE PEACE IN MY CLASS

(By Ayana Lewis, Public School 335, District 16)

Before I started to write my composition I sat down and thought about what the title really means. I think this composition stands for making peace between people, just like the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. did. He was a preacher and a man of peace. He believed in settling disagreements in a non-violent way.

I remember a time when I used a peaceful way to help two classmates settle an argument. A boy during lunchtime, called one of the girls in our class "black." The young lady began to cry. She said she knows she is darker skinned than he is but why is he picking on me for that?

I told her that she should be proud of her skin color, no matter how dark or light it is. Dr. King fought for the rights of all people to be equal no matter what color their skin was. I tried to get her to feel good about herself and have pride.

I then went over to speak to the young man. I asked him why he called her "black" when he is also black. Did we win equal rights so that now we should call each other names? Shouldn't we feel proud of our skin color and not pick on each other?

Dr. King made a beautiful speech in which he told of his dream. He wanted all people, especially the children to grow up in a world of peace.

I got the two children to talk over the problem. The young man apologized to the young lady. I felt good about my part in this and I felt I had carried on Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s dream.

I REMEMBER THE LAST TIME I MADE PEACE IN THE CLASSROOM

(Sulaimann Abdul-Malik, Public School 9, District 13)

It was a rainy, soggy, gloomy Monday and everyone seemed to be frustrated about something. My mother was nagging and rushing me out to school. People on the train were arguing and shouting more than ever. I got to school thinking I was safe from the anger outside. In school it was the same all over again. Just like outside. The teachers weren't in their usual cheery mood. We got in the class and got to work. Things seemed to be fine until math period. The teacher walked out of the room for a moment. One of the girls said, "Girls are smarter than boys." The boys got immediately insulted and shouted back, "Girls are stupid." "They don't know anything!" Before I knew it the girls and boys were having a shouting match and some of them were about to do battle. Everything went crazy. I knew I had to do something before the teacher came back and suspended all of us. I got up on my chair and shouted, "Shut up!", instant silence arose and I had time to make peace between them. I said, "everyone is equal. Everyone has their own way of showing wisdom. One person might do better in one subject and another person in another subject. You shouldn't badmouth people because there's always something someone knows that you don't know." They saw my point and went back to their seats and their work. As I stepped down off of my chair the teacher walked in. Just in time I made peace.

THE TIME I MADE PEACE IN MY CLASS

(Penelope Webster, Public School 156, District 23)

The time I made peace in my class was when two of my closest friends were arguing over who would get picked for a computer class. One day my teacher put us in different groups and then called out the names of the people who would be in the computer class. Bernice was chosen for the class, but, Angela was not chosen.

During school, the next day, Angela wanted to fight Bernice because she was very angry that she wasn't in the computer class. Angela followed Bernice after school and began hitting her. Bernice did not defend herself because she did not like fighting. I observed the actions of my friends and felt I had to do something because I didn't want to see either one get hurt. Since I was smaller than both of them, I knew I had to be careful.

I had to think of something fast so I started to cry and this got Angela's attention. She stopped hitting Bernice and now I could talk to them. I told Angela that fighting Bernice would not help her get into the class. I also told her to try to come to school more often and work very hard. Angela seemed happy with my explanation and my two friends shook hands and became friends again.

I felt so good about my part as a peace maker that I told my teacher the next day. I know now how Dr. King Jr. must have felt when he helped to make peace, many many times. We were reading about Dr. M.L. King Jr. last week and the teacher asked me to share my experience with the class. Everyone seemed to like my story and made me feel like a real "Hero."

LEGISLATION PROTECTING THOSE WEARING UNOBTRUSIVE RELIGIOUS GARMENTS

HON. CHARLES E. SCHUMER

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, the Supreme Court recently decided that an Orthodox Jewish psychiatrist in the U.S. Air Force would have to make a choice between his loyalty to his country and his religious beliefs. By deciding that S. Simcha Goldman, an ordained rabbi, does not have the constitutional right to wear a yarmulke indoors while in uniform, the Court has forced him and others like him to make that gut-wrenching decision.

Today I introduced a bill H.R. 4525 to protect anyone who desires to wear an unobtrusive religious garment like a yarmulke, from punishment or discrimination under the authority of the U.S. Government.

This bill prohibits the exercise of U.S. Government authority to prevent any person wishing to wear a yarmulke or a similarly unobtrusive religious symbol from holding any position or from performing any function that that person would otherwise be qualified. Violations could be redressed through an implied civil action on behalf of anyone who is punished for wearing an inconspicuous religious article.

Without the clarification provided in this legislation young Jewish men who have always been patriotic defenders of the rights of all Americans would have to choose between duty to their country and duty to their religious beliefs. Putting these soldiers and potential soldiers in such a dilemma certainly would not improve the quality of our Armed Forces.

This bill if enacted would undo regulations that have no basis in necessity. A look at the very successful Israeli Army clearly demonstrates that our national security would in no way be compromised by allowing young military men to wear yarmulkes. Israeli soldiers with yarmulkes fight side by side with those who don't without any morale problems at all.

The purpose of the bill I have introduced is to balance the legitimate right and necessity of the military to regulate the dress in the Armed Forces with the constitutional rights of those employees to the full exercise of their religion. I encourage my colleagues to join me in sponsoring H.R. 4525.

VOL 132 PT 5 MR 21 — AP 11 1986 UMI

H.R. 4525

A bill to vindicate the principles of the first article of amendment to the Constitution of the United States by preventing persons acting under the authority of the United States from forbidding the wearing of inconspicuous religious symbols by individuals

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That a person acting under the authority of the United States, or under color of that authority, shall not forbid any individual from wearing any inconspicuous religious symbol, such as a yarmulke.

1986 CONGRESSIONAL CALL TO CONSCIENCE VIGIL

HON. THOMAS N. KINDNESS

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, during the first session of the 99th Congress some 50 Members of this body participated in efforts to focus attention on the plight of prisoners of conscience and others living under oppression in the Soviet Union—individuals who seek freedom, but are neither permitted to freely practice their religion or to leave the Soviet Union.

While emigration numbers have been severely reduced over the last few years, Soviet harassment and discrimination have continued unabated.

With the assistance of the membership of this body, the Congressional Call to Conscience Vigil for Soviet Jews, sponsored by the Union of Councils for Soviet Jews, will continue these efforts in this session of the Congress.

The purpose of the vigil, which began in 1976, is to use weekly Congressional Record statements as a vehicle to expose and denounce Soviet oppression. In the past, the vigil has been particularly useful in voicing bipartisan congression-' support for individuals and families wishing to emigrate to the free world, as illustrated by numerous statements through the vigil on behalf of recently released prisoner of conscience, Anatoly Shcharansky.

Given the renewed dialog between the United States and the Soviet Union and the subsequent meeting between President Reagan and Secretary Gorbachev scheduled for later this year, it is particularly important that we continue to demonstrate our concern about human rights issues and violations in the Soviet Union. Efforts of the vigil to raise human rights issues can have a profound impact on these discussions.

As chairman of the House Call to Conscience Vigil for 1986, I invite my colleagues to join me in the continuation of vigil activities this year.

Our statements will provide hope in the struggle for freedom and expression, and will demonstrate the congressional commitment to efforts to lift the dark curtain of Soviet oppression so that the light of liberty may burn brightly for those who are persecuted in the Soviet Union.

NO ROSE WOULD BLOW SO RED AS ONE WHERE ELMER BLED

HON. CHARLES E. BENNETT

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of the Record, I would like to submit herewith an inspiring article that was written by Brig. Gen. J.D. Hittle, USMC-Retired, that appeared in the March 3, 1986, issue of the Navy Times.

The article follows:

[From the Navy Times, Mar. 3, 1988]

NO ROSE WOULD BLOW SO RED AS ONE WHERE ELMER BLED

(By Brig. Gen. J.D. Hittle, USMC-Retired)

In late February each year my mind reaches back to a little island in the far Pacific called Iwo Jima and a man named Elmer Montgomery.

We first met on Guam in late 1944 during the final phases of that campaign. I had been ordered to take over the G-4 logistics job for the 3rd Marine Division. We needed a clerk-typist Sgt. Elmer Montgomery reported.

Elmer looked like the vindication of the whole Marine Corps personnel system. He wore the stripes of a buck sergeant, but there was nothing tough or fierce about this young man from Montana. His sensitive face, deep-set eyes, thin, almost frail figure hardly matched gung-ho Marine prototype.

As we began to work together, I became more and more convinced that Elmer was the right man in the right job. He typed well, took shorthand, understood administration, kept things moving. He was a perfect man behind the man behind the gun.

After Guam was secured, attention shifted to the invasion of Iwo Jima. Work piled high, and the hours were long in that little quonset hut office. But, when Elmer did have a moment, I noticed he would lean his chair against the wall and pull a small, white leather-covered Bible from the hip pocket of his fatigues.

Wherever the Bible fell open in his hand, he would begin to read—and find serenity.

I remember one evening when we were working late.

Elmer's glance fell on a stack of books.

"I see you have a copy of Omar Khayyam's Rubaiyat," he said. "It's one of my favorites."

I explained that it offered a mental change of pace.

"What's your favorite verse?" I asked.

"I sometimes think that never blows so red,

"The rose as where some buried Ceasar bled."

He had it perfect.

In February we sailed for Iwo Jima.

After several days of fierce fighting, division staff sections were ordered to provide replacements for badly mauled front-line units. I had to provide two.

It's not a pleasant job to pick men trained in support tasks for the "meat grinder." I selected the two I thought could best be spared from my supply operation.

I was just about to send the names to the division adjutant when my executive officer, Maj. Malcolm Beyer (later a brigadier general) popped into my dugout.

Sgt. Montgomery wanted to see me.

The sergeant saluted and informed me he had heard about the call for reinforcements.

"You're not one of them," I told him, thinking it would put his mind at ease.

"That's what I wanted to talk to you about, Colonel," he said. "I want to go forward."

"I'll never feel right if I don't go up when I'm needed," he said. "I'm needed now.

"I'm older than most of these kids. I've had a lot of experience looking after myself while hunting back home in Montana. I can look after them up forward."

"Alright, I'll grant your request, but only because you're old enough to know what you're doing and because it means so much to you."

I never saw Elmer again.

A Marine from his front line unit told me the story.

The platoon commander had been killed and Elmer was assigned, under a staff sergeant, as assistant platoon commander.

The order came to attack.

The patched-up platoon moved across a slight rise and into a small saucer-shaped area where it was pinned down by a carefully camouflaged Japanese machinegun. If the men tried to move back across the rise, the gun would get them. If they stayed, they would soon be blasted apart by mortars.

Elmer crawled and rolled within yelling distance of the staff sergeant.

"Sgt. Montgomery yelled, "When I draw the fire, roll the platoon back over the rise," he said.

"And while the platoon commander was saying "no," Sgt. Montgomery stood up, and firing his rifle from his hip, walked into the machinegun.

"We're here because he drew the fire long enough for us to slide back over that rise."

They never found Elmer. A few minutes after his platoon reached safety our artillery laid down a barrage on the machinegun emplacement. The big shells churned the ground and everything on it mercilessly.

He and his little white, leather-covered Bible became, forever, part of the hallowed ground of Iwo Jima.

I suppose memories fade and maybe Sgt. Montgomery's Navy Cross is almost forgotten. But whenever I think back to all the brave men I have been privileged to know, Elmer heads the list.

And whenever my eye falls on a copy of the Rubaiyat, I can't help but believe that if a rose were ever to bloom where Elmer fell, it would be more red than any "Where some buried Caeser bled."

(This article first appeared in the March 9, 1969 issue of the San Diego Union. It is reprinted here with permission. But Brig. Gen. Hittle adds the following postscript.)

On 21 Nov. 1970, while serving as assistant secretary of the Navy (manpower and Reserve) I had the pleasure to be the speaker at the launching ceremonies for the Knox-class frigate Elmer Montgomery (FF1082). If anyone had asked if I had used my influence to have the ship named after that heroic Marine, I could have answered the questioner honestly: "I sure did!"—JDH.

ATTORNEY GENERAL SHOULD EXAMINE EVIDENCE AGAINST KURT WALDHEIM

HON. TED WEISS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, last month, the World Jewish Congress uncovered evidence that former U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim gravely misled the world about his Nazi background. If the records implicating Waldheim in Nazi war crimes are verified, pursuant to section 212(a)(33) of the Immigration and Nationality Act Waldheim should be and would be barred from entering the United States.

Today I am introducing a resolution asking the Attorney General to examine all available evidence regarding Waldheim's activities during World War II, to determine whether under the Immigration and Nationality Act Waldheim must be excluded from admission into the United States.

The evidence against Waldheim is disturbingly persuasive. For years, Waldheim claimed that although he served in the German Army during World War II, he never belonged to any Nazi organization, and that he left active duty in 1942 after a leg injury. He has now retracted these accounts, admitting that he joined two Nazi organizations, including the notorious brownshirts; that he served until 1945 in a German Army command that brutally attacked Yugoslav partisans and engaged in the mass deportation of Greek Jews; and that he participated in "Operation Kozara," during which the Nazis deported some 68,000 people—including 23,000 children—from the Kozara Mountains of western Bosnia. Waldheim insists, however, that he committed no crimes personally.

Yet even Waldheim's revised account of his Nazi background does not square with the documentary evidence. According to records produced by the World Jewish Congress, Waldheim joined the Nazi brownshirts on November 18, 1938, just 8 days after the infamous Kristallnacht, when the Nazis attacked, burned, and looted Jewish communities all over Germany and Austria. In Vienna, 42 of 43 synagogues were burned to the ground. The Kristallnacht marked the beginning of the holocaust.

In September 1942, records show, Waldheim was awarded a medal for "brave conduct" in battles fought against partisan units in central Yugoslavia. And although he claims that he only served as a translator in the German Army, documents from the West German military archives and the World Jewish Congress identify Waldheim as an intelligence officer with responsibility for questioning Allied prisoners and checking the loyalty of fellow intelligence officers.

Waldheim deserves to have all of the evidence that has been uncovered carefully examined and scrutinized. If after a careful examination, he is found to have participated in Nazi war crimes, under section 212(a)(33) of the Immigration and Nationality Act he will be ineligible to receive a U.S. visa and must be excluded from admission into the United States. The resolution I am introducing asks the Attorney General to undertake the examination and to make the appropriate determination.

The text of the resolution follows:

HOUSE RESOLUTION 409

Resolution expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the Attorney General should examine evidence regarding the activities of former United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim during the Second World War and should determine whether such evidence requires that Kurt Waldheim be denied admission into the United States

Whereas the atrocities committed by the Nazis during the Second World War were an unprecedented affront to the dignity and conscience of all humanity and resulted in the death of millions of innocent people;

Whereas questions have been repeatedly raised about the wartime activities of former United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and his possible association with the Nazis;

Whereas substantial evidence has recently become available suggesting that former United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim was a party to the crimes of the Nazis; and

Whereas section 212(a)(33) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(33)) provides in part that any individual who, in association with the Nazi Government in Germany or with any government allied with or located in any area occupied by the Nazi Government of Germany, participated in the persecution of any person because of race, religion, national origin, or political opinion shall be ineligible to receive visas and shall be excluded from admission into the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the House of Representatives that the Attorney General of the United States should thoroughly and expeditiously examine all available evidence regarding the activities of former United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim during the Second World War, including those documents obtained by the World Jewish Congress, to determine whether, as provided in section 212(a)(33) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(33)), Kurt Waldheim is ineligible to receive visas and must be excluded from admission into the United States.

DON'T ABANDON THE NICARAGUAN PEOPLE

HON. NORMAN D. SHUMWAY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 8, 1986

Mr. SHUMWAY. Mr. Speaker, during the recent recess, an excellent editorial appeared in the Washington Post. I would like to share with my colleagues the very eloquent words of Jaime Chamorro, editor of La Prensa, the newspaper which played an active role in ousting the Somoza dictatorship.

I hope my colleagues will give serious and thoughtful attention to the words of Jaime Chamorro in his editorial, "Don't Abandon the Nicaraguan People." He offers compelling evidence to support the warning that the battle in Nicaragua is not limited to political squabbling—it is instead the cradle of potential insurgency throughout our hemisphere. To quote Chamarro:

> . . . making concessions by restoring democracy and freedom in Nicaragua will be (the Sandinistas') political death. The negation of the system that has been established will be the end of their international and expansionist aims.

I believe we should move quickly and positively by aiding the Contras, to ensure that the end is accomplished.

The article follows:

DON'T ABANDON THE NICARAGUAN PEOPLE

MANAGUA.—As the question of sending $100 million in aid to the anti-Sandinista rebels was being discussed in Congress, the bishop of León, Nicaragua, Monsignor Julian Barni, made the following comment:

"While in the United States they are discussing the $100 million, the Soviet Union has already given $100 million and much more without any discussion at all." Bishop Barni added: "What is necessary is that both imperialist powers, not one alone, stop complicating matters in Nicaragua. The Nicaraguan people have fought to establish a true democratic regime and hope to achieve one. This is what matters most."

Nicaragua's problem, in effect, is not only a problem of the Nicaraguan people—their loss of freedom, civil and political rights. The problem is not only the total absence of democracy and political pluralism or the suppression of freedom of expression. Nor is it just the problem of discontent that prevails as a result of the same kinds of disastrous social and economic conditions that brought on the revolution. Nor is it only the persecution of the church, as if we have never seen this in the history of our country. Nor is it the 10,000 political prisoners.

In addition to these disgraces, which in one form or another we have seen appear and disappear in most Latin American countries, there emerges a particularly grave situation: the Sandinistas are transforming the Nicaraguan revolution, fought for by all Nicaraguans, into a revolution that serves the purposes of Marxism-Leninism. That is to say, they are taking a national movement and turning it into a beachhead for communist expansion. And they have sacrificed the national interest for the benefit of this cause.

Before the Sandinistas reach this goal, those Nicaraguans who are fighting for democracy have the right to ask for help from wherever they can get it. It is a cause far too important to lose. For the Nicaraguan people, the issue at hand is of such transcendental importance that they cannot vacillate at all in choosing the right position. The future of the freedom of generations of Nicaraguans hangs in the balance.

Those who argue that to give aid to the Nicaraguan rebels would be a violation of the "principle of a people's right to self-determination" are mistaken. These people seem to ignore or perhaps forget deliberately that self-determination applies to peoples, not oppressive governments that do not legitimately represent the will of the people.

They try to forget as well that the same Sandinistas received direct military aid from other countries when they were fighting to overthrow the Somoza dynasty. And despite the fact that the Sandinistas were receiving aid in the form of arms from other countries, no one accused those countries of being guilty of aggression toward Nicaragua. The reason is that the Somoza regime, like the Sandinistas today, did not represent the will of the people.

The free peoples of the world, and particularly those in America, both North and South, must not at this critical time abandon the Nicaraguan people because their struggle is also the struggle for the future of the Western democracies. Nicaragua has become an important point of East-West confrontation. That Nicaragua in the long term could determine the balance of forces between the East and the West and ultimately the security of the United States and the Western Hemisphere as a whole may seem an exaggeration. But everything depends on future actions and the capacity of the democracies to defend themselves.

In the United States, the debate centers on whether the Sandinistas represent a serious threat to U.S. security. President Reagan argues firmly that they do. Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega has declared that he is prepared to discuss matters of regional security, but he refuses to speak with anyone regarding Nicaragua's internal situation.

A short time ago, two members of the U.S. Congress debated on television whether to give the $100 million to the Nicaraguan rebels. One of them, who opposed aid, asked: How is it possible that such a small country with a population of only 3 million could pose a security threat to a great military power such as the United States? Against a power like the United States it would be impossible for even a single plane or tank to reach San Antonio, Texas, without it being destroyed.

When I heard the congressman's statement I couldn't believe he was serious. The danger is not military; naturally, when we speak of the military, we think of a war between the United States and Nicaragua. The danger is that the Sandinista revolution is not a revolution of the Nicaraguan people. Managua is filled with internationalists from Latin American countries who wield influence in this revolution and whose aims are the expansion of communist influence and Soviet domination in the region.

Nicaragua with its army of 60,000 men (Somoza's army had only 7,000) cannot be a military threat, nor can Cuba, whose army and militia consist of more than a million men. This absurd idea of a direct military threat from the Sandinistas is an attempt to obscure the real danger of the Sandinistas.
